Mr. Guinee has been a resident of Plainfield for the past thirty-three years and is a member of one of the West End's best known families. He is a brother to Cornelius R. Guinee, for many years a foreman at the Spicer plant, and to Patrick Guinee, of the Queen City Hotel. At the present time he is one of the most active workers in St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, which he helped to bring up to its present substantial strength.

Makes Suggestion For Collection of Needed Peach Pits

The following excellent suggestion relative to the collection of peach pits, so much needed by the Government, has been made to the Record by Miss Josie M. Murphy, of Central avenue:

Editor, The Record:

We expect the majority of our people to go down town with the "peach pits," some put it off and some forget, so why not GO AFTER the pits! Get the small boy interested, and on Saturdays, in the morning, between 8 and 10 o'clock, let the housewives hang out just an ordinary paper bag, tie it on the front porch. It will be a sort of a sign that you have peach pits. Let the small boys cover the town. If you have no paper bag on your porch they will not call; saves their time and yours.

Give the youngsters a button with a "star" on it, or the word "pits," or anything you think suitable.

For every peach basket of pits give one button. Watch the youngsters try to earn the buttons so they can show them to their fathers, brothers and friends when they come back from "Over There."

Let every one in Plainfield have an opportunity to buy the buttons for the boys by sending ten cents to your office, enclosed find my dime. Start the other dimes rolling in. If you have too many dimes after buying the buttons, give them to the Red Cross. I think our two Plainfield papers will surely reach everyone with this suggestion.

Some of the Plainfield people who have cars, and a few spare hours on Saturday mornings, might help the youngster with the "peach basket," collect the pits, or at least give him a "lift" to your office, if he has a full basket.

Very truly yours,
J. M. MURPHY.

Albert I. Littel Promoted to Captain

Former Lieutenant Albert I. Littell, who returned to this city recently after a three months' stay in France, received word Wednesday that he had been promoted to the rank of captain. At the same time he was notified to proceed to Camp Wadsworth, S. C., where he is to be assigned to a new command.

Captain Littell was one of the original members of old Company K, Plainfield's national guard infantry unit, and after serving in various capacities for many years, was made battalion-adjutant of the Second New Jersey Regiment. At the outbreak of the war he was delegated to Camp McClellan, where, after passing all necessary examinations, he received the rank of lieutenant in tthe Twenty-ninth Division. He went overseas with his contingent and after placing his men on the firing line in France came back to America.

Captain Littell is a military man of recognized ability and his hosts of friends not only appreciate the promotion conferred upon him but predict greater things for him when he gets back into action.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Claybrook, of Grant avenue, returned home recently after spending three weeks with relatives at Cumberland, Md.

Plainfield, New Jersey, Friday, Sept. 20, 1918.

YOUR DUTY ON PRIMARY DAY.

Down at Washington stands the Nation's Capitol. It is more than a pile of stones: It is a monument to an idea:—The people are the Government. On Tuesday next, September 24th, is the Primary Day, on which each party selects its standard bearer for the coming election in November. A United States Senator and a Congressman for this, the Fifth, district are to be voted for.

There is a contest in both parties for these offices, and if the people are the Government, you must decide between them. The congressional contest so far as the Republicans are concerned takes an added interest from the fact that one of Plainfield's citizens is a candidate—Ernest R. Ackerman—for the long term, and for the short term, William F. Birch, of Dover, and against them is Mayor Rufus Franklin, of Summit, for both of them.

There can be no doubt how the people of Plainfield feel regarding the two candidates, but it is necessary to have this feeling recorded by the Republicans at the Primary so as to show the district that those who know him best are most eager for his success. Then, too, there is a contest for the purely local office of Mayor. This should bring out every voter. The Mayor is the president of the Municipal Business Corporation and the Councilmen are its directorate.

Mayor Leighton Calkins is opposed in his party by ex-Mayor Moy. This is a business act, a political, or personal question. Four years of service has given our present Mayor a business mind to be proud of.

Go to the Primary and VOTE.

THE WASTE IN CHANGING WORKING PLACES.

It is an unfortunate thing that in such a stupendous crisis as the Nation faces there should not be some Government authority to place each individual in the task for which he is best fitted and adapted and in which he can accomplish the best results. The Nation ought to be 100 per cent. effective in such a time as the present. It cannot when men are ill-fitted to tasks and are allowed to restlessly change from one job to another as fancy or fortune dictates.

The Nation conscripts men for military purposes. It places them where they can best serve and be most effective. Why should it not in the same way conscript men for civilian service and industrial service, much of which is so vitally related to the great task in hand and place them where they can be most effective?

The working population has been so restlessly shifting about in recent months that the Government has been obliged to warn against the practice of changing jobs. The Government makes an appeal especially to men engaged in essentlal war work to stick to their places.

The United States Employment Service says: "America is losing more through thoughtless changing of jobs, thoughtless hiring of men than through almost any other thing. It costs on the average of twenty to two hundred dollars every time a man changes his job. The man loses time. A machine stands idle that ought to be working at top speed on war supplies."

There are many men, moreover, who are shifting from place to place under the false impression that they are bettering their circumstances, who are actually stepping out of permanent positions to enter jobs that are more or less temporary. When the final adjustments are made after the war ends they consider that they have served no patriotic purpose by the shifts they have made and are out of their old positions and face uncertain employment prospects.

It is to help out the local manufacturers in their employment difficulties that Mayor Calkins has been holding conferences with industrial heads the past two weeks. The conclusion has been reached that the State Employment Bureau should establish a local agency in Plainfield and if this is done a large part of the trouble will be eliminated. A local agency will remove the necessity of having to go to Trenton, New Brunswick or Newark to secure Federal aid and give the men of Plainfield a better chance when they find it necessary to make a change in their working place. The agency will be a good thing and deserves the support of the skilled and unskilled men themselves.

THE CITY'S NEW TAX RATE.

In the face of the ever-increasing prices of everything in the last three or four years, the city's new tax rate of $2.10 should permit taxpayers to breathe a sigh of relief. It was generally supposed that this municipality would see a rise of from twenty to thirty points and when it narrowed down to only two over last year, a great load was lifted off the minds of citizens and officials alike. The rate is little short of remarkable under the circumstances, especially when it is considered that over in North Plainfield, where conditions are admittedly not as satisfactory as in the city, the rate is $3.06. Springfield undergoes a raise of fifty-five points and Westfield a raise of forty-six points.

Taken all in all, Plainfield can congratulate itself that its own home budget was kept down to almost the same figures of last year and that in spite of big increases in State, county and school requirements, the tax payments are to be only two points higher than last year.

• • • • • •

A MATTER OF FIGURES.

Most people have such poor memories when it comes to a matter of figures that they are easily misled by statements regarding taxes and taxation. This applies to Plainfield the same as in any other municipality and especially at the present time when everything and everybody is laboring under abnormal conditions.

Because of the ante-primary campaign now underway the expense of conducting Plainfield's government has been a matter of no small comment and various conflicting stories have been told about excessive taxes and heavy financial penalties imposed upon the citizens by the "wreeklessness" of Mayor Calkins. As we said at the beginning, few persons can remember any kind of a tax figure after a year or so and the susceptible are prone to swallow anything told them about extravagance. In order to show that the Mayor's four years in office have really shown a decrease in city expenses instead of an increase, the Record has secured figures from the official records. There has been an increase in State, county and school taxes, over which our own corporation has no control but in the city itself economy has been the watch-word.

In 1914 Mayor Stewart was in office. The amounts raised by taxes in Plainfield that year were as follows:

For city purposes, $266,980! for local schools, $140,480; for county and State, $183,701.

Leighton Calkins has been Mayor since January 1st, 1915, and the amounts raised by tax in each year of his administration were as follows:

1915—For city purposes, $256,235; for local schools, $155,525; for county and State, $184,634.

1916—For city purposes, $245,630; for local schools, $161,140; for county and State $198,887.

1917—For city purposes, $264,622; for local schools, $188,790; for county and State, $227,099.

1918—For city purposes, $265,290; for local schools, $200,222; for county and State, $240,586.

From these figures, taken accurately from the official records by the Collector of Taxes, it clearly appears that while the expenses of operation of the schools and of county and State activities have increased since 1914, the Calkins administration has succeeded, even in these war times, in actually reducing the tax levy for city purposes below the sum raised five years ago.

The foregoing figures, showing amounts raised by taxation for city purposes during each of the five years covered include not only the money needed for current expenses but also all money required to pay interest on bonds outstanding and to pay off the bonds which fell due in each year as well as to provide sinking funds to meet bonds of that character growing due in the future.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When candidates for office passed out cigars and kissed the babies?

When you had to shell out a quarter every Saturday to have someone pump the house tank full of water?

When you bought flour by the barrel and thought nothing of feeding sugar to old Dobbin?

When the butcher gave you for your dog, a chunk of meat that he now passes over the counter at fabulous prices?

When calico and ginghams were so cheap they were not at all popular for gowns?

When heavy casualties were inflicted on English sparrows and electric light globes by the air rifles carried about by the small boys before city ordinances placed them on the black list?

GETTING HUNK BEFORE THE BATTLE OF THE BALLOTS.

Of course, you must vote early but just because a lot of the boys are "Over There" don't do it often.

And don't be one of the boobs to nose in at the barn where you used to exercise the right of suffrage and discover, too late, that the booths have been moved to a new address.

Don't let any guy come along and trick you into accepting a ten to one bet that Bill Townsend gets the nomination. It will only take one vote to keep Bill where he is and he has that same teeny-weeny ballot locked up in his own little vest pocket.

Which ever man wins, in the Mayoralty race, more power to him. He who is so daring as to want the "much obliged" job, that is long on criticism and short on pay, should be entitled to the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

Better get a new excuse, you ginks preparing to claim exemption on physical defects. General Crowder has ruled that freckles and red hair will not exempt you from dough boy duty.

Co-incident with the order shutting off the output from the breweries, the Plainfield-Union Water Company asks permission to increase its water supply by tapping the Millstone River for a few odd million gallons of aqua pura each day. Probably getting ready for the big rush that is coming next year.

"Carrie Home" is the name of a lot of patriotic women who are helping to win the war by relieving the merchants of the necessity of maintaining a great fleet of delivery wagons. "Miss, send it" is, we are delighted to note, becoming scarcer and scarcer in this land.

Heaven help that Nott engine if it ever gets stalled on McDowell street. That's where John Haskard lives, and he has more orders for scrap iron than he can fill.

When a woman begins to talk about a nobby "little" dress she saw in the swell store down town, her husband knows that preparations are being made to touch off a blast under his bank account.

It looks to us as if the Germans are almost ready to ask for a truce in order to arrange sleeping hours.

Say, glance over that list of Plainfield registrants in today's Record and see if it don't put you in mind of that old "spirit of '76" picture. In the first two columns, we spotted nineteen beardless youths, fifty-five proud papas and eight grand-daddies.

In the report given out from Mayor Calkins' office after the coal conference in Newark, Monday, between Administrator Jenkinson and the Plainfield officials, there is this significant statement:

"The Committee also requested the State Administrator to arrange for active local administration in Plainfield, so that all coal arriving in Plainfield shall be distributed with absolute fairness."

Now you can understand why Baron Kenney has suddenly gotten pink behind the ears.

The Voter's Primer.

He will get all the votes in his own home town.

He only wants the short term, he'll surely put it over.

All right for the city but not for touring far.

P stands for Primary Day, the day which makes this true,
Don't forget, oh voters! it is all up to you!

Work Doubled; City Assessors Seek More Pay

Plainfield's assessors, who only recently completed their field work for the present year's taxes, are in line for more pay because of their having to begin going over the same ground again on October 1. This results from the Pierson law put through the Legislature last spring, making it compulsory for tax payments to be made twice each year.

It has always been the custom of the assessors to make their rounds in the spring, starting out on May 20. The taxes levied on this assessment as made this year will be due and delinquent on December 20 next. The next payment will be compulsory on June 1, 1919, and after that there will be another payment due and delinquent on December 1, 1919. The assessors must now make the assessments on which the two 1919 payments are to be made and for that reason their work is just doubled.

The rate of pay for the assessors, of whom there are four, has been $400 each. They believe that inasmuch as they are doubling up, they should be entitled to an increase and the belief is being supported by many citizens and officials. No formal application has been made as yet but it is quite likely to come in the very near future.

The work of the assessors next month will undoubtedly be the hardest they have done for years as each one will have to put the property in his district through a "combing" process to make up an increase that is bound to come. There has been no building of any account since the spring assessment and the natural rise in valuations will be missing. Added to this discrepancy is the loss of from $15,000 to $20,000 that will follow the shutting up of the local saloons and other liquor places. This item alone will mean an increase of about four points in the tax rate unless there is added valuation to off-set.

The County Board of Taxation announced this week that Plainfield's tax rate for the present year would be $2.10 on each $100. This is only an increase of two points over last year's rate of $2.08. The small raise is greatly appreciated by the taxpayers especially when the big jump in other parts of the county is considered. Springfield rose from $1.75 to $2.30, Westfield from $2.24 to $2.70 and Garwood from $1.84 to $2.05. In North Plainfield the rate will be $3.06. In a number of instances the rate went lower by a few points. In Fanwood it dropped from $2.19 in 1917 to $2.11 this year; Scotch Plains went lower by nineteen points, the new rate being $1.68, and there were small decreases in Rahway, New Providence township, New Providence borough and Roselle.

The total amount to be raised by tax in Plainfield this fall is $706,098. Of this sum $33,725 is called for by the State tax; $85,987 for the State schools; $120,873 for the county tax; $200,222 for the Plainfield schools, and the remainder, $265,290, for the city budget, the latter covering all other city expenses outside those mentioned. The increase in the city budget itself is only $668, but in the four years that Mayor Calkins has been in office there has been a net decrease in the city expenses of $1,690.

COMMEND
Albert E. Jackson
FOR ASSEMBLYMAN

We, Chiefs of municipal Fire Departments and companies in Union County, have long known ALBERT E. JACKSON and have observed with interest his work not only in connection with his own local Fire Department but also in connection with the fire service of the State in general, and with the annual conventions and other affairs of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association and its Legislative Committee: and because of his administrative ability, his keen insight into legislative matters, and his broad and comprehensive grasp of public interests, together with his unswerving integrity and industry, we believe that he would make a most useful member of the General Assembly of this State, and we cordially commend his candidacy for that position to the support of our friends.

Hippodrome's New Production The Peer Of All Attractions

Charles Dillingham can again be credited with presenting the biggest success of the current New York season, for his gorgeous pageant, "Everything," played to a larger public last week than did all the other musical productions on Broadway combined.

In "Everything," Mr. Dillingham appeals to every shade of theatrical taste, and no patron from eight to eighty but what leaves the Hippodrome these days singing the praises of the new show.

What applies to the question of scenery and paint applies with no less force to the matter of costuming of the huge production with its 700 performers. Despite the war the costume changes in "Everything" are more numerous and varied than ever before. In "The Gay City," the arrestingly beautiful roller-skating scene, the silks and ruffles and burbelows of the early sixties are reproduced with painstaking care, the diversity of colors represented making for a bewilderingly beautiful effect.

This note of lavishness is evidenced throughout the entire show. In the Chateau-Thierry scene, which closes the first act of "Everything," the lush fields of the France of 1914 are shown in all their beauty, with the happy plowman at his work, only to be converted a moment later into the devastated area of battle, with trenches cut through the meadows, the allies going over the top, machine guns and tanks belching forth their murderous fire, airplanes dealing death overhead and frenzied horses drawing fresh field pieces into battle. The scene is a masterpiece of realism, as numerous returned Pershing veterans have attested.

In "The Country Circus" scene, every detail of circus life is faithfully reproduced from the initial parade and the big tent with its ring, equestriennes, clowns, elephants, band, sideshow freaks, etc., even to the matter of an audience.

"The Beginning of the World" is a drama in colors—hailed by the critics as absolutely unique in the realm of stage pictures.

"The Toy Factory" is a children's paradise, with its fantastic dolls and divertissements calculated to appeal to oldsters as well as youngsters.

"The Beach at Atlantic City" is just what the title of the scene implies—a likeness of America's greatest water resort, with comedy pranks, songs and of frolicsome girls to make it a memorable part of the program.

"Somewhere on the East Side" portrays to the out of town visitor an aspect of New York city life rarely glimpsed on a casual trip to the metropolis. It is authentic in its comedy as well as in its setting.

But this description merely scratches the surface of the production. DeWolf Hopper and "Bluch" provide the better part of the comedy; Houdini contributes his magic and marvellous powers of self-liberation; Belle Story and Arthur Geary sing themselves into the hearts of everyone; Charles T. Aldrich again proves himself "the man of a thousand faces;" Bert Levy graphically records the personalities of the day on a huge screen; Lubovska and Gulda among others interpret the dancing of ancient Egypt and of today in terms of rarest grace; Reynolds and Donegan, the El Rey Sisters and Steele and Winslow run the gaumet of grace and skill in roller-skating; the Gaudsmith Brothers with their dogs and numerous other entertainers round out the most comprehensive entertainment in the history of the theatre.

IS IT to the Taxpayers' Interest to have an EFFICIENT Public Servant in the Most Important Office in Union Co.?

Edward Bauer

IS RUNNING ON HIS RECORD as the Republican CANDIDATE for REGISTER of Deeds and Mortgages for Union County AT THE PRIMARIES

TUESDAY
September 24, 1918

Who would you employ in your business, a man of experience or a man without?

Is Mr. Bauer's experience of any benefit to the taxpayers of Union county?

The office of Register is one of the most important within the gift of the people of Union county, and one that requires an expert of experience in this line to safeguard your property interests.

Mr. Bauer's qualifications are well known to all who have had dealings with this department of the county government, having been Deputy Register for eight years and Register since December, 1917, by appointment of Governor Edge.

FACTS ABOUT THE Register's Office

The Register's office is the largest office in the County Courthouse, occupying one-half of the first floor and three rooms in the basement.

It employs sixteen clerks and assistants.

It has charge of the recording of all papers affecting the title to Real Estate, such as Deeds, Mortgages, etc., and to personal property such as Chattel Mortgages, Conditional Bills of Sale, etc.

The number of papers of this nature recorded averages 18,000 a year.

There is an average of 3,000 mortgages canceled each year.

It is of the utmost importance to the citizens of the county that these papers should be properly recorded and indexed, as well as properly executed and drafted before being made a part of the permanent records.

The Register cannot have too much experience in passing on the different instruments before he accepts them for record.

Since the fee system has been abolished, the office has paid to the county an average of $3,000 over and above all expenses for salaries of clerk hire.

The most up-to-date system of indexing is used in this office and the loose-leaf system has been adopted during the past year.

Some Voluntary Recommendations

Rahway, N. J., August 15, 1918.

An experience of eleven years in my profession with the Register's office of Union County enables me to express in a few words my opinion of the worth of Edward Bauer in that office.

His ability, acquired by long experience at that particular work, to examine a legal document when presented for record and detect errors before recording, to my mind is a valuable asset available for all transacting business with the office.

Add to this his business ability, attention to duty and unfailing courtesy, and Union County has the right man for the office.

DAVID ARMSTRONG,
Counsellor-at-Law, Rahway, N. J.

My Dear Mr. Bauer:

I am glad to know that you are a candidate for election to the office of Register of Union County.

Having done business with that office constantly since your connection with it, I have noted the prompt and efficient business management and courteous treatment accorded its patrons.

I will be glad to do what I can to aid your election.

Yours very truly,
ASA F. RANDOLPH,
Counsellor-at-Law, Plainfield, N. J.

These Critical Times Our Country Demands a Business Man in Congress

WILLIAM F. BIRCH

OF DOVER, MORRIS COUNTY, N. J.,

IS THE Republican CANDIDATE
For the Nomination for Congress
Primaries TUESDAY Sept. 24

William F. Birch, after considering the dire need of business men in Congress, has filed his petition for the unexpired term of the late Hon. John H. Capstick, for Congress from the Fifth Congressional District.

Besides being a manufacturer of Boilers, Tanks and general Steel Construction, ninety-five (95) per cent. of which is used directly or indirectly to help win the war, he is a Director in the National Union Bank of Dover, The American Trust Company of Morristown, and the N. J. Manufacturers Casualty Insurance Company of Trenton; also a Director of the Chamber of Commerce in Dover and the Dover General Hospital. He has served the people of Morris County in the Legislature for two (2) terms; also served as Recorder on the Board of Aldermen in Dover, N. J.

It is clear to all thinking people that the present world war necessitates big business men in Congress, to carry out a Business Administration. This has been clearly demonstrated by the War Department in taking such men as Messrs. Schwab, Hurley, Replogle and others.

Let this district do its share by adding WILLIAM F. BIRCH, our Big Steel Man, to this list.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The Woman's League of St. Joseph church has draped a new service flag over the altar. It contains sixty blue stars and one gold in honor of members of the parish who are in service. The gold star is for Lieutenant Edmund LaPorte, who died in France last spring.

The City Council held one of the shortest meetings on record Monday night. In less than twenty minutes all the business accumulating for two weeks was disposed of through the new system devised by City Clerk John J. Carroll. Most of the business was of a routine nature.

R. D. Goodman, a member of the A. C. Thompson Auto Company, has enlisted in the Officers' Training Camp at Raritan and in consequence has disposed of his interests in the auto concern to Mr. Thompson. The latter is now practically the sole owner of the business, being in possession of ninety-eight per cent. of the stock.

Miss Missouria F. Martin, of East Seventh street, has been appointed night supervisor at Muhlenberg Hospital to succeed Miss Marry I. Scott, who recently enlisted in a nursing unit destined for overseas duty. Miss Martin was graduated from the Muhlenberg training school in 1907.

A. H. Atterbury, Alexander Vars and H. C. Van Emburgh have been named by Mayor Leighton Calkins as commissioners to assess benefits and damages for the installation of sewers in the city during the last four years, the total cost of which was $307,862.64.

George M. Rittenhouse, of Sandford avenue, who recntly gave up his business in New York to engage in Y. M. C. A. war work, has been assigned to Camp Merritt, where several Plainfielders have been stationed during the past six months.

Plainfield Lodge of Elks will inaugurate its annual fall and winter season of social affairs next Thursday night, when a shirt waist dance will be given at the Watchung avenue club house. Professor Wetton's orchestra will provide the music and the committee, of which Thomas A. Moore is chairman, promises a number of original ideas on the program.

County Attorney Francis J. Blatz, Freeholder James F. Buckle and Elias H. Bird and former Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, were among the county officials attending the funeral of Freeholder John N. Cady, in Calvary church, Summit, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Cady, who was seventy-six years old, died in the Mansion Square Hospital at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., last Friday. He resided at Summit for thirty years and had been a Union county freeholder since 1898, serving for sixteen of the twenty years as director.

John Snedaker, of 534 West Fourth street, and Fred Westerveld, of 110 East Fifth street, were sent to Camp Dix, Wednesday, after they had been arrested by the local police on charges preferred by the Exemption Board. Shedaker, who is married and has several children, never registered at all, although he should have been in the class of June 5, 1917. Westerveld registered last June but failed to return any questionnaire. They were caught in a round-up conducted by Chief Clerk Freeman, of the Exemption Board, which netted a number of other delinquents. One belonged to a board in New York city and another at Buffalo. Both of these were sent away the forepart of the week and the cases of others are pending.

Fifty-one members of the Plainfield Home Defense League participated in a camping trip at Glenside Park the past week-end. With full equipment, and baggage wagon, the men marched from this city Saturday afternoon and on reaching the park, pitched camp for the night. After mess in the evening a big camp fire was lighted and several hours were passed in the enjoyment of musical selections played by talented members, also songs and stories. The bugle called the men out at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Faces and hands were washed in a running brook and after "setting up exercises" were gone through under the direction of Ralph Patch, breakfast was eaten with a relish. After maneuvers had been gone through, the company packed up and started on a hike through Washington Valley, where, by prearrangement, they were to meet the North Plainfield leaguers returning from their camp near Stirling. The plan called for a sham battle at the point of conjunction and this occurred near the Joseph Gavett property on Valley road. Commissioner Ransome, who acted as referee, declared at the conclusion of the fight that North Plainfield had won on points. Altogether the week-end trip was a complete success in every way and will be followed by others in the near future.

Mothers of the children in the North Plainfield schools attended a reception conducted by the Parent-Teachers' Association in Debele's Auditorium, Wednesday afternoon. A splendid address was delivered by Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church.

Because of the third grade in the Somerset School becoming overcrowded, the North Plainfield Board of Education has ordered it divided and will engage a new teacher to take charge of the second division.

Samuel B. Howe, of Kenyon avenue, formerly a member of the faculty at the Plainfield High School, has been selected as professor of social science and history in the Junior College which has just been established for the Newark city school system. He will enter upon his duties next Monday. Since resigning his position here, about three years ago, Mr. Howe has been connected with the Newark schools.

The authorities at Washington have again made the request that persons addressing letters to soldiers overseas should not write the initials "A. E. F." where "American Expeditionary Force" is meant. Considerable confusion has been caused by this custom through many of the letters being consigned to the Australian Expeditionary Force, which has used the abbreviation "A. E. F." since its entrance in the war in 1914.

The many friends in Plainfield of Edel Moldenke, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, will be interested to hear that he has made good in Burmah, India, to such an extent that he is now superintendent of a subsidiary iron mine of his company. He is responsisl efor the uninterrupted supply of the fluxing material for the great lead and silver smelters of the largest lead mine of the world. The value of his energetic work, he being but 21 years of age, may be appreciated when it is learned that after eight months' exploration of the jungles of Burmah and surrounding provinces of China, Siam and the incident dangers and hardships, Mr. Moldenke is given responsible charge of 600 colleries and 250 Bullock carts for conducting the mining and transportation work in the mountains and swamps of the country.

Members of the Board of Freeholders, together with Sheriff James E. Warner, made a tour of inspection or the county prison farm at New Providence, yesterday. They accepted the invitation of the prison farm committee of the board, which is comprised of Thomas F. Haviland, Elston Darby, John Z. Hatfield and Elias H. Bird. The work on the farm has been under the direct supervision of Charles Drake, who has placed the grounds in good shape. While the project is not yet a year old, enough vegetables have been taken from the land under cultivation to considerably reduce the maintenance cost of the county jail.

The Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter of the Red Cross has been requested to make 1,600 sweaters and 6,400 socks as its share of the number of knitted articles for the American Red Cross.

James N. Cullen, of 1001 South Second street, was among twelve limited service men sent out from Camp Dix this week to do detached duty as clerks for local Exemption Boards. They are paid the same as a private in the army, but the local board must pay a certain sum toward their food and lodging expenses. Mr. Cullen has been assigned to the Plainfield Board and is now one of Chief Clerk Walter Freeman's assistants.

At the closing of the Kenyon Gardens for the summer, last Saturday, it was announced that the total of the vegetable products raised by the children were valued at $698.50. Exercises marked the wind-up and prizes donated by James De Graff, of Central avenue, were awarded by Rev. Howard E. Clark as follows: Best gardens, Aileen McNab, Miriam Howes; best workers, Anna Bishop, Charles Wais; attendance, Herbert Von Dreele; Virginia Harvey; community spirit, Jean McNab, Ida Nash; faithfulness, Reginald Groves, Mary Quinn; best business proposition, Adelaide Chargois, Alfred Genung; best crops, Esther Garfinkle and Grace Bunker.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Freeman, of South avenue, have received word that their son, Stewart F. Freeman, now stationed at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky., has been promoted from a lieutenant to a captain. Two of Captain Freeman's brothers are also in the seervice, while Mr. Freeman, the father, is chief clerk at the local Exemption Board.

Frank Hannon, of Dunellen, assistant paymaster at the Spicer plant n South Plainfield, accidentally shot himself in the left hand while examining a revolver at the company office a few days ago. The injury was treated by Dr. Pittis and it is believed Mr. Hannon will suffer no ill effects.

Frank Dencklau, of Fairview avenue, who has been employed at the Newark plant of the Air Nitrates Corporation, left this week for Sheffield, Ala., where the concern is completing the erection of a new plant to cost about $100,000,000. Mr. Dencklau will act in the capacity of chemist when the Sheffield place begins its output.

The big plate glass show windows in Schwed Brothers' store had a narrow escape from demolition Saturday night, when a runaway horse, belonging to Lewis Kadesh, the Somerset street furniture dealer, all but went through the main part of them. A police located at the curb caught front wheel of the wagon and threw the frightened animal down with its head only an inch or two away from the glass. Bystanders did the rescue act before any further danger could occur. The runaway started at Park avenue and Fourth street through an out of town auto truck striking the horse. Silas Brown, the colored driver of the latter, tried his best to check the animal but as it got the bit in its teeth, he was unable to do so although he managed to steer clear of the heavy traffic on Park avenue at the time. Brown was badly frightened by the near drive through Schwed's windows but escaped injury.

Mrs. Nathan Hofheimer, of Warrenville, has contributed $1,000 to the fund being raised for improvements to Temple Sholem, and Mrs. Arthur Hofheimer, of Warrenville, has contributed $500 to the same cause.

Belt Line Freight Route Is Decided

Further details for the proposed belt line railroad through North Jersey to help relieve the freight congestion have just been announced by Frank R. Ford, of Essex Fells, a well known engineer and a member of the New York and New Jersey Port Commission, which is pushing the project. The general line of the road has been practically decided upon as far as Elizabeth, but from that city to the point of teminus it is still uncertain.

When the proposal was first taken up and brought to the attention of Washington officials, it was planned to have the line start at Piermont-on-the-Hudson, describe a semi-circle until Elizabeth was reached and then to utilize the route of the B. & O. freight line to the Staten Island Sound. It is now planned to continue the road across the meadows from Elizabeth to Newark and then over to a point on the Bayonne shore.

If the latter plan is adopted the tracks of the Central Railroad will be used from Summit to Aldene.

Field work for the survey and location of the line has been started.

Collector Duffy Warns Against Stamp Omission

Collector of Internal Revenue, Charles V. Duffy, desires to call the attention of all persons interested in the stamp tax on deeds conveying real estate, and on notes and bonds given in connection therewith, to the fact that the same are not being properly stamped.

Under Title VIII, Schedule A, Subdivision 7 of the War Revenue Act of October 3, 1917, imposing a stamp tax on documents, deeds conveying real estate sold, are subject to stamp tax calculated upon the consideration or value of the interest or property conveyed, exclusive of the value of any pre-existing encumbrance upon the property at the time of the sale and not removed as a result of the sale. It is thus seen that the sale price of the property and not the nominal consideration, is the basis upon which said stamp tax is to be computed.

While mortgages are not subject to stamp tax, the amount of any mortgages, placed upon property contemporaneously with or after the sale, cannot be deducted from the amount upon which stamp tax upon the deed of conveyance is calculated. Bonds accompanying real estate mortgages are subject to stamp tax under subdivision 1, Schedule A, of the above act, upon the amount secured.

Allows Issuance of Stock by Water Company

The State Public Utility Commission, stating that the Middlesex Water Company, which sought approval for the issurance of $125,000 of common stock for the payment and cancellation of debts incurred for extensions to the plant, is deserving of whatever assistance can reasonably be rendered by the board, gives its approval in a report just filed. The petition, the report says, makes no mention of a stock dividend, although the testimony in the case indicated that the company intends to use the funds acquired for the payment of a large cash dividend with which the stock can be purchased. The board, in giving its approval for the stock issue for the purposes which the petiton stated, says that the propriety of the payment of a large cash dividend is for the board of directors of the company to determine.

Wounded Yankees Well Cared For In England

More than 5,000 American soldiers in hospitals in England have received personal calls from women of the care committee of the American Red Cross in the last few weeks. In every instance efforts were made to keep the men in touch with relatives and friends, a service which, reports to headquarters at Washington, indicated, convinced the sick and wounded that England was very much like home.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

JAMES B. MARTIN.

James B. Martin, one of Plainfield's best known residents, died Wednesday night, at his home at 325 Central avenue following an illness dating back two years. He had been failing gradually all that time and two weeks ago Tuesday suffered a paralytic stroke, which hastened his demise. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, of Hope chapel, and burial will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Martin was born at Rahway in December, 1849, but came to Plainfield at the age of twenty-four years to enter the employ of the late Joseph Cutter. The latter conducted one of the city's largest grocery stores of the time at Front street and Exchange alley and Mr. Martin remained with him until he disposed of his interest to other persons. When the old Plainfield Street Railway was started, Mr. Martin was one of its first conductors. He continued in this service until impaired health demanded less arduous work, since which he was employed as local agent by an insurance company.

In the days of the Plainfield volunteer fire department, Mr. Martin was a member of No. 2 engine company. He was active in all fire matters and when the paid department was installed he was one of the many enthusiastic "vamps" who was placed on the retired list. He was a member of the Firemen's Relief Association but had no other fraternal affiliations. For the past year and a half he had practically lived a retired life.

Mr. Martin's wife died a number of years ago and his only near surviving relatives are three daughters and two sons. One of the latter is Jack Martin, the well-known professional baseball player who has been connected with the National and American Leagues and who played short-stop the past season for the Milwaukee team, of which he was captain. The other son is David B. Martin, of South Second street, a foreman at the Saurer Motor plant and also a popular local favorite as a baseball man. The daughters are Mrs. Annie Jacques, of Portland, Me.; Mrs. Minnie Stoeckle and Miss Charlotte Martin, living at the home on Central avenue.

HENRY A. DROPPE.

Henry A. Droppe, a resident of this city for the past year, died yesterday morning at his home, 319 Bergen street. He was born in France thirty-two years ago and his surviving relatives are located in that country. He was last employed as machinist at the Saurer Motor plant on West Front street.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

SISTER MARY ANN.

Sister Mary Ann, a member of the Order of Sisters of Mercy, stationed at Mt. St. Mary's college, died at the institution yesterday morning. Her family name was O'Brien and previous to entering the sisterhood, her home was at Trenton. Her relatives reside in that city.

The funeral was held at Mt. St. Mary's College this morning at 9 o'clock, when Rev. Father Baldwin offered the requiem mass. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

PAUL ROLLA APGAR.

The funeral of Paul Rolla Apgar, whose death occurred Wednesday, after a brief illness with pneumonia resulting from Spanish influenza contracted at the Merchant Marine barracks in Boston, was held in St. Mary's church this morning at 10 o'clock. The requiem mass was said by Rev. Father Holsters in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Apgar was twenty-three years old and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Neaf Apgar, of Clinton avenue. His home had always been in this city. At the outbreak of the war he was employed in the cost department at the Saurer Motor shop but several weeks ago enlisted in the Merchant Marine. With eighteen other local young men, he went to Boston and was accepted for service after the customary physical examination. Early last week, however, he fell a victim to the Spanish influenza, which is now raging in New England, and was sent home by the physician in charge of his company. Pneumonia came as an aftermath after reaching here and he sank rapidly until the end came.

Having been a pupil at St. Mary's school, Mr. Apgar had scores of young associates in addition to many other local friends, by all of whom he was very well liked. He was also held in high esteem by his fellow employes at the Saurer plant. In addition to his parents, he is survived by six brothers and two sisters. His father is the well-known rifle shot who has been employed for many years by the Peters Cartridge Company.

JOHN S. LANGSWORH.

John S. Langsworth, aged fifty years, died yesterday morning at his home, 71 Norwood avenue, the borough. He was a native of England but had lived in this country most of his life. For the past seventeen years, he had been employed as assistant signal engineer on the New Jersey Central. His only near surviving relative is his widow, Mrs. Minnie Langsworth.

The body will be taken to Philadelphia, where the funeral will be held tomorrow. Interment will be in a Philadelphia cemetery.

LAWRENCE LEONARD.

A number of friends from this city were in attendance at St. Patrick's church, Elizabeth, Tuesday morning, when a requiem mass was said for Lawrence Leonard, a former Plainfielder, who died in the Elizabeth General Hospital, Sunday, after a long illness. Following the service, burial was made in Mt. Olive cemetery.

Mr. Leonard, who was known to everyone as "Larry," was born in Elizabeth and lived there until he came to Plainfield as an employe of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, the local undertaking firm. He was faithful and conscientious in his work and it was with deep regret two years ago that friends noticed his health beginning to fail. During the past year, he had been in several institutions and hospitals in the hope of overcoming a ravaging disease, but all to no avail.

The deceased is survived by three brothers and one sister. They are: Michael, of the Elizabeth police force; Frank Leonard, also of Elizabeth; Peter Leonard, of Bayonne, and Mrs. Foley, of Elizabeth.

Building Outlook Better After Word From Washington

Eastern building construction interests closed the most trying week in their experience Saturday, when the first authentic intimation was sent to them from Washington advising them as to the fate of the construction industry as a whole during the present war crisis and out of it they gleaned the welcome hope that the situation was not going to be quite as bad as the outlook earlier in the week promised, says the Dow Service Daily Building Reports this week.

New war time building rules issued by the War Industries Board, Friday night, were sent to The Dow Service Daily Building Reports. They reveal that the War Industries Board has placed juisdiction in the matter of building construction in the hands of the Mayors' Committee of the Council of National Defense as far as New York city was concerned and in the matters of construction in New York and New Jersey in the hands of the respective State Councils of National Defense, at Albany and, at Trenton. A sub-committee of the Mayor's Committee will be named probably this week by Henry McDonald, Director-General of the State Council at a conference to be held either today or tomorrow at his offices on the sixth floor of the Hall of Records, Chambers and Center streets. This committee will have full jurisdiction in the matter of passing upon projected local building plans.

Highway work will not be handled by this committee, according to present plans, but will be vested entirely with the State Commissioner of Highways for New York and New Jersey. The former has his headquarters at 53-55 Lancaster street, Albany; and the latter at the State Capitol building, Trenton.

Surveys have been ordered on all building activities in the territories in the jurisdiction of the local representatives of the Council of National Defense through their respective State chairmen who are asked to report same as promptly as possible with their recommendations concerning the necessity for such construction to D. R. McLennan, Chief of the Non-War Construction Section of the Priorities Division, War Industries Board, Washington, D. C. It was understood that this department, including the Mayor's Committee, will ultimately receive all applications for building projects, essential or non-essential, and pass their recommendations of worthy cases to the State Council which, in turn, will file its recommendations and findings to the war branch of the War Industries Board having particular jurisdiction. These rules will govern, sending further revision as conditions warrant as worked out by the Council of National Defense and the War Industries Board:

"Any person interested in construction project must apply, with a full statements of the facts under oath, to the appropriate local representative of the various State Councils of Defense

"This representative of the State Council will investigate the necessity of the proposed construction and transmit recommendations to the State Council for review.

"The State Council will review the case and if it decides in favor of the construction it will at once send its recommendations, with a full statement of all the facts, to the Non-War Construction Section of the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board. The Non-War Construction sections will grant or withhold the permit and so notify the State Council of Defense, and the individual concerned.

"If the State Council decides against the proposed construction, it will notify the person concerned that his project has been disapproved.

"The War Industries Board will inform all persons applying directly to it that they must first take up their projects with the appropriate local representative of the Council of National Defense.

"The ability of the War Industries Board to enforce this whole plan rests upon the fact that it controls priorities and has also secured from the manufacturers of building materials a pledge not to supply materials for projects which are not authorized under the regulations of the War Industries Board."

The encouraging features about this new turn in the affairs of the building interests is that instead of six boards or bureaus having jurisdiction over building construction and material supply the War Industries Board, the State Councils of National Defense, the Department of Labor, the Capital Issues Commitee and, in a way, the Fuel Administration under this plan are all co-ordinated and the possibility of confliction of orders governing the essentiality of proposed construction is entirely removed.

Sentiment in the building trades on Saturday morning was to the effect, in a majority of instances, at least, that a great step forward had been accomplished as far as stabilizing the general building situation. The actual effect upon construction probably will be no different than that which has been prevailing for six or eight months in that non-essential construction has been almost practically eliminated. Building operations having full justification for proceeding will have a full opportuniyt of laying the merits of their proposition before a tribunal vested with definite authority which has not been the case heretofore. It will give the building material manufacturers more definite bases upon which to figure present and future market demands.

PLAINFIELD COMPANY REMOVING TO STAMFORD.

The Raymond Engineering Company, which has been occupying a portion of the former Bosch Magneto plant on South avenue, is making preparations to move all of its equipment from this city to a new big plant factory nearly completion at Stamford, Conn. The change will be made within the next two or three weeks.

The Raymond Company manufactures gun sights for the Government and at present employs about seventy-five skilled mechanics at the local plant.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES, ATTENTION!

The unit of the Students Army Training Corps to be established at Alfred College this fall is fast filling up. There is still room for a few more.

It is expected that all eligible men who registered September 12 will be in the service by November 15. All high school graduates, subject to draft, still have opportunity to enter the Students Army Training Corps and, at the completion of the course prescribed by the Government, to become commissioned or non-commissioned officers or technicians.

This is the chance of a life-time. To those inducted into the S. A. T. C. the Government will give tuition, room, board, uniform, plus an a private's pay of $30 a month. At Alfred College the course, which is prescribed by the War Department, is identical with that offered in all the approved colleges.

If high school graduates do not avail themselves of the Corps they will go directly upon being called, into the cantonments as privates.

To lads of spirit and ambition and ability the S. A. T. C. is a beckoning opportunity.

Alfred College opens Wednesday, September 25, but those interested should apply at once.

PRES. BOOTHE C. DAVIS,
Alfred, N. Y.

WILLIAM G. SMITH ENTERS MUNITION PLANT'S EMPLOY

William G. Smith, of Park avenue, known to his friends as "Brockton" Bill, has resigned his position as manager of the shoe department at Marshall & Ball's store in Newark, to enter the employ of the Gillespie Loading Company, at Morgan Station, near South Amboy. He has been appointed to a responsible position in the chemical department, of which Everett Mapelesden, of Myrtle avenue, this city, is the director.

Mr. Smith is giving up his apartment in the Stirling building and will make his home at the Gillespie plant. This will prevent him from continuing his singing in local churches and as a member of the Elks' quartet, a work in which he has been prominent for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Whelan, of East Second street, have returned home after a two weeks' stay at Deerland Park in the Adirondacks.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Helene Irma Fiedler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fiedler, of New York, to Waldemar H. Croszmann, son of Dr. Maximilian Groszmann, of Johnston's Drive. No date has been set for the wedding.

James O'Keefe, of No. 4 Fire House at Netherwood, began his annual two weeks' vacation Tuesday morning. He is spending the time at

The marriage of Miss Lillian Cromwell, sister of Mrs. W. H. I. Cubberley, of Washington street, to George W. Hibbard, of New York, has been announced. The ceremony was performed at Mrs. Cubberley's home by Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First M. E. church, Saturday night. The couple will make their home in New York.

John C. Mottley, of West Fourth street, who is in the Crouse-Irving Hospital at Syracuse, N. Y., following a severe attack of pleuro-pneumonia, is improving slowly and may be confined to the institution several weeks longer. He was located at the Syracuse military barracks when stricken.

A. D. Cook, of East Seventh street, returned recently after his annual summer sojourn at Mt. Pocono, Pa.

Mrs. Wilbert T. Bintliff and daughter, of Church street, returned Tuesday after a three weeks' visit with Mrs. Bintliff's mother at Stockton.

Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, a former local resident, who has been making her home for the past year at Bridgeport, Conn., with her daughter, Mrs. James Jack, is spending two weeks at the home of her son, Hugh B. Sweeney, of East Seventh street.

Atlantic City.

Mrs. Frank Burke and daughters, of West Fifth street, returned home this week, after an all-summer stay at Wildwood, South Jersey. Mrs. Burke's little daughter, Mae Frances, who recently suffered the fracture of an arm by a fall on the Wildwood boardwalk, is still carrying the member in a sling, but an early recovery is assured under the care of Dr. Endicott.

Monroe Gullberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Gullberg, of Golf avenue, was given a farewell party at the home of his sister, Mrs. William O'Loughlin, of Golf avenue, Saturday night, on the eve of his departure for Tobyhanna, Pa., where he was assigned as a member of a tank corps. Twenty-five relatives and friends were in attendance. Mr. Gullberg is the third son in the family to enter the service, the others being Corporal Gullberg, a former Company K man, who went out of Anniston with the Twenty-ninth Division, and Private Carl Gullberg, a motor mechanic with a mobile corps in France.

Winfred Cram, a former well-known Plainfielder and for many years a linotype operator in the Daily Press, was a visitor the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Miller, of East Sixth street. When the Daily Press suspended publication two years ago, Mr. Cram returned to farming in Vermont, but after the first season's corps were in, he heeded the call of the linotype and took a position with a Buffalo concern. He resigned that last week to accept a position at Newark and he is now located in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Mittis, who were married at the Church of the Intercession, New York, on September 7, have returned from their wedding trip and are making their home on East Front street. Mrs. Pittis was Miss Elizabeth Stoddard Campbell, daughter of Mrs. Robert J. Campbell, of New York.

Warren C. Squier, of Pearl street, the borough, is seriously ill at his home, following a stroke of paralysis which first became apparent last Friday. Mr. Squier is conscious by has been unable to converse with anyone.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston, of Rockview avenue, are planning to leave for Florida within the near future to spend the winter. They intend making the trip by automobile. Until recently Mr. and Mrs. Gaston lived in California and motored from the Pacific coast to Plainfield. Mrs. Gaston is the daughter of Clarence Woodcock, of West Seventh street.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hatch, of West Eighth street, returned home recently, after spending the summer at Mt. Desert, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob E. Waldorf, of East Seventh street, have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Beck, of New York, formerly of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hart, of Gresham road, left Monday by automobile for a two weeks' tour through Pennsylvania. Mr. Hart, who is exalted ruler of Plainfield Lodge of Elks, is general representative for the Luck Manufacturing Company and the tour is being taken as a part of his vacation.

Mrs. Sophie Larson, who has been conducting "The Plainfield," at 515 Park avenue, will leave for Philadelphia, October 1, to take charge of a business in that city, which she recently purchased. Her place here will be continued as before in charge of competent parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Detweiler, of East Seventh street, returned recently after spending the summer in New York State.

Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin, his mother, Mrs. A. H. Martin, and sister, all of Grandview avenue, the borough, spent the past week-end at Lake Hopatcong. The trip was made by automobile.

Miss Marguerite Maddaloni, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donato Maddaloni, of George street, was married in St. Mary's church on Sunday night at 6:00 o'clock to Thomas LaPia, son of Joseph LaPia, of Westfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Hennessey in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The maid of honor was Miss Josephine Gundlick, of New York, and the bridesmaids the Misses Etta McCormick, of New York; Myrtle Townley, of this city; Liberia Cotoni, of Westfield, and Frances Giglio, of Yonkers. The best man was Romolo Fanara, of New York. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the young couple will reside for the present. The bridegroom is associated with Mr. Maddaloni in the wine importing business in New York.

Joseph B. Yerkes and family, of Central avenue, returned recently after spending the summer at Mt. Kineo, Me.

Mrs. Fred Zweifel and children, formerly of West Seventh street, returned Tuesday from Mt. Pocono, Pa., where they spent the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Zweifel are temporarily residing at Grant avenue.

Musical Quintette Heads New Bill at Plainfield Theatre

The remainder of this week at the Plainfield Theatre is to be devoted to a new combination vaudeville and photoplay program introduced this afternoon for the first. Five American Sailors, a quintet of singers and comedians, are announced as the headline feature, and from indications they will offer the best act of the kind that has been seen at the Second street playhouse in a long time. They carry a special scenic setting and have a budget of the newest popular songs.

The five American Sailors will be followed by other specially selected vaudeville features, including Ward DeWolf and the Dawson Sisters, in a clever little song and dance skit, and Stortz and Short, comedy singers and dancers.

For the film lovers, Manager Shannon has secured the six-reel picture sensation, "The Public Defender," written from life and based on circumstances occuring in New York's judicial circles during the past year. She authors are Myer C. Goldman and Frank H. Harris, two metropolitan lawyers, who were interested in a case where a man was accused falsely and who aided the public prosecutor in bringing right out of wrong. There is action in every foot of the film as the story of a woman's perfidy, a man's love and a girl's implicit faith is revealed. The cast of characters is one of the most notable brought together for a screen production and all of the principles are well known to Plainfielders through legitimate plays. They are Robert Edeson, of "Strongheart" fame; Frank Keenan, leading man in the original production of "The Girl of the Golden West," and Miss Alma Hanlon, the star of several of Broadway's biggest successes.

This program will be repeated tonight and tomorrow but for next Monday and Wednesday, there will be a new offering with Miss Mae Marsh in the screen version of "Polly of the Circus," as the headline feature.

ADDRESSES REQUIRED OF PARCELS POST SHIPPERS.

The Post Office Department advises that in shipping suit cases and traveling bags by parcel post, they must have the address attached by labels pasted to the outside, in addition to any tags that may be used. It is also advised that a card bearing address of the sender and addresses ben enclosed in all parcels post shipments. In case of loss of marks the destination may be found on the enclosed card.

Mr. and Mrs. George Meyer, of 650 West Third street, have been entertaining the latter's uncle, J. C. Hendershot of Readington township, Hunterdon county.

Martin Miltner, of Church street, and Arthur Fritz, of Jackson avenue, the borough, both attached to the Engineers' Corps, were announced this week as having arrived overseas.

News of the Theatre

Popular Jack Conway Coming Again With The "Liberty Girls"

Always on the lookout for novelties, Drew and Campbell's 18-19 Edition "Liberty Girls," the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, is overloaded with good things. Of course the real big drawing card is Jack Conway, our best Irish comedian, who is considered a very clever entertainer and who will convince that his style of eliciting laughter is just a little bit different than that of other fun makers. The Liberty Girls this year boast of a brand new production, the book was written around Conway, coming from the pen of Joseph A. Mitchell, of Philadelphia. "Reilly and the Seminary Girls," the vehicle which he constructed for the dispensing of the drolleries and the many grotesque antics, with which the offering is seasoned is in two acts and ten elaborate scenes, and it must be admitted that the author was clever enough not to dwell too long on any particular one. The speedy drift of the plot from a Ladies' Seminary on the Hudson River, New York, and around to other parts of the world makes the offering a very happy, fast and welcome entertainment. What may be considered a very delightful move is the introduction of vaudeville specialties. The Liberty Four meets with great success in their melody and comedy combination.

A well balanced cast helps the star to keep the audience in good humor throughout the performance and especially the feminine support is one which not only stands out on account of cleverness, but for its beauty as well.

Norma Jerome is a very fascinating and stately prima donna, Hilda Giles is winsome and a gingery soubrette, Barry Melton is one of the best comediennes ever seen on a local stage, and Sallie Clifford, the girl with the pleasing personality. Among the male members are Tony Williams, character comedian; James Collins, a clever straight man; Frank E. Martin, juvenile; Dick Morgan, eccentric, and Larry Clifford, comedian, are perhaps the best known. The chorus is one that will demand special attention. The girls are very pretty, they are well shaped and they will come to good advantage in the many singing and dancing ensembles. Everything in the "Liberty Girls" shows the progress made in extravaganzas. Not only is the entertainment itself up to date but the scenic equipment as well as the costuming is in absolute keeping with the modern ideas of that class of entertainment.

"PLEDGED TO PRESIDENT WILSON'S DEMOCRATIC POLICIES"

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS, present Mayor of Madison, Morris County, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District for the full term in Congress, was born in Galveston, Texas, January seventh, 1874, of American ancestry antedating the Revolutionary war.

He has resided in New York and New Jersey since boyhood and has been a lifelong Democrat. He has been elected a Councilman, and twice elected Mayor of Madison Borough on the Democratic ticket and is the only successful Democratic Mayoralty candidate in the history of that Borough.

He has always maintained an active interest in political affairs, and has a good record as a public official; exhibiting a practical understanding of his duties and the courage of his convictions.

He has served in his community on the committees for all the war activities; is President of the Madison Home Defense League; Chairman for the Borough of the State Council of Defense, and for the American Defense League. He has an unassailable record in his personal attitude and public utterances on an uncompromising American stand before the war and on the necessities of the situation since the declaration of war.

His known public record is a guarantee that he will support the policies of the Administration in the prosecution of the war and the enforcement of peace terms as outlined by President Wilson and accepted by all the allied Governments.

The Fifth Congressional District is constituted of Union and Morris Counties. Union County furnished the party candidate in 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916, and also in other years prior to 1910. Morris County has not had a candidate since 1902, or in sixteen years. According to all precedent it is the turn of a Morris County Democrat to be nominated, and in OTTO ROSS Morris presents a candidate who has the entire support of the party throughout the County, and who is a loyal and active Democrat, as is shown by the fact that his home town of Madison was carried for the Democratic Congressional candidate at each of the last four elections, though it is rated as a Republican stronghold.

MR. ROSS has the personal and political strength, and the qualifications to win in November if he is nominated, and the Union County Democrats are asked to support him for the nomination.

Vote for OTTO ROSS at the Primary Election on September 24th.

Call for Twenty-seven Local Men Cancelled Because of Influenza

Twenty-seven selectives in the Plainfield district who were to have entrained for Camp Dix during the week beginning October 7, have been given a respite from entering army life through an order issued by General Crowder, last night, cancelling all calls for men because of the influenza epidemic now raging in various military cantonments.

The Plainfielders were to form a part of 142,000 draftees from every State and the District of Columbia who were to have been started for camp during the seven-day period beginning October 7. All have been held up by the order and at this time there is no telling when the call will be reissued, the time depending on the abatement of the epidemic.

In canceling the call for the entrainment of the draft registrants, General Crowder acted upon instructions from General March, Chief of Staff. Every State and the District of Columbia had quotas assigned, and the men were to have gone to practically all of the camps in the country.

It was said at the office of the Surgeon General of the army last night that every possible precaution is being taken in all camps to check the spread of the disease, but that despite all measures it is believed the disease will run its course and probably spread to still other camps. Additional phiysicians and nurses have been sent to camps where the epidemic is most severe.

Joseph Murray Dies at Newport From Influenza

Joseph Murray, a member of the Naval Signal Service, stationed at the Naval Base at Newport, R. I., whose home was at 709 West Fourth street, this city, died at 8:15 last night in the Newport Naval Hospital. He was a victim of Spanish influenza, having contracted the disease last Friday and then developing pneumonia.

Word of his illness was sent to Plainfield, Monday and his siter, Miss Mary Murray, of West Fourth street, left for Newport as soon as possible. She was at his bedside last night, when the end came. The body will be brought to this city tonight and the funeral will probably be held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning.

Mr. Murray, who was known to his associates as "Buddie," was twenty-three years old and had always lived in Plainfield. At the outbreak of the war, he was employed as accountant for the Q. and C. Railway Signal Manufacturing Company in New York. Last May he enlistened in the Navy and on July 9 he was ordered to the signal school at Newport. He was there when the fatal illness began.

Mr. Murray was a member of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and a communicant of St. Mary's church. His father died when he was one year old and his mother passed away six years ago. Tis only near relatives surviving are his sister, Miss Mary Murray, with whom he resided, and another sister, Mrs. C. J. Moran, of First place.

Longing For Home, Gassed Soldier Takes A "French Leave"

Longing to reach his home in Plainfield, after being returned rrom France as a gas victim, and placed in a hospital at Buffalo, N. Y., Thomas Fagan, of 511 Madison avenue, made his way to this city yesterday, leaving the hospital on what soldiers term as "French leave." At the request of the Government authorities, who do not want any of the returned wounded men going to their homes until they have been regularly discharged, the young man was taken in custody by the local police and will be sent back to Buffalo today.

Fagan is twenty-three years old and at the time of his enlistment in the old Seventh Cavalry more than a year ago, lived with his mother at 311 Clinton avenue. After he had been in service for several months, his unit was turned into an infantry company and placed with the Thirty-eighth Regiment. He was on the firing line all last spring and this past summer was placed on the casualty list by a gas attack precipitated by the Germans.

Fagan, as well as many other of his comrades, were unable to get their masks on in time to ward off the deadly fumes. All succumbed and had to be taken to a base hospital. Fagan's case was so severe that he was invalided home but he has since almost fully recovered. He is every inch a fighter and declared to a group of interested listeners at Police Headquarters today that he would gladly go back to France if the Government would let him. He became tired, he said, of sticking in the hospital and wanted to get home to see his people but outside of that he had no reason for "Frenching it" from Buffalo.

CORRIELL FUNERAL TOMORROW

The funeral of Harry B. Corriell, who died yeserday morning, at the home of his mother, Mrs. Lulu Corriell, of Harmony street, the borough, will be held at the residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. The young man died from pneumonia. Besides his mother, he is survived by two brothers and four sisters.

Mr. Moy Not To Run Again as An Independent

Rumors that George W. V. Moy, defeated candidate for the Mayoralty nomination on the Republican ticket, would make another try for the office at the General Election in November were current about the city since Tuesday, but they are without foundation.

In the first place, there are legal preventatives which do not permit the defeated candidate to make another try inasmuch as he failed to secure enough Democratic ballots to be given him the nomination on that ticket and the time has expired for him to announce himself as an independent seeker of the executive chair. In the second place, according to Robert Newton Crane, campaign manager for Mr. Moy, he has entertained no idea of making another attempt.

Mayor Calkins is highly delighted with the result of the primary and asserts his belief that it is the voters' way of expressing their confidence in his administrative program. "It is an indication that they believe," he said, "that an honest effort has been made by the members of the Council and myself to conduct the government on a basis of economy and efficiency, and that we have attained a very practical success in this regard."

The total vote in all four wards of the city for Mayor Calkins was 1,074, a majority of 691 over Mr. Moy, who received the surprisingly low total of 383. The impression prevailed all through the day that the former Mayor would make a much better showing but as soon as the tallies began at 9 o'clock it was seen that he was in line to be defeated by at least two to one. Mayor Calkins carried every district oven to Mr. Moy's particular bailiwick.

The entrance of Charles P. Senger to the Mayoralty field, as candidate for the Democratic nomination proved another barrier for the Moy constituents. They believe that if their standard bearer was pushed aside by the G. O. P. that he would get enough Democratic votes to permit him to run on the latter ticket in November. Mr. Senger got thirty-eight Democratic votes for Mayor, just one more than given Mr. Moy by the same party, thus eliminating the latter from the race entirely.

The only other contest of note in the city for a local office was the one between A. E. Force and Irving Kunzman for the nomination of councilman from the Fourth ward. Mr. Force romped away from his opponent to the tune of 148 majority. He received a total of 264 Republican votes, while Mr. Kunzman polled 116. Mr. Force will take his seat with the city fathers January 1 next, succeeding Francis J. Blatz, who has been a Fourth ward representative for six years and who decided not to seek re-election because of pressing duties in other directions.

The other councilmanic nominations, none of them having any opposition, were the following: First ward, Nelson Y. Hull, to succeed Theodore Martin; Second ward, Arthur Lovell, to fill the unexpired term of John S. Dahl; Marion S. Ackerman, to succeed himself; Third ward, G. Herbert Condict, to succeed himself; Fourth ward, James A. Maynard, to succeed Henry E. Parke, the latter filling the unexpired term of Charles C. Graves. Councilman-at-large, Charles C. Graves, now a resident of the Third ward.

William R. Townsend was a candidate on the Republican ticket for the nomination of tax collector. He got all the Republican votes in sight and practically everything else as he was unopposed. Ernest R. Ackerman was given a majority for the Congressional nomination of 1,228 in the city, but William Birch, of Dover, who ran for the short term, got a majority of five. The Democrats came out strong for James J. McCann as candidate on their ticket for county registrar, giving him 121 majority over Ten Eyck R. Beardsley, of Fanwood. Mr. McCann showed strength in every part of the county and his friends feel greatly encouraged at his chances for election in November.

Elks' Club Ready For Reception To French Band

The Elks' clubhouse on Watchung avenue will be the scene of a big demonstration tomorrow night, when the members of the French army band coming to this city for the opening of the Liberty Loan campaign will be entertained by the local B. P. O. E.

Under the supervision of August Laggren, the interior of the clubhouse has been transformed by a mass of decorations, the French colors standing out prominently. The decorations are said to be the most elaborate the building has ever had. The main assembly room on the first floor is to be used as a dining room and here the seventy members of the band and other guests will enjoy a supper. Afterward there will be speech-making and a vaudeville entertainment, lasting until time for the band to start back to New York on the 9:17 train.

The entertainment committee appointed for the reception to the foreign visitors met at the Elks' Club on Tuesday night, and added J. Fred MacDonald to its membership. Later the committee, which includes W. L. Lockwood, chairman; H. E. Butler and A. B. Davies, reported to headquarters that through the generosity and patriotism of the Elks the proposition of entertainment was entirely settled. Mr. MacDonald has mobilized a force of Elks, who responded with enthusiasm to the opportunity of absorbing the Frenchmen temporarily into their membership.

Another detail of the opening day program has been satisfactorily disposed of by the committee's success in securing Senator Wiliam N. Runyon as presiding chairman. He will address the open-air meeting at the City Park at 5 o'clock, and will introduce the official speakers who accompany the band. Liberty Loan headquarters in New York send out a complete organization with the band, and supply the entire program with the exception of the invocation, which will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, and opening remarks by Senator Runyon, who has also consented to preside at the dinner at the Elks' Club.

J. Whitney Baker, who is in charge of the parade, reports that all is going well in so far as the enlistment of local organizations and institutions is concerned. He expects also to have one or two surprises which, while not equally as spectacular as the appearance of the French arm yband, will nevertheless prove interesting. Plainfield is the first city in which the band appears in its Liberty Loan schedule. Several newsfilm camera men will probably be on hand, with the intention of turning Plainfield's opening day celebration into national Liberty Loan propaganda.

Inspector Doane Back at His Desk

Building Inspector T. O. Doane returned to his desk on Monday, after a six weeks' absence due to illness. He regained something like his old-time form and declared to a Record reporter yesterday that he feels better now than he has in years. The illness kept him home for three weeks but at the end of that time he was able to go to Spring Lake for a visit with his old friend, Vincent W. Nash, of Prospect avenue, who has a cottage at the shore resort. After a week at this place, the Inspector moved on to Atlantic City, where he took the salt bath treatment for two weeks. His stay at Atlantic City was delightful in every way, not only because he got rid of his illness entirely but met scores of congenial persons and enjoyed himself to the limit in talking over old times while seated at the end of Young's pier.

Although there is but little new building work going on in the city, Mr. Doane finds himself kept very busy. He has already disposed of a big batch of office routine and is looking after a number of important alteration jobs. He has made it known to contractors and all others interested in the building line that he has received no word from the Government to the effect that all new building should be stopped. So far as he is concerned, jermits will be granted as usual but he makes it plain that materials are hard to get and those in hand are apt to be appropriated for Government use should they be desired.

LIEUT. GOUGH HOME.

Lieutenant Reginald Gough, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gough, of Franklin place, who has been in France as a member of the 304th Heavy Field Artillery, has returned to this country to receive a new assignment. He is at present located in Vermont.

ARRANGING WRESTLING MATCH.

A number of local wrestling enthusiasts are arranging for a big wrestling match to be held in Columbus Hall probably on October 12. Jimmie Condos will be one of the star attractions on the program.

Board of Health Warns Against Influenza Peril

In order to keep down the spread of Spanish influenza, which has made its appearance in Plainfield, and already claimed several victims, the local Board of Health is taking every precaution to stamp out the malady. Desiring to secure the full co-operation of the citizens, N. J. R. Chandler, health officer for the board, today gave out the following statement and instructions for offsetting the influenza:

"The Plainfield Board of Health has kept in close communication with the State and Government health authorities and also with the medical inspector of schools and the officials of Muhlenberg Hospital, as to the measures to be taken for the control of epidemic influenza. Physicians have been requested to report cases and also pneumonia especially when the result of the influenza. Because of the nature of the disease, quarantine is not practical, but the occurrence and severity of the disease can be greatly minimized if the public will follow a few simple rules of precaution. While these rules apply in all diseases of the respiratory tract and should be generally practiced, special precautions should be taken during an epidemic.

"The disease is caused by a small organism contained in the secretions of the nose, throat and lungs of patinets or carriers. Infection is conveyed either by personal contact or indirectly by means of handkerchiefs, towels, eating utensils or anything that has been mouthed; also by the spray projected when talking, coughing or sneezing.

"Suggested rules:

"1. Bed Isolation. The patient should remain in bed during the attack. This serves the two-fold purpose of giving him a better chance of recovery and limiting the spread of infection.

"2. Disinfection. Everything that has been in contact with the patient should be disinfected at once. Bedding, clothing, towels and everything washable, should be boiled; other things should be put in the sun out-of-doors. Cloths used to receive the secretions from the respiratory tract, should be burned; if handkerchiefs are used, they should be boiled. Eating utensils should also be boiled.

"3. General precautions. Close contact with anyone known or suspected to have the disease, should be avoided. Public towels and drinking cups should not be used. Everyone should do his part to prevent the spread of possible infection by shielding his mouth and nose while coughing or sneezing."

Local Red Cross Suggests a Linen Shower for France

A recent communication received by the Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter of the American Red Cross states that there is an immediate need for many thousand towels—both bath towels and hand towels—handkerchiefs, napkins and sheets in the hospitals of France. Owing to the difficulty of buying these supplies in the open market, on account of the scarcity and high cost of materials, the American Red Cross is asking all its chapters to join in providing these necessary articles by voluntary contributions—each chapter to furnish its quota. The Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter is therefor asking each family in Plainfield to contribute something from its reserve supply if possible. The articles should be new or substantially new and not too fine in quality as it is obvious that a heavier quality will last longer considering the constant usage and laundering to which these articles will be subjected. All articles contributed must be clean and should be approximately of the following dimensions and specifications:

Bath towels—19" x 38".

Hand towels—18" x 30".

Handkerchiefs—Colored preferred—white acceptable.

Sheets—Heavy bleached or unbleached muslin 64" x 102" finished with 2" hem at top and 1" hem at bottom. Sheets which are a little larger will be accepted but no sheet should measure less than 62" x 99".

Napkins—Breakfast or dinner size.

All contributors are asked to send their articles to the Auxiliary or workroom to which they belong during the week commencing September 30th, 1918. Every article contributed will be put to real use in hospitals whose equipment and facilities are sorely tried and it is earnestly hoped that every householder in Plainfield will have a part in the Linen Shower for France and so help to show that the American Red Cross can fill every need for relief.

JAMES CONKLING A CAPTAIN.

James B. Conkling, of this city, who went overseas as lieutenant of the 113th Infantry, has been commissioned a captain. He was a member of Company K for many years and before going to Anniston with this unit, was employed at the local postoffice.

Fire Department Shortage Grows More Serious

The Fire Board this week received the resignation of another fireman from the city department, making a total of nineteen who have quit since the first of the year. This leaves but eighteen privates to take care of six companies, whereas the regulations of the department call for five men. Efforts to secure recruits to fill up the ranks have been in vain and the situation becomes decidedly bad when the members are having their days off or home for meals. At times only one man is left to cover an apparatus in the event of a general alarm.

The resignation submitted this week was that of Arthur Erber, of headquarters, who as told in last week's Record, has been appointed by the Government to become a member of the Fire and Police Corps in the Panama Canal zone. He will sail from New York for Colon the week beginning October 6 and will go on duty immediately upon arrival.

Erber is twenty-four years old, and has been in the department for the past two years with the exceptional of a brief period this summer when he left to take an outside position. He returned to the service last month. He has been employed at various times in local machine shops and has a mechanical and automobile driving experience that fits him for the Government work at Panama. He has been making his home with his widowed mother at 437 West Fourth street.

Influenza Claims Another Victim Here

Another victim of Spanish influenza was listed in Plainfield today, through the death of Isaac M. Mathis, fifty-four years old, of East Front street, who contracted the malady last week. It was in a severe form from the start and when pneumonia developed, he succumbed within two days.

The Board of Health has requested physicians to report all cases of the influenza and to date there are about twenty-five in the city. The deaths now number four. Precautions are to be taken by the Board to prevent a further spread of the disease.

Mr. Mathis came to this city from Camden two years ago and had been employed at the Hall Press Works in Dunellen. Previous to removing to East Front street, he and his wife boarded on Grant avenue. He was a member of the local Machinists' Union and Washington Camp, No. 2, P. O. S. of A., of Camden.

The funeral will be held at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins on West Fourth street, Sunday, and interment will be at Camden.

Man Dead in Milwaukee Was Dennis F. Kilbride

Further information received by Chief Kiely today indicate that a man who died in a hospital at Milwaukee, Wis., on September 21, under the name of "David McBride" was Dennis F. Kilbride, son of Mrs. Annie Kilbride, of 558 West Fourth street. A brother, of the deceased, John Kilbride, left yesterday afternoon for Milwaukee to complete the identification and until word is heard from him, no funeral arrangements can be made.

The local police were first apprised of the circumstances of the death on Wednesday, when Chief Kiely received a letter from the county coroner at Milwaukee. It stated that the supposed "McBride" had been taken ill on the street on August 14, but that in his delirium, he said a number of times that his name was Kilbride and that his mother lived on West Fourth street in Plainfield. He gave no further intimation as to who he was or why he had given the name McBride, when first taken ill. Chief Kiely has been acquainted with th eKilbridge family for many years, making it an easy matter to reveal the identity of the deceased man.

Mr. Kilbride was thirty-eight years old and had lived in this city all his life until about seven years ago, when he went to Detroit to work at his trade of machinist. Since then, he had been in various parts of the West, although his relatives here heard from him only a few times. When taken ill, he was employed at the Milwaukee shops of the C. M. and St. Paul Railroad. Beside his mother and brother, John, he leaves one sister, Miss Mae Kilbride, all living at the Fourth street address.

"MAC" AT WASHINGTON.

James J. McNamee, the former well-known local newspaper man who went to Camp Dix, on July 25, has been transferred to General March's office at Washington, where he will serve under Lieutenant Leslie R. Fort, of this city. While at Dix, "Mac" was promoted to corporal and acted as instructor. He will be in Plainfield the coming week-end for a visit.

Liberty Loan Workers Complete Organization

Division Leaders, Captains and Team Named Last Night to Begin Drive for Plainfield's Quota of $3,500,000 -- Monster Parade With French Army Band a Feature to Commence at Four o'Clock Tomorrow Afternoon

At a big meeting, held in the Y. M. C. A. last night, final steps were taken in the organization of workers for Plainfield's Liberty Loan drive to commence tomorrow and preparations for the monster parade that is to mark the inauguration of the campaign.

Plainfield's quota has been fixed at $3,500,000 and an attempt is to be made to get one million in the first week by house to house canvass. L. D. Albin, who was made campaign manager, and F. K. Anderson, vice manager, urged that everyone in the city subscribe through the local bank's to insure the raising of the needed sum.

These division leaders, captains and workers were afterward named:

Division Leaders—Division A, William G. DeMeza; Division B, A. E. Force; Division C, Charles L. Hight; Division D, Seymour Barr; Division E, Dr. O. B. Whitford; Division F, James E. Kimball; Division G, R. S. Rowland.

Zimmerman, Mrs. Kennedy.

Division C—Captains and teams not reported.

Division D—Mrs. S. Barr, captain, Mrs. Raymond Everest, Mrs. George Grandy, Mrs. Harry Robinson; W. L. Lockwood, captain, A. T. Butler, C. H. Hamilton, E. C. Scott, E. M. Gibson; William G. Cooke, captain, Mrs. William Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. H. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Miller, F. M. Frost, C. M. Baker, R. C. Brown, Lewis H. Miller; J. M. Smith, captain, team not reported; R. Shoemaker, captain, team not reported.

Division E—N. E. Lewis, captain, Frank Staats, E. M. Ganung, C. B. Morse; Seymour Perkins, captain, E. S. Utley, Thomas Milleck, C. F. Dayton, William B. Davis, L. O'Johnston; J. H. Manning, captain, not team reported; George M. Clark, captain, no team reported; A. B. Cole, captain, Charles S. Schulck, Roy Macintyre, William M. Olmstead, William H. Kriney, W. S. Oliver.

Division F—C. C. Slocum, captain, R. E. Blancke, E. M. Laing, E. T. Daniels; Cornelius A. Guinee, captain, C. O. Smith, J. J. Powlison, J. C. Storm, K. Rothberg, Hugh Treacy, H. N. Henderson, captain, no team reported.

Division G—E. W. Jeffcott, captain, E. J. Waring, A. N. Fargo, F. M. Fargo, Jr., S. C. Osborne; H. H. Foster, captain, Guy Bender, C. H. Russell, A. D. Goodenough, J. M. Smith, C. P. Titsworth, H. S. Browne, H. H. Craig, captain, R. T. Willis, A. A. Hassell, D. W. Taylor, J. W. Baker, W. T. Talliaferro, A. F. La Rocke, W. T. Koffman, E. C. R. Laidlaw, captain, W. P. Fraker, M. M. McLellan, W. N. Robinson, A. L. Kennelly; L. H. Williams, captain, and subsequent, to filing the statement, Mr. Clement spent $102.11 as follows: Postage and envelopes, $11.65; letter heads, $5.25; thirty cuts, $26.21; typing, $3.00; traveling expenses, $11.96; and the round trip from Maine, $41.04, amounting in all to $676.86. Mr. Clement was spending his vacation in Maine when the meeting of citizens was held in Elizabeth at which he was asked to try for the nomination. He attended this gathering and went back to his summer home for the rest of the season, hence the inclusion of the carfare as a campaign expense.

All civic organizations, boys' scouts, church organizations, school children and industrial representatives are urged to participate in the parade which will assemble tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 at Watchung avenue and Seventh street. The parade will start promptly at 4 o'clock. The committee has engaged all available bands and drum corps but any organization is at liberty to procure any music at hand. The line of march will be as follows: Watchung avenue and Seventh street, to Jackson avenue, to Somerset street, to Front street, to Park avenue, to Ninth street, to Arlington avenue, and disband at City Park. The French army band, which is to be one of the features of the parade, will give a concert in the City Park for an hour after the procession is over. The band will afterward be entertained by the Plainfield Elks at the Watchung avenue clubhouse, where the members will be accorded a supper and vaudeville program.

The formation of the parade will be as follows: Squad of police, Liberty Band, Grand Marshal and Aides, Mayors, Councils and Liberty Loan Committees of Plainfield, North Plainfield and vicinity, Plainfield Home Defense League, escorting French army band; North Plainfield Home Defense, escorting G. A. R.; Fanwood Home Defense, Boy Scouts, Fife and Drum Corps, Women's Red Cross and other organizations, in the order of their arrival.

Six billion dollars is the amount of the fourth Liberty Loan. The country will be asked to subscribe this huge sum, the largest ever offered by any governmetn in the history of the world, in three weeks, as compared to the usual campaign of a month which has attended the other three American war loans.

The campaign will open tomorrow and will continge until midnight October 19. The message of the loan will be carried to every city, town, hamlet and cross-roads settlement by speakers, posters and other means. American soldiers bearing the scars of battle received on the fields of France and members of the famous French Foreign Legion will assist in the campaign, while war trophies taken from the Germans by General Pershing's men will be exhibited in the principal cities and towns.

With the announcement by the Treasury Department of the total of the loan and of the quota assigned each Federal Reserve District, the quotas of the States, cities and towns will be determined and announced before the drive gets under way.

The New York district has been allotted thirty per cent. of the total, or $1,800,000,000, while Chicago's quota will be $870,000,000. Cleveland is next with $600,000,000 and Boston and Philadelphia are to raise $500,000,000 each. San Francisco is allotted $402,000,000, and Richmond has the next largest quota—$280,000,000.

The three Liberty Loans thus far offered were oversubscribed, the total subscriptions being $12,352,778,800. Of this amount $5,035,226,850 was subscribed to the first loan, $4,617,532,304 to the second and $4,700,019,650 to the third. The first loan was for $2,000,000,000, the second and third for $3,000,000,000 each.

Ackerman Campaign Expenditures $1,144

Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, successful candidate for the Republican nomination of representative from the Fifth District, was the first to file a campaign expense account with Secretary of State Martin. In it he stated that the nomination had cost him a total of $1,144, most of it in newspaper advertising. His campaign fund was composed of $1,500, which he himself donated.

Richard E. Clement, of Elizabeth, who secured the Democratic Congressional nomination, spent $676.86 in his campaign. His original fund was $650, which he took from his own private resources. Mr. Clement's statement filed with Secretary of State Martin shows that he spent $40 for postage and envelopes; $10 for letter heads; $12.25 for typing; $31 for advertising carrds, and $481.50 for newspaper advertising. Bomb Proof Slipping Away from Shipyard Slackers

Provost Marshal-General Crowder will act promptly to rid American shipyards of draft evaders and slacker workers.

On the heels of a walkout of workers at the great Cramp yards, Philadelphia—a protest against employment in "easy jobs" of pugilists, ball players, actors and others in shipbuilding work—the Provost Marshal-General this week issued new regulations covering this and similar situations in other yards.

These will be immediately enforced.

The regulations recently suspended, to compel a monthly report on the essentiality of any workman in the shipyards, probably will be restored.

In addition it was stated officially at Washington this week that all requests for exemption or deferred classification for military service have been withdrawn.

This action was effective September 13, but publicity was given the move this week.

Also instructions have gone to all shipyard department heads that no requests for exemption must be made for any persons who otherwise would be placed in class 1 of the draft unless it is "absolutely impossible to replace them." Every person within the draft ages who can be dispensed with should be spared for military service, the instructions read.

Officials of the Shipping Board said that even the claim of the department head would not be sufficient in itself to obtain deferred classification for the men. All such claims will be revised by at least two executive officers of the Board or Fleet Corporation.

If within five days after the first of each month a specific request has not been received from the Government authorities at the yards for the continued deferred classification of an employe, that man automatically becomes subject to military service when his number is reached or if it has been passed he is immediately inducted into the service.

Under this plan it is held "no slacker worker" can long hold his job in the yards. The Shipping Board is preparing to assist the provost marshal general in its work by compiling a report on its men which will be made the foundation for a general weeding-out of undesirables.

In addition to the regulations made public this week a general working program for handling the situation in the yards will be announced within a few days. Crowder's office is working on this now in co-operation with the Shipping Board.

Crusade Is Begun on Non-essentials

Saying that it is intended to force the hand of both non-essential labor and employers of such labor; that men failing or refusing to get out of non-essential positions of their own accord and take up essential work will be looked upon as slackers and that there is one and a half million labor shortage of both the skilled and unskilled types in war industries with an increased army coming, a telegram was received yesterday from Washington from the Federal Department of Labor by State Commissioner of Labor Lewis T. Bryant, which reads in full as follows:

"Please give publicity to the fact that because of a present million and a half of labor shortage both skilled and unskilled in war industries with an increased army coming, Nathan A. Smyth, Assistant Director General United States Employment Service, yesterday, mailing most drastic instructions ever issued in this country to all community labor boards instructing them to prepare and publish in every city in the country lists of non-essential positions now held by men that could be filled by women. Result will be that men failing or refusing to get out of such positions of their own accord and taken up essential work will be looked upon as slackers. The order is intended to force the hand of both non-essential labor and employers thereof. Lists probably will include clerks and office help, ticket sellers of all kinds, attendants and similar occupations.

"This is in line with Crowder's work or fight order with instructions already issued for the placing of women in industry with the order of the war industries board stopping unnecessary construction with action limiting bank loans and the taking of raw materials from non-essential industries. Smyth's order may ultimately become the most drastic of all, for community labor boards will insist that no men shall occupy a position which a woman can fill. This nation must work or fight and the order is made necessary because employers of non-essential labor have in many cases failed to meet the issue squarely. Copies of orders being mailed you. Please not that the publication of lists is to be progressive in character with the lines drawn tighted from day to day, as various occupations are combed for men. Mailing you with order a number of the most insistent demands by States."

Walter I. Firstbrook, the former well-known local newspaper man, is among the latest Plainfielders arriving overseas. Previous to his departure for the other side, he was stationed at Camp Dix.

Saving of Sugar Is Vital Need

The ice cream soda you buy at the soda fountain may lack its usual syrupy sweetness, and your favorite candy store probably induces you to purchase candy made with nuts and fruit instead of cream. These are disturbing changes to a country with a sweet tooth, but a reference to statistics will show how necessary they are. For unless sugar is saved in luxuries, the coffee served at America's breakfast table will soon be sugarless.

In peace times the United States has been consuming 4,000,000 tons of sugar a year. We have spent enough money for candy alone in a year to feed Belgium for two years. Now it is imperative that we conserve every teaspoonful of sugar in order to ward off a sugar famine. It is to this end that the Food Administration has instituted the ration system, allowing each individual two pounds of sugar a month, and cutting the allowance of confectioners and soft-drink manufacturers to fifty per cent. of their normal requirements.

In the case of soft-drink manufacture, this feature will save 50,000 tons of sugar. It is expected that these manufacurers will sell to the public as high a grade of goods as before, and at no higher prices.

Substitutes being used in making soft drinks are honey, maltose syrup, molasses, corn, syrup, glucose, and maple syrup. These ingredients are not nearly so sweet as pure sugar. They do, however, contain food value, and when properly combined with sugar give excellent results. The substitutes named are rocemmended by the Department of Agriculture. The fact of their presence in bottled goods should be found noted on the label. Saccharin, unlike these substitutes, has no food value and is injurious. Its use is prohibited by the Federal Food and Drug Act.

The Department of Agriculture states that in the past, our soft drinks have been oversweet and that mixtures equally palatable can be concocted with less sugar. Drinks with an acid foundation such as grape juice and the phosphates require much more sweetening than non-acid drinks, and consequently their use should be limited. Grape juice manufacturers are now allowed only fifty per cent. of their usual sugar supply, but if there is a chance of part of the grape crop being wasted, or if the product is in danger of fermentation, an increased allowance may be made.

The fact that people of the United States spent $640,000,000 at soda fountains in 1917 shows the extent and importance of the soft drink industry. Soft drinks are steadily taking the places of alcoholic beverages in homes and clubs and in dry localities the consumption of soft drinks is increased greatly. The Government does not consider it advisable to shut off entirely the supply of either soft drinks or candy on account of their food value, the 5,000,000 people employed in their manufacture, and the demand for them in the market. To cut off all sugar from the confectioners would release only six-tenths of an ounce per month for each person.

The enormous amount of candy and soft drinks sold at the army cantanments proves that the American sweet took is not peculiar to the feminine element of the population, as is sometimes supposed. Sufficient candy is bought for the army to warrant the existence of a Candy Procurement Division of the War Department, which makes wholesale purchases, and turns the result over to the camp commissaries for sale at cost rates.

The soldier gets assorted chocolates, that retail for $1.10 a pound, at 48 cents, and stick candy, retailing at 60 cents a pound, for 28 cents. The 18,000,000 pounds of candy bought for the army in one year represents 10,000,000 pounds of sugar. This seemingly extravagant use of sugar is justifiable in that the pure sugar candy demanded by the War Department contains the sweet element needed in the soldiers' fare in the most valuable form from the health standpoint.

Because American-made candy is the best in the world, a considerable amount of the 18,000,000 pounds is shipped to the soldiers from here. Some candy is being made abroad for the army under the supervision of the Quartermaster, but as yet the amount thus provided is negligible.

Jam and syrup are the sweets which figure most largely in the soldiers' rations. According to War Department calculations, it takes 4,000,000 pounds of jam a year for 1,000,000 men. Besides the sugar consumed by the army in commercial ponducts, our fighters need 225,000,000 pounds of sugar a year in tea and coffee and for cooking purposes.

The sugar ration system and the substitutes used in the home, are making it possible for the War Department to furnish the army, not all the sugar it can eat, but the amount needed to keep the ration balanced.

To minimize the inconvenience of the sugar ration as regards home baking, the Department of Agriculture and the Food Administration have evolved recipes using the recognized sugar substitutes. By experimenting with these tested recipes, the housewife can still add the desired sweet touch to her meals.

The Food Administration is setting the example, in the use of sugar substitutes, through its cafeteria for Food Administration workers at Washington. There sugar is used only in coffee and tea. Cake and puddings guaranteed to be made only with sugar substitutes are served dailiy and seel with a rapidity that proves their excellence.

It is difficult to make most commercial products entirely of substitutes because of the greater amount of material needed and the distinctive flovor of honey, molasses, and other substitutes. But in the home were cooking need not be standardized, substitutes can be made to serve the purpose of sugar in many hitherto untried ways. Icings and cookies can be made entirely with corn syrup, and jellies and puddings can be made with almost any sweetening agent. Among the sugar saving suggestions of the Food Administration are the use of dates, raisins, and figs to sweeten cereals and puddings, no sugar dregs in coffee cups and thinner syrup, or no syrup in canning.

As the canning of fruits is looked upon as essential, sugar for this purpose may be had in twenty-five pound lots through the Food Administration local agents. Even here sugar should be used sparingly. Housekeepers are uurged to eliminate sugar when canning if possible, and add it when the product is to be eaten, in this way lessening the strain on the country's supply at one time.

According to present calculations, the ration system will last until the first of January, possibly longer. The Food Administration regards it as improbable that greater limitations will have to be set. Our present ration corresponds to the British ration and is double the amount allowed in France and Italy.

The sugar problem will not be easily solved when the war ends. With European industry crippled and shipping depleted, it will be several years before we, or any other nation, can afford to use sugar freely.

Poetizes Misuse of the Term Slacker

At the North avenue station recently, as one of Plainfield's selective contingents was about to entrain for camp, a group of three well-known local men was included in the gathering of bystanders. Just previous to the departure of the soldiers to be, the three men passed several jokes among themselves that created a ripple of laughter not intended to be disrespectful toward the newest additions to Uncle Sam's army.

An old lady who stood by, probably a relative of some one of the boys, became quite indignant, however, and took the trio to task for what she called "a lack of respect." She became so worked up as she administered a rebuke that she resorted to the too often used and misapplied term of slacker. As a matter of fact, one of the men had served in the Spanish War and was turned down at the present time because of his age. A second one was a member of the Rhode Island militia for eight years and was waiting for an answer from the Government to his application for an Officers' Training School, while the third was barred from service because of a wife and children.

The indignant old lady's tirade was heard by Charles P. Freligh, Plainfield's versatile poet, who wrote the following lines on the mis-application of the term:

"WHY CALL HIM A SLACKER?"

"The boys are at the station,
They have answered duty's call;
The music it is playing,
Wishing God-speed to them all.

And in the throng that gathered,
With their chests swelled up with pride,
Were three or four young townsmen
They were standing to one side—

Discussing different topics.
Perhaps talking rather loud;
A woman stepped up to them
And right there 'fore all the crowd

She said that they were slackers,
And it cut them to the core;
They had no chance to explain,
They had seen these things before.

Now "slacker" is a harsh word
To give to a "Yankee boy,"
In each there is that red blood,
And their hearts are filled with joy

To fight for Uncle Sammy,
And to go across the sea,
To fight for dear Old Glory,
"Emblem of sweet Liberty."

Market Bureau Advises Storage of Potatoes

Within two weeks ninety per cent. of the State's crop of potatoes will be on the market and although a few growers will put several thousand bushels of the vegetables in storage, the great bulk of the crop will soon be gone, according to the market news service bulletin of the bureau of markets of the State Department of Agriculture, issued this week. Individual families and groups of consumers are advised to buy their winter supply now, as the New Jersey crop is 3,000,000 bushels less this year than last and more northern sections promise no excess. Farm prices for potatoes, the bulletin states, now vary from $1.50 to $1.85 a bushel.

Stating that peaches are goine, the bulletin adds that a few of the White Mountain variety are in the market and are of good quality, but many persons who did not heed the warning are now paying $2 a basket for canning. The bulletin also says that tomatoes are still low as far as the prices go, that the fruit was never of better quality and that growers in the southern counties who did not contract for their product have lost heavily on their crops.

Paul B. Benneton, dairy products specialist of the bureau, has been appointed by the federal food administration to enforce the rulings regarding mill feed prices. Bulk prices have been established at various points. In Trenton, for instance, bran bulk in ton lots is selling at $30.26. Referring to apparent violations or excessive charges on bran, the bulletin says it would be advisable to report he matter to the food administration for New Jersey at Newark, as there is no excuse for dairy or poultry farmers paying as high as $50 or $60 a ton for bran.

Me chant Skipper With Winchester Topples Hun Plane

Some of the gamest fights of the war on the sea have been those of merchant skippers who, in the days before their ships had gun of any description to keep aircraft at a distance, brought their vessels through by the exercise of the unlimited resource which characterizes their kind, usually by sheer skill in maneuvering, writes Lewis R. Freeman, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A remarkable instance of this kind I heard of from a Royal Naval Reserve officer who figured in it.

"I was in a British ship, temporarily in the Holland-South American service," he said, "and we were outward bound from Rottendam after discharging a cargo of wheat from Montevideo. It was a clear afternoon, with a light wind and lighter sea, and we were steaming along at about nine knots, heading for the Straits of Dover, when the look-out reported a squadron of aeroplanes approaching from the south.

"Holding to its course, the squadron passed over us, a mile or more to starboard, and it was already some distance astern when I saw one machine—I think the one leading the 'V'—detach itself from the others and head back in our direction. Descending swiftly as he approached, the Hun passed over the ship diagonally at a height of 600 to 800 feet. 'That'll end it,' I thought; 'our marks and the fact that we're in ballast ought to satisfy him.' It was at the next 'run' or two that the thing began to get on my nerves, and I called up the skipper on the 'voice pipe.'

"The Old Han—he had sailed to the Rio de la Plata for many years and so picked up a good many 'Spigotty' habits—was in the middle of his afternoon siesta, but he tumbled out and came puffing up to the bridge on the double. We were looking at the machine at an angle of about 45 degrees—so that he must have been about as far asead of us as he was high, say, a hundred yards—when I saw a small dark object detach itself from the fuselage and come directly toward us, almost as though shot from a gun. From then on we knew it was a fight for life.

"Just why he returned to the attack with his machine gun we could only guess.

"Anyhow, flying just high enough to clear the tops of the masts, he came swooping back, and was firing on us. Two or three men I saw fall under the rain of bullets, among these our freight clerk, who had also been knocked down by the explosion of the first bomb. But a minute or two later I saw him, legs wide apart to keep his balance, pumping back at the Hun, who had swung close again in the interim, with a rifle, a weagon which I later learned was an old Winchester which had been rusting on the wall of his cabin ever since the ship had been in the beche de mer trade in the South Pacific.

"'X—!' he shouted, beckoning me to his side, 'duck below, clean out all the stuff in the paint lockers and chuck it in the furnaces, 'specially the oils and trups. Jump lively!'

"Linseed oil, turpentine and some tins of fine lubricants—I had them all tumbeld out of the forepeak and carried, rolled, dragged or tossed down to the stokehole. There was an ominous crackling and sputtering in the furnaces. The whole ship was ashiver with the roaring conflagration in her furnaces as I reached the upper deck, and above a tufty, white fizzle of escaping steam rolled a greasy jet of smoke that looked thick enough for a man to dance a hornpipe on.

"What tempted the Hun to make that fatal final swoop we never knew. Anyhow, back he came, allowing plenty of leeway to miss my 'smoke screen.' It he had been content to sit tight the chances are nothing would have happened to him. But the temptation to have a closer look at his handiwork and to jeer at his 'beaten enemy' was too much for him. The crack of the Winchester reached my ears above the roar of the seaplane's engine, and the next thing I was clearly conscious of was the machine swerving sidewise and downward and plunging straight into the trailing column of black smoke.

"Neither the skipper nor the clerk were much hurt, and, as for the ship she probabyl suffered in the long run more from the loss of her paint and oil supply than from the Hun's bomb and the fire that it started."

Plainfielder Begins Probe of Butter Prices

Former Councilman Frederick E. Mygatt, of this city, head of the enforcement division of the State Food Administration, began Monday a campaign to ascertain if there is a concerted effort on the part of wholesalers, commission men and retailers to secure an abnormal profit in butter. The period from Monday until tomorrow has been designated as "Butter Inspection Week." Inspectors have been sent to every section of the country. The order for the crusade came from Washington in the following language:

"We believe it necessary to take steps immediately to see that our rules are not violated, notwithstanding the opportunity which this commandeer has created for violation.

"The margins of profits specified for wholesalers, commission merchants and brokers, are maximum margins only and are extremely liberal They were purposedly made broad enough to cover the cost of doing business in all parts of the country. They must not be considered as only fair margins in every case. When the merchant is found to be taking full maximum margins, the inspectors should insist on being shown that such dealer is entitled to them.

"The action of the Government in commandeering a large percentage of the visible supply of butter makes this time particularly appropriate for a check on just what these dealers are doing. We believe that a great number of violations will be uncovered by reason of this inspection, but hope we are mistaken in this belief."

City Bank Job Not Affected by War Board Rule

Owing to the recent rulings of the War Industries Board in regard to private building construction, there has been considerable speculation locally as to whether Hoggson Brothers, the New York builders, would be able to complete their work of remodeling the City National Bank building here.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, in order to remove any doubt as to the status of incompleted buildings, has issued a statement that "practically all buildings under way may be completed, and dealers in building material may continue to supply needed material."

This ruling, of course, covers the City National Bank building, and Thomas Banks, local superintendent of construction for Hoggson Brothers, has given assurance that he will push the structure to completion at the earliest possible date.

As a matter of fact, there is no absolute ban on private building. Any new building that may be proved to be essential may still be erected under certain conditions.

Following is the procedure which an owner who desires to erect a new building must observe and follow in regard to any non-war construction:

First—He must apply, with a full statement of the facts under oath, setting forth the need for the new building, to the appropriate local representative of the State Council of Defence. Then this representative will investigate the necessity of the proposed construction. After a review of the case by the State Council, should it decide in favor of the construction, it will immediately send its recommendations, with a full statement of all the facts, to the non-war construction section of the priorities division of the War Industries Board. The non-war construction section will grant or withhold the permit and so notify the State Council of Defence and the individual concerned. Should the decision of the State Council itself be adverse, it will notify the individual concerned. Should the decision of the State Council itself be adverse, it will notify the person concerned that his project has been disapproved. The ability of the War Industries Board to enforce this whole scheme rests upon the fact that it controls priorities and has also secured from the manufacturers of building materials a pledge not to supply materials for projects which are not authorized under the regulations of the War Industries Board.

Primary Results in the Plains and Fanwood

The lack of contests in local affairs made the Primary Elections in Fanwood township and Fanwood borough uninteresting. The results in the township were as follows: For member of the Township Committee, three-year term, Henry C. Meyer, Republican, 158 votes; for collector, three-year term, John Z. Hatfield, Republican, 157 votes; for assessor, George H. Johnston, Republican, 169 votes. George H. Johnston, Republican, was elected to the county committee with 154 votes and Frank Bardolph, Democrat, was elected to the county committee with sixteen votes.

The Republicans and Democrats nominated candidates for Borough Council. The Republicans' choice for two councilmen for full terms were: Albert H. Riblet, fifty votes, and John S. Strouse, forty-seven votes. The Democrats nominated Harry T. Knight, fifteen votes, and Charles Sternhein, fourteen votes. The Republicans nominated Montgomery W. Hyer, forty-nine votes, for assessor, and Charles Sheelen, fifty-two votes for collector. Dr. F. W. Westcott, forty-eight votes, was elected to the Republican County Committee, and Ten Eyck B. Reardsley, eleven votes, was elected to the Democratic County Committee.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

GEORGE W. NEAL.

The funeral of George W. Neal, one of the borough's oldest and best known residents, who died Monday at his home on Somerset street, was held yesterday afternoon at DeMott's undertaking parlors. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Neal was in his eightieth year and had been ill for some time with complications brought about by the infirmities of age. He was a carpet weaver by trade and in his younger days was associated with his brother, the late Samuel J. Neal, in this business.

JOHN YAVOS.

John Yavos, aged thirty-three years, died Monday at the home of his brother, Joseph Yavos of Spooner avenue, following a brief illness with pneumonia. He had been employed at the Saurer Motor Works. Surviving him are a wife and two children. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning, Rev. Father Holsters offering the requiem mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

FRANCIS ERNES TWAHL.

Francis Ernest Wahl, a former resident of Plainfield and employed at the Standard Aero plant in this city, died Tuesday morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. John Albert, of Scotch Plains. Pneumonia was the cause. He was twenty-one years old and had always lived in this vicinity. Beside Mrs. Albert, he leaves one other sister, and three brothers.

The funeral was held in St. Maryr's church, this city, yesterday morning, Rev. Father Hennessey offering the requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

CLIFFORD HUGHES.

Friends in this city received word this week of the death on Sunday last of Clifford Hughes, a former Plainfielder, who passed away at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hughes, of Camden. The young man had been ill only a few days with pneumonia. He was nineteen years old and before going to Camden lived with his parents on Prescott place, this city. His mother was Miss Southard, an active worker at Hope chapel, where the son also belonged. The funeral and interment took place at Camden, Tuesday, and was attended by several Plainfielders.

CHARLES A. LUDGATE.

The funeral of Charles Arnold Ludgate, who died Saturday night at his home on Evona avenue, following a brief illness with pneumonia originating in Spanish influenza, was held in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Cortland H. Mallery officiated and the gathering of relatives and friends present included delegations from Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M.; Queen City Lodge of Odd Fellows, and the Local Machinists' Union, of which the deceased was a member. These organizations also contributed set pieces to the numerous floral tributes. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Ludgate was a native of Pawtucket, R. I., where he was born in 1888, but had lived in Plainfield for the past sixteen years. He was a machinist by trade, working at different times for the Saurer Motor Company, the Pond Machine Tool Company and at the time his illness began, for the Wood Newspaper Machinery Company. He was a member of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, where for a number of years he had been active in the men's organizations.

Mr. Ludgate was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ludgate, of Evona avenue, who survive him, as do also his wife, two brothers and two sisters. The later are John W. Ludgate and Ralph E. Ludgate, Mrs. Mary E. Doremer and Mrs. Mary Thorne, all of this city.

RUTH D. LAGSTROM.

Ruth D. Lagstrom, the six-year-old daughter of Mr.an d Mrs. Axel Lagstrom, of Bergen street, died Tuesday, after a brief illness. The funeral was held at the parents' home, yesterday afternoon, and was private. Rev. Mr. Vessel, of the Swedish church, officiated, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Shackamaxon Club Boasts First Japanese Golf Colony in America

He was dribbling a round bit of white over the green of the eighteenth hole when a visitor arrived on the scene—dribbling it along from many angles to the little flagged sink and making it drop with uncanny accuracy.

"Is that a Jap, or have I been seeing so much of Kashio and Kumagae on the tennis courts as to make me on the lookout for new Japanese invasions in sport?" the stranger asked.

The man who answered was Cyril Walker, professional of the Shackamaxon Club, in Fanwood, near this city.

"No, you are right. Furthermore, that player is very likely to make his presence on the American links felt very shortly—and with him, seven other compatriots are proving very adept pupils."

In those few words Walker made known to the sporting world for the first time that the sacred precincts of the sportive Scotch have been invaded by men from the home of jiu jitsu. It was the first intimation Mr. General Public had received that golf has heard of the Japs, and that, with that quiet air of determination true of the race, they have progressed so far as to make four of them leading amateurs at the well-known Westfield club.

Walker then went on to explain their coming and their play. And, after hearing his story, credit was given this clever Westfield professional for founding the first Japanese golf colony in America. For at no other club, we have been reliably informed, has the Oriental ever made an appearance—or if he has, he has not remained long enough to take up the game seriously.

S. Ohki, a New York importer, who makes his home at 703 Highland avenue, Westfield, is claimed to be the first Japanese to take up the links game. He is the veteran of the school of eight under Walker's wing.

While Ohki has played for some time, the other members of the contingent are comparatively new comers, most of them having played for only two years. Four of the school, however, have progressed to a point where they now make the round in 80's, and two of them, T. Oaki and H. Watanabe, both Westfield residents, have already won their2 first round matches in the championship division of the club's annual title tournament.

The success of the Westfield Japanese on the links is not surprising, as the general make-up of the race would seem to fit the men admirably for golf. They are careful and painstaking, and good golf demands care and pains. Furthermore, it requires an unruffled disposition which Walker says his pupils have manifested.

Kashio and Kumagae, the best of the Japanese tennis players, are as steady as any of the best American racquet wielders. Moreover, their form is irreproachable. However, both lack that essential of greatness on the courts—an ability to dash to the net for the block-volley and the smash which America demands of its National champions.

This smash and dash does not belong on the links, but the cool, careful stroke of a Kashio does. Wherefore, Walker's report that his pupils were progressing remarkably well came as not so much of a surprise.

"I have found it a pleasure to teach them," said Walker. "They listen attentively to what you have to say, and then they are careful to follow instructions.

"I have one pupil—Y. Watanabe—who has improved his game by no less than twelve strokes this season. He is, I think, the best pupil I have ever had here, and if he keeps on as he has started, he is sure to be heard from. Others under my instruction are E. Jinushi, S. Ohki, H. Tetsuka, S. Yamanaka and T. Peschina. Mr. Tetsuka is from Plainfield.

"All of them have proved to be remarkably accurate in their driving, approaching and putting, and four of them are able to go 'round now in the 80's. None of them are powerful hitters, but their uncanny steadiness makes up for it."

It is only in the last eight years—perhaps a little longer—that the Japanese athlete has been heard from in American sport. While their jiu jitsu performers were always given a place in pastime's corner, they did not take up baseball until very recently, and two years ago, for the first time, they invaded the tennis court.

Ichiya Kumagae came to America, a more or less unknown quantity, and began to take the measure of Uncle Sam's best. Among his victims were such great players as R. Norris Williams and William M. Johnson, the latter then champion and the former a previous title-holder. Harold Throckmorton and George Myers Church were the only two players against whom Kumagae's fine backcourt game would not prevail, and it was the Tenafly meteor who put Kumagae out of the running for the National title.

But never before has the Jap been heard from in golf—until now, when this little Shackamaxon delegation rises up out of nowhere in particular and makes good on the links. Who knows but that, among the eight pupils of Walker, there may not develop a Kumagae of the links? Their remarkable progress under Cy's capable teaching would not make such an event altogether surprising.

A SLIGHT FIRE.

Sparks from a chimney set fire to the roof of A. C. Barnhardt's residence at 970 Hillside avenue, Tuesday, necessitating a call for the city fire department. The blaze was extinguished with chemicals before any serious damage occurred.

PROPOSALS FOR SEWERS.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J., at a regular meeting held Monday, Sept. 16, 1918, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, October 7, 1918, at 8:30 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place said Common Council will receive sealed proposals for doing the work and furnishing the materials for the construction of the sewers contemplated in the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to provide for the Construction of a Further Addition to the System of Sewerage already constructed in the City of Plainfield, No. 19," approved September 4, 1918, as provided for in the plans and specifications adopted by the Common Council September 16, 1918, and filed in the office of the City Clerk, No. 151 North Avenue, Plainfield, N. J., in the following streets, viz.: Clinton Place; Rose Street.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for $100.00.

Upon receipts of the bids or proposals the Common Council will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council.

The Engineer's approximate estimate of the quantities of material required, and the work to be done, is as follows:

860 Lin. Ft. of 8 inch vitrified pipe, sewer less than 6 feet deep; 250 lin. ft. 8 inch vitrified pipe, sewer 6 to 8 feet deep; 175 lin. ft. 8 inch vitrified pipe, sewer 8 to 10 feet deep; 45 4-inch Tee branches on 8 inch sewer; 2 standard manholes; 2 combined manholes and flush tanks; 10 cu. yds. extra concrete; 2,000 B. M. timber for bracing sheeting and shoring left in place by order of the Engineer; 1600 ft. B. M. lumber for foundations; 10 cu. yds. foundations of gravel, slag, or broken stone.

Duplicate plans may be examined, and forms of proposal, specifications, contract and bond, may be obtained at the office of the undersigned, 151 North Avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

The right to reject any or all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

Proposals should be endorsed "Proposals for Sanitary Sewers."

Drastic Orders In Dix Fight to Stamp Out Grip

Using every means at their command the medical officers at Dix, under the direction of Major-General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, have begun a relentless campaign to exterminate the influenza germ that has caused a total of eighty deaths since the first case was discovered about a week ago. It is believed that the disease was brought to Dix and to other cantonments by officers and non-commissioned men who have just returned from overseas for the disease is similar to that which attacked the men in the trenches last year and caused a great number of deaths. The peculiar thing about the disease is that death follows generally within twelve hours after pneumonia sets in and doctors have little chance to make a fight against it.

Twelve deaths were reported yesterday, the latest victims being mostly from the 34th Division. At the last report there were 935 influenza and 171 pneumonia cases at the base hospital.

The placing of the quarantine was the first measure taken to stamp out the disease. This was followed by the issuance of stringent orders and the closing of the Liberty and Army theaters, the Y. M. auditorium and K. of C. building No. 4. Medical inspectors are making frequent trips around the camp and officers not following orders as to the care of the men will be brought before a court on charges. The Y. M. and K. of C. huts will be permitted to run as usual in order that the men may have a little amusement but care must be taken to prevent overcrowding and after each assemblage the place is to be thoroughly cleaned and the windows are to be left open to insure ventilation, fires being built to prevent the men taking cold in a chilly room.

During the quarantine one officer will be constantly on duty in each company, night and day, to see that all sanitary regulations are observed, paying particular attention to the ventilation of the barracks and of the use of all men of a mouth wash and nasal douche. Overcoats will be at once issued to all men and heavy underwear will be issued to soldiers wearing cotton uniforms. Other orders are being issued so that nothing will be left undone to see that the men take the best of care of themselves. There is not much drilling going on at present as many of the companies are quarantined, but all men are kept in the open air as much as possible and get plenty of exercise to keep in physical shape.

As soon as danger from the spread of the disease is passed the ban on the camp will be lifted, but visitors are cautioned about trying to make the trip down to Dix until such orders are given for they will be stopped at the entrance to camp unless they have a pass or have important business with camp headquarters.

Women by Thousands Enter Labor's Field

Women by the thousands are responding to the appeal of employers to take the place of men entering the army and to fill new positions created by industrial expansion, according to the monthly business review of the Federal Reserve Board. From all parts of the country come reports that women are helping in factories, offices, stores, warehouses, street cars and on the farms where harvesting created an immense demand for workers. The rate of increase is some indications that in a few more months the number of women entering industry will be greater than the number of men withdrawing for military service.

The review as made public this week shows that women are spending more of their new earnings for clothing. Retail dealers in all cities where many women recently have left their homes to work elsewhere report booming business. This is contrary to the policies of economy and self-denial urged by all government agencies as a war measure.

Owing to a recent government supervision of employment agents, industries now report much more stable labor conditions, but a continued demand for more war workers than can be supplied. Many anticipate a shortage this month with the return to school of thousands of teachers and children who have been working during the summer.

Eastern Federal Reserve banks report that a tendency is apparent among manufacturers and distributers to await full assurance of government price regulations before determining trade policies. Industries generally are active and the less essential enterprises are rapidly being curtailed or converted into essential production. Wholesalers now are beginning to market materials for sale next spring at higher prices and retailers show some uncertainty as to how higher prices will be taken by the public for clothing and other articles. This causes some hesitation in certain lines.

Postmaster Hoagland Explains Rule for Foreign Christmas Mail

Postmaster A. E. Hoagland has given out the following information regarding the sending of Christmas presents this year to American boys in foreign service:

"The War Department authorizes the sending of one Christmas parcel to each officer and soldier in the Expeditionary Forces. The parcel shall be 9 by 4 by 4 inches in measurement and may weigh up to 3 pounds.

"It must be mailed before November 15th. The empty box may be secured at Red Cross Headquarters only as all must be of standard size and shape to conserve cargo space. There will also be supplied a coupon on which is inscribed the name and address of each soldier. This coupon must be placed on the box and no box will be forwarded except with this coupon attached.

"This Christmas box will not need the order signed by a major or higher officer. These boxes and coupons are not at present ready, and announcement will be made later when they are ready. This notice is given that you may prepare a present for your soldier, but only one box may be sent to any one soldier."

Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, of Spooner avenue, are the parents of a daughter who arrived at their home a few days ago.

PRIMARY RESULTS NO SURPRISE.

The result of Tuesday's primaries occasioned no surprises locally. Almost from the beginning it was conceited that Mayor Calkins was sure of the nomination for another term, and that former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman would be the successful contestant in the Fifth District for the Congressional honors. These two contests were the ones in which the community was most vitally interested and the outcome was a general source of satisfaction. If there was such a thing as a surprise after the count Tuesday night, it was the unexpected majority in either case. It was hardly conceived that Mayor Calkins would roll up 691 more votes than his opponent, and the 4,300 majority accorded Mr. Ackerman in the district was much beyond the calculations of the expert politicians.

As far as the general election is concerned in November no one at this time doubts the result. Mr. Senger, the Democratic nominee, who entered the race at the eleventh hour, is practically an unknown man. He never yet has held office in the city and as this is a Republican stronghold, his chances for becoming the local chief executive are quite remote. When 1,074 Republicans took Mr. Calkins for their choice at the primaries, it is safe to assume that he will poll a vote many times larger than necessary when the election takes place.

With Mr. Ackerman it might also be said that the election is practically his. In every part of the district he was the undeniable favorite from the start of his campaign, although he is not so widely known in Morris county except for his record in the State Senate. This was a big factor and the flattering vote given him, but in Union county it was a secondary matter. We here in Plainfield know the man, know that he is the kind of a business man that is needed now at Washington more than ever before and that as representative from the Fifth District, he will support the policies that President Wilson has advocated for the successful and early termination of the war. Elizabeth knows this also because Mr. Ackerman has been in close touch with the county seat for years, and in Westfield, Rahway and other nearby towns, the people know all about Ernest Ackerman and what he stands for. Plainfield is more than pleased with the result of the primary in his case because it means that he will be the first Congressman who has ever gone to Washington from this city. We predict for him a brilliant and useful stay in the House of Representatives, where a native son of Plainfield has never before taken part in the deliberations of the great national body.

NEW JERSEY A REPUBLICAN STATE.

Facts are stubborn things and figures do not lie. In the past twenty-four years, New Jersey has had a Republican Legislature except twice, a third time the Republicans had a majority on joint ballot but the Assembly was Democratic by two votes. The Republican party elected its present Governor in 1916 by the largest majority ever given and in the following year the Assembly, which is elected annually and therefore reflects immediately the changed sentiments of the people, endorsed the present administration by giving them an increased majority. Additional evidence though not so conclusive is shown by the primary returns of both parties that the Republicans are still largely in the majority. This would not be true if there was any amount of dissatisfaction. Why then should any Republican repudiate his party at the November election? The only ground upon which this could be done would be because the Republican party had failed the country in loyalty. No intelligent Republican will for a moment believe this as there are no facts to subtantiate such a contention. The political position of the Republican party in New Jersey was well expressed by the following quotation from an address of the chairman of the New York State Campaign Committee:

"It is vital to the preservation of the Republican party in the nation as well as in the State that we should elect our party candidates. The result of the campaign will demonstrate whether there are to be two great parties in the future or whether Government in this country is to be dominated by the principles of a single group.

"It is therefore the imperative duty of all Republicans to unite their utmost efforts to a continuance of their party's influence. Politics is not adjourned in the sense that party principles should be abandoned.

"We are all patriotic, and patriotism is not an issue in this campaign. What we demand is that the principles of the Republican party shall be maintained and preserved for the future welfare of the nation."

If Republicans do their duty to the party and its representatives in November, New Jersey will continue to be as in the past, a Republican State.

THE COMING LIBERTY LOAN.

Three times within the past year, the people of Plainfield have responded readily when the call came for subcriptions to the Liberty Loan sales. The first was not quite what was anticipated but it may be laid to the fact that the citizens had not come to the full realization of the great need of their dollars and they hung back. When the second call came from the Government, however, this community gave more than was asked of it, and in the third campaign ending last May, it bought many thousands of dollars worth of bonds beyond the allotted quota of $1,769,000.

Tomorrow there begins another big campaign for the money that insures the success of Pershing's forces in the field. The President and Mr. McAdoo ask for six billions dollars, ordinarily a staggering figure but in these days of necessity not too big for the American people to attend. Plainfield's share is more than what it was called upon to give the previous time and yet no one doubts but what the city will "go over the top" before the campaign of three weeks is ended. Its citizens know now as they never knew before that every energy must be bent to bring about a speedy finish of the big fight and one way to do it is to contribute the money that means munitions and plenty of them for the boys who are doing the real work.

When our soldiers on the battle front are braving death, each one suffering to make the supreme sacrifice for his country and the great cause, we who remain safely at home surely should give them every support, should make every sacrifice to strengthen them If we cannot fight ourselves, we can make our dollars fight.

It is a great cause for which America is engaged in this war; it is a great struggle in which the very hope of the world is bound up that is being waged in Europe and on the high seas. It is an honor to have a part in it, and all Americans, all their lives, will be proud of the part they had in it or ashamed of their failure to do their part.

The fourth loan is a fighting loan. Every subscriber to the loan strikes a blow for Liberty and for Victory.

DRAFTING MEN FROM ESSENTIAL PLACES.

When the military draft age was raised to forty-five years, it affected, comparatively speaking, a larger number of men than were affected under the earlier draft law who are engaged in essential tasks and responsible positions. Many of the most important managers and department heads, superintendents and others holding administrative and executive positions will come under the provisions of the new law.

It has been pointed out that the law will hit peculiarly hard the financial institutions of the country. As the Wall Street Journal points out: "It will call to the colors, particularly, the men upon whose shoulders now virtually rests the administration of many of our large and most important financial institutions. Many of the vice presidents and most of the subordinate officers come within the forty-five year limit."

It is realized, of course, that the efficient management of the financial institutions of the country has a very vital relationship to the winning of the war. The success of the war plans of the Government depends as much upon the financial strength of the Nation as upon its military or industrial power.

It would be a dangerous thing to advocate placing those connected with the management of financial institutions in a deferred class. There are other occupations quite as essential. There are some connected with such institutions who can be spared. There should be no discrimination, generally speaking, in favor of any occupation.

It would seem, however, that draft boards ought to select men for military service more carefully than heretofore, with the thought ever in mind, not to disrupt service to the Nation here at home that is essential to the winning of the war. The man who is more able to help the Nation win the war here at home than in the trenches should be carefully considered.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When way back in 1896 eggs were only twelve cents a dozen?

When there were enough Democrats in town to get up a full primary ticket?

When you only got two dollars a day and worked Saturday afternoons but lived happier and kept further ahead of the sheriff than you do now?

When you could go into any butcher shop in town and buy mutton (it's all lamb now)?

When the district schoolma'am got only four dollars a week for cramming knowledge in the kids' heads and paid a dollar and a half board?

When Charlie Johnston and several other members of No. 2 engine company were "supers" in the original "Still Alarm" production at Music Hall and nearly killed an actor by mistake in the big fire scene?

When the most popular form of entertainment at Music Hall was Charles Hoyt's farce comedies, such as "A Texas Steer," "A Contented Woman," "A Temperance Town," "A Bunch of Keys," "A Hole in the Ground," and "A Trip to Chinatown?"

MOPPING UP AFTER TUESDAY'S GRAND SLAM.

The "I told you so's" are now engaged in explaining how it all happened.

When the expense accounts are filed it will be interesting to note how much Robert Newton Crane charged for his managerial ability. It might possibly be the difference between 1,074 and 393, which is the mere trifle of 691—ballots, not dollars.

And after all is said and done, the secrecy of the ballot has been maintained. Nobody knows how Elias voted?

Persons with too impetuous a turn of mind are saying harsh things about the Courier-News make-up man because he put the political editor's dissertation on Mr. Moy's ante-campaign statement in the amusement column. They should withhold their criticism. That make-up man knows more about where articles belong than those who read or write them.

The residents down Greenbrook way have a large part of one they would be more than willing to donate.

The local Socialists are beginning to realize that the other political parties occasionally have a man in their midst who is worthy of their consideration. In the Second ward, Tuesday, one of the Socialists wrote in William N. Runyon's name for the State Senatorial nomination. He evidently knew that "Bill" still has another year to go on his present term but wanted to make sure that he was in on the ground floor for the next time. In the opinion of the wise ones, however, the Socialist's good intent was wasted because there ain't goona be no next time on the Senatorial question for our own popular member of the Upper House. They want him in the Gubernatorial race that is scheduled for November, 1919.

The noon-day crowd was sauntering along North avenue, Wednesday, when the attention of everyone was attracted by the clanging of a bell. Presently an antiquated old fire engine hove in sight drawn by two superannuated nags evidently drafted from some distant pasture lot. On the front seat of the apparatus, attired in a hand-me-down smoke-eater's uniform, was "Bob" Morley, the man of many jobs at a Front street magic lantern theatre. In the rear in the stoker's box was Harry Allen, lithograph man at the same pleasure palace, engaged in the non-essential task of keeping a two by twice fire going merely for the sake of creating smoke. Ever and anon, Morley gave the bell under the front step a slam with his feet and Allen blew himself red in the face fanning the flames to greater intensity. Their idea was to attraction attention for the benefit of the theatre's picture specialty but it accomplished other things not contemplaed when the old engine was lifted out of storage in a North Plainfield barn. A near-sighted old man who kicks like a steer every time the tax rate rises a point noticed the strange piece of apparatus and the blue uniform down stage. Then, with his mind reverting to certain things printed in the Record recently, he explained in a voice that could be heard many feet away:

"More expense; the gosh-dinged Nott has broken down again and they're paying good money to have horses haul it in."

Ackerman Puts Politics Aside For Loan Work

Standing firmly upon the principle that the Administration's war-winning program should have prior claim to public attention during the next few weeks, Ernest R. Ackerman, Republican nominee for Member of the House of Representatives from the Fifth Congressional District of Morris and Union counties, announced last night that he had adjourned politics for the remainder of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. He said:

"I am deeply conscious of the great trust reposed in me by the Republican voters of the district in selecting me as their nominee for the House of Representatives at the coming election and I wish to thank my friends for the very large vote they gave me. May I again assure the people of Morris and Union counties that if I am honored by their votes in November to membership in the Congress of the United States, that I shall consider it a great honor to be where I hope I can render much service.

"I am conscious of another duty at this particular time, however. With the nation at the very threshold of consummating its greatest and most solemn mission in its history, it is my belief that the Administration's war-winning program should have the first place and the all absorbing share of public attention and that as far as my personal candidacy for public office is concerned, I herewith declare 'Politics Adjourned,' to quote President Wilson, for the duration of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive and at the same time to place my services at the disposal of the committee for active participation in making the loan a 100 per cent.-plus success in this district."

ELKS GIVE FIRST DANCE OF THE SEASON.

Plainfield Lodge of Elks gave the first reception and dance of the present season in the clubhouse, last night. The attendance was large but showed a noticeable lack of young men, due to the number of junior members of the order who are in service.

Professor Harry Wetton's orchestra furnished an excellent musical program and other features were provided by the committee of which Frank R. Emmon sis chairman. Another dance will be given the last of October in observance of Hallowe'en.

We must raise three and a half million dollars—a million more than ever before.

It can only be done if—

1—Every one in Plainfield Buys Bonds to the utmost.

2—And if every Plainfield Buyer of Bonds will SUBSCRIBE THROUGH PLAINFIELD BANKS.

Plainfield can and, we believe, will uphold its reputation.

Business men will call at every home next week—authorized to take your subscriptions.

"LEND the way they FIGHT.
BUY BONDS TO YOUR UTMOST!"

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Added honors have come to Dr. C. B. Lufburrow and Dr. N. H. Probasco, two of Plainfield's best known physicians, who have been in service for several months. Dr. Lufburrow, who has been stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., has been made surgical instructor at that post, and Dr. Probasco, who has been doing splendid work at Camp Dix, has been advanced from first lieutenant to captain.

Edward B. Ryder, Jr., of Sycamore avenue, who was recently commissioned a second lieutenant at the Plattsburg camp, left Wednesday morning for Camp Grant, Fockford, Ill., where he will be stationed for the present.

The thirtieth New Jersey Volunteers' Association will hold its annual reunion and business meeting at Somerville next Tuesday. Many Plainfielders were enrolled in the Thirtieth New Jersey when it was organized for duty in the Civil War but only a few are still living. A. S. Mullen, of Summit, is president of the association at the present time.

After a long period of inactivity, the Plainfield Motion Picture Problem Committee, met at the Public Library, Tuesday afternoon, to exchange notes. It is understood that a complaint had been made against some of the films shown at the local theatres and plans were discussed to keep a closer watch on presentations in the future. The committee will probably make a report of its investigations later.

At the opening meeting of the Watchung Avenue church Men's Club the following committees were appointed to arrange for the fall and winter activities: Entertainment, R. R. Pentecost, Theodore Martin, George W. Beebe, Bradley Hall; refreshment, Jacob Kettering, George Hall, William C. Lee and William C. Mutchell; religious, E. Gibson Smith, George Zimmer, Charles Wheeler, D. C. Harrower; lookout, Mrs. C. Leek, S. Variar and George W. Beebe; reception, E. Gibson Smith, Theodore Martin and Charles Bryan.

The Hartridge School opened for the fall term Wednesday. The enrollment was on a par with other years and all classes are now under way. The school enjoys the distinction of having lost none of its teachers since the closing last spring. A new addition is Miss Mildred Smith, formerly of Wellesley College, where she was assistant to Professor Vida Dutton, Scudder and to Professor Katherine Lee Bates, before coming to Plainfield. She will teach English.

Preferring to pay a fifty-dollar fine instead of going to jail for sixty days, Ricco Vennolli, of East Third street, and Giordo Fedele, of East Fourth street, produced the cash in the city police court this week, after Judge DeMeza declared them guilty of disorderly conduct and fighting on South avenue, near Richmond street.

A tablet in memory of the late Doctor Andrew Van Vraken Raymond was unveiled in Trinity Reformed church, Sunday morning. Rev. J. Y. Broek delivered the memorial address and recounted the work of the departed clergyman as the pastor of Trinity church. On the tablet is the inscription: "In memory of Andrew Van Vraken Raymond, D. D., LL. D., born August 8, 1854; died April 5, 1918. First minister of this church; January 1, 1881, February 1, 1887. A faithful pastor, a preacher of righteousness."

At the opening of the Union County courts on Monday, the following Plainfielders were drawn to serve as jurors during the present term: Grand, William Addis and John E. Curtiss; Petit, George F. Graves, Harry William, R. Burnett Rogers, Ernest Dorflinger, William N. Noeras, Fred K. Clark, Fred L. Metcalf, Harry A. Robinson, Robert Deter and Sydney Frazee. Charles A. Bent was drawn from Scotch Plains to serve on the Grand Jury and Charles E. Gorton, also of Scotch Plains, has been drawn as petit juror.

With the arrest of Arthur Schenck, a fourteen years old colored boy living at 542 West Third street, the local police believe they have landed the bicycle thief who has been operating in Plainfield for the past month. The boy was picked up Monday after it had been found that he had been doing a wholesale business in stolen wheels. It was his custom to pick them up on Front street and Park avenue as owners left them near curbs and then ride them to New Brunswick. At the latter place he would sell them for sums varying from seventy-five cents to a dollar and a half and then return by trolley. Several of the wheels have already been recovered and it is expected that more will be located. Schenck, who looks to be only about ten years old, is being held at police headquarters for appearance in the juvenile court tomorrow.

The police department is beginning to feel the loss of men nearly as bad as the fire department. Chief Kiely is now nine patrolmen short of the number he is supposed to have and prospects of getting new recruits are very slim. Among the latest resignations tendered are John Wurth, Martin Walsh, and Thomas Bebout. Earlier in the year Harold Hansen and James P. Conway tendered their resignations to take better paying positions, and Michael Regan, Ludwig Hefti and William Russ entered the service. Chief Kiely would be glad to receive applications for appointment to the force from any young man between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one years.

Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, who returned recently from France after nine months' work as a Y. M. C. A. secretary, is now enjoying an automobile trip to Gettysburg and other parts of Pennsylvania. Mr. Harris is enthusiastic over the work abroad and also pays high tribute to the American boys at the front. During his stay in France, he had the opportunity of visiting the front line trenches.

Among the wills admitted to probate in the Surrogate's Court, Elizabeth, this week, were the following from Plainfield: Ellen S. Niles, offered for probate by Mary Louise Cooper, estate valued at $200; two brothers named as heirs-at-law; Wilhelmina Miller, offered by B. K. Miller, no value given. Letters were applied for on the following estates: Eva Margaret Baker, of Scotch Plains, by Eva C. Hummel, the value being $15,000; Daniel McCann, by James J. McCann, a nephew, value of estate, $50; Lester B. Harris, by Robert Newton Crane, the estate value is $500.

With the arrest at Morgan's Station on Tuesday of John Anderson, twenty-one years old, of McDowell street, and LeRoy Rockefeller, seventeen years old, of Liberty street, the local police finished rounding up a quartet of local youths who on Wednesday night of last week stole a Ford automobile from in front of the Plainfield Theatre. The machine belonged to John Kiely, of Sumner avenue, and was recovered in New York on Thursday night as the other two of the four implicated were driving it into a garage. The latter were arrested at the time and gave their names ts Joseph Walsh, of 254 East Front street, this city, and Arthur Deter, formerly of Plainfield, but recently of New York. Both are twenty-one years old and were remanded after a hearing in the Tombs police court for further examination today. Lieutenant Higgins, of the local force, will be on hand to make the request that the two prisoners be committed for thirty days to permit extradition papers being secured. Anderson and Rockefeller went to Morgan's Station, which is near South Amboy, after the theft of the car, and were working at a munition camp as teamsters when apprehended by Lieutenant Higgins. According to one of the prisoners, all four were concerned in the plan to steal the machine and that after it had been sold in New York, the proceeds were to have been divided evenly. Anderson and Rockefeller were committed to Elizabeth by Judge DeMeza to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The thirty-fourth annual convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. was held in Hope chapel yesterday. There were two sessions, one beginning in the morning at 10 o'clock, and the other in the afternoon at 2. Both were presided over by Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, of this city, who has been president for many years and who was re-elected.

As a result of the fatal automobile-train crash on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Curtis' crossing, on the night of August 29 last, two suits have been filed in the Supreme Court by Attorney Robert Newton Crane, of this city. For Herbert W. Ross, of East Fifth street, who was the most seriously injured of the survivors, he asks $20,000 damages, and for Samuel Ashmead, of First place, the amount claimed is $5,00. The Lehigh Valley Railroad and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad are made co-defendants as the train was a B. and O. express. In the accident, Miss Anna Marie Johns, of East Front street, this city, and Mrs. Elizabeth Allen, of Westfield, were killed.

The Wardlaw School, formerly Leal's, opened for its thirty-sixth year on Monday. The enrollment was even larger than in previous years, a fact credited to the high standard of excellence maintained by Mr. Wardlaw. There has been only one change in the faculty since the closing last summer and indications point to a very successful and active season. Mr. Wardlaw for the past ten years has been acting as instructor in physical education in the summer sessions of Columbia University and this week was appointed instructor for the winter sessions, which are held Saturdays for extension work.

GREATER SAVING OF SUGAR NOW IS ASKED BY TYLER.

Hotels, restaurants and clubs of New Jersey have been asked to show a greater measure of sugar conservation by State Food Administrator Tyler. In a letter sent out this week to such consumers, Mr. Tyler has included a communication from the United States Food Administration, which requires that specific notice be served on proprietors of eating places and clubs in regard to sugar consumption, with the warning that places with too great allowances of sugar in their possession may have their supplies cut off.

America's Shipbuilding Responsibility For War-Winning Clearly Indicated

Three outstanding facts of prime importance as related, individually or jointly, not only to the war and its outcome, but also to the mercantile marine position of the United States after the war, are definitely set forth by analysis of figures just made public by the Shipping Board. They are:

One—On America's ship yards increasingly rests the responsibility for making up the losses in tonnage occasioned by the U-boats. In other words, the United States must more and more be depended on for that essential of vistory—ships.

Two—The losses occasioned by U-boats, whether by direct attack or indirect methods, such as mine laying, still are serious, although they have been measurably checked, with prospects of continued success in this particular. The Shipping Board's figures deal notably with progress in ship construction accomplished and expected by way of offsetting losses caused by the U-boats; in addition, it may be stated that British official assurances within the past year have continued encouraging as to destruction of the U-boats themselves. Both developments are extremely significant.

Three—America, with the successful carrying out of the Shipping Board's vast program of construction, should, after the war, take assured high rank as a mercantile marine nation. Since August, 1917, more seagoing tonnage has been launched before in a similar period anywhere. The world's largest ship yards now are in the United States. The Clyde River ship building district already is surpassed by four of the American ship building districts, of which one is the Newark Bay.

An absolute corollary to all this is that any such construction slump as recently has been registered at Hog Island must immediately be corrected. The Shipping Board's Emergency Fleet Corporation, acting with the provost marshal general's office, has recognized this. But correction is far from being all that is required. American ship construction will have continuously to outdo the best of previous records.

This is necessitated, first and foremost, by the demands in connection with the sending of troops overseas so that the program of General March, chief of staff of the United States Army, for eighthy divisions abroad by July 1 next may be carried out. These troops also must be supplied with munitions and subsistence. Besides, as Food Administrator Hoover is emphasizing at this moment, America now is called upon to export to our Allies and to the neutrals—the latter because of rationing arrangements dependent, in the majority of cases, on the chartering of neutral ships to the United States—half as much food again as was sent overseas in the year ended June 30, 1918. Nor can it be overlooked that war's very necessities, as well as after-war trade requirements, render essential the constant development of our trade with South America and the Far East.

American ship deliveries are what count. And these deliveries of transport boats, cargo carriers and the rest must be completed products in every sense of the word. Vessels for trans-Atlantic service cannot be other than as perfect as possible with respect both as to speed and engine equipment. The 9gawam, the first ship constructed at Port Newark, offers, unfortunately, a case in point. Months after her launching and on the eve of her delivery word last week was sent from Washington of an ordered change to her equipment from an oil-burning to a coal, as well as oil-burning ship. She is not, it appears, the only merchant vessel so to be transformed. The Agawam order gives added confirmation to the reports that all was not well with the merchanical equipment of certain of America's new merchant ships.

Keeping deliveries in mind—the right sort of deliveries, it may be added—nothing in the Shipping Board's announcement of figures is more worthy of attention than the statement that in August deliveries to the Shipping Board, together with other American construction of vessels of more than 1,000 gross tons, exceeded by 1,630 gross tons Allied and neutral shipping losses for that month. The statistics are as follows:

Deliveries to Shipping Board	244,121
Other American construction	16,918
Total	261,039
Losses (Allied and neutral)	259,400
America alone surpassed losses by	1,639

It is stated that in May, 1918, Allied ship construction for the first time passed destruction.

In deadweight tonnage the August deliveries to the Shipping Board from American yards amounted to 324,180; in addition, three ships, built on contract in Japan and of a total deadweight tonnage of 25,603, were delivered to the Shipping Board. This makes a deadweight total of 349,783. This tonnage, figured in gross, as above, for comparison with the tonnage of ships lost, amounts to 244,121; it is interesting to note that the computation in gross tonnage gives figures approximately slightly than seventy per cent. of the deadweight tonnage figures. This proportion as between gross and deadweight tonnage is confirmed, apparently, by deductions made from that shipping authority, Lloyd's Register.

For the benefit of many who still—and with some reason—are puzzled by references first to deadwight, then to gross and, occasionally, to net tonnage, it may here be stated that the term gross tons expresses in units of 100 cubic feet the entire cubical capacity of a vessel, including spaces occupied by cabins, engines, boilers and coal bunkers. Net tonnage expresses the cubical capacity of a vessel, also reckoned in units of 100 cubic feet, but exclusive of cabins, machinery and coal bunkers. Deadweight tonnage signifies the maximum weight of a ship's cargo, bunkers, consumable stores and all other weight, including that of passengers and crew; in other words, it represents the weight of all that a vessel can carry in safety.

This explanation is, perhaps, all the more required because the Shipping Board in listing Allied and neutral shipping losses and construction since the beginning of the European war uses the term "deadweight tons" instead of the gross tonnage term employed with respect to the August statistics.

According to the figures presented, the total Allied and neutral ship losses from August, 1914, to September 1, 1918, amounted to 21,404,913 deadweight tons. The total Allied and neutral ship construction for the same period was 14,247,825 deadweight tons. Adding to this the deadweight net tonnage of enemy ships captured or seized up to the end of 1917, a total of 3,795,000, there is an excess of loss over gain of 3,362,088 deadweight tons.

On October 22, 1917, Lloyd George said that losses to British shipping alone because of the submarine campaign then were, on a monthly basis, not much more than a third of the total tonnage destroyed in April of that year, a month when the intensified U-boat campaign was in full swing, and protective measures, especially on the part of the United States, had not come into full play. Careful estimates of British losses in April, 1917, made them approximately 500,000 tons, gross. Adding from 100,000 to 150,000 for other Allied and neutral losses in that month, the average British loss during the autumn of 1917 would have been around 200,000 gross tons. In August, 1918, the total Allied and neutral loss is given as 259,400 gross tons.

This means, if August, 1918, is to be taken as an average month, that despite all German effort the submarine is being held, and this in view of the increased American tonnage in transport and related service across the Atlantic. Certainly, no mater how the losses occasioned by the U-boats have been distributed month by month, the German boasts and possible expectations of sinking a million tons a month never have been verified, or even, in the average, approached. The intensified U-boat campaign was announced January 31, 1917; from that time up to September, 1918, nineteen months elapsed. To fulfill their self-announced contract, the Germans should have accounted for 19,000,000 tons in the period named. In the forty-nine months of war up to September, 1918, the total Allied and neutral ship losses, as listed by the Shipping Board, total 21,404,918.

Even if the Germans did not do all they thought or amigined they might, they could indulge in hopes so long as Allied ship construction did not exceed Allied ship destruction. It was more than a year after America entered the war before this point was reached; now America alone makes ship deliveries exceeding in the month of August the total Allied and neutral losses.

There has been the hope that America's September deliveries to the Shipping Board would approximate 400,000 deadweight tons, a figure which will have to be approximated each remaining month of this year if the American deliveries to the Shipping Board for 1918 are to be upward of 2,800,000 deadweight tons. Shipping Board figures published today show that the September American deliveries up to and including September 14 were 93,200 deadweight tons.

The Shipping Board, perhaps with the idea of trying to stimulate national pride, makes a comparison between the United States and the United Kingdom in the matter of ship deliveries for the first eight months of 1918, calling attention to the fact that the United States up to September 1, leads by 90,691 deadweight tons. As to this it may be said, first, that the United States, with its resources and its relative remoteness from the actual war area, should have led, and, second, that there is nothing surprising, in view of the call on England's man power because of the German offensive which started last March, in a more or less progressive decrease in Britain's ship output down to the present. As a matter of fact, the United Kingdom in May delivered 295,511 deadweight tons, a world record at that time, and in three of the eight months of 1918 led the United States in ship deliveries. Until the United States produces many more hundreds of thousands deadweight tonnage of completed ships we shall have to continue to rely on Great Britain in large measure for ships to transport our troops.

Shortage of Gasoline Becomes More Apparent

Sunday gasoline saving must be extended before long if America is to maintain the vast motor transport service now being organized under Colonel C. B. Drake.

This was the warning of prominent War Department authorities this week who pointed out that the speed and effectiveness of motor transport may wrest a victory out of a well-nigh impossible situation oftentimes.

A half million gallons of gasoline daily are required for our present motor transport service. This amount will be more than doubled by spring, and there must be an ample reserve on hand for weeks and perhaps months ahead.

When the entire story of St. Mihiel is written, it will be found that motor transportation played a prominent part. One thousand trucks can carry 25,000 to 30,000 men with packs, quickly; and this means that one hammer stroke can be followed up by another, instead of having lapses in battling that tend to a stalemate.

Camps for training of motor transport men will be opened at once at Jacksonville, Fla., and Fort Sheridan, Chicago, while ten others will be started soon.

Marvin Vanderbeek, of Grandview avenue, who entered the service only a short time ago and is now stationed at Fort Rodman, Mass., has been promoted to corporal.

Jersey Leads in Fewest Rejects From Army Camps

The percentage of men from New Jersey rejected at camp for military service on account of physical defects between February 10 and July 13 last was smaller than that of any other State in the Union. This information is indicated in a chart received by Adjutant General Gilkyson from the War Department, showing the relative percentage of rejections of all States.

The percentage in New Jersey was about two and a half, while in Alabama it was 17.45, or practically seven times that of New Jersey.

Commenting today upon the showing made by New Jersey in the matter of rejections, as well as in the registration and examination under the selective service law, Adjutant General Gilkyson said:

"I cannot compliment too highly the various draft boards throughout the State for that combination of fairness and sound judgment which has resulted in bestowing a national distinction upon New Jersey in the matter of selective service records.

"I refer first to the official report from the office of the provost marshal general, showing that the ratio of men rejected to men inducted into the military service has been smaller in New Jersey than in any other State of the Union. The report comes in the form of an illustrated scale, showing the physical rejections at camp, from February 10 to July 13, 1918, and New Jersey is at the bottom of the scale with the lowest percentage of men rejected at camp after they had been accepted for service and inducted by the draft boards. To my mind there could not be a stronger testimonial to the efficiency and care of our New Jersey boards, both district and local, as well as the members of the medical advisory boards and other officials, and I want these faithful workers to know that Governor Edge and myself, as well as the directing authorities of the draft system in Washington, thoroughly appreciate their patriotic efforts.

"Again, it may not be generally known that New Jersey was the first State in the country having a large registration under the recent call for man-power from eighteen to forty-five years of age to make a full report to Washington of the registration result and the twelfth State in all to make such report. Registration Day was on September 12, and this report was telephoned from the office of the adjutant general of New Jersey to the provost marshal general's headquarters in Washington the morning of September 16. This feat constitutes another demonstration of the energetic, business-like work of the draft boards and their loyal assistants with calls for official recognition and commendation. It distinguished service medals were available for operators of the draft the personnel of New Jersey's machinery, gladly and voluntarily sacrificing private business, and for most part serving without pay, would surely be in line for decoration."

General Gilgyson also announced that a total of 6,178 men from New Jersey had received military training at the Sea Girt State camp grounds between June 10 and September 9 last.

"Of this total number receiving intensive military training," added General Gilkyson, "1,345 men met expenses of the camp from their own private funds—that is, the 947 men attending the camp of instruction for officers and non-commissioned officers of the militia reserve and the National Guard, and the 398 men attending the encampment of the militia reserve. This appeals to me as a very convincing demonstration of the fine animating spirit of our volunteer reserve organization.

"Two thousand nine hundred and fifty-one men attended the State militia encampment and 728 the camp of instruction for officers and non-commissioned officers of the State militia. The intensive character of the military instruction received by these units was without precedent in the military annals of the State, and must be regarded as exceedingly helpful to the Jerseymen who benefitted and who later may be called into the military service of the nation.

"The expenses of the encampment of the National Guard—Second Regiment, heavy field artillery, and the Third and Fourth companies, coast artillery corps—consisting of 1,154 men under canvas, were borne by the Federal Government. These men were put through the military courses by instructors from the United States army, and the indications are that the ar Department will find it practical and desirable to call these units into the federal military service as units. On the whole, it seems to me that the camp at Sea Girt last summer was the most important and effective from a strictly military standpoint of any in the history of New Jersey."

Everett Colby Enters Service in Tanks Corps

Everett Colby, former State Senator from Essex county, aide to Herbert Hoover, food commissioner of the United States, will enter army service in the tan corps.

Mr. Colby will join the tank camp at Gettysburg, Pa. Following thirty days' training there, the former Senator expects to go abroad.

Mr. Colby, who is 44, has been an active figure in political and public affairs the entire period of the present century. He sat in the House of Assembly in 1900, 1901 and 1902, and the three following years served Essex county as Senator. He was Progressive candidate for Governor and was on the Republican National Committee. In 1910 he went abroad to aid Lloyd George's campaign in England, and in January, went abroad for Mr. Hoover in the interests of food conservation.

Mr. Colby is a member of the law firm of Colby, Whiting & Moore. His wife was Miss Edith Hyde, a member of the wealthy Plainfield family, and the couple have two sons and two daughters. Their home isl n Llewellyn Park, West Orange.

J. Russell Hoagland, of Grandview avenue, the borough, who recently was sent to Fort Hancock, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Hoagland.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Foster, of West Seventh street, returned recently from Westfield, Mann., where they spent the summer.

Mrs. Frank W. Hallenbeck, of Somerset street, is a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation. She underwent a similar operation at the hospital a year ago.

Miss Jennie Hurt, of Park avenue, and John Suydam, of Plainfield avenue, were married in St. Mary's church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan officiating. The attendants were Miss Sophie Brusk and John Switzer. Following a wedding trip to Atlantic City, the couple will make their home on Plainfield avenue. Mr. Suydam is employed at the Spicer plant in South Plainfield.

Mrs. George Conover and son, of Grandview avenue, returned home a few days ago, after spending the summer at Manasquan.

Harry Stewart, of East Fifth street, has resigned his position as salesman for Armour & Company's local branch to take one with the Wasson Piston Ring Company.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring, of West Front street, returned yesterday after their usual summer stay at their cottage at Spring Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. H. Dalley, of 735 West Fourth street, will remove October 1 to a residence on Grant avenue, opposite West Sixth street.

Fred Greene, of East Seventh street, who has been on the limited service list of local registrants, was sent to Fort Slocum by the Plainfield Draft Board, Monday. He will probably be assigned to stenography work at some Government station, as he was employed in this capacity at the Saurer Motor plant.

Russell Smith, of Park avenue, is announced as having arrived overseas. He was formerly employed at the Richmond street freight yards.

Mrs. B. Lawton, of West Sixth street; Mrs. Earl Huff, of West Front street, and Miss Mae Barry, of Howard street, the borough, returned Sunday night, after a trip to Newport News, Va., where relatives were stationed temporarily before embarking for overseas.

Delos A. Thomas, formerly of Grant avenue, this city, but more recently of Boston, was a visitor in town the first few days of this week. He reports the arrival in his home of a baby daughter, born at Boston last week. Mr. Thomas is traveling superintendent for the Kresge Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry White Hermann and daughter, of West Seventh street, returned this week after a summer stay at their cottage at Spring Lake.

Recent commissions awarded at the Plattsburg training camp included second lieutenancies to Carlton L. Dunham, of 355 West Front street, and William J. Ahern, of 115 North avenue, this city. Lieutenant Dunham has been instructed to report to Camp Grant, Ill., and Lieutenant Ahern will go to Columbia University. The latter was a student at the Penn State College previous to his enlistment.

Vincent W. Nash, of Prospect avenue, returned yesterday from Spring Lake, where he occupied his cottage during the summer. Mrs. Nash was also at the shore all summer but returned home last Sunday because of temporary illness.

Mrs. M. S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, returned a few days ago, after an all-summer stay at Dartmouth, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Claybrook and son, who have been residing in Philadelphia, have removed to this city and are now occupying the residence at 114 East Sixth street. Mr. Claybrook is a brother to Richard A. A. Claybrook, of Grant avenue.

Frank Ingraham, of Church street, has been seriously ill during the past week with Spanish influenza. He was formerly a member of the city fire department but more recently has been a foreman at the British-American Metals plant.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Christina B. Scott, of East Front street, this city, to James A. Reynolds, of Plainfield, formerly of Brooklyn. Miss Scott is a niece of Mrs. Walter Scott, of East Front street. No date has been set for the wedding.

Chaplin Comedy Big Hit on New Bill at Plainfield Theatre

The new bill at the Plainfield Theatre seen yesterday for the first, contains many good things. Probably the best liked was Charlie Chaplin's newest picture, "Triple Trouble," because it kept everybody in roars of daughter from the time it started until two full reels had been thrown on the screen. The funny fellow introduced comic situations new to his admirers and never before contained in any Chaplin comedy production. It was the unanimous opinion after yesterday's shows that "Triple Trouble" is the funniest film ever seen in Plainfield.

Another picture feature on yesterday's bill was the dramatic film sensation, "The Mortgaged Wife," in which Miss Dorothy Phillips was the star. It requires five reels to tell the story, one teem with action that grips the audience and holds it in breathless suspense. The play has been produced by the Goldwyn Company and Miss Phillips herself, one of the most charming of artists, has the support of an all-star company.

Both "Triple Trouble" and "The Mortgaged Wife" will be repeated today and tomorrow in connection with a strong vaudeville bill, headed by the Five American Sailors, a quintet of clever instrumentalists. They made a big hit yesterday and were encored several times after each selection. Jesson and Jesson, a team of clever dancers, also made good, and Fenten and Fields, comedians, offered a branch of "gags" with side-"business" that pleased everyone and established themselves as local favorites.

After many long interviews and correspondence galore, Barney Gerard finally persuaded those well known comedians and parody kings, Hoey and Lee, to return to the field of their first endeavors, and they will be seen with the "Girls De Looks" at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, matinee and night.

It is sixteen years since Charley and Harry were seen in burlesque, and no doubt a rousing reception awaits their return especially from the older patrons of this style of entertainment. It is not improbable that their re-entrance into this field will have a tendency to attract to the Plainfield Theatre many of their admirers who have season after season seen them in vaudeville.

The vehicle Mr. Gerard has provided them with is bound to find much favor, for it is built for laughing purposes and constructed of material which these boys handle with a zest that becomes hilarious.

They appear as Slitkin and Slotkin, "Get Rich Quick" lawyers, who open a law office for the express purpose of securing patents for inventors in a thriving town. Af course they know no more about law than an infant and having no diplomas, are at their wits ends at all times to escape detection. This they elude, however, until they accept the nomination for political offices which leads to their expose.

Mr. Gerard has surrounded them with an excellent cast including Walter Pearson, Ross Snow, Harry Kay, Babe Burnette, Josephine Younge, Evelyn Stevens, Lola McQuay and as pretty a chorus, all under twenty, as will be seen on the wheel this season.

From a scenic and costuming standpoint, the "Girls De Looks" will pass muster, even though placed in the category of Broadway productions.

There are many new and original musical interpolations which are introduced in a natural manner and rendered with the precision and effectiveness of a Winter Garden Show.

The tiny star in the new music play of whimsical surprises, Mitzi and "Head Over Heals," has caught the popular fancy at the George M. Cohan Theatre, which has become known as the "Broadway joy center." Interest in the unusually effective attraction now in its fourth week has been steadily increasing and thousands who were unable to secure seats were turned away last week.

"Head Over Heals" is brimming with laugh-making lines and unusual turns of action and audiences leave the theatre still chuckling over and repeating fragmentary wit or Mitzi's mannerisms in the piquant "Funny Little Something" or "The Big Show."

Jerome Kern wrote comedy, sentiment and pathos into the score of the play, and Edgar Allan Woolf wove a story that gave opportunity for novel characters and situations throughout. Mitzi as the little Italian acrobatic topmounter comes to America in pursuit of one man and immediately falls in love with another. This is the thread of the story interwoven with the trials of a high-spirited girl who rebels against the life of slavery which the old Italian "Papa Bambinetti" exacts from his family of acrobats.

Robert Emmett Keane and Charles Judels, two of the best known comedians of the stage, are featured in support of Mitzi. Others in the cast are Dorothy Mackaye, Gertrude Dallas, Ernest Marini, Boyd Marshall, Irving Beebe, Carrie McManus, Lambert Terry, Grace Daniels, Edmund Gurney and the Run Away Four. Mr. Savage has demonstrated in his "Head Over Heals" organization that it is still possible to find girls in numbers who are exceptionally good looking and who can really sing and dance like the proverbial fairy sprites.

Jenkinson Appeals to Water Companies

Water companies who use pumping stations to get their supply are asked to conserve their coal supply.

The request as issued by State Fuel Administrator Jenkinson is as follows: "The unnecessary use and careless wasting of water is a habit for which American towns and cities are noted. The average consumption for forty American towns and cities has been given by a reliable authority as 101 gallons daily per person, while the average of forty European cities is given as fifty-one gallons per person. This wide difference between American and European water consumption is partly accounted for by the relatively larger number of taps for a given population in this country; however, it is mostly to be accounted for by our careless and extravagant habits which the war has emphasized in many ways.

"Engineers and water works officials throughout the country have recognized this economic waste for years. The consensus of opinion among them is that universal metering of all consumers is the only fair and permanent remedy. Many communities have adopted the system of metering and are now enjoying better service at less cost. It takes time to inaugurate such a system and can only be accomplished successfully by educating the general public to realize its advantages. However, a large saving in water and fuel can be effected at once by individual attention to all leaky pipes and fixtures and the careless and unnecessary use of water.

WAR BOARD WOULD SHOW RETAIL PROFITS.

The War Industries Bard is about to determine what is a fair profit for the retailer.

Moved by the flood of complaints of profiteering the board has under consideration regulations to force the stamping of wholesale prices on all merchandise sold in the United States, that the consumer may check the blood-money-makers individually. He will know when he inspects any article of merchandise, just how much profit the retailer gets.

Soldier Vote May Decide Senate Race

Returns from the Democratic primaries throughout the State at noon today indicate that the official count of the votes, including the canvass of the soldiers' ballots, will be necessary to determine which of the three candidates has received the party nomination for the long term in the United States Senate.

Charles O'C. Hennessy, 15,698.
George M. La Monte, 16,231.
Alexander Simpson, 16,199.
Frank M. McDermitt, 12,066.

The counties still to be heard from are Cape May and Cumberland, with a part of Bergen, Hennessy's own county, not yet reporting. It is believed that in the counties where the returns are still lacking, both La Monte and Hennessy will show much greater strength than Simpson, perhaps enough to wipe out the plurality of 886 that he has in the returns received over Hennessy, who is leading La Monte by 91 votes.

Complete returns from Union and Morris counties show that Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, received the Republican nomination for Congress over Mayor Ruford Franklin, of Summit, by 4,300 majority. Mr. Ackerman made a splendid run in every district, even to those of Summit, where naturally enough, the sentiment was for Franklin. William Birch, of Dover, received the Congressional nomination by only a small majority over Otto Ross, of Madison, while Hugh Treacy, of this city, ran third.

Arthur E. Warner led the Republican Assembly ticket in the county receiving a total of 6,004. Chosen to run with him are the other two Union county Assemblymen, Arthur N. Pierson and Charles L. Morgan, who polled 5,850 and 5,741 votes respectively.

The Democrats had but three men up. They were: Charles P. Senger, of this city, who received 2,981; Stanley McIntosh, 2,989; and John F. X. Casserly, 2,961. The Socialists also had a ticket in the field.

The Republican Assembly trio found no difficulty in winning over the other two men who were in the field against them. They were William R. Strickland and Albert E. Jackson. The former got 1,396 in the county and the latter 1,672.

The Warner-Pierson-Morgan trio pulled well, both in Plainfield and outside.

Bauer Easily Defeats Otto

Edward Bauer, county registrar, had no difficulty in winning the Republican nomination for re-election at Tuesday's primaries. He defeated his opponent, former Sheriff George C. Otto, by a majority of 2,267 in the county, the total vote being 4,840 for Bauer and 2,573 for Otto. This

The contest, which was one of the most interesting at the primaries, was expected to be a close one, but such was not the case. From the time the returns began to come in Tuesday night, Bauer seemed to have the better of the fight, and as the results of the voting in a majority of the districts of the county and city were tabulated no doubt existed as to the outcome of the battle.

Both Bauer and Otto had conducted campaigns and each had a number of influential supporters. Bauer's strength was expected to be largely outside of Elizabeth, but the results show that he polled as large a vote in proportion in that city as he did in the rest of the county. He carried thirty-five of the forty-seven Elizabeth districts and tied his opponent in two others.

James J. McCann, of this city, won the Democratic nomination for the office against Ten Eyck R. Beardsley, of Fanwood, the county totals being McCann, 1,999; Beardsley 1,314; Harry F. Kopp was the Socialist candidate.

Overseas Duty For Limited Service Men

No news brought greater joy to the physically fit men in the 153d Depot Brigade stationed at Dix than the announcement of the War Department's policy for the more extended use of limited service men. "In order to conserve the man power of the nation," the order declared, "it is essential that every one who is physically fit for combatant service overseas be used solely for such service. Limited service men must be used to the maximum extent for service both in this country and abroad. No general service men will be used in this country for any duty whatsoever which can be performed by limited service men."

All commanding officers have been instructed to ut the new policy into execution immediately and the limited service men will be used for all stationary plants and utilities and all units not a part of a mobile tactical division or other specially designated troops or their replacements. A certain number of these men will also be used abroad in such capacities as they are best fitted to perform. Organizations, detachments and units for service overseas may take such limited service men as the commanding officer of the unit concerned certifies will not be prevented by their physical defects from the proper performance of their duties.

A number of domestic service men of the depot brigade have been transferred to the Quartermaster Corps, unassigned, and have been detailed to duty with the Army Transport Service, which has headquarters in New York city.

New Jersey election commissioners are taking the primary vote at Camp Dix by visiting the men in their barracks. The plan of having the men vote in battalions was, after consideration, deemed impracticable and the memorandum directing unit commanders to send men to the big Y. M. auditorium has been revoked. Toward the latter part of the work another order will be issued directing commanders to send such men as have not already voted to the auditorium, in order that they might cast their votes. In this way the commissioners feel that more satisfactory results will be obtained, although it will take a much longer time. It will not take the men from their commands for any lengthy period, however.

City Officials Moving Soon to New City Hall

Preparations for removal from the present quarters in the building at 149 North avenue, to the new City Hall, were commenced by city officials this week. It will be impossible for all of them to be out by October 1, the date on which the lease on the North avenue premises expires, but it is probable that those on the second floor will be the first to go. These will include Building Inspector Doane, Overseer of the Poor Dunham and Mayor Calkins. Arrangements having been made to care for them at the new municipal building.

City Clerk Carroll, Tax Collector Townsend and City Engineer Gavett, who are located on the first floor at 149 North avenue, will not be able to vacate the old premises for some time yet as their quarters at the Hall are not completed.

Judge Apologizes to "Tardy" Juror

Anxiety on the part of someone to have everything in readiness when the District Court moves to its new quarters in the City Hall building resulted in Edward C. Searing, of Watchung avenue, getting an unexpected "call down" from Judge J. Henry Crane when the former appeared in the courtroom on North avenue yesterday for jury duty.

"Your summons calls for your presence here at 10 o'clock," the Judge remarked from the bench, "and it is now 10:15. What excuse have you for the tardiness?"

Mr. Searing declared that his summons read to appear "at the City Hall, Watchung avenue and East Sixth street," and he added that he had been there at 9:45 and waited more than twenty minutes for someone to show up. When he saw no signs of court or court officers, he decided to go around to the old chambers at 149 North avenue, he said, and there found everything in waiting for him.

Judge Crane and the court attaches made a hurried examination of Mr. Searing's summons and found that he was correct. The official notifications are printed in bulk and as there was a prospect of the court being removed to the City Hall during the present month the last ones ordered from the printer contained the new address. This, of course, was overlooked when the paper was issued.

Judge Crane very promptly offered his apology to Mr. Searing and expressed regret that he had been compelled to wait around the City Hall through no fault of his own.

"You certainly obeyed the summons to the letter of the law," remarked the Judge to the tary juror, "and you deserve the thanks of the court instead of its condemnation."

Mayor Will Issue Call For Public Hearing to Discuss War Chest Plan

Mayor Calkins gave out this morning the following statement with regard to the War Chest situation:

"At the request of several well-known citizens I called a conference last uly to consider the War Chest plan. Representatives of our local war activities and all local charitable institutions were invited, as well as the civic and business associations. It was decided to hold a second conference after the several organizations had had an opportunity to hold meetings of their managing boards to decide officially whether they favored the War Chest or not.

"Accordingly on July 30th. I sent a letter to the larger of our philanthropic agencies, whose co-operation would be essential to the success of a War Chest, explaining how it would function and requesting official action either for or against the plan. Owing to the absence on vacations of many directors of these organizations, I have only recently received a sufficient number of replies to enable me to call a second conference. It will probably be held next week Thursday. Public notice of the exact time and place will be given early next week. The meeting will be not only a meeting of delegates from the war relief agencies and local charities, but in the nature also of a public hearing. I feel strongly that a War Chest ought not to be organized here without general public approval, as well as with the support of the relief and charitable societies. I shall therefore issue a call for a public hearing, so that all who are opposed to a War Chest may have full opportunity to voice their opinion publicly before any steps are taken to adopt the plan.

"There is no purpose on the part of any one o force this device on the city. It is merely a question whether, all things considered, the scheme is worth a trial.

"If Plainfield is to have a War Chest this year, it must be organized this month, because a nation-wide War Chest drive begins on November 11th, including all the war activity work of the Knights of Columbus, Jewish War Board, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., American Library Association, War Camp Community Service, and Salvation Army. It follows that if Plainfield is to have a War Chest, which would include not only the above war activities, but local charities, we must organize immediately, so that the drive beginning November 11th may include, in addition to our quotas for the seven war activities appropriations for all local charities for the period of a year. Whether there is time to do this now, I am not sure. A War Chest organization in my opinion ought to be incorporated, on account of the large sums to be raised and administered. The directorate should be representative of the several classes of our people, racial and religious. The financial and executive committees should be composed of men and women who have the confidence of the community. It will be an important question, to be decided at the forthcoming meeting, whether such an organization can be completed this month, especially as the Liberty Loan Campaign is occupying everyone's attention. If it is decided to go ahead with the War Chest, a committee on organization must be named at once, which will demand hard work on the part of its members. I have gone into the matter at some length to prepare the public for the conference and hearing next week.

"For those who have not closely followed the War Chest discussion it may be said that the idea is simply to have a single campaign to raise by subscription Plainfield's quotas for all war relief agencies, and also everything required for our local charities. Peope would bas asked to pledge themselves to give so much a year,—payable perhaps in monthly installments, for the support of all war and local relief work. There would be one intensive whirl-wind campaign, and no further solicitation for the period of a year. I have been anxious that the objections as well as the advantages of the system shall be explained, because the War Chest is a new idea and might prove successful in some communities without necessarily working out well in others. This is an important matter for our people to decide, and I do not think it is going too far to suggest that the meeting next week should be attended by all who take the slightest interest in the decision to be reached. In view of the general sentiment in favor of the War Chest, as expressed at the Judy conference, it is especially the duty of all who oppose the plan to appear and make their objections known. Otherwise it will be right to assume, as we do with our public hearings on proposed appropriations for city purposes, that people approve when they do not accept invitations to voice their disapproval in advance.

For

"1. Economy of time and effort, by the consolidation of all separate campaigns into a single drive to raise an aggregate fund sufficient to carry all war relief work, and local philanthropic work, for a year.

"2. The support of all worthy causes is assured. independent of creed, race or class and based solely on citizenship and humanity.

"3. The War Chest has been tried and has succeeded in many cities, the budget being largely oversubscribed in some cases, and the number of contributors mucr greater than where separate campaigns were conducted.

"It is the application of the budget system, which we use in our public and business affairs, to relief work; and is therefore logically a desirable method of procedure.

"5. It unites the patriotic community spirit, and so makes it more effective.

Against

"1. Separate campaigns tend to stimulate the patriotic community spirit and keep it alive. This would be lost under the War Chest plan, as one's monthly payments into the Chest would become as matter of fact as the payment of gas bills and other current expenses.

"2. With the great diversity of causes, many wish to contribute to some and not to others. Individual, denominational, and racial interest is also minimized in the War Chest. It might be arranged that people could have their money go to certain objects, yet the common fund idea would dominate.

"3. The large majority of people who give have small incomes, many of them in these times have very uncertain incomes, and will find it very difficult to pledge themselves in advance; whereas they can always give up to the limit of their ability at the time of each separate drive.

"4. If the War Chest is businesslike and logical, because it applies the budget system to relief work, then we should go a step further and consolidate the management of all these activities. In other words, why have separate organizations at all? Why not have all war relief work managed by one, national in character? And the same reasoning would apply to local philanthropies."

Three Times Bereaved in Week, Mother and Son-in-law Winning in Fight for Life

Reports from Muhlenberg Hospital late this morning conveyed the information that Mrs. Neaf Apgar, of Clinton avenue, and her son-in-law, Joseph Dunlap, of Mariners place, who have been critically ill with influenza and pneumonia, the same malady that caused the death of three persons in the Apgar family within two weeks, had improved considerably in the last twenty-four hours and that their recovery now seems certain.

Mrs. Apgar has been at the hospital a week and was there last Sunday night, when her daughter, Mrs. Dunlap, passed away in a nearby room. The latter was removed to the institution shortly after her two brothers, first Paul Rolf Apgar and then William H. Apgar, had both succumbed to pneumonia within thirty-six hurs. Mrs. Dunlap was taken ill last week but was not removed to Muhlenberg until Tuesday. It was thought Sunday that Mrs. Apgar would succumb but she took a turn for the better late at night, after remaining in very much the same condition for more than two days. Yesterday the second ent and she is now doing well. Mr. Dunlap's condition was also critical for a time, especially just the period when his wife's funeral was taking place. Although very weak, today, his chances for speedy recovery are considered very good.

The funeral of Mrs. Dunlap was held in St. Mary's church Wednesday morning in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Holsters offered the requie mmass and the offertory solo, "Pie Jesu," was sung by Miss Mary Brutcher, of Raritan. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, relatives of the family acting as pall-bearers.

Mrs. Dunlap was thirty years old and had always resided in Plainfield. She was a graduate of St. Mary's School and a faithful communicant of St. Mary's church. Beside her husband and parents, she leaves five children, the oldest but ten years old and also one sister and five brothers. The sister is Miss Madeline Apgar and the brothers are James N., Thomas, K., Philip Hazelwood, John P. and Daniel

Dr. Frank C. Ard Tells What Influenza Is; How It Attacks, and Methods for Offsetting It

In common with many other cities of the East, Plainfield is at present experiencing in a lighter degree the effects of the influenza or grip epidemic, ravaging New England in particular and the entire Atlantic seaboard in general For that reason, any information that will aid individuals in detecting symptoms of the malady, and instructing them in the proper course to pursue for its treatment is of most timely value. Dr. Frank C. Ard, Plainfield's noted specialist on diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, is particularly interested in the fight against the spread of the epidemic locally because he is a member of the City Board of Health and in a very excellent article prepared for the Record, gives a brief history of the present influenza wave, how its presence can be quickly told and simple measures to off-set its effects. The information is in concise form, and should be read by every adult person in the community. In the memorable epidemic of 1889 and 1890, Dr. Ard was engaged in general practice in Ohio and worked frequently for thirty-six hours at a stretch taking care of "La Grippe" cases which existed by the thousands. The wonderful experience he gained at that time has enabled him to appreciate the value of preventative methods, a fact which had much to do with his preparation of the present article. Read it and remember every detail if you would save yourself from an illness and perhaps serious consequences:

"At the present time there is a considerable number of cases of so-called 'Spanish influenza' in Plainfield and some knowledge of the characteristics of the disease may be of benefit to the public.

"This is undoubtedly the same disease which was first heard of in Spain last spring, hence the name 'Spanish influenza.' It resembles in every way the epidemic of grippe which was widespread in this country in 1889 and 1890. In the epidemic of thirty years ago the disease spread from East to West along the lines of travel and in this present epidemic it will doubtless follow the same course and we may expect it to spread all over the United States. This disease seems more severe than the 1889 epidemic and its complications more frequent and serious. It shows an extraordinary degree of contagiousness and in spite of the protection of gauze masks by physicians and nurses who are caring for these cases, they have been attacked by the disease. The disease develops in from one to two days after exposure—the onset is sudden and the patient sometimes passes from an apparently well condition to almost prostration in a few hours, fever usually rises rapidly up to 101, and even as high as 105, and is usually associated with severe headache, weakness and pains of varying severity in the muscles and joints, especially in the back. There are alternating chills and hot sensations and bleeding from the nose is not uncommon. On the morning of the second or third day there is usually improvement and a small proportion of these cases recover, but more frequently there is a secondary rise of temperature associated with cold in the head and bronchitis. It is during this stage that the disease is most contagious. Following the secondary rise of temperature in uncomplicated cases they gradually return to normal in about one week, but the patient is still coughing and feels very weak and it requires another week of convalescence before returning to duty is advisable and then the patient fatigues very easily and shows distinct effects of the infection. Five to ten per cent. of the patients in this epidemic develop a very severe broncho-pneumonia and this broncho-pneumonia shows a very high percentage of fatalities. If pneumonia is to develop there is rarely any remission of the symptoms and after two or three days the physical signs of this complication are present. Contrary to the usual experience with pneumonia, the influenza bacillus appears to be the direct cause rather than the pneumonia bacillus. One can judge from the foregoing description of this disease whether the patient has true influenza or has devoloped a cold which is not uncommon at this particular time.

"It is very important that the influenza patient be immediately put to bed in a well ventilated room and isolated from other members of the family. Those who are caring for the patient should, while in this room protect themselves by wearing a gauze mask over the mouth and nose and should invariably wash their hands and face before eating or drinking and should see that any utensils used for the patient are boiled after being used. A laxative may be given immediately and a considerable quantity of water. It is evident from the severity of these cases, that a physician be consulted at once—awaiting the visit of the physician hot drinks may be given the patient, but no attempts at medication should be made by the attendants excepting under the advice of the physician.

"To limit the spread of the disease one should avoid crowds and individuals who have colds should be exceedingly careful to use their handkerchiefs when sneezing and coughing. Some people even in ordinary conversation spray the surrounding atmosphere and this should be by all means avoided.

"If this disease should develop into a very definite epidemic in Plainfield, we can assume that it will pass in a period of perhaps six weeks. There is some reason to believe that those people who had the disease in 1889, may have developed a certain degree of immunity."

TAKES A POSITION.

Harry C. Van Emburgh, the local civil engineer, has take na position with the Hay Construction Company, of Newark, as construction engineer. He began his new duties Tuesday.

PARENTS OF A DAUGHTER.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Burke, of Monroe avenue, are the parents of a baby daughter, born to them yesterday morning.

LOCAL RED CROSS APPEALS FOR WORKERS IN EPIDEMIC FIGHT.

The Plainfield-North Plainfield Chapter of the Red Cross is exerting every energy to help in the fight against influenza and to that end has issued the following urgent appeal for workers who can help in the making of the much-needed gauze masks:

"The most important call that has ever come to the surgical dressings department of the Red Cross is here. We must make and ship immediately 10,000 contagious ward masks, also a large number of pneumonia jackets. Every boy, nurse and doctor, in every camp must be equipped with a mask; also each man invalided home wounded from the fighting line is obliged to have one as he comes into this country. The emergency must be met! Women of Plainfield! Will you not respond? Go to your nearest auxiliary or to headquarters and work—work as you never have before. Help to stop this fast spreading epidemic.

"This department will be open mornings, afternoons and evenings, Saturday and Sundays in addition to the regular days for work."

Bond Sales In City Lag Far Behind

The Plainfield Liberty Loan Committee reported at noon today, that the total number of subscriptions in the campaign amounted to $387,000. This is far below the figure estimated for this time, as, according to the plan mapped out, it was hoped to have one million dollars in hand the first week. The canvassers, however, are redoubling their efforts and much better results are looked for tomorrow.

The influenza epidemic has put an end to all gatherings planned by the committee for indoors to stimulate the sale of bonds, but special permit has been secured from the Board of Health to conduct a meeting at the Airdome, Front street and Watchung avenue, tomorrow night. There will be moving pictures, speakers and music, leading up to the sale of bonds.

All tomorrow afternoon, the Pelham Bay Band, one of the best musical organizations in Uncle Sam's service, will be in the city and play at various points in the business district. Speeches will be made by bonds salesmen after each musical program.

The Plainfield committee has a number of other plans in view to aid the sale of bonds that will be announced within the next few days.

Soldier Victim of Camp Dix Epidemic Buried Here Today

St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield held a large gathering of relatives and friends at 9 o'clock this morning, when the funeral of James Hunter, of Scotch Plains, a victim of the influenza epidemic at Camp Dix, was held.

The requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father Waldron, of St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, of which the young soldier was a communicant. A detachment of soldiors from the camp acted as an escort for the body and accorded all military honors. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

Mr. Hunter was thirty years old and the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Hunter, of Scotch Plains. He was a butcher by occupation up to last May, at which time he was inducted into military service by the Plainfield district board. He left for Camp Dix on May 31 and up to the time his illness began was a most enthusiastic army man. Up to the time his illness began the forepart of last week, he was a tent mate of Henry Roach, of East Fifth street, this city.

Mr. Hunter had a wide acquaintance in this city as well as in his home place and his death has resulted in many expressions of regret.

The deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. Grace Maidonas, of New York and three brothers, Walter and Frank, of Scotch Plains, and John N., of New York.

Forty-Eight Additional Victims of Influenza Reported Since Yesterday

Total Number of Cases in City Since September 18 Is Now 193, 16 of Them Proving Fatal—Two Physicians and Priest Among the Latest to Contract the Malady

With 48 more cases reported since yesterday, despite every precaution to prevent further spread, it is evident that the influenza epidemic still has a grip on Plainfield. The total number of cases reported since September 18, when the malady first became noticed, is now 193. Of these fifteen have died.

The total number of cases does not include those of North Plainfield where the epidemic is also in an advanced stage. It is quite possible that at least fifty borough persons are suffering from the dangerous disease in its middle or advanced stages.

Muhlenberg Hospital has been doing its utmost to provide the best of accommodations for all patients seeking it and although pushed to its limit has been able to make room for everyone. It was stated at noon today by Manager Smith, that the hospital is now caring for twenty-four persons with either pneumenia or advanced influenza, all of whom have been received since the epidemic began.

Two deaths from the malady were reported yesterday, both persons being residents of North Plainfield. The first was Ernest J. Neal, of 182 Grove street, the borough, was passed away at Camp Dix, to which place he went several months ago as a selective. The other was Richard Schroeder, Jr., of Grandview avenue, who passed away at his home after returning from Camp Dix, where he was taken ill. Neal, who was twenty-four years old, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Neal, of Grove street, and leaves two brothers, George G. Neal, of Park avenue, and James Neal, now stationed at Camp Greenleaf.

Schroeder was twenty-three years old and had been at Camp Dix several months when stricken. He leaves one sister, Elizabeth, and two brothers, Edwin and Alfred, in addition to his parents. The funeral will be held at the parents' home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in Hillside cemetery. Among the latest local residents to contract the disease are Dr. W. H. Anthony, of Par kavenue; Dr. W. B. Gray, of Somerset street, and Rev. Father Hennessey, assistant rector of St. Mary's church. All three contracted the influenza through attending to the sick. All three are confined to their bed but none of them are at the hospital, as has been reported.

A. E. Smith Made Plant Engineer at Standard Aero Shops

The Standard Aero Corporation has made the announcement that Arthur E. Smith, of West Seventh street, this city, the well-known bridge and structural iron contractor, had been made plant engineer of the Bayway shops. He succeeds Alex Milne, of North Plainfield, who has been transferred to another post in the production department.

Mr. Smith entered upon his new duties Tuesday and already has innovations under way for the more rapid output of air machines. A large part of the plant's production depends upon this official and Mr. Smith is counted upon to meet all the requirements. He is the son of Captain and Mrs. William C. Smith, of Fairview avenue, and was graduated from Rutgers College in 1904. Since then he has been engaged in the contracting business with offices in the Frost building on Park avenue. The Elks' clubhouse on Watchung avenue was one of the structures in Plainfield for which he had the steel skeleton contract and he has also built many of the largest bridges over streams in Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties. In recent years, he has devoted most of his attention to the building of concrete railroad siding trestles and did this work exclusively for the New Jersey Central at all points along its lines.

In accepting the position with the Standard Corporation, Mr. Smith will not give up his contracting business. This will be carried on by Herbert N. Holder, as superintendent, and his brother, Edward P. T. Smith, as foreman. Both have been associated with him for many years. As soon as the war is over, according to the terms of the contract, Mr. Smith is to leave the Standard employ and return to his own interests.

MRS. HAYNES' FUNERAL AT ANNANDALE TOMORROW

The funeral of Mrs. Kate Cramer Haynes, wife of Joseph A. Haynes, whose death occurred Wednesday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank A. Palmer, of Tillotson road, Fanwood, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of her son, John Haynes, of Annandale. Burial will be in the Annandale cemetery.

Mrs. Haynes was born at Annandale seveny-one years ago, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cramer. She lived in Plainfield forty years, removing to the home of her daughter only about a year ago. Mr. Haynes was Plainfield's agent for the Jersey Central for nearly forty years.

RYDER & GRAVES BUY OUT W. H. POPE.

Ryder & Graves, the local electrical contractng firm, has purchased the busness and stock of William H. Pope, of West Fourth street, who has been engaged in the electrical contracting business for many years.

Messrs. Ryder & Graves will continue to serve the customers of Mr. Pope in the same excellent manner accorded by the former. Their show rooms and supply houses are located

Furnishes $1,500 Cash Guarantee to Remain in the State

Served with a ne exeat order, restraining him from leaving the State to insure his appearance in the Chancery Court, at Newark, next Tuesday, Maximiliano Aviles, of 1324 George street, this city, on Wednesday, furnished $1,500 cash bail, as a guarantee he would be on hand. This is the first time in Chancery Court annals that bail has been furnished in advance, when the defendant has been served onyl with a restraining order.

Through her counsel, Asa F. Randolph and W. S. Angueman, Mrs. Aviles has commenced action against her husband for divorce and alimony. He threatened to break up housekeeping and take all the furniture from Plainfield to New York, hence the restraining order. The couple were married in Cincinatti eight years ago and have lived in Plainfield four years. They have one child, Delores, aged four.

Aviles is in the importing business in New York and according to his questionnaire is worth $5,500 and makes $490 a month. He is a Porto Rican but his wife is an American.

LIMITED SERVICE MEN LEAVE FOR FORT THOMAS.

LeRoy G. Carman, son of Dr. M. A. Carman, of Watchung avenue, and John C. Traynor, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Traynor, of East Second street, left yesterday morning for Fort Thomas, Ky., as limited service selectives from the Plainfield district.

The two young men went from here to Philadelphia, at which point they boarded a special train carrying two hundred selectives from all parts of New Jersey. They are due to arrive at Fort Thomas, which is near Frankfort, Ky., at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Previous to induction, Mr. Carman was employed in the investigation department of a New York bank and Mr. Traynor was in the New Jersey Central's freight department at Communipaw.

JAMES W. WHELAN VICTIM OF INFLUENZA.

Private James W. Whelan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Whelan, of 635 East Second street, died at the Naval Base Hospital at Hampton Roads, yesterday, a victim of influenza. No arrangements for the funeral have been made because of the great number of deaths at the camp, the body has not yet been prepared for shipment to this city.

The young man was twenty-two years old and beside his parents, leaves a sister, Mrs. John Moore, of East Second street, and a brother, Martin Whelan, Jr., of Arlington avenue.

Drew Caissons When Horses Died.

There are many tales of heroism in the fighting in France. One concerns a number of boys, belonging to an artillery group, which as a result of constant fire found itself short of ammunition. The lads had volunteered to make a three-mile trip down the road, every inch of which was shell-swept, in order to bring back a fresh supply.

Before the return was completed the horses attached to their caisson wagon were all killed. That circumstance, however, failed to deter the Americans from laboriously dragging the wagon themselves.

They Got There In Time

They are in the fight with every muscle, every faculty of their minds, every drop of their American blood

You have read in the daily news the story of what one detachment of American artillerymen did on the Marne when their ammunition was running low.

Every shell in that caisson meant a speedier winning of the war—all the horses were killed—but the shells got there just the same. And they got there in time.

Where shall we draw the limit when we read what they are doing over there? Now is the time to put our full strength into it. Our strength, coupled with the power of our Allies, will win. Let us not delay even a few months.

Let us get there in time to hasten the victory—to save the lives of our sons.

How can any one of us, back here at home, set any limit to the help we ought to give---for victory? And we must get it there in time!

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MISS MARGARET DALY.

Miss Margaret Daly, for more than fifty years a resident of this city, died Monday at the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Newark. She had been ill for a long time and entered the institution only a short while ago, after being a patient for nearly three years in the Elizabeth General Hospital. Mass was said at the Little Sisters of the Poor Home, Wednesday morning, and the body was brought to this city for interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Daly was a native of Tyrone, Ireland, where she was born in 1828. During her residence in Plainfield, she lived for many years on West Sixth street, but previous to entering the Elizabeth hospital, made her home with Mrs. Mary Mullin on North avenue. She was one of the oldest communicants of St. Mary's church, and very devout in the manifestation of her faith. Her only near surviving relatives are a niece and a nephew residing in Westfield.

REV. DR. K. P. KETCHAM.

The funeral of Rev. Dr. Kneeland Platt Ketcham, for twenty-one years pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in this city, and whose death occurred last Saturday at his summer home at Parry Sound, Georgian Bay, Canada, was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, of 202 West Eighth street. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, who succeeded Dr. Ketcham as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was the officiating clergyman. The gathering present was composed only of relatives and a very few intimate friends as the funeral was of a private nature. A quartet composed of Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Etta Raybert, William Holmes and William J. Tallamy sang two selections, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand." Interment was in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield.

Dr. Ketcham was in his eighty-second year, having been born at Babylon, L. I., on September 6, 1837. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1857, and from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1861. In 1961, in Ohio, he married Miss Emily A. Everett, a native of Long Island. She died in 1887, leaving one daughter, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, and another daughter, Ellen A. Ketcham, died in 1875.

His first pastorate was at Tuckerton, for two years, and the next one at Allentown, Pa., where he remained seven years. In 1871, he accepted a call to the First Presbyterian church of Plainfield, succeeding the Rev. Henry L. Tiller, who had served three years.

Leaving Plainfield, Dr. Ketcham was succeeded by the present pastor, the Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, in 1892. His next pastorate was at Freeport, L. I., 1894 to 1902. Then he went to Rockledge, Florida, and for two winters he preached there, then retired from active service. Since then he had spent his winters in Florida, and the summer in Canada.

MRS. THOMAS H. RICKETTS.

The funeral of Mrs. Corra H. Ricketts, wife of Thomas H. Rickettst, whose death occurred at her home at 121 Westervelt avenue, the borough, Saturday, was held at the family residence, Monday afternoon. The service was in charge of the Brethren and was attended by relatives and friends from this city and other places. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Walter W. Mooney, of Westfield; A. R. Stevens, Benjamin Fawcett, Charles Markham, F. Harding Lock and John Cathcart, of this city.

Mrs. Ricketts was the daughter of the late Jeremiah and Elizabeth Townsend and was born at Baltimore. She had been a resident of this city for the past fifteen years, coming here from Chatham. The family residence for a long time was at East Fifth and Washington streets. Beside her husband, Mrs. Ricketts is survived by three daughters and four sons. They are: Mrs. Jack Hallard, the Misses Louise and Adelaide Ricketts and Thomas Ricketts, of this city; Hugh Ricketts, of Brooklyn; Allan Ricketts, of Wyoming, and Jack Ricketts, now in service in France.

MILDRED IDA FRESCOLN.

Mildred Ida Frescoln, the four months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Frescoln, of Grove street, the borough, died Sunday. The funeral service was held at the family home Tuesday morning, in charge of Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First M. E. church, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

CHARLES ELLIOT.

Among the numerous victims of pneumonia in this vicinity during the past week was Charles Elliot, of Scotch Plains, who was almost as well-known in Plainfield as he was in his home town. His funeral was held Wednesday afternoon and the large gathering present included many from this city who had known him from boyhood up. Rev. A. E. Strickland, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which the young man had been a faithful member, was in charge and burial was in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Mr. Elliot was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin G. Elliot, of Scotch Plains, and was born in that village. After graduating from the township grammar school, he entered the Plainfield High School, from which he was graduated in the class of 1904. After that he studied civil engineering at Rutgers College, receiving his degree of C. E. in 1908. His first important position in his chosen profession was as assistant city engineer at Orange, holding this office for seven years. At the expiration of that time, he entered the employ of the New Jersey Central in the engineering department and was thus occupied when his fatal illness began. He was also serving in recent years as engineer for Fanwood township. Mr. Elliot was thoroughly versed in civil engineering and his death terminated an unusually bright and promising career.

The deceased had been prominent for many years in Junior O. U. A. M. circles through membership in Twilight Council, of Scotch Plains. He was a past councilor and had attended numerous State gatherings as representative. Beside his parents, he leaves one brother, Benjamin G. Elliot, Jr., and two sisters, Mrs. C. W. Slocum, of Fanwood, and Miss Edith Elliott, of Scotch Plains.

MISS RUTH RALSTON.

Miss Ruth Ralston, the twenty-three-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edward S. Ralston, of Leland avenue, this city, was killed in an automobile accident at Marlboro, Md., on the outskirts of Washington, last Thursday night. The funeral was held Tuesday at he family's former home in Piermont, N. Y., and in addition to relatives, friends from Plainfield were among those in attendance. Burial was at Piermont.

Miss Ralston had been working in Washington as a Government employe and had been living with her sister in that city. Accepting an invitation to attend a picnic, given by a number of army officers, she was returning home Thursday night in a machine driven by Captain H. P. Keeney of Washington. The latter failed to notice a sand pile in the roadway and the vehicle ran into it, became unmanageable and plunged into a tree. Miss Ralston received injuries which caused death soon after, but the other three occupants of the car escaped with their lives, although suffering severe hurts. Captain Keeney had a leg broken, Lieutenant Kerrigan, of Washington, was cut about the head and body, and Miss Irene Beverly sustained shock and bruises.

Miss Ralston came to Plainfield eight years ago, when her father accepted the pastorate of the Netherwood Reformed church. He secured a temporary leave of absence some time ago to engage in Y. M. C. A. secretarial work and has been located at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. The young woman was graduated from the Plainfield High School and also the Montclair Normal School. Previous to going to Washington, she had been employed as teacher in the Jefferson School, this city. Beside her parents, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Vernon Ball, of Washington, and a brother, Arthur Ralston, now with an ambulance corps in France.

STEPHEN J. MURPHY.

Stephen J. Murphy, a life long resident of this city, died Sunday, after an illness of several weeks at the home of his sister, Mrs. John Mara, of 219 Stebbins place. He was forty-four years old, and a machinist by trade. Previous to his last illness, he was employed at the Calco Chemical works in Bound Brook. Beside his sister, he is survived by two brothers and four children. The brothers are: William H. Murphy, of 704 West Front street, the well-known Jersey Central Railroad engineer, and John A. Murphy, of Jersey City. The children are: Mable, William, Helen and Majorie Murphy. Mr. Murphy's wife, who was Miss Mary Muldowney, a daughter of the late James Muldowney, of West Third street, died a number of years ago.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church Wednesday morning, Rev. Father Holsters offering the requiem mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The pall-bearers were: John A. Murphy, of Jersey City; William Murphy, Frank Brown, James McKeon, John Mara and Fred Murphy.

WILLIAM E. BENJAMIN.

William E. Benjamin, aged forty years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday, a victim of pneumonia, following an attack of Spanish influenza. He was a machinist by trade and had been employed for some time at the local plant of the Standard Aero Corporation. He leaves his widow, two daughters and one son.

The funeral was held at the family home at 113 New street, Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, of which the deceased was a member. Inuterment was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. MARY A. MILLS.

Mrs. Mary A. Mills, aged seventy-three years, died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Percy F. Dayton, of West End and Rockview avenues, the borough. She was an native of Morristown and lived in that city until she came to make her home with Mrs. Dayton. She had been in an invalid state most of the time since coming here. Beside Mrs. Dayton, her only near surviving relatives are two sons, both of whom reside in California.

The funeral was held at the West End avenue residence Tuesday afternoon and was in charge in Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery, Morristown.

MISS WINIFRED KELLY.

Following an illness of several weeks, Miss Winifred Kelly, of 512 West Fifth street, died Monday morning. She was born in this city and had always lived here, most of her life being passed in the home where she passed away. She was a woman of retiring disposition but nevertheless had a host of friends in the city and borough, who deplore her death. She was a faithful communicant of St. Mary's church and for many years had been an earnest and devoted worker in all the parish activities, especially as a member of the Rosary Society.

Miss Kelly is survived by five sisters and one brother, all of whom live in this city with one exception. The latter is Sister Eustice, a member of the Order of the Sisters of Charity. The others are: The Misses Agnes and Cecilia Kelly and John Kelly, living at the Fifth street home; Mrs. Andrew Hefferan, of Monroe avenue, and Mrs. John Watson, of West Fourth street.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church yesterday morning, when Rev. Father Bogan offered mass in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The contribution of floral tributes included numerous set pieces. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Those acting as pall-bearers were: Joseph Hefferan, Cornelius Guinee, George Madden and Thomas Kenny.

DENNIS KILBRIDE.

The funeral of Dennis F. Kilbride, so nof Mr. and Mrs. Anne Kilbride, of 658 West Fourth street, whose death occurred in Milwaukee on September 21, following an accident, was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. It was largely attended by relatives and friends, many of whom contributed floral pieces. Rev. Father Holsters offered the mass.

Burial wasi n St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Edward and Joseph McCue, Daniel and Peter Galbraith, Rufus LaRue and John McCoy.

Mr. Kilbride had been working in the Milwaukee shops of the C. M. and St. Paul Railroad for eight years. As he was leaving the yards after his usual day's work on the night of September 21, he accidentally fell backwards, striking his head on a sidewalk curbing and fractured his skull. He was removed to a hospital but never fully regained consciousness sufficiently to tell anything about his relatives. The fact that he had a mother living in West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., was gleaned from his ramblings by a nurse and through this slender thread the local police located the family after death came. John Kilbride, a brother of the deceased, went to Milwaukee on Thursday of last week and returned to Plainfield with the body of his brother, Sunday night. The authorities at the Milwaukee shops told John Kilbride that Dennis had been a faithful worker for all the years he had been in the company's employ but never was given to telling much about himself or his people.

MRS. ERNEST F. EVELAND.

Mrs. Ernest Eveland, of South Second street, whose brother-in-law, Charles Ludgate, was one of the first local victims of influenza, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night, of the same disease. At the time her demise occurred, her husband was also ill from the same cause but has since recovered. The brother-in-law, Mr. Ludgate, died on September 21 after only a few days' illness and the subsequent events in the family have aroused the deepest sympathy from all in this community.

The funeral of Mrs. Eveland was held Thursday afternoon in the chapel of Cole & High, at 200 West Second street, and was conducted by Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, where the deceased was a member. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Eveland was formerly Miss Bertha Hopler, of this city. She was twenty-three years old and beside her husband and one son, Ernest Eveland, Jr., leaves a brother, Russel Hopler, of West Second street, an engineer on the New Jersey Central.

MRS. ADDIE E. RUGG.

Relatives and friends in large numbers attended the funeral yesterday of Mrs. Addie E. Rugg, who died Monday afternoon from the result of a fall at her home which resulted in a fracture of her skull. The service was held at the late residence, 75 Mercer avenue, the borough, and was in charge of Rev. Berryman H. McCoy, pastor of the First Methodist church, while two other pastors assisted. They were Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, formerly of this city, but now of Passaic, and Rev. Dr. Ruth, of Paterson.

A large delegation from Lydia Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, of which Mrs. Rugg was an active member, was included in the gathering present; there were also representatives from the Kings' Daughters, to which organization she had devoted much of her time. The flowers contributed as evidence of the sympathy felt were both numerous and beautiful. The set pieces numbered an emblematic pillow from Lydia Chapter. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Rugg was alone at her home on Monday and evidently went to the back porch for something. The belief exists that she suffered an attack of apoplexy and fell, striking her head on a step. She remained there unconscious for a number of hours, her plight finally being discovered by her daughter, Mrs. Fred Van Hoesen, of Westervelt avenue. Mrs Van Hoesen had previously tried to get her mother on the telephone but without success and fearing that something might be wrong, hurried to the house for investigation. Assistance was procured to get the injured woman to bed and Dr. Adams was called but nothing could be done to save her life.

Mrs. Rugg was seventy years old and was the widow of Calvin H. Rugg, who died a short time ago. She was born at Whitehouse, and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ruliff J. Swackhamer, whose home was at Dunellen for many years. Mrs. Rugg's husband was engaged in the coal business in Plainfield for a long time and was also prominent in local Masonic circles. Mrs. Rugg had a very wide acquaintance, and her tragic death is deeply deplored by everyone.

Surviving the deceased beside her daughter, Mrs. Van Hoesen, are three sisters, Mrs. Wilson S. Frederick and Mrs. Clarence Oakley, of Dunellen, and Mrs. John Wehrley, of New York; also two brothers, Harry Swackhamer, of Dunellen, and John Swackhamer, of Easton, Pa.

MRS. JOHN ALBERT.

Mrs. John Albert, of Scotch Plains, whose brother, Francis Ernest Wahl, of this city, succumbed to pneumonia on September 24, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday noon from the same malady. It is the belief that she and her sister, Miss Annie Wahl, contracted the disease from the brother as he was cared for at their home after he was first taken itt. Miss Wahl is now at Muhlenberg Hospital, and her condition is quite bad.

The funeral of Mrs. Albert will take place in St. Mary's church, this city, at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, when a solemn high mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of her soul. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

The deceased was born at Stony Hill and had either lived there or in Scotch Plains all of her life of thirty-three years. Beside her husband, she leaves her father, George Wahl, of this city, three brothers and one sister. They are: Anthony Lewis and George Wahl, Jr., and Miss Annie Wahl.

MILTON KNAPP.

The funeral of Milton Knapp, an aged and highly respected resident of North Plainfield, who died Tuesday night, following an attack of apoplexy, will be held at the late home, at 67 Mercer avenue, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. H. St. George Burrill, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, will officiate and burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Knapp, who was born in New York in 1839, came to this city from Brooklyn in 1876, but after residing here for four years, returned to Brooklyn. Later he removed to Bound Brook and then again established his residence in North Plainfield in 1910. He was a member of the New York Produce Exchange and operated grain elevators in the metropolitan district. He was on his way to the north avenue station to take his customary train to the city, Tuesday morning, when the apoplectic stroke came upon him. He was walking alone at the time and with the help of Rev. Mr. Burrill, who came upon him, a few minutes later, he was able to get back to the house. Every attempt was made to stay the progress of the attack, but without success. His death was the second to occur suddenly in the same neighborhood as Mrs. C. H. Rugg, who died Tuesday from the effects of a fall in at 75 Mercer avenue, a stone's throw from his home.

Mr. Knapp is survived by his widow, one daughter, Miss Gertrude Knapp, of the borough, and a grandson, Walter Knapp, of New York.

Garfield Denies Limiting Coal Until Nov. 1st

Fuel Administrator Garfield yesterday repudiated the alleged circular of the National Retail Coal Merchant Association, asking coal consumers in New York to refrain from using coal until November 1.

In response to complaints that persons suffering from Spanish influenza in New York city were endangered by the lack of heat, Garfield declared no coal conservation request should be complied with if "unreasonable or if it would result in sickness or injury to health."

"Neither the United States Fuel Administration nor the Federal Fuel Administrator for New York has issued any order that coal be not used for domestic heating before November 1," said Garfield.

"It is recognized that during the coming winter every reasonable effort to conserve fuel must be made if the available supply is to meet the necessary needs. While the fuel administration strongly urges conservation, and beseech the co-operation of the public, it does not insist upon unreasonable requirements or that its request for conservation need not be complied with if compliance would be unreasonable or would result in illness and injury to health."

It was said that a number of patients in New York apartment-houses were in grave danger because of the insufficient heating in last week's spell of cold weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bellman, of West Third street, left Tuesday for Elyria, Ohio, where Mr. Bellman has secured an excellent position with a manufacturing company.

County Democrats Adjourned Politics During Loan Drive

Politics is "adjourned" by the Union County Democratic Committee until the end of the Liberty Loan drive. This was unanimously decided at the rousing organization meeting held Saturday night at Democratic headquarters in Elizabeth, when all the officers were re-elected without a dissenting vote. The organization at once placed itself on record as being opposed to any campaigning while the bond campaign is on and will not take up the political battle unless candidates or workers of the Republican party do so. This was made plain in a statement by Walter I. Taverner, of Westfield, the re-elected chairman.

"Our prime consideration is for the success of the Liberty Loan," said Chairman Taverner. "This is what is nearest the hearts of all Americans and we would and will suspend the political campaign in order to help the boys a few miles more along the road to Berlin." The speech was applauded and received the hearty indorsement of all present.

Not only will the candidates work in behalf of the loan, but the committee's members also will do their utmost to make a record for Union Democracy.

There will be no meeting of the organization during the campaign, and each Democrat will do his best to back up President Wilson during that period.

The committee indorsed the candidates recently nominated and will, once the bond drive is ended, work for their election. Those indorsed were: Richard E. Clement, Congressional candidate; Charles P. Senger, Stanley McIntosh and John F. X. Casserly, Assembly nominees; James J. McCann, nominee for registrar. All were present except Mr. Clement, and made short speeches, promising to cooperate with the leaders of the party at all times. Mr. McIntosh, who has just recovered from illness, spoke breifly.

Frederick Carroll, councilman from the Sixth ward, Elizabeth, was chosen temporary chairman. James E. Lowden named Mr. Taverner to succeed himself, declaring that he had more than merited re-election by his untiring labors for the party during the few months he held the office. The chairman had shown splendid qualities of leadership, Mr. Lowden declared, and was bound to become an influential factor in the affairs of the party in New Jersey. Others spoke along similar lines.

In accepting the nomination Mr. Taverner declared that it was his purpose at all times to work faithfully for the party's interests and to promote harmony within the ranks. He would continue to do all possible to advance the party in Union county and would always be willing to pull with a Democrat when that Democrat is for the Democratic party.

Mr. Taverner then declared that the committee should at once constitute itself into a Liberty Loan committee and the candidates should immediately join in the campaign to help put the Liberty Loan "over the top" in their resnective communities. In some places, he said, Democrats were not largely represented on committees, such as in Westfield, where the Republicans dominate it, and it behooved the Democrats, therefore, to back up President Wilson, their leader, by putting forth every effort to make the loan campaign a success.

Frank J. Pfaff, of Elizabeth, again was chosen vice chairman. He promised to work zealously for the party interests and thanked his fellow Democrats for again honoring him. Fred Zior, long secretary of the organization, was renamed for that post and Anthony Sattler for treasurer. John J. Wilson, of Elizabeth, was chosen sergeant at arms.

Yankee Artillery Shows Superiority Over German Guns

American artillery has demonstrated an overwhelming superiority to that of the Germans. To that reason, added to the natural interpidity of the American Doughboys, is due the great success of the present drive in the Argonne region. The latest reports received at Washington, this week, tell of American occupancy of towns and villages heretofore considered as German strongholds. Major General Hunter Liggett's corps, supported by those of two other corps of the first field army, have simply swept through the German line like a knife through cheese. They have advanced more than eight miles along the twenty-mile front and have greatly endangered very important lines of communication.

Officials at the War Department expressed great satisfaction over the outlook. They pointed out that not only have all records for rapid advances been brown, but that the number of prisoners and war materials that have been captured is very large.

This, too, in the face that the German high command, anticipating an attack at this present point, had concentrated their picked shock troops, who were aided in their defense efforts by the difficult character of the terrain over which the Americans were compelled to advance. But no obstacles were sufficient to stop the American troops.

With their artillery laying down what is described in advices reaching Washington as almost perfect drum barrage, they swarmed over the hills and valleys lying in their path. The advance was perfect. The tanks supported the infantry and officials say that the entire story of the present fighting, when complete, will show one of he best day's work in the present war.

One of the great results of the present operation, army officers say, is that it brings nearer the ultimate withdrawal of the Germans. Foch and Pershing are driving along, following out a definitely planned program.

Registrants Cannot Make Appeal for Physical Retest

Under a new ruling by Provost Marshal General Crowder announced Tuesday registrants no longer have th eright of applying for re-examination to the medical advisory boards after being passed by the local board physician. Notice of the ruling has been received with other instructions by the local board. It is believed to be the outcome of experiences of medical advisory boards, whose members found their waiting lists clogged each week with large numbers of men whose re-examination fully justified the decision of the local board examiner.

According to the new regulations, re-examination of a registrant by a medical advisory board may be obtained only upon the initiative of the local board. When its members are not unanimous in agreement with their medical members, as to the physical fitness or unfitness of a registrant for military service, the recourse to the medical advisory board is permitted. Upon the medical report of the advisory board the local board will make its decision.

As has been the custom since army cantonments were established, each registrant will be subjected to an entrance examination upon his arrival at camp. He must pass this examination for general or limited military duty before he will be inducted into service.

General Crowder also instructed local boards throughout the country to call their new registrants for physical examination as soon as they have been placed in Class I by their boards. The fact that a registrant may have appealed to the district board for reclassification will not interfere with the physical examination. Only in the case of a registrant who has pending a claim for deferred classification on industrial grounds will the examination be postponed, according to the instructions from Washington.

Those found physically fit will be inducted into actual service according to their order numbers, as determined by the drawing held at Washington. The exceptions to this course will be in individual cases where local boards receive orders for the voluntary induction of certain registrants at the request of the army, navy or marine corps.

Bank Commissioner Smith Urges Loan Companies to Purchase Liberty Bonds

Building and loan associations of the State have been appealed to in behalf of the fourth Liberty Loan. Frank H. Smith, of this city, State Banking Commissioner, has addressed the following letter to the loan societies:

"The fourth Liberty Loan drive is now under way, and I am assuming that directors and shareholders of all building and loan associations are desirous of subscribing, and thereby helping the Government finance the war.

"I therefore urge that every association in the State make liberal subscription for this issue out of surplus moneys on hand not required for other purposes, as provided for in the building-loan act, or if they are without surplus funds, that they take advantage of the authority given in subdivision VI of section 24 of the building-loan act by creating a fund for the payment of maturing shares and invest that fund in Liberty Bonds of the fourth issue.

"This is the time to show your Americanism; put patriotism above profits."

KAHN TO CONTINUE FIGHT ON WINES.

A fight will be waged against any further attempt to continue the importation of foreign wines into this country, Representative Kahn, Republican, of California, declared this week, unless the ban placed upon domestic wines by the bone-dry amendment to the food stimulation bill adopted by the Senate and the House is also lifted.

Kahn, who led the unsuccessful battle on the floor of the House last week, against the whole proposition to make the United States bone dry on July 1, 1919, stated that he could see no justification for allowing the importation of foreign wines to be continued until May 1, 1919, as requested by France, Italy, Spain and Portugal, if the California wine industry, in which between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 are invested, is to be stopped before that date.

"Either extend the time within which the native product can be disposed of and sold or do not permit the product of foreign countries to come here and destroy the home markets of the native producer," Kahn said.

DESERVED COMMENDATION FOR THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Plainfield's Board of Health deserves the highest commendation for the prompt manner in which it has taken hold of the influenza epidemic. It is not to be denied that the malady has gotten a foothold locally but the Health Board was quick to act and checked it almost before it got started. While other Boards throughout the State were discussing the advisability of closing theatres, dance halls and other places where people gathered in large numbers, the Plainfield organization gave the order which put an end to gatherings of this kind. It was a wise move and although a heavy financial loss to the theatre manager, the latter have been among the first to applaud the initiative of the men entrusted with the task of safeguarding our health.

The Board also gave out valuable hints for the prevention of influenza and simple remedies to be adopted when it was noticed in its first stages. All have been of value to the public and its appreciation was quickly forthcoming. This city, while the number of cases is admittedly large, has not been hit as hard as other towns where the authorities were slow in getting a campaign under way. Time is always a valuable asset and the individual organization, "getting busy" without a momen's hesitation, are the ones who always come out the best in the end.

How long the epidemic will continue is almost impossible to predict. It depends entirely upon the attitude of the people themselves. Should they take proper precautions and do everything possible to prevent any further spread, it is not unreasonable to figure that every case will be stamped out at the end of six weeks. This is the belief of Dr. Frank C. Ard, a member of the Board of Health, and who, as a general practitioner in 1890, had the opportunity of making a study of the original big grip epidemic of that year. On the first page of today's Record, Dr. Ard recites the symptoms of influenza and the best way of alleviating its effect. They should be read by every person able to read and if followed out will be a big factor in lessening the malady that has caused numerous deaths in this locality since September 18, when it was first noted here and which now has more than 100 persons in its grip in the city and borough.

The Board of Health, which acted so promptly at the beginning, is still doing its utmost to hasten the end of the epidemic here and with the full support of the community, their efforts will meet with early success. It may seem hard to have all forms of public amusement taken away and the barring of even Liberty Loan demonstrations, but in the end, it is all for the common good. As soon as prudence dictates the theatres, dance halls and other places of diversion will be reopened, but in the meantime the citizens must be patient and solace themselves with the thought that had it not been for the Health Board's promptness, many other families would be suffering the heartaches that have come to half a dozen or more homes.

THE TROLLEY FARE INCREASE.

The Public Utility Commission's decision permitting the Public Service Corporation to charge an extra two cents on all regulation five-cent fares after October 15, with an additional one cent for each transfer has not been received kindly by the Plainfield public. It was generally expected that the traction company would get some sort of a raise, especially after the War Board ordered better wages for the platform men, but a forty per cent. increase on every fare and sixty per cent. on those with transfers, was beyond comprehension. That there will be an appeal is apparent beyond any shadow of doubt and furthermore, the League of New Jersey Municipalities, which has been conducting a fight, will take the coporation to task on other important points.

One of these, as pointed out in the Record early in the increased fare campaign, is the inconsistency of the Utilities Commission or the Public Service in breaking franchise contracts on one side only. When Plainfield gave the original railway company the right to lay tracks in its streets, the old concern bound itself for a period of years to charge only a certain fare. It was a hard and fast agreement, that is so far as the people believed at the time and if there had been any attempt on the part of the citizens to violate the franchise, the Public Service would have opposed the action strenuously. Now, through its skilled counsel, paid hirelings and political juggling, the Public Service has succeeded in making the citizens pay for its temporarily bad bargain. By the same right and rule, if it is proper to help the traction magnets out of their difficulties, the city should contribute money to any one else with whom it has entered into a contract and who, because of the war, is losing money. The Public Service has always contended that contracts are contracts and once a municipality enters into one with it, there is not breaking one way or the other. This was evidenced in many places when cities attempted to oust the company from certain streets. The municipalities lost out in every instance because the corporation was clever enough to harp on nothing else but the "signed, sealed and delivered" bargain entered into. Now, when the shoe is on the other foot, it is a different proposition, yet the Public Service has gotten the best of the argument.

Another point which Plainfield and its associate communities have not overlooked is the discrepancy between the percentage of the raise in fares and the raise in employes' wages. With the transfer penny, the company will be getting sixty per cent. more than formerly, the motormen and conductors, however, only twenty-five per cent. more than the old scale of wages. The five-year men were formerly given thirty-six cents an hour and the much talked of increase in pay was only nine cents an hour. It is easy to see that while telling the public the raise infare is made necessary almost mainly because of higher wages, the Public Service is getting away with thirty-five per cent. to the good in many of its fares and fifteen per cent., at least, in all of them.

In an excellent editorial, which defended the peoples' rights in a matter, the Elizabeth Evening Times said among other things:

"That the increased fare will be paid without grumbling is not to be expected, and there is likelihood that an appeal from the decision will be taken to the courts just as was the case in the transfer charge case. Yet there will by no means be as much grumbling as would have been the case if failure to grant an increased fare had further restricted a trolley service that is already inadequate to meet the wants of fthe communities served by the Public Service. If, as the Commission argues, the Public Service will be securing out of the increase only a fair and reasonable return under abnormal conditions, then no injustice has been done the public.

"The new order is not the end of the present proceedings. The change authorized in rates is an emergency one, and when that emergency has passed the Public Service Utilities Commission must take up the matter again and readjust rates. In doing so, it must return to normal proceedings, which would indicate a thorough investigation of the Public Service Railway Company's capital investment, and all the ramifications of its leases and its relations with subsidiary and affiliated corporations."

DON'T PUT OFF BUYING THOSE BONDS.

In mapping out a plan to secure its quota of $3,500,000, the Plainfield Liberty Loan committee decided that at least a million dollars a week should be subscribed. The first six days of the campaign have slipped to the rear and at last accounts the number of bonds taken was far below what was calculated. Only today and tomorrow remain for the first one-third of the allotment to be made up if Plainfield is to go over the top at the final account.

Never before in any of the three preceding loan drives has the Plainfield territory been so carefully mapped out as it is for this, the biggest of the four loans. Every manufacturer has already been canvassed, the schools are lined up, the churches, the physicians, the city officials, the banks and building and loan associations, the business men—the insurance companies are giving the time of their corps of trained canvassers who will visit every home in the city in the interest of the loan. The Boy Scouts, the militia and home guard units—the fraternal societies, the labor organizations—not an organization has been left out in the calculations of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee.

The fact that about $400,000 is now in hand is evidence that good work is being done but the amount of labor expended in canvassing should have rolled up a figure twice as big. The inspiration given by the parade of last Saturday, one of the most stirring processions ever seen in the city, should have been sufficient to bring the million dollars to the committee long before this and it is probable that the deficiency is due only to that American trait of procrastination. You intend to buy some time, so why not do it now, right away, this very minute. Don't duck or dodge the canvasser. He or she who comes to your home is giving up valuable time for the cause of your country and yourself and you only make it harder by waiting until the last minute before coming across.

In the last loan Plainfield's quota was over-subscribed long before the campaign came to a close. We can beat even this record, if you and all the members of your household get yourselves on the subscription list immediately. With that Fourth Liberty Loan badge on your coat you can look everyone in the eye and say, "I've done my share. How about you?"

HELPING OUT BY SAVING PAPER.

There is a shortage of paper for all uses in the country. It is worrying those who are users and who are not able to substitute for paper.

The use of paper for needed purposes is not unpatriotic. The Government, in fact, has classed paper as an essential product. The Government, however, urges strongly that all who use the product shall be very careful not to waste it.

A tremendous quantity of paper in different forms is wasted daily in this country. By exercising just a little thoughtfuless and care, each individual doing his part, the use of a vast bulk of paper may be unnecessary.

Merchants of all kinds may be saved the necessity of using such large quantities of wrapping paper if their patrons will form the habit of taking market baskets with them when they go shopping. In some cities it is required. It is sheer waste, for instance, to wrap package goods. It is sheer waste to compel the merchant to wrap any small article that will not be injured in carrying if not wrapped.

The War Industries Board has declared that paper must be saved. The production is only 50 per cent. of the requirements of the War Industries. Use of some grades of paper must be discontinued in order that paper making machines may manufacture the grades required for use in moving food and clothing to France.

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"

"I am going to sneeze, kind sir," she said;

"At who, at who, my pretty maid?"

"Achew, achew," was all she said."

The guy who used to say he never took nothing for a cold," now heads the procession to the drug stores.

It seems a darned shame to blame that "Henflew-endways" epidemic on Spain. She has tried hard to be neutral ever since the war started.

That series of bangs every morning between 7 and 8 o'clock is made by fresh air cranks closing their windows before beginning their deep breathing exercises.

The German Government is trying to keep up the morale of the sailors, who are idle, and the soldiers who are—well, not exactly idle. And in addition, it is endeavoring to pacify the people and conduct a retreat and a peace offensive. Some job, Heinie, some job.

We have only one suggestion to make to the taxpayers who are kicking about the condition of West Front street and the climbing price of the City Hall. Buy Liberty Bonds and end the war.

It 's a mighty good thing that cooler heads prevailed last Saturday and at the last moment the route of the Liberty Loan parade was changed so the Front street merchants, who spent many hundreds of dollars for decorations, could be let in on the demonstration. Any time the French army visitors had been hauled across that stretch of "No Man's Land" between the Y. M. C. A. building and Jackson avenue, they would undoubtedly have gotten the impression that a German truck was being worked upon them and they were being decoyd back to the firing line. It was a mistake, a bad mistake, the way the line of march was first laid out, and the man who rectified it in time is deserving the cross of war, and the guy who forgot the town had a business section should get an iron cross—the head—and never permitted to mix in on another parade. Give him a chance again and just as like as not he is apt to insist that the procession look in on Bank place.

If it isn't one thing it's another. Just as the willow chairs are weathered sufficient to be left on the porch all night, the potted plants must be lugged in.

Well, the poor Public Szakus got its sixty per cent. raise after all, didn't it? By-and-by, you people who keep up its dividends, will realize that it is always about a year ahead of the general public in its plans.

There is still one way we can get back at the company and its grip spreading cars. Why not have a trolleyless Sunday? The automobiles will be running soon and any fellow owning one will give you a lift if you find you can't walk to church. Any way, it's worth the try for satisfaction's sake.

What's the use of crying over that $500 the city contributed toward the fight against the fare raise? As long as it was lying around loose, it might have been spent on the Nott or melted away for some more City Hall front yard trees.

Speaking of the Nott reminds us that it got to its right place when it took part in the procession last Saturday. They always stop in a walking parade any way and the old machine was right at home. Tuesday she came out for a little test and managed to throw a stream of water over the High School without any interruption but the exertion was too much in the end. She stopped at Ninth street and Park avenue to get her breathe on the way home.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When twenty-five foot front stores could be rented on Front street, near Park avenue, for twenty dollars a month?

When the standard home remedy for grip, influenza and pneumonia was mustard draughts on the chest or feet?

When city and county officials should conduct the affairs of their office without the aid of a high-priced automobile?

When father brought home from the Philadelphia Centennial, the souvenir that is still gathering dust in the front parlor?

When you wouldn't go in swimming unless you had an eel-skin tied around your ankle as a preventative of cramps and sprinkled your knees to ward off blood-suckers?

How to Send Xmas Gifts to American Prisoners of War

Regulations for forwarding parcels to American prisoners of war in Germany and Austrian prison camps by families of prisoners who desire to arrange for the shipment of gifts that will arrive by Christmas were announced this week by the local Red Cross. Packages must not weigh more than eleven pounds and may be sent addressed to the prisoner at the camp where he is confined as follows:

(Private) John Smith (1st Infantry),
American Prisoner of War,
Kriegsgefangenenlager,
(Name of Camp) (Name of Province),
Germany (or Austria).

This parcel shuld have an outer wrapping addressed as follows:

Warehouse,
Atlantic Division, American Red Cross,
20 Fifteenth street, New York City, N. Y.

In the upper left-hand corner "Christmas Package for American Prisoner of War from" (give name and address in full of sender) must appear. Upon receipt in New York packages will be forwarded, free of charge to the sender, to the American Red Cross Commissioner at Berne, Switzerland, and from there distributed to the prisoners.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that onl yone package may be sent to each prisoner, and preference will be given to packages sent by the family of the prisoner. Others desiring to send packages should first consult the family. As postal regulations permit the sending of but one package a month, the families taking advantage of this offer will necessarily omit any package which they intended sending in the month of December, but, of course, are not restricted from sending a package any other month. It will also be permitted to inclose a simple card of Christmas greeting or a message such as "We are all well at home."

Standard's Aviation Field Nearly Ready

After several months of work contrastors have nearly completed the enlarging of the aviation field on South Broad street, adjoining the Standard Aircraft Corporation's plant, Elizabeth. It is now one of the largest in the country, measuring a mile across, and is adaptable for the testing of the biggest machines built.

The erecting of twenty barrack buildings to shelter the Signal Corps men who are to be stationed at the plant has also been practically finished and the detachment of men is expected to arrive soon. When the field is ready for use and the men arrive all the planes manufactured at he Standard plant will be tested there.

State Sugar Quota Is Twelve Million Pounds

The October sugar allotment for New Jersey is to be 12,000,000 pounds, according to a statement issued by the State Food Administration. Grocers and retailers are to be allowed but 50 per cent. of the quantity sold by them last October while manufacturers are asked to cut consumption to 50 per cent. of the amount used last year at this time. Sugar refiners have estimated that the saving in this State has amounted from 50 to 60 per cent. of the usual consumption, while the Food Administration figures that at least 10,000,000 pounds have been used in preserving this season. 7,000,000 pounds of which are already accounted for.

A further saving of sugar is expected when the new order to discontinue supplies of the powdered and confectionery forms to retailers after October 10, goes into effect.

JOHN O'BRIEN

John P. O'Brien, aged thirty-six years, died yesterday at the home of his father-in-law, William Moore, of 910 West Fifth street. He was a victi mof pneumonia. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning.

Red Cross Sweaters At Dix Accounted As U. S. Property

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

On account of the misunderstanding existing in some of the camps as to the disposition of knitted goods supplied by the Red Cross, in that the men are being instructed to send surplus articles to their homes before embarking for overseas, attention has again been called by camp headquarters to the orders in force at Camp Dix. These orders instruct unit commanders to cause an inventory to be taken at once of all articles of wearing apparel issued by the Red Cross or other charitable organizations and to require unit supply officers to account for these articles if they were government property regularly supplied by the quarmaster corps.

Further instructions state that in the future further donations of this character are to be distributed through the department or division quartermaster, who will obtain from the Red Cross, for the authorized agent of the society making the donation, a list of the articles he has for distribution and distribute them to the organization in accordance with actual needs. The safe care as given government goods must be exercised in their use and preservation and they are to be turned in to the quartermaster for renovation at the end of the season or when no longer required.

For showing his utter dislike for washing dishes by refusing to obey his officer's order to perform that task, Private Pioter Pilipnok, of Jersey City, a member of Company 29, Fifth Battalion, has been convicted by a court martial and sentenced to ten years at Fort Jay, Governors Island, and then to be dishonorably discharged from the service. Major General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, has approved the sentence.

In an effort to prevent a further spread of influenza, an order has been issued from headquarters at Camp Dix forbidding the sale of pie, cake, ice cream, soft drinks and milk in the various canteens, as it is believed that perhaps the contagion spread through the men gathering in these places. Another theory is offered that some of the goods sold the men might have contained some substance that was harmful. Candy, already in packages, can be sold, as can oranges and bananas.

Amusing incidents have grown out of the quarantine at Camp Dix, despite the serious aspect of the situation. Only a certain number of men are allowed in the various Knights of Columbus and "Y" huts, and Monday evening this worked to great disadvantage for Secretary Frank Wandle, of the Knights. When his hall was filled a guard was posted on the various doors with orders to admit no one. Wandle was away at the time and when he attempted to get into his own building the sentry would not let him in, saying that his orders were to admit no one. The consequence was that Wandle lost a good many precious minutes trying to find the corporal of the guard.

Men May Train for Naval Work

The Student Army Training Corps, which consists of over 400 colleges and vocational schools in all parts of the United States, organized under Federal supervision for the purpose of training officers, mechanics and engineers for the army, has now been extended so that it will do the same work for the navy.

This great Government educational enterprise, although it began its work October first, is still widely misunderstood. It offers an opportunity to every registered man who has an eighth grade education or better. Those having a high school education may enter colleges where they will be trained as officers and technical men, if their aptitudes are sufficient to justify such training. Those having only a grammar school education may enter vocational units of the corps, to be trained as mechanics and other skilled workers.

The detailed working of the plan cannot be explained in this article, but it is essentially a competitive one—a sorting of the human material available for the new draft army, so that each man may be developed to his highest usefulness. The students in each unit will be under close observation; careful records will be kept of their work; and they will be used according to their value. Thus a man in a collegiate section who shows marked ability along engineering lines may be kept in college as long as two years for special training, while a man who shows no special aptitude along any line, and is not considered to be officer material, may be sent to a cantonment for training as a private.

This same system has now been extended so that it will supply the navy as well as the army with officers, engineers and skilled workmen. The organization is therefore now properly the Student Army and Navy Training Corps.

Naturally the navy does not need nearly as many men of any sort as does the army, so naval units of the training corps have been established only at some of the colleges and schools. So far, there are nearly a hundred naval training units, distributed through thirty-eight States.

Draft registrants who wish to enter the navy rather than the army should go at once to these institutions and apply for admission to the naval representative there. These applications will be considered in the order in which they are made. Each applicant will be examined as to his physical and educational requirements. Those who qualify will be inducted into the naval unit of the training corps.

This does not mean that the opportunity to enter one of these naval training units ended on October first. The courses in both army and navy units will be broken up into three-month periods. At the end of three months, therefore, some men will be sent to naval training stations, some assigned to sea duty, while probably a relatively small number will be retained for further training. The ending of each three month period, beginning October first, will therefore afford an opportunity for new recruits to enter the training corps units.

The member of a naval training unit will be rated as an apprentice seamon, just as the army student is rated as a private, and will likewise be placed on active duty pay, and under naval discipline. The only difference in status between the naval student and the army student is that the former is allowed a certain amount for subsistence (not more than $2.00 a day) while the army will supply its student with room and board.

Members of the naval section of the training corps, like those of the army section, will be assigned to duty according to the ability shown by each individual. A man may be assigned to a Naval Training Station for training as a deck officer, an engineer, a paymaster, an aviation officer, or a signal officer; or he may be sent to a petty officers' school for training as a petty officer; or he may be assigned to "general sea duty," just as a private.

Perhaps the greatest demand in both the army and navy sections will be for men who are engineer-officer material. For the man who has either education or aptitude or both along engineering lines, the training corps offers a special opportunity to enroll as many engineer students as possible.

Another large demand will be for aviation-officer material. To qualify for this branch of the service a man must be not less than twenty years of age, except in rare cases, must weigh between 135 and 165 pounds, and must be practically perfect physically.

The instructions issued by the Navy Department in regard to its training units emphasize the competitive character of the training offered. A man entering one of these units (and the same is true of the army units) is not promised anything except instruction and a fair chance to win whatever position he is best fitted for. Thus in the case of naval units, the best men only will be selected and sent to naval training stations. But at these training stations they again come into competition for commissions with other reservists.

The men from the college units will have the advantage of college training, but that is all. Only the most competent will be sent from the naval training stations to the Officers' Material Schools and Petty Officer Trade Schools.

According to present plans, which are somewhat tentative, the naval units will offer a course for engineering students consisting of eight three-month periods, and covering the same ground as an ordinary four-year engineer course.

Thus a freshman who is this fall inducted into a naval training unit as an engineering student, will, provided his work is satisfactory, be retained in college for two years. He will then be allowed to take a competitive examination for entrance into a naval engineering school, and if he passes this, will be trained for a commission. A man who is now a sophomore in an engineering course at a college, and is accepted as a member of the naval unit, will be expected to complete his course in eighteen months; a junior in twelve months; and a senior in six months.

Plans for other courses have not yet been completed.

Busy Session For October Grand Jury

Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen at the opening of the October term of the county courts Tuesday directed that a resolution presented on behalf of the Union County Bar Association eulogizing the life of the late Judge Patrick H. Gilhooly be spread upon the minutes of the Circuit Court. Charging the members of the Grand Jury before they commenced their duties, he asked that they make a thorough investigation of the clues surrounding the murder of Arthur L. Kupfer and Miss Edith Janny at Rahway on August 22. He also brought several other murder cases and one manslaughter case to their attention and dismissed the excise and liquor situation.

The resolutions extolling the life of Judge Gilhooly, who died on July 27, were offered by former Judge Clark McK. Whittemore, acting on behalf of the Bar Association. In them was set forth the career of the deceased, how he started in life under discouraging circumstances and had risen to a position of trust and honor.

Justice Bergen was visibly touched by Mr. Whittemore's remarks and in a brief address told of Judge Gilhooly commencing the study of law in the office of Gaston & Bergen, in Somerville, in which firm he was a partner. Samuel Koestler, one of the twenty-one attorneys who studied with Judge Gilhooly, also spoke briefly in praise of the late jurist.

In charging the members of the grand jury, Justice Bergen mentioned first the murder of the Perth Amboy couple on East Milton avenue, Rahway, early on the morning of August 22. He said that so far as he knew there had been nothing disclosed of a nature to warrant the arrest of any persons on suspicion of having committed the crime, but intimated that it was highly possible that Prosecutor Hetfield might submit evidence which would warrant the jury in returning an indictment.

He also referred to the killing of Joseph Martillo by a fellow employe at the American Can Company's works when the two were in Summit last August. The death of John O'Neil during a fight with Charles Hamler at Springfield on August 21 was another case referred to the jury. Justice Bergen admitted Hamler to bail several weeks ago on a manslaughter charge.

The members of the jury were directed by the court to be especially careful in the handling of automobile cases. One case he referred to was the death of fifteen-year-old Victor Bracatti on South avenue, this city, on August 18, when an automobile struck him.

In concluding his charge to the jury Justice Bergen asked that careful attention be given to excise and liquor violations. As long as the laws governing those things are in effect, he said, they must be fully observed.

George Matthews, of 310 Trinity place, Elizabeth, was sworn in as foreman of the jury. He is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad and is a former member of the Elizabeth Board of Education. Justice Bergen appointed Deputy Sheriffs George Fischer and Frederick Teipel to attend the jurymen.

BECOME A LIBERTY BOND SALESMAN.

A wonderful chance is now offered
To every man, woman and child,
To do your bit for your Uncle Sam;
The work it is easy and mild.

To become a government salesman
On this, our Fourth Liberty Loan;
To gather in all of the dollars,
And to canvass from home to home.

The work it is genial and easy,
And each dollar it brings a smile;
It will also help can the Kaiser;
From Berlin cut many a mile.

Our boys, they are anxious to get there—
They need your assistance and aid.
So come forth freely with your dollars;
Show them of what stuff you are made.

Help build the bridge across the ocean
With ships of thousands of tons,
To prove we're a wonderful Nation.
We're all ready to fight the Huns.

That we'll sacrifice every dollar
For our noble land of the free;
That we'll back our boys who are fighting
For the land of sweet liberty.

Captain Pares, of the French Army Band, Deeply Regrets That He Is Not an Elk

Captain Gabriel Pares, in command of the French Army Band, which featured last Saturday's Liberty Loan parade, is very, very sorry, indeed, that he is not an Elk. With a mournful shake of his head, which, Frenchman like, expressed him inmost feeling, he made this assertion to John Oswald, a member of Plainfield Lodge, who served as one of the interpreters last Saturday night, when the warriors from "Over There" were given the greatest reception of their present American tour.

Captain Pares and his men were the guests of Plainfield Lodge in the spacious clubhouse following the concert in the City Park. The Captain, as did all the others, noticed how everybody was "doing his bit" to make the affair a success. The waitters, for instance, were all business men who volunteered for the occasion. They worked like beavers, seeing that everyone of the diners, numbering nearly 100 in all, because of the addition of the Loan Committee and special guests, were given service just as good as found in a Broadway lobster palace, or in a Paris cafe. Station in life meant nothing to them, the Captain was told, because they were all brothers and all interested in one cause.

Beautiful floral decorations were all over the main floor of the building and dining place and when Captain Pares asked where they came from he was told they were donated and arranged by Charles L. Stanley, of Plainfield.

"Is he an Elk?" asked he Captain. Mr. Oswald answered that he was.

The exterior and interior of the big clubhouse was also decorated with flags and bunting, the allied colors being intermingled in pleasing and original designs. The Captain asked where these decorations came from, and who was the expert who had done the arranging? He was told that it was August Laggren, also of Plainfield.

"Is he an Elk?" the Captain once more interrogated.

"He certainly is," replied the interpreter, "and so is Henry Kline, the artist who painted 'Bien Venue,' 'Vive La France' and all the other welcoming signs displayed about the room."

"Gracious me," exclaimed the veteran of many fights, from the first battle of the Marne to recent big contests on the French front, "it seems to me that every man who can do something is an Elk and every man who forgets what he is to help somebody else is an Elk. My country has none of these things you call Elks but when the big war is over, and our people go back to their old way of living, I hope we can fix it so we have Elks. Maybe I shall try to be one in this country and then I, myself, can establish what you call these lodges in all the big cities. Then, when you fellows come to our dear France, we can have somebody to do things and make you feel that you are most welcome indeed. We Frenchmen all feel that way as it is but we possess not the spirit that is here tonight. I wish, oh, how I wish, I was an Elk."

To those who attended the reception at the club Saturday night, it was plainly to be seen why the French captain spoke as he did. Although having but a few days to make preparations, members of Plainfield Lodge banded together as one and left nothing undone to make the affair a complete success. In the giving of credit for the delightful evening that came as a climax to a day full of incident, a big portion must go to J. Fred MacDonald, manager of the Elks' Club, who supervised everything from start to finish. Mr. "Mac" was determined that the French soldiers who had helped drive back the Germans at the Marne should be given a welcome worthy of the name and that he accomplished his purpose no one can deny.

The Army Band, members of the Plainfield Liberty Loan Committee and other guests reached the clubhouse shortly after 6 o'clock. After the first informal welcomings and the taking of group pictures in the lodge room by Paul Collier, the party was taken to the dining hall where supper was served. The menu contained everything worth while calculated to tickle the palate of a Frenchman and the waiters, although not of the thirty-third degree variey generally seen at big banquets, served with promptness and dispatch. They included beside "Jack" Oswald, who got first choice because of his linguistic abilities, "Mike" Shannon, manager of the Plainfield Theatre; Attorney W. W. Nash, Jr., James W. Coleman, Gilbred T. Raymond, Clarence W. Mandy, Exalted Ruler James W. Hart and many others.

A colored orchestra provided instrumental music and two of its members sang songs at intervals, most of them of French origin or character. Harry E. Butler, of the Loan Committee, also sang and made a tremendous hit. The Army Band showed its appreciation by a concerted hand-clap to regulated time, an original idea that took well with the Elks and their friends.

Senator William N. Runyon, who spoke at the gathering in the City Park after the Loan parade, acted as toastmaster during the evening. He gave one of his characteristic speeches that was interpreted for the benefit of the soldiers present by J. D. Loizeaux, who also interpreted a reply in French made by Captain Pares. Other addresses were made by Col. M. T. Greenwood, managing the tour of the band, and Hippolyte Texier, a member of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, who fought with the French forces in the Franco-Prussian War.

The singing of the "Marseilles" by the entire gathering brought the reception in the clubhouse to a close. The French soldiers were afterward escorted to the North avenue station for the 9:17 train for New York by more than 160 Elks and the send-off the warriors received as they climbed the car steps made every one of them wish hte same as Captain Pares, that they had Elk lodges in France.

Girls' Farm Camp Proves Big Success

The Union County Land Army Farm Camp, which opened at Summit April 27, and which has been continued with marked success throughout the summer, will close October 15. Figures available up to this time show that the project has been one worth while, for, besides the valuable aid given to the farmers by the girl workers, the surplus of the enterprise to date is $1,125.

The number of girls enrolled to date has been 177, eight of whom were from Plainfield, and most of the rest from Union county. Essex and some of the other adjoining counties, however, furnished a goodly number. Some, too, were from New York State.

The largest number in camp at any one time was eighty, according to the records kept by Hiss Mabel E. Denton, who personally managed the project. The average number in camp has been forty-six. The total days' attendance has been 6,500. These figures include the supervisory staff, cook and housekeeper.

As the camp was begun as a war movement to increase the food supply for the army and the Allies, some donations were received. These included the house and ground for a garden, but as they had been unoccupied for three years no rent was lost. In the house was equipment for thirty. Two autos were presented to the camp and motor service was supplied by three motor corps and many business and garage men. About $3,000 was loaned to purchase other equipment.

Running expenses have been paid with money paid in. Food was the chief item. Very little could be bought wholesale although local dealers furnished special prices. All fresh vegetables were obtained in season from the home garden. The average cost of food per capita was 53½ cents per day. On this well balanced meals of the best quality of fresh food and of great variety were furnished. This included lunches carried to work. The coal, water, ice, electricity, laundry, household incidentals and upkeep of three autos have also been paid from money earned.

Besides their board, the girls get $15 per month, the staff receiving the same, and the total amounted to $3,500. The expenses embrace the following items: Food, $2,840; salaries, $3,500; light, fuel, etc., $800; total, $7,140.

The money received for labor has more than covered this. The farmers pay 25 cents an hour for the farmerette's service. The average daily wage paid by them is $1.75. Rain and difficulties in transportation have been the main reasons for full eight-hour days not being worked. There have been 3,485 working hours. The whole amount paid in for labor has been $8,375. The net earnings up to date are $1,225. This balance will be used to return some of the $3,000 loaned for equipment. Thus one-third the loan will be returned the first year.

That the heavy expenses have been paid so promptly shows that this type of labor is popular with the farmers. Only $103 worth of bills were outstanding at the middle of last week. One farmer has hired farmerette labor to the extent of $995 during the season. One of his weekly bills amounted to $94.85.

Because the girls do not do piece work it is impossible to figure just how much produce they have actually helped in harvesting, but definite results are shown in letters to the supervisor. E. Miller, of Westfield, says: "I have employed farmerettes furnished me by the Union County Farm Camp and this help has made it possible for me to plant and cultivate at least one-third more of farm produce than I should do without their help."

Robert Holt writes: "Without their help our spring planting must have been reduced, as two of our men are with the colors."

H. Dreyer, of Cranford, writes: "It is very necessary for this camp to continue. If I did not have these girls I could not get along."

Many other farmers agreed to plant more acreage than they had planned if they were furnished with girl labor. The total number of farmers employing girls was ninety-three. The farmers aret generally well pleased with the work done.

VICTIMS OF EXPLOSION CARED FOR AT MUHLENBERG.

Frederick W. Fisher, forty-eight years old, of Highland Park, and Steve Laris, sixteen years old, of Perth Amboy, were received at Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday, suffering from burns received in an explosion of chemilals at the Nixon Nitrate Works at Bonhamton.

Laris was the worst burned of the two and is still at the institution but Fisher was able to return to his home yesterday.

Base Hospitals Have Big Tasks

Base hospitals, far to the rear of big offensives, play an important part in the fighting.

The way an offensive looks from a big base hospital can be pictured from a letter written by a non-commissioned officer in an American base during the Chateau-Thierry offensive to a friend in this city.

The writer starts his letter by telling how emergency surgical teams from the hospital were called for service at the front, departing one by one. "Thus we had an inkling that something big was afoot," he writes. "We left behind, waited. Perhaps it was only a local fight requiring immediate surgical work, we thought. In a few days we should know.

"Then came the wounded. The first train was light. At the time our wards were but partially filled, hence we had no difficulty in receiving the influx with a calmness that was almost leisurely.

"Before we could breathe, however, came another call from that unseen center of activity which sends us our charges. We were ready to receive patients, though the number surprised us a little, but everyone fell to with a will and we were ready. All the wounded were received and accommodated in a manner that brought credit to the hospital and to the army.

"We began to feel a little important and efficient. Then, almost before we had time to think, came a third order: 'Be ready to receive—patients.' That instantly wiped away any thoughts of self-congratulations. It put before us the greatest task yet.

"Four teams were organized, with a surgeon in charge of each, and no sooner was one case completed than the next began. Such surgery, too! Some of the professional men I heard speak of it as 'beautiful.' For my part, however, I cannot describe it thus. To me it was, rather marvelous. Never before did I have such an understanding of the surgeon's art.

"It truly seemed as if each part of the human anatomy was set out before us as plainly as if charted, while miracles were peformed before our very eyes. One after another they came—came so rapidly the surgeons took only time enough between to 'scrub up.' Thus lives were saved as if by magic; men were virtually made over on the operating table.

"When we looked up at the end of the first day we found we had been working without a break for nineteen hours. It was at this moment 3 o'clock in the morning. By 8 o'clock the surgical department was again fully alive. All day long we worked at our posts. Then at midnight came the order: 'Work straight through till morning.'

"Thus one day succeeded another, until we scarcely knew when it was day, when night. In fact, I cannot now recall the days and distinguishing one from the rest. As I look back over them, they all run together—one continuous day, with no break at all for night. At last, though, we were rewarded. Order came out of chaos, as order must, and we had the satisfaction of hearing the chief surgeon say, 'Well, boys, we may rest a little now. Every urgent case has been attended.'

"What satisfaction that announcement really did bring I can hardly expect you to imagine. Unless you were actually in the work it would be next to impossible. There was, in a word, the feeling of gratification for work—hard work—well done.

"Now, too, we are day by day seeing the effects of our work. I see it perhaps more than some of the others, for I am all the day long in the midst of the patients as they slowly wend their way back toward health. What a revelation they are! What a demonstration of that electrifying spirit of America!

"There is no complaint. The ones who suffer most grumble least. Sometimes it is unbelievable. To them the Germans are no supermen. They have been near enough to see. At the same time there is no braggadocio. Instead, we find simply a philosophical acceptance of realities and a determination to win the war at any cost. If ever any one entertained a lurking apprehension that there might be a remote possibility of disaster for the Allied cause, one moment with those young chargers who went through the fire and came back to us would convince him of his folly."

Proving Grounds As Adjunct to Elizabeth Plant

Among the projects authorized by the War Department, this week, according to information from Washington, is the proving ground to be constructed as an adjunct to the Singer Manufacturing Company's plant at Elizabeth. It will represent an outlay of $110,000.

Work has been progressing on the field, which is to front on Schiller street, for the past six week and will be completed within a short time. It extends along Newark Bay and will be used for the testing of field artillery pieces, which are to be manufactured in large quantities at the Singer plant.

The barracks for the housing of a detachment of men from the Ordnance Department have just been completed on Schiller street and the other structures to be used are now being erected. It is expected that the soldiers will arrive today or tomorrow, coming fro mthe arsenal depot at Raritan.

War Board Asks All to Save Paper

Don't waste paper; save it at home and also help the merchants with who myou deal save it. That is another way in which you can help win the war.

Your grocer does not want to offend you. You must ask him not to wrap up package goods. Take a shopping bag or basket with you.

Your merchant does not want to offend you. Don't ask him to wrap up small purchases. Have some war pride and carry your package home unwrapped, or let him deliver it simply tied with a string.

Your furniture man does not want to offend you. Ask him to use burlap and cloths in delivering furniture to you. He can use them over again.

Your hardware man does not want to offend you. Ask hi mto deliver hardware without wrapping or take it home with you.

All paper must be saved, to help win the war. The War Industries Board has declared that we must all save paper; that the production is only about 50 per cent. of the requirements for war industries; that we must stop using many grades of paper in order that papermaking machines may manufacture paper which is required to move food and clothing to France. Profligate use of paper has been abnormally stimulated.

Curb that appetite for wasting paper.

Every bit of wrapping paper that you save, every bit of paper that you save, saves coal, labor, chemicals and emphasizes your patriotism.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, has issued the following order, which affects every retail store throughout the United States:

"Paper conservation is essential as a war measure. Every retail store is, therefore, directed to discontinue the unnecessary wrapping of merchandise and to reduce its consumption of wrapping paper, bags, paper boxes, office stationery, etc., to that which is absolutely necessary.

"The officials of the War Industries Board feel confident that the public will co-operate with their stores in making this order effective. Economy in the use of paper will release chemicals, fuel, cars and men all necessary to win the war and will also enable the Government to secure its requirements of paper, which are increasing rapidly.

"The necessity for this order became apparent this week when it was realized that the Government would soon be obliged to divert to the ammunition manufacturers a large quantity of chemical pulp formerly used in making wrapping, tissue, book and other strong papers. The increasing production of ammunition and the short cotton crop make this necessary.

"The administration of this order has been placed in the pulp and paper section and Dr. E. O. Merchant, in charge of the economy program, has prepared a set of instructions for retail merchants and designed a placard, which will be of assistance to them in complying with the Government's order."

State to Seek $51,000 In Excess Water Charges

An announcement of the determination of the State Board of Conservation and Development to press for collection upward of $51,000 due the State from various municipalities on account of unpaid excess water diversion charges is made in the annual report of the board, just submitted to Governor Edge. Litigation against Jersey City is pending in the courts, and the attorney general's department is preparing suits against other alleged violators.

Besides describing the war activities of the department, the report recites the progress of the mosquito extermination work, with recommendations for its continuance. It is recommended that an appropriation be made by the next Legislature for a thorough examination by competent engineers of the Wharton tract in South Jersey as a possible source of water for the central and southern parts of the State. A recommendation is made that wards of the State be employed in improvement work on State forests, cutting fire lines and in mosquito extermination work.

Among other subjects discussed in the report are opportunities for further use of the undeveloped lands of the State, the need of a land registry to encourage legitimate settlement and discourage harmful land booming; a recommendation for the gradual acquisition of forest lands along the Kittatinny Mountain in Warren and Sussex counties, with a view to the ultimate establishment there of a great forest park; suggestions regarding Washington's Crossing Park; summaries of the work of the State museum, testing laboratory, soil survey and other activities of the geologic division. Reports of the State geologist, the State forester and the State fire warden accompany the board's report, and set forth in great detail the varied activities of the department.

CHARLES McCANN BETTER.

Charles F. McCann, of 446 West Third street, who is at Muhlenberg Hospital suffering from influenza and pneumonia, was reported today as being much improved. Mr. McCann is night station master at the Communipaw terminal.

Draft Numbers May Be Made Known Tomorrow

Drawing of order numbers for 13,000,000 selective service registrants was completed at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, hours ahead of schedule. The last number taken from the glass bowl was 12,734. The drawing commenced at noon Monday with 17,000 capsules in the bowl and President Wilson pulled out the first number, 322.

By working in relays through the night officers and enlisted men of the army speeded up the drawing more rapidly than in previous lotteries. Provost Marshal General Crowder personally watched the operation from start to finish.

"There was only one accident in the whole thing," General Crowder said, "and that came on the last number. The paper slipped out of the capsule, but was found in the bowl, and so it made no difference, but for a moment we thought we were short one number."

Telephone communication was maintained with the Government Printing Office during the drawing, and the master list is now being distributed by mail immediately to district boards, by which it will be made public.

Although this drawing will give to every man who registered an order number, registrants will be called in accordance with their order number within their respective classes, as shown by the classification list and within the ages from time to time prescribed by the President as immediately liable to be called for classification and for military service.

he first 100 numbers drawn Monday were sent out by wire and were as follows:

1—322, 2—7277, 3—6708, 4—1027, 5—16169, 6—8366, 7—5366, 8—1697, 9—7123, 10—2781, 11—9283, 12—6147, 13—10086, 14—438, 15—904, 16—12368, 17—1523, 18—7512, 19—6360, 20—3748, 21—6540, 22—3808, 23—1240, 24—16846, 25—1907, 26—12521, 27—6593, 28—5941, 29—3073, 30—13728, 31—20, 32—6857, 33—1255, 34—14122, 35—11101, 36—2132, 37—10762, 38—3235, 39—739, 40—16657, 41—6809, 42—4948, 43—877, 44—7034, 45—535, 46—8691, 47—11060, 48—8858, 49—219, 50—6518, 51—4287, 52—12839, 53—625, 54—72, 55—11338, 56—832, 57—10491, 58—14023, 59—14043, 60—964, 61—8637, 62—2897, 63—7884, 64—473, 65—10656, 66—4327, 67—3505, 68—348, 69—7234, 70—4, 71—12842, 72—4482, 73—9022, 74—1961, 75—4886, 76—16009, 77—12930, 78—134, 79—14319, 80—12210, 81—8317, 82—395, 83—5240, 84—12284, 85—11255, 86—657, 87—12618, 88—3531, 89—14361, 90—13754, 91—11464, 92—13841, 93—8055, 94—6777, 95—7952, 96—11191, 97—15760, 98—13359, 99—12184, 100—11232.

Number 322, the first out of the bowl, is held in Ulainfield by Mose C. Torrance, a young, unmarried man who boards at the home of Mrs. Van Wyck, of 312 East Front street. In North Plainfield, the district numbers run from 1674 to 2534 and in consequence the first number affecting registrants in the borough was 1697. This is held by Rev. H. St. George Burrill, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, who will be exempted because of his calling. The second North Plainfield man drawn is Arthur C. Hutchinson of 154 Westervelt avenue, who holds 2132.

Eliminating all the numbers that did not concern Plainfield, the first 100 drawn called for thirty-two in this district as follows:

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

John Baron, an elderly man residing on East Fourth street, was knocked down at East Fifth and Richmond streets, early Monday morning, by an automobile owned and driven by Siebe Keuming, of New Market. Keuming continued on after the accident and but for the fact that it was witnessed by Gus Romond, his identity might not have been learned. Romond had Baron picked up and taken to the office of Dr. Albert Pittis, where his injuries were found not to be serious. Romond also reported the matter to the police and Keuming was located at the Scott Press Works, where he is employed. In the city court Tuesday morning, he told Judge DeMeza he did not know he had struck anyone but the evidence against him was so complete that the magistrate fined him $100 with a preference of going to jail for ninety days, and also soundly rebuked him for his inhuman action. Keuming left his automobile for security until he could procure the amount of the funds.

A delegation of members from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, will pay a fraternal visit to Reliance Lodge, of Rahway, on October 15. The trip will be made by automobile and all Pythians wishing to attend are cordially invited.

Splendid work on the part of the fire department probably saved the Stillman School building at Fifth street and Arlington avenue from destruction early Sunday morning. Patrolmen Roy Martin and Thomas Flatley were on their way home at 4:15 o'clock when they discovered flames issuing from the northeast corner of the building and turned in an alarm. Although the blaze had evidently been underway for several hours and the building has no up-to-date fire-proofing, Chief Jennings and his men held the flames to the room where they started, although the battle lasted for more than an hour. The school is the oldest in the city, having been erected in 1867, and the interior finishing is of yellow pine, made all the more inflammable by the natural drying of more than half a century. The room where the fire originated has been used as a cooking room but nobody had been near it since the day previous. Just what caused the blaze has not been determined, although Chief Jennings has made a thorough investigation. The damage is placed at $3,000 and is mostly due to smoke getting into all parts of the building and destroying the interior decorating. This will have to be done all over in possibly every hall and room.

Through the kindness of George L. Babcock, the Home Service Section of the Red Cross, which has been sharing quarters with the Charity Organization Society in the Babcock building, now occupies room 218 in the same structure. The office is opened every day but Saturday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., and on Saturday from 10 a. m. until 12 noon.

These are the days when bargains are greatly desired and there will be lots of them at a rummage sale, tomorrow, to be conducted by the Benevolent Band of King's Daughters in the store at 175 East Front street. The sale will be in progress all day after 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The entire proceeds are to be for the benefit of the King's Daughters' Day Nursery.

Clarence Cheshire, of 320 West Second street, was named in Tuesday's casualty list as having been wounded in France. Inquiry at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Charles Dellahunt, of the same address, on Second street, resulted in the information that his injuries, according to a letter from the young soldier, were in the shoulder and were not serious. Cheshire is the grandson of the late William Mowinkle, and went to Camp McClellan as a memberof Company K. He has been in France since last June. Previous to entering the service he was employed by local contractors as a painter. His parents have been living at Oyster Bay, L. I., for many years, but he had always made his home here.

Charles R. Banks, of Watchung avenue, has been re-elected as chairman of the Republican City Committee, his services in this capacity during the past year having been satisfactory in every way. He was warmly congratulated for his work since taking the office at a meeting of the committee held in F. J. Blatz's office, Monday night. The other officers named beside Mr. Banks were Charles L. Kling, vice chairman; George York, secretary, and William R. Townsend, treasurer. The committee endorsed all Republican nominations of last week's primaries.

Dr. Samuel Mintz, who has many local acquaintances, has opened an office at 171 East Front street, for the practice of dental and oral surgery.

Fred Ivamy, the organizer, and for fifteen years the head of the firm of Ivamy & Company, dealing in meats and seafood, 126 West Second street, retired from the firm this week. He disposed of his interests to his partner, Ada mHeim, who will continue the business on the same high grade plan. Mr. Ivamy, whose home is on Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, will take a much needed rest before devoting his time to other affairs.

Charles P. Hubbard, of Wyncote, Pa., who on August 31 last married Miss Gwendolyn Stanton, of this city, after which he joined the Officers' Training Corps at Camp Humphreys, Accotink, Va., died Monday night at the camp following a few days' illness, of grip with pneumonia complications. Mr. Hubbard returned last August from Japan, where he had represented the American Trading Company for two years, for the purpose of enlisting in the military service. He was graduated from Cornell University with the class of '15. Mrs. Hubbard, who is employed by the War Trade Board in Washington, was graduated from Smith College in 1917.

"Something big enough to die for"

"I gave up everything to come here—my friends, my loved ones, my position, my future. But I am happier than I have ever been before in all my life. I can't explain why, exactly, but I think it is because at last I have found something big enough to die for."

(From the letter of an American Soldier in France.)

Something big enough to die for!

Even at close range, surrounded on all sides by the intimate horrors of war, face to face with blood and wounds and suffering and death, choked and blinded by the smoke of battle, his vision of the eternal Rightness of the Cause is undimmed. The Liberty of the world is "big enough to die for."

It is big enough to save for, and to lend for, big enough to buy Liberty Bonds for—to our very utmost!

This space is made available to the Government for the advertising of Liberty Bonds by the on behalf of the holders of over nineteen million of its policies amounting to over four billions of dollars of insurance, for whose protection this company is holding over six hundred and fifty million dollars reserve besides other assets. This company has subscribed for $25,000,000 of the new Liberty Bonds and recommends them without qualification as the safest investment in the world. Its agents have sold over seventy-five million dollars of W. S. S. and expect to reach one hundred and thirty millions this year.

PERSONAL

James Coleman, who has been spending the summer at the Trust farm, Greenbrook, has returned to his winter apartment at the Elks' Club.

George Fagan, of the A. M. Runyon & Son office, has returned from Providence, R. I., to which place he was called by the death of his brother-in-law, William Cella, of that city. The funeral took place in Providence, Monday morning.

Senator and Mrs. William N. Runyon, of East Ninth street, are the parents of a son, born to them Friday night. The little fellow is the third child in the family, the others being Miss Jane Trow Runyon and William N. Runyon, Jr.

Second Lieutenant Elmer H. French, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue, who recently recived his commission at the Plattsburg camp, has been assigned to Columbia University for duty as an instructor.

Harold Meade, of Fairview avenue, the borough, left Sunday night for Washington, D. C., to begin a Government engineering course at Washington University. He will be under instructions for at least six months and probably nine. He is a brother to William Meade, who is in the Naval Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Danowic, of Brooklyn, were the week-end guests of the Misses Alice and Ethel Mehl, of Madison avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee, of 825 First place, were called to Naperville, Ill., this week, by the death of Mrs. Gee's mother, Mrs. Odgers. The deceased was in her eighteith year and had returned to Naperville only a few weeks ago after spending the summer at Mrs. Gee's home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Phillips and family, of Madison avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Phillips and family, of Arlington avenue, returned home Tuesday, after spending the month of September at their cottage at Manasquan.

State Banking and Insurance Commissioner Frank H. Smith, of West Eighth street, left this week for Battle Creek, Mich., where he will spend two or three weeks taking the bath treatment at that resort.

Mrs. Walter Matthews, of Clinton avenue, has been detained at home the past week by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Leivers, of Orchard place, are the parents of a baby girl, who came to their home a few days ago. Mrs. Leivers was formerly Miss Julia LaMatty.

Miss Mary Conley, of Muhlenberg Hospital's staff of nurses, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia for the past three weeks, is now well on the road to recovery.

William McClinton, whose home was on Pond place at the time of his enlistment in the Aviation corps five months ago, and who is now stationed at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland, is seriously ill in the Aberdeen base hospital with influenza. He is a brother to James and John McClinton, of West Third street.

Jack Rogers, who has been doing trans-Atlantic duty as a member of the Naval Hospital Corps, reached a southern port the forepart of the week and has been spending the past few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Rogers, of Watchung avenue. Since entering the service more than a year ago, Mr. Rogers has made seven complete trips overseas.

Mrs. Daniel D. Denny, Jr., of East Pearl street, returned a few days ago, after spending five weeks at Fort Caswell, North Carolina, where her husband is located in the service.

David L. Coleman and family, who have been residing at 602 Washington street, for the past year and a half, have removed to the Eugene Hess property on Clinton place, which Mr. Coleman recently purchased.

Michael L. Shannon, manager of the Plainfield Theatre, has been one of the many local victims of the influenza. He was confined to his room at the Elks' Club, Monday and Tuesday, and although still feeling the effects of the attack, is able to be about.

Miss Hazel F. Greenleaf, of 848 West Front street, who is a member of the Army Nursing Corps, is convalesing at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, after an attack of grip and threatened pneumonia.

J. A. Isbell, who has been making his home at 604 West Seventh street, has taken possession of the E. P. Williams property at Seventh street and Darrow avenue, which he recently purchased. Mr. Isbell, who is superintendent of the Wood Newspaper Machinery Company, has brought his family here from Taunton, Mass.

Miss Harriet Knox, of this city, who has been in the army service at Camp Dix as a nurse, is recovering from a severe attack of the influenza. Her condition the forepart of the week was such as to give her relatives and friends much concern, but last reports indicate that she is on the road to recovery. She is a graduate of the Muhlenberg Hospital training school.

Miss Anna Callahan, of East Second street, has enlisted in the Red Cross service for nursing work in home camps, and left yesterday to report at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. She is a sister to Mrs. Earle Beatty, wife of Naval Lieutenant Earle Beatty, who was in foreign nursing service for a year and who recently left for Haiti with her husband.

Miss Mildred Sabina Trivett Rowe, daughter of Alfred H. Rowe, of Glen Ridge, was married on Wednesday to Edward Rushmore Honeyman, son of Mrs. Newton Honeyman, of East Front street, this city. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and was witnessed by a large assemblage of guests. Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Honeyman will make their home in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Beckowiz, who were married last Friday night, have returned from their wedding trip and are making their home at 141 East Fifth street. Mrs. Beckowiz was formerly Miss Ethel Keiderling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Keiderling, of East Second street.

Latest primary election returns, collected from all county clerk's offices this week, showed a total of 120,620 votes cast for the three candidates for the Republican nomination for the full term as United States Senator. These returns do not include any of the soldier votes cast.

Of the total vote, Governor Edge received 84,942; George L. Record, 18,848, and Edward W. Gray, 16,830. Governor Edge's majority over the two other candidates combined was 49,264. His plurality over Record was 66,094, and his plurality over Gray, 68,112.

An interesting fact disclosed by the returns is that Governor Edge received a majority of the votes cast in every county of the State. In other words, his vote in every county exceeded the combined vote of Gray and Record. The total vote cast for United States Senator David Baird, Republican candidate for the unexpired term, was 96,067.

CONSIDERING PLAN TO TRAIN SCHOOL-BOYS.

The general staff is considering extension of the student training plan to preparatory and high schools, to care for young men of military age attending these institutions. In a letter to Senator Hitchcock, Colonel Reese, in charge of the student training activities, this week said some way must be found to train the youths, and if officers can be found for the work, the secondary schools will be included soon.

State Institutions Badly Hampered by Lack of Man Power

The problem of man power as it immediately aqects State institutions was considered this week at a meeting of the executive committee of the State Board of Charities and Corrections. Special reports submitted by superintendents of various institutions indicated that it will be necessary o ask for deferred classification for practically all remaining employes within the selective service age. Reports from six institutions showed there are 147 employes subject to call for military duty.

Dr. David F. Weeks, of the Epileptic Village at Skillman, reported that twenty-eight employes are within the selective service age and that the institution already is short eighty-two men. Dr. Britton D. Evans, of the State Hospital at Morris Plains, said he had thirty-six officers and employes of military age and needed all of them. He has now only one keeper to twenty-one patients, whereas the ratio for safety should be not less than one keeper to eleven patients. Dr. Evans said the former ratio should be regarded as an irreducible minimum. At the State Hospital at Trenton thirty attendants are within the military age.

Superintendent Edmonds, of the Jamesburg Home for Boys, said he would ask deferred classification for eleven employes within the military ages. Principal Keeper Mulheren, of the State prison, has thirty-six deputies within the military ages and considers them all indispensable. Dr. English, of the Glen Gardner Sanatorium, said he had requested deferred classification for six employes.

As told in a bulletin issued after the meeting, there was a discussion of the plan recently outlined by Commissioner Burdette G. Lewis for the employment of prisoners in penal and correctional institutions on war work inside and outside the institutions. This contemplated the formation of an auxiliary fighting unit composed of men qualifying for such service. In support of this plan Acting Chairman Ogden H. Hammond, made the following statement at the conference:

"The full utilization of prison labori n an auxiliary military organization, under the direction of United States army officers, will be a decided step forward in effectively solving the prison problem.

"The prisoners generally are anxious to become a factor in winning the war. The plan of Commissioner Lewis gives the mentally, morally and physically fit prisoner a chance to prove his worth and determination to make good. He must prove himself worthy of the right to fight by working through all the grade classifications from 'D' through 'A' of the plan.

"Military roads must be built; labor is needed for work behind the lines in France and in the cantonments in this country. Prisoners under military discipline and organization cao be immediately drafted for this purpose. There are hundreds of thousands of men in prison, as Commissioner Lewis pointed out, who, under a military organization, may be given a chance to fight in a special military unit. This great amount of man power has not been made available for work in connection with the conduct of the war. It presents, particularly at this time, a tremendous waste of both man power and money. Under present conditions it is quite impossible to carry out the program, for provision is made merely for work in skilled trades in our correctional institutions, for which the prisoners are ill-fitted by training and experience. If the new utilization plan is put into operation, skilled workers will have nothing to fear from competition with prison labor, for the reason that this plan recognizes that but few prisoners are sufficiently skilled or capable of becoming sufficiently skilled to compete with free skilled labor, and therefore purposes to assign the greater number of them to work requiring no mechanical ability, and only in exceptional cases to assign any of them to work requiring some degree of mechanical skill.

"The plan gives to the prisoner an opportunity to make the supreme sacrifice, if necessarry, for his country, and if he should survive the war, the reward of mingling with his fellow men on an equality which never could be brought about in any other way. The fact that New Jersey is able to take the initiative in this movement is a concrete example of the usefulness of the advanced legislation enacted at the recent session of the Legislature, for which all the citizens of the State may well be proud."

WHERE the MONEY GOES

In Plainfield, for example, $191,425 spent by the Government every week for the products of Plainfield industry.

Before the war there were 1,832 factory workers in Plainfield—Today there are 6,175—

This is what they are doing—

PLANT	PRODUCT	No. of Employes
Aero Alarm Mfg. Co.	Fire Alarm Signals for Base Hospitals and Cantonments	50
British-American Company	Tubing for Ordnance Dept.	75
International Motor Co.	Automobile Trucks	1300
Pond Machine Tool Co.	Lathes and Planers for War Work	1200
Raymond Engineering Co.	Small Machine Tool Parts for War Work	100
Rubber Insulated Metals Corp.	Insulated Tools and Rubber Tires	200
Spicer Mfg. Co.	Universal Joints for Auto Trucks	1200
Standard Aircraft Corp.	Aeroplanes	450
Walter Scott Co.	Gun Carriages	800
Wasson Piston Ring Co.	Piston Rings for Auto Trucks	450
Wood Newspaper Machinery Co.	Miscellaneous Machine Work for Ordnance Dept.	350

These men are as important to the Government as the soldiers who fight. Their obligation to the Nation is greater because they do not fight. The obligation of the rest of us is STILL GREATER because we neither work nor fight.

Plainfield Man's Loss of $40,000 Largest Individual Amount of Any Suffered Through Morgan Explosion

A check-up at the dismantled Gillespie loading plant at Morgan almost wiped out by the explosion and fire of last Friday night, discloses the fact that Joseph F. Burke, of Monroe avenue, this city, was the heaviest individual loser outside of the Government and the Gillespie concern.

Mr. Burke's contracting equipment, including 110 horses, machinery, carts, excavators, harness, stable equipment, hay, feed and other supplies were all destroyed. His money loss is placed at $40,000 and of this amount only a very small percentage is covered by insurance. Despite the destruction of his outfit, known to be one of the most complete in this part of the State, Mr. Burke set about restoring it before the excitement was over last Saturday and today he is back to a fifty per cent. working basis. By the forepart of next week, he expects to have even a greater number of horses on the job and sufficient carts and machinery to help the Gillespie Company rebuild the big shell loading plant.

Mr. Burke had the main contract for all grading and hauling about the grounds. Since beginning work for the Gillespies last spring, he had gradually built up a working force, hard to beat, and was a big adjunct to the systematic detail that was supplying thousands of shells for the allied forces. His stables were located on the premises only a few hundred yards away from the loading buildings and the rest of his belongings were stored nearby.

At the time of the first explosion early Friday night, Mr. Burke was at his home in this city, but the stables were in charge of Herman de Valiers, of West Front street, and Grant Taynor, of Clinton avenue, this city. The only other ones on the immediate premises were several colored hostlers. All of the men were thrown from their feet by the concussion from the exploding magazine but immediately took steps to secure the safety of the horses. None of the animals were injured at the time, although several of them were thrown into a frenzy and could hardly be quieted down. Mr. Burke, himself, felt the explosion at home and fearing it might be the Gillespie plant, called up the stables on the telephone. When apprised of what had happened, he immediately hurried to Schreiner's drug store, where, after purchasing all the available "first aid supplies," he set out for Morgan at the best speed his automobile could get over the ground.

Arriving at the stables, he found his men all right, but as the fire was burning in the 6-1-1 building, it was apparent that other explosions would follow. He stayed on the grounds through the subsequent explosions up to 11 o'clock, at which time, the fire seemed to be under control and the danger over. The Plainfield contractor at that time could have removed most of his horses to safety but as this was a dangerous task for the men on account of the continuous bursting of shells, he decided to run the chances of their being O. K. over night. He then returned to Plainfield, in the belief that no more explosions would occur and that his belongings would be intact on the following day.

It was the big explosion at 2 o'clock Saturday morning, that practically wiped out the Burke outfit. de Valiers, Taynor and the hostlers were still in the stables and it was only by pure luck that they escaped with their own lives. More than fifty of the horses were thrown to the ground in a helpless condition and the others became panic-stricken. A few of them broke loose, making their way to the open air by means of a passage-way blown open by the concussion. These were afterwards brained or disemboweled by bursting shells with the exception of four, which were found wandering about after the danger had passed late Saturday night. They are suffering from shell-shock and though Mr. Burke is trying to save them the chances are they will never be any good. The stables caught fire later in the night and ninety-four of the animals, scores of them worth $400 each, were burned to death.

A peculiar circumstance in connection with Mr. Burke's loss is the fact that outside of a halter, which escaped the flames, the only thing really left was a pet dog, which had been following the men about on various jobs for nearly two years. The little fellow was a wanderer who drifted into the camp when the Plainfielder was building a road in South Jersey. The hostlers made him their protege and wherever the Burke outfit went he was taken along as an important "part" of the equipment. The dog had selected one horse as his especial favorite in the big stable full and it was his custom to sleep beside him every night. When Mr. Burke got into the ground, Saturday, almost the first thing that greeted his gaze at the spot where his outfit had been, was the little dog. Even in the midst of his sorrow, at the sight of his dead horses, Mr. Burke could not help but stoop and pat the little survivor on the head and it was a question as to which one was the most pleased.

de Valiers and Taynor were brought to Plainfield but after two days' treatment were able to return to work. They are now at the plant again, despite their terrible experiences on the memorable Friday night, and are "doing their bit" in getting the new outfit together.

Returning from the Gillespie place Monday, Mr. Burke purchased nine horses from small contractors who had decided to take no more risks at the plant. He also purchased nine others in a short trip near Amboy and from Stonewall Jackson, of North Plainfield, secured two carloads of the finest draft horses. One team he bought in Monday was valued at $950. It has been a known fact in Plainfield that the Burke animals form the finest aggregation of horseflesh ever seen in Jersey outside of a circus equipment of draft stock. The loss is even harder to bear than that represented by money as many of the teams were broken to the particular style of work required of them in contracting. They could push a pole against a stalled cart as well as pull in fours and it will take many months before the new purchases can be placed in the same class.

Building Stop Order Will Make Little Difference Locally

The War Industries order prohibiting all unnecessary building will have no material effect in Plainfield as operations of this kind have practically ceased for some time.

The new Tepper building, underway some time, will be allowed to go on as extensive preparations have been made before the new order was issued. Alteration jobs up to $2,500 will also be permitted.

In appointing a committee to take care of the local situation, Mayor Calkins issued the following statement:

"The War Industries Board has called upon all State and Municipal Councils of Defense to act as its agents to pass upon proposed building and construction projects. As a war measure the Government has decided that it is imperative to limit all kinds of new construction to conserve man-power and essential materials. The War Industries Board has confro[illegible] in this matter by virtue of its 'priorities' jurisdiction which enables it to withhold materials and supplies from any proposed construction project not deemed essential. Not being able to handle non-war applications direct, the War Industries Board has delegated the work in the first instance to The Municipal and State Councils of Defense. The procedure will be as follows so far as it effects construction and building projects in Plainfield:

"As Chief Executive of the City of Plainfield, I am the duly constituted chairman of the Plainfield Council of Defense. I have appointed the following advisory committee, to act with me in approving or disapproving all proposed building and construction projects in Plainfield: R. F. R. Huntsman, M. C. Van Arsdale, John P. Stevens, Franw J. Hubbard and Building Inspector T. O. Doane. All persons purposing construction projects will apply to this committee for permission to undertake same. If approved, the application will then be transmitted to the New Jersey State Council of Defense for its approval. Applications also approved by the State Council of Defense will be immediately forwarded to the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, (Non-War Construction Section), which will determine whether to grant or deny a permit and will notify the applicant accordingly. If the State Council of Defense decides against the application, the applicant will be notified that his project has been disapproved and there will be no appeal to the War Industries Board.

"Applications should be filed with Building Inspector T. O. Doane, 149 North avenue, who will refer them to the Mayor's advisory committee, of which he is a member and is hereby constituted clerk. Application blanks are daily expected from Washington. Until received applicants may file statements setting forth the following facts (1) General character of proposed project, (2) Estimated cost. (3) What materials required, (4) What transportation involved, (5) If an industry, what percentage of out-put is for Government purposes, (6) Reasons why project cannot be postponed until after the war.

"This public notice is based on emergency instructions just at hand, and is subject to modification when I am advised in greater detail."

"This order relates to new projects of every description regardless of the estimated cost. Permits will not be required for repairs to existing buildings involving in the aggregate a cost not exceeding $2,500, nor for various projects undertaken for and approved by the Government direct."

VICTIM OF PISTOL TO BE BURIED TOMORROW.

The funeral of Miss Ellen M. A. Murray, of Arlington avenue, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, from the effects of a bullet wound in the breast and pneumonia, will be held in St. Mary's church, tomorrow morning. The service will be private owing to the influenza restriction order. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Murray was sixteen years old and was the daughter of Mrs. Peter Murray, whose husband was killed by an auto at South avenue and Terrill road four years ago. She was helping in the work at the home of Mrs. Gresham on Gresham road, Sunday, when she was accidentally shot by Robert Austin, the seven-year-old son of a neighboring family, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Austin. The boy procured a pistol belonging to Mr. Gresham, and aimed it at Miss Murray in fun, not knowing it was loaded.

The bullet entered just below the heart, but at Muhlenberg Hospital, where the girl was taken, it was thought her chances for recovery were good. Pneumonia developed, however, and she passed away early yesterday morning.

Beside her mother, Miss Murray leaves five sisters and two brothers. They are the Misses Mary, Anna, Margaret, Josephine, Catherine, Patrick and George Murray. The unfortunate girl was a pupil in St. Mary's Commercial School.

Camp Dix Thespians Will Present Play Here in November

Provided the Board of Health closing order is removed before November 15, Plainfield people will enjoy a rare theatrical treat on that date.

Professional theatrical men in service at Camp Dix have formed a dramatic company and are presenting are farce comedy success, "even Days to Baldpate," which ran in New York for a full season. Plainfield has been selected as one of the places on the outside where it will be shown and it has been booked at the Plainfield Theatre for the November date mentioned.

The leading part is being taken by J. H. Doty, who played the same major role in the original production in New York, as staged by Cohan & Harris. The leading woman's part is played by William Sully, of the famous Sully family, well-known in the vaudeville world. All the other characters will be taken by professional men who were in the dramatic field before becoming soldiers. The scenery is also being painted by professionals who were engaged in this line of work while in civilian life. The right to play the comedy was given the Camp Dix boys by the American Play Company by arrangement with Messrs. Cohan & Harris.

The production is being directed by Norman Hackett, dramatic director of the camp and his assistant, Douglas Bedell, both of whom are well-known in theatrical circles. Mr. Bedell is the son of Mrs. William H. Abbott, of West Seventh street.

PLAINFIELD MAN HURT IN EXPLOSION.

Charles Keider, who lived at 740 West Fourth street, up to last spring, at which time he removed to South Amboy, was among the men injured at the Morgan explosion last Friday night. He was at work in the tin shop of the Gillespie plant only 150 feet away from Unit 6-1-1, where the original explosion occurred, but managed to get away from the grounds with only a bad cut over the right eye andn umerous bruises from pelting pieces of shell. He ran fully two miles before reaching a safe distance.

Mr. Keider was treated by Dr. Smith, of Perth Amboy, and later went back to his home in South Amboy, but was driven from bed by the big explosion at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. He spent the rest of the night in the open and came to Plainfield as soon as he could get a conveyance in the morning. Monday, Mr. Keider contracted a bad case of neurasthenia as a result of shock from his experiences and has been unable to get about. He and Mrs. Keider are temporarily residing with Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger, of West Fourth street. Previous to securing work at the Gillespie plant, Mr. Keider was employed by Den J. Galbraith.

REV. FATHER BOGAN ILL WITH INFLUENZA.

Working day and night for the last two weeks, in meeting the abnormal demands of his parish, Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, finally fell a victim himself to influenza Wednesday night. He is now confined to his bed at the rectory but his physician believes the attack will not advance to a serious stage.

Father Bogan's assistant, Rev. Father Hennessey, was taken ill with influenza last week and pneumonia developed a few days later. He is now a patient in Muhlenberg Hospital but is recovering. Rev. Father Holsters, second assistant in the parish, is now the only priest on active duty, and with the help of Rev. Father Campbell, of St. Joseph's parish, is attending to sick calls and requiem masses.

BELIEVE REPORTED WOUND WAS RECEIVED JULY 21.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Carney, of 19 Grove street, believe the placing of their son's name, John E. Carney, in the army casualty list on Tuesday of this week, was for a wound received on July 21 and from which he has now recovered. He wrote them about it soon after it was received and a few days ago the parents received a letter from him, dated September, in which he said that he had fully recovered with the exception of a slight stiffness in one knee and expected to return to service soon. At the time he was injured in July his name was not published in any list and the chances are its appearance now came about through some delay.

Private Carney enlisted at Fort Slocum a year ago and after training at Chickamauga Park and Fort Oglethorpe, went abroad last January as a member of the 26th Infantry. Previous to entering the service, he was employed by L. F. Hersh & Brother, at their local wholesale grocery house.

Harold Gayle, of Vine street, is numbered among the North Plainfield influenza victims. He has been detained at his home for the past week.

Bond Sales In City Near A Million

Despite the handicap put upon it by the influenza epidemic, the local Liberty Loan campaign showed more encouraging results when the totals were summed up today.

Shortly before noon, the campaign committee announced that the actual purchases made through the banks were close to $1,000,000. When bond sales are checked up this afternoon or tonight, it is possible that the figure will go over the million mark.

Though not definitely certain, it is quite probably that there really have been total subscriptions to the amount of two million dollars. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of pledges given to the solicitors have not yet been turned in for various reasons and when these pass through the banks Plainfield's goal will undoubtedly be reached.

The local manufacturfes all report a most hearty response on the part of their employes in bond purchases but none of these have been added to the sum totaled. When they come through a little later the figures at hand will take a big jump. The Scott shop has been awarded a 100 per cent. flag, and the other big shops will undoubtedly win the same distinction.

The bond committee has, of course, had all its plans for "missionary work" rendered useless by the Board of Health order forbidding public meetings or gatherings of any kind. It is now confining itself to "plugging" in other ways. Last night the committee worked hard sending out individual letters and is asking each American citizen to leave the question of bond purchases to his conscience. The house to house canvass is still permissible and the captains are urging their workers to still greater effort.

The belief exists throughout the metropolitan district that because of the set-back the influenza has given the campaign it may be extended a week or two beyond the original period set.

Record Number of Patients Now at Muhlenberg

Muhlenberg Hospital, is today, caring for 148 patients, the largest on record for any one time. Of these forty-eight are listed as "influenza" or "pneumonia" in varying degrees, although in most instances they are severe, as because of the great influx of sick only the most urgent cases are being accepted.

Co-operating with the Board of Health, Manager Smith announced that the hospital has been placed in strict quarantine and that no visitors will be admitted with the exception of relatives of patients who are desperately ill.

The Moffet residence on Park avenue, adjoining Muhlenberg, has been made into a temporary annex and at the present time is filled to its capacity. This morning, several new patients accepted could not be gotten any further than the front porch, which has been made into a temporary ward.

JAMES W. WHELAN BURIED YESTERDAY.

The funeral of James W. Whelan, who died in service at he Naval Base Hospital at Hampton Roads on October 3, was held in St. Mary's church, yesterday morning. Rev. Father Campbell, of St. Joseph's church, offered the mass and interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

An escort of sailors and marines from the Hoboken barracks escorted the body to the church and thence to the cemetery, where military honors were accorded. Mr. Whelan was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Whelan, of East Second street, and his death was due to influenza.

PRIVATE FUNERAL FOR MRS. BORMAN.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles A. Borman, whose death occurred from pneumonia at her home on Church street, early yesterday morning, will be strictly private. Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, will be in charge and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Borman was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Debele, of Rock avenue, and had always lived in this city. Beside her parents and husband, she is survived by one daughter and several brothers and sisters. Mr. Borman is ill at the present time with influenza and pneumonia.

Health Board Tightens Ban As Epidemic Spreads

Report of 177 New Influenza and 8 Pneumonia Cases Since Noon Yesterday Makes Indoor or Outdoor Gatherings a Menace--Closing-up Order May Continue for Several Weeks--Three More Deaths Since Yesterday

With 177 new influenza cases and eight of pneumonia reported since noon yesterday, the Board of Health has even made more drastic its closing order to prevent the spread of the malady now raging through the city.

The citizens are being notified that there are to be no public gatherings of any kind either within buildings or out of doors. This will prohibit field masses at St. Mary's church and St. Bernard's chapel and will also end any possibility of open air meetings in behalf of the Liberty Loan.

With today's added 177, the total number of influenza cases reported in the city since September 18, when the disease first became apparent, is now 876. The previous number of pneumonia cases in the same period was sixty-seven, making seventy-five up to noon today. The total number of deaths reported is twenty-four, three of them having occurred since yesterday noon.

Health Officer N. J. R. Chandler, of the city board, was not prepared today to state that the epidemic is decreasing in this community. He admitted that from the number of new cases reported, it is still a serious proposition and the citizens cannot be too careful in seeking to prevent any further spread. There is a possibility that the order closing theatres, churches and all other public gathering places may be continued for several more weeks. So far it has not been found necessary to close the city schools, although a number of classes in North Plainfield have been given up because of teachers being ill. North Plainfield has the epidemic in severe form also and its officials are co-operating with the City Board of Health in stamping it out.

The latest order given the local Board of Health by the State Board is as follows:

"Influenza is now epidemic in all sections of this State. The causative agents of this disease is contained in the excretions of the throats and noses of persons who are suffering from or who are carriers of these excretions.

"In order to restrict the further spread of influenza, local Boards of Health are hereby instructed, under authority contained in Chapter 288 of the laws of 1915.

"1. To prevent, as far as practicable, all public gatherings during the duration of this epidemic of influenza, and for this purpose to order closed all churches, theatres, moving picture houses, dance halls, pool rooms, lodge rooms, saloons, soda fountains and other places where numbers of people congregate.

"2. To advise the Board of Education to close schools whenever, in the judgment of the local Board of Health, the prevalence of the disease in the locality makes this procedure advisable.

"3. To advise the public to avoid unnecessary travel in public conveyances and to refrain from social activities which will result in the gathering together of numbers of people.

"4. To require that all cases of influenza and pneumonia should be isolated in bed during the acute stage of the disease and that all discharges from the throat and nose be disinfected.

"5. To prohibit public funerals of persons who have dedie of influenza and pneumonia.

"6. To prohibit the use of common towels and to enforce the law forbidding the use of common drinking cups.

"7. To require that all eating utensils which are used for more than one single service in places where food and drink is offered for sale, shall, after each use, be boiled or cleansed in some equally efficient manner."

Home Guards to Provide Honors for Private Jeter

The members of the Plainfield Home Defense League will perform a gracious act this afternoon at the burial of Private Clarence Jeter, a colored soldier who died at Camp Dix. Because his death was occasioned by influenza, the ruling of the camp authorities preventew the usual military burial.

Hearing of this circumstance, Captain J. Whitney Baker, of the Plainfield Home Defense League, detailed a Guard of Honor to accompany the body of Private Clarence Jeter to its last resting place here in Plainfield. A soldier's burial will be accorded him, and a volley fired over his grave by the members of the Home Guard.

The service will be held at Private Jeter's late home on Webster place, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

ON ERRAND OF MERCY RUNS DOWN CYCLIST.

Driving his automobile rapidly along West Fourth street, Sunday, in order to convey Father Holsters, of St. Mary's church, to the side of Miss Ellen Murray, the young girl accidentally shot by a boy and who has since died, Daniel J. Courain, of Fourth street and Darrow avenue, ran down Thomas Churchill, twenty-five years old, of Lee place, as the latter was turning the corner on a wheel at Plainfield avenue.

The Courain auto ran over the wheel, badly smashing it, but Church escaped with a few cuts and bruises. When the autoist made known where he was going, Mr. Churchill quickly waved him on and said he would talk it over later. Mr. Courain assumed the responsibility for the accident and is having a new wheel procured for the cyclist.

NO SERVICES AT ST. MARY'S SUNDAY.

Complying with the Board of Health order that no gathering of any kind, either indoor or outdoor, while the influenza epidemic continues, Rev. Father B. M. Bogan has announced that no services whatsoever will be held at St. Mary's church or St. Bernard's chapel next Sunday.

It had been intended to hold field masses on the lawn of St. Mary's church, as was done last Sunday, but in view of the danger that exists, it has been decided best to give up this form of service also. Announcement of the resumption of masses will be made as soon as the Board of Health removes the ban.

SERGT. DE KYNE WINNING LAURELS IN FRANCE.

Sergeant Irving De Kyne, a former resident of Plainfield but now of Amherst street, Highland Park, has been winning many laurels as a member of the Aviation Corps in active service in France. He has already been awarded the distinguished service cross and a bar. A French paper credits him with having overcome several enemy machines.

Sergeant De Kyne entered the service as a private in the 390th Machine Gun Battalion but was soon transferred to the Aviation Corps at his earnest desire. His mother, Mrs. Elmer De Kyne, of Highland Park, recently received a picture from him in which he appears in an areoplane watching a mechanic attaching bombs to his machine.

DRAFT LIST PUBLICATION UNAUTHORIZED.

Secretary Walter Freeman, of the Plainfield Exemption Board, stated today that the publication of draft names in the Courier-News yesterday, was wholly unauthorized and not sanctioned by the Board. He furtherr stated that the official lists had not been received from Washington and the Board disclaimed any responsibility for mistake or confusion caused by the offending newspaper. The master list used by the Courier-News in getting the names in order was taken from the New York newspapers which printed unofficial reports from Washington, consequently Plainfield draftees are requested to place no dependence on the publication of yesterday. Mr. Freeman received word today that the official list of order numbers had been mailed from Washington last night and as soon as those affecting the Plainfield district can be certified they will b gives out.

Local Interest in Rescue of Gallant American Battalion

The remarkable story, coming from France this week, of how an American battalion, surrounded by German forces for four days, fought off the enemy until help came, although without food, water or rest, is brought directly home to Plainfield from the fact that Major Charles W. Whittelesey, in command of the unit, is a cousin to Mrs. [illegible] Boardman Tyler, of 525 West Seventh street, this city. Major Whittelsey's home is in Pittsfield, Mass., and before entering active service was engaged in the practice of law in New York.

Haggard from lack of sleep and nearly famished, the men of the "lost" battalion, who were rescued Monday after having been surrounded for more than four days in the Argonne Forest, are now recovering from their harrowing experience.

The men had subsisted partly on oak leaves and many unites were so depleted by minor injures and weakness that wounded men had to take turns at guard duty. Yet they cheered as they drove back the German forces which were all around them.

When they reached the American lines they were white and exhausted, but were infinitely proud of their gallant stand. All were more willing to tell the story of the miraculous escape of their comrades and officers than to tell of their own experiences. Major Whittlesey was in command of the battalion.

A group of privates waiting to be taken from a field hospital which had been temporarily established in a little ruined church close behind the present line would not talk of themselves, but told of a second lieutenant who came out with eighteen machine gun bullets in his clothes, but without a scratch. He had one bruise from a bullet which killed a man behind him. A machine gun was fired at this lieutenant from a distance of thirty feet and the lieutenant's gas mask was cut away but the officer was uninjured.

It was just after midnigh when the news first reached the weary, but determined men that help was coming. The rescuers rushed in through the German lines, breaking one enemy defense after another and at last completed the rescue.

While fresh troops drove the Germans from the scene of their anticipated triumph the tired heroes of the battalion began to filter back to their bases. Many of the men were suffering from a variety of wounds, but most of these injuries were not serious. They were so exhausted and so nearly starved that they could scarcely eat when they were served with beef and coffee. As the day advanced, however, they improved considerably in vitality, and their spirits are now as high and defiant as they must have been during the days when they were beleaguered in the woods.

GRANTED A DIVORCE.

The Court of Chancery, yesterday granted an interlocutory decree of divorce to Harry Montross, of this city, from his wife, Alida Mae Montross. Mr. Montross was represented by Attorney V. W. Nash, Jr. Mrs. Montross was formerly Miss Alida Messler, of Scotch Plains.

The Enemy Is Watching

By NEWTON D. BAKER, Secretary of War

The supreme moments of our struggle with Germany have now come.

We have carried our first armies across three thousand miles of ocean and joined the issue of battle with the military power of a nation that has been for forty years preparing its plans and its weapons for its present attempt to dominate the world. We have had to put forth an immense effort and spend a fabulous sum in order to make, in so short a time, an adequate beginning for our gigantic task.

But it is only our beginning. We must follow it with greater energy and support it with increasing power. Men, munitions, ships and supplies must go to Europe in a larger and larger stream. We must redouble our blows and add constantly to the strength of those blows, if our initial effort is not to be wasted.

This Means That Our Fourth Liberty Loan Must Be Larger Than Its Predecessors, More Enthusiastically Supported and More Quickly Than Ever Subscribed

The enemy is watching anxiously for the first sign that we are faltering.

Our Government Loans should go "over the top" as eagerly as our soldiers do, in order to carry with them the terror of furious attack. Our dollars must rain upon the enemy as overwhelmingly as our hail of bullets or our storm of shells.

We are fighting for the liberty of the world, for the triumph of our ideals of democracy and self-government over the last great advocate of force upholding injustice. We are buying with our Liberty Loans the security and joy of our people for generations to come. No price could be too high to pay for such a victory—no cost too great for such a purchase.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

FRANK PARETTE.

Frank Parette, aged twenty-four years, of 434 West Front street, died Saturday, a victim of pneumonia following influenza. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the chapel of Cole & High, on West Second street, and Rev. H. St. George Burrill, of Holy Cross church, conducted the service. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

The young man was a machinist by trade and had been employed in local shops. He is survived by a wife and one child, also his parents, four brothers and seven sisters, living in Scotch Plains.

JAMES E. BROWN, JR.

James E. Brown, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jaces E. Brown, of 231 Somerset street, the borough, died Tuesday morning, after a long illness. The funeral will be held at the parents' home this afternoon at 2:30 and Rev. H. St. George Burrill, rector of the Church of the Holy Crocc, of which the young man was a member, will officiated. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Brown was eighteen years old and beside his parents, leaves three sisters and three brothers, Mrs. Thomas Boyle, of Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. J. J. Roberts, of Beverly; Mrs. Ethel Lynch, of North Plainfield, and William, Arthur and Robert Brown, of Syracuse, N. Y.

CHARLES GIEGEL.

Charles Giegel, aged thirty-four years, died at his home on South Second street, Monday, following an illness with pneumonia. He had been employed at the Pond Tool Works. His surviving relatives include his wife and three children.

The funeral was held at the late home, Wednesday morning, Rev. Father Holsters, of St. Mary's church, officiating. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. HARRY THEIN.

Mrs. Harry Thein, of 36 Everett place, died Monday night, after a brief illness with pneumonia. Beside her husband, she leaves an infant child. The funeral was held at the late home yesterday morning, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. WALTER GRAY.

Mrs. Ernestine Gray, wife of Walter Gray, and a former resident of Plainfield, died Monday at her home in Metuchen. She was thirty-four years old and the daughter of Mrs. William Waldron, of North Plainfield. Beside her husband and mother, she leaves several brothers and sisters living in Plainfield.

The funeral was held at the Springdale church Wednesday and was attended by many relatives and friends from this city. Interment was in the Springdale cemetery.

JOHN NEWELL.

Following one week's illness with influenza and pneumonia, death came on Monday morning, at Muhlenberg Hospital to John Newell, the nineteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Newell, of 417 Spruce street. The funeral was held at the late home Wednesday morning, when Rev. Father Holsters officiated in the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends. The floral tributes included a beautiful set piece from his class mates in the 1915 class of St. Mary's School, from which he was graduated, and a pillow from his closest boy associates. There were also other set pieces from the employes of the Standard Aero plant and of the Spicer plant at South Plainfield. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The casket was borne by six pallbearers who were classmates of the deceased, while six others, members of a social club to which he belonged, acted as honorary bearers. The former were Leo Keating, Francis T. Connolly, Cyril Poling, Robert Reynolds, Joseph Welsh and Robert Clarkson. The honorary escort was composed of Harry Coffey, William Schlick, Thomas Moore, John Connors, Martin Regan and Rufus LaRue.

Mr. Newell was born in Plainfield and had always lived in this city. After graduating from St. Mary's grammar school, he entered the Plainfield High School, and had made excellent progress in his studies. Because of the demand for young workers with ability, he entered the employ of the Standard Aero Corporation at the Bayway plant at the close of school last June and intended remaining until the war rush was over, returning then to complete his scholastic course. He was greatly liked by his classmates and all who knew him. His acquaintances were very numerous and his death is deeply regretted because of the likeable personality that has been taken away and the ending of a most promising career. The family is one of the best known in the West End and the sincere sympathy of the community has been extended to the parents and brothers and sisters.

Beside his parents, the young man is survived by four sisters and one brother. They are: Miss Mary Newell, a pupil nurse in the Somerset Hospital at Somerville; the Misses Catherine, Helen and Veronica and Joseph Newell, all living at the parental home. Joseph is a twin brother of the deceased.

MRS. ISABELLA R. POPE.

Mrs. Isabella R. Pope, widow of David S. Pope, died Friday night, at her home at 173 North avenue. She was a victim of the influenza epidemic, although she had been ill for a long time from the infirmities of age. Pneumonia developed soon after the influenza became apparent and she sank rapidly. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, on West Fourth street, and Rev. Dr. Shaw, former pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member, officiated in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, members of the family acting as pall-bearers.

Mrs. Pope was the daughter of the late Phineas F. and Sarah. D. Randolph and was born at Randolphville, below New Market, seventy-nine years ago. The greater part of her life was spent in this city, however, as her father came to Plainfield to operate a grist mill, first on upper Somerset street, near the Notch, and later on the bank of Greenbrook, near where Sycamore avenue has since been cut through. Mrs. Pope's husband, the late David S. Pope, was at one time assistant tax collector under Frank H. Smith, now State Banking and Insurance Commissioner. He died in 1905.

After completing her education Mrs. Pope became a teacher, and for a number of years previous to her marriage taught in the Stillman School at Fifth street and Arlington avenue, then the City High School. She was a woman of strong Christian character and in her younger days was an earnest worker in the local Seventh-Day Baptist church.

The only near surviving relatives of Mrs. Pope are one son, Elias R. Pope, of Newark, named in honor of his uncle, the late Elias R. Pope, who at the time of his sudden death in 1896, was one of Plainfield's most prominent citizens; also two nieces and two nephews, Mrs. Louis A. Clement, Mrs. Charles Davis, Clarence and Chester Pope, all of this city.

VINCENT H. KULDOSHES.

The funeral of Vincent H. Kuldoshes, whose death occurred at his home at 277 Dver street, the borough, was held in St. Joseph's church, Tuesday morning, Rev. Father Campbell offered the requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

Mr. Kuldoshes was forty-seven years old, and a carpenter by trade. He is survived by his wife and the following children: John, Margaret, Vincent, Isabella, George and Joseph Kuldoshes.

NICHOLAS FEDUNIDES.

Nicholas Fedunides, aged thirty-four years, who came to this city from New York during the past summer, was one of the local victims of influenza the past week. He passed away in Muhlenberg Hospital after only a few days' illness. He was a partner in the Greek concern conducting a fruit, cigar and candy store at 153 North avenue, and was stricken at his place of business. His only near surviving relative is a brother living in New York.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon, in the parlors of Casey & Son, North and Park avenues, and was in charge of Rev. Demetrius, pastor of a Greek church at Newark. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

VIRGINIA KINNETT.

Virginia Kinnett, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moyer, of Putnam avenue, died last Friday. The funeral was held at the parents' home Saturday night, and burial was at Yorkville, Ill.

EVELYN A. MASON.

Evelyn A. Mason, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Mason, of Jackson avenue, the borough, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday. Influenza is given as the cause. The funeral was held at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins on West Fourth street, Tuesday afternoon, Rev. J. O. McKelvey officiating. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

GEORGE VELMER LITTELL.

George Velmer Littell, formerly of Bound Brook, but more recently of Road Ending, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday, following influenza and pneumonia. He is survived by his wife and infant son, also his parents, four brothers and three sisters, all living in Bound Brook.

The funeral was held at J. J. & C. A. Higgins' chapel, Tuesday noon at 12:30, and later at the parents' residence in Bound Brook, where Rev. Dr. Terwilliger, of the Bound Brook Methodist church, officiated. Burial was in the Bound Brook cemetery.

COURTNEY STARKWEATHER.

Courtney Starkweather, a private in the Chemical Warfare Service of the Ordnance Department, whose home was at 329 Second place, this city, died at the Edgewood Arsenal, Base Hospital, Maryland, last Friday, a victim of influenza. The body was brought to Plainfield and the funeral was held at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jeanette Starkweather, of Second place, Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Backes, a friend of the family, officiated and burial was in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Private Starkweather was a graduate of Leal's School and also of Tufts College, Maine. He left the latter institution last spring to join the medical department. After five weeks' training at Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga., he was assigned to the Emergency Hospital at Edgewood Arsenal as a special investigator of accident cases. He was engaged in this work when the dreaded malady, now raging in camps and cantonments throughout the country, laid a lethal hand upon him.

The young man's father, Louis P. Starkweather, died some time ago, and his only near surviving relatives are his mother and one brother, the latter Louis Starkweather, of this city.

ROBERT B. COREY.

Robert B. Corey, a well-known resident of Plainfield, died Monday morning, at his home, 930 Hillside avenue, following an illness of several weeks. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at the family residence, and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, was in charge. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Corey was beloved by all who knew him and will be mourned by devoted friends wherever he has lived or worked. Always a staunch Democrat, he was president of the Democratic Club and a generaus and patriotic citizen in all phases of his life.

Mr. Corey leaves his wife, his mother, Mrs. Ella Jackson Corey, and his sister, Miss Alice Corey.

WILLIAM HOWARD.

Former Mayor William Howard, of Rahway, died Monday, in the home of his son, Guy M. Howard, in that city, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Howard was born near Plainfield seventy-two years ago and had been a resident of Rahway for more than fifty years. He was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in Company I, Thirty-ninth New Jersew Infantry.

Mr. Howard was a prominent figure for many years in political and financial circles in Rahway and Union county. He served two terms as county clerk, two terms as mayor of Rahway and several terms as member of Common Council of the city of Rahway, representing the Third ward. He was one of the organizers and for fifteen years the president of the Rahway National Bank. He was one of the orfianizers and the first president of the Workmen's Building and Loan Association. Up to the time of his death, he was one of the directors of the Rahway Savings Institution.

Mr. Howard engaged in the grocery business in Rahway many years ago and founded the concern known as William Howard & Son. He was the head of this firm for thirty years up to the time the business was suspended a few years ago.

He is survived by three sons: Guy M. Howard, business manager and secretary of the Board of Education; Charles C. Howard and A. Raymond Howard. The latter is the representative of the Standard Oil Company at Bethlehem, Pa. He is also survived by a brother, Charles Howard, who is superintendent of the Rahway Gas Light Company.

Mr. Howard was a member of the Union County Roadsters and of the Second Presbyterian church.

SARAH A. CARNEY.

The funeral of Miss Sarah A. Carney, whose death occurred Monday as the culmination of her long period of pain following an accident at Central avenue and Third street, on September 28, 1917, when she was pinned against a stone wall by an automobile, took place yesterday morning in St. Mary's church. The requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father Holsters, in the presence of only the immediate family, because of the Board of Health's prohibitory order as a preventative against the spread of influenza. The floral tributes were magnificent and gave mute evidence of the esteem in which Miss Carney was held and the universal sympathy aroused by the unusually sad circumstances leading up to her demise. One of the especial noteworthy offerings came from the Woodhull-Martin Company, where she was a departmental head for many years and another came from her fellow employes. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall-bearers were John, Charles and Peter Flynn, Charles Ward, Michael J. Whelan, George McCusker.

Miss Carney was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carney, and had lived in this city all her life. She was on her way home to lunch on September 28 of last year and had almost reached the corner of West Third street and Central avenue, when two automobiles collided directly opposite her. One was driven by Frank Carpenter, of Rahway road, and the other by William Alderman, of New Haven, Conn., representative for the New Haven Wrecking Company, which was then engaged in tearing down the old Netherwood Hotel. One of the cars swung to the sidewalk, leaped the curb and bore down upon Miss Carney. She made a desperate attempt to get out of harm's way but without success. The unmanageable machine pinned her against the McDonough property wall, breaking her thigh and causing other injuries that confined her to Muhlenberg Hospital for many months. She was finally able to be taken home but never recovered from the severity of the hurts. Complications developed recently in an acute form and death came Monday as a release from the terrible pain that was borne with remarkable fortitude.

Miss Carney had an acquaintanceship that extended to every part of the city and borough and even those who did not know her have been open in their expression of sympathy. These have been conveyed to her surviving relatives who are her three sisters and a niece. They are the Misses Mary, Margaret and Catherine Carney and Miss Margaret McCarthy, all living at the Central avenue address.

PRIVATE CLARENCE JETER.

The funeral of Private Clarence Jeter, colored, of Webster place, this city, who fell a victim to influenza at Camp Dix, Monday, will be held at his late home here this afternoon at 2 o'clock. It will be in charge of Rev. E. W. Roberts, of the Shiloh Baptist church, and a detail of soldiers will accord military honors. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Private Jeter was twenty-five years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jeter, of Webster place. He had been at Camp Dix since last summer, having gone out of Plainfield with one of the selective contingents. His death is the first of any colored boy from this vicinity while in the service.

Beside his parents, Private Jeter is survived by one brother, William, Jr., and a sister, Miss Marjorie Jeter, both of this city.

KATRINA HAFF.

Katrina Haff, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Haff, of 951 West Fifth street, died Wednesday morning. She was a victim of pneumonia which developed quickly after an attack of influenza. The funeral service was held at the parents' home yesterday afternoon and was in charge of Rev. Mr. Backus, of All Souls' Unitarian church. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Beside her parents, the child is survived by three brothers, Stephen, Jr., Otis and Osgood Haff. The little girl was a granddaughter of the late Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the New Jersey Central at the time of his death, three years ago.

STEPHEN H. BEECHING.

Stephen H. Beeching, for more than forty years a resident of Watchung, but more recently residing in this city, died Tuesday night, at his home at 1022 West Front street, following an illness of about a year. He underwent an operation at the outset of his sickness but never recovered. The funeral will be held at the late home, this afternoon, and will be private because of the Board of Health's edict. Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, of which Mr. Beeching was a faithful member, will officiate, and he will be assisted by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of Passaic formerly of this city.

Mr. Beeching was born in Brooklyn fifty-five years ago but removed to Watchung with his parents when only a boy. He was employed in New York the greater part of his life, first with the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company and since 1903 with the Hanover Safe Deposit Company. He was a most estimable citizen in every way, quiet in his tastes, and devoted to his family.

Mr. Beeching is survived by his wife, who was Miss Lidie Allen, of Watchung, three daughters and a son. They are: Mrs. Charles M. Sebring, Mrs. William Hand, who is in Charleston, S. C., with her husband, who is with the Naval Reserves; Miss Edna Beeching, living at the family home, and a son, Lisle A. Beeching, now in the Quartermasters' Department at Camp Dix. He also leaves Mrs. Robert Love, of Grove street, and a brother, George M. Beeching, of Watchung.

CARL CARLSON.

Carl Carlson, aged fifty-one years, died Tuesday night, at his home at 727 Richmond street, following a brief illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held privately this morning at 11 o'clock and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

THOMAS DOWLING.

Thomas Dowling, a former well-known resident of Plainfield, died suddenly Sunday night at his home, 239 East Fifty-fifth street, New York. He had been ailing a long time from injuries received when he was run down by an automobile but Sunday he was able to be about the house and to all appearances was better than he had been for some time. It is possible that a sudden attack of heart failure was the direct cause of his demise.

The funeral was held in the Church of St. John the Evangelist in New York, Wednesday morning, and the body was afterward brought to Plainfield for interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Dowling was fifty-seven years old and came to this city from Ireland when a young man. He married Miss Elizabeth Mottley, sister of Patrick Mottley, of 507 South Second street, and the late John Mottley, whose home was at 674 West Fourth street, and later removed to New York. He maintained all his Plainfield friendships by frequent visits to this city, the last of which was about two months ago.

HOWARD RAYMOND LESGETT.

Howard Raymond Leggett, son of Mrs. Carrie P. and the late J. Howard Leggett, former residents of this city, died Sunday, in the Memorial Hospital at Morristown, following an illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held at he mother's home in Western avenue, Morristown, Wednesday, and burial was in Hillside cemetery, this city.

Mr. Leggett was twenty-four years old and at the time his last illness began was in the service as an inspector of ordnance. Previous to entering the army he was engaged in newspaper work at Morristown. His mother is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Fisher, whose home was for many years on West Fourth street, opposite the Franklin School. His father, the late J. Howard Lesgett, opened the first drug store in the Y. M. C. A. building in the store recently vacated by Peter B. Hodge.

MRS. LULU CORRIEL MINERD.

Mrs. Lulu Corriel Minerd, of 17 Harmony street, the borough, whose son, Harry B. Corriel, twenty one years old, succumbed to influenza two weeks ago, died of the same disease in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday. A daughter of Mrs. Minerd is now in the hospital for the same malady but today was reported as being improved.

The funeral of Mrs. Minerd was held at DeMott's undertaking parlors on Somerset street, eWdnesday morning, and was conducted by Rev. Robert Love. Interment was in North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Minerd was forty-five years old, and had always lived in the city or borough. Beside her husband, she is survived by several children.

Jerseyites Buying Sugar in New York Must Sign Cards

Residents of New Jersey purchasing sugar in New York will be required to sign for it just as though they would do if they bought it in their home State. Arrangements to provide for this procedure were completed this week by William S. Tyler, Federal Food Administrator for New Jersey, and Arthur Williams, Food Administrator for New York.

The object sought is to have the one rule apply to every Jerseyman, irrespective of where he makes his sugar purchases, and also to enable the Federal Food Administration of New Jersey to determine the sugar consumption of its State as well as to bring about an equal distribution of the commodity. New York does not require "counter registration" by her people for sugar purchases as New Jersey does for hers and many persons by buying their sugar in New York obtained an unfair advantage over those who purchased from stores in this State.

Under this new arrangement all sales by New York grocers of sugar for delivery in New Jersey by mail or otherwise, must conform to the New Jersey rules and grocers making such sales must equip themselves with Jersey blanks requiring signatures of the purchasers. These blanks will be forwarded to the New Jersey Food Administration at the end of each week showing the address as well as the signature of the purchaser and the amount purchased.

The New Jersey Food Administration this week took occasion to deny a story which gained circulation recently to the effect that there were no restrictions on the purchase of sugar in Canada. Such stories are voiced in the light of German propaganda, as the Canada Food Board as far back as August limited sugar consumption to 1½ pounds per person per month, which is less than our allowance.

Furthermore only this week Canada established a butter allowance of two pounds per person per month. The United States, while urging the conservation of butter, has not set any specified allowance for its people.

SECRETARY STAATS RESIGNS.

Stephen Staats, secretary at fire headquarters, resigned his position during the past week to accept another one with a firm in New York city. He is spending his evenings at headquarters to help out with the work until his successor can be appointed.

HOW PLAINFIELD MET THE EMERGENCY TEST.

Perhaps it was the war time spirit pervading the breasts of our people and again it may have been a natural show of sympathy for those afflicted, but at any rate, Plainfield may well be proud of itself for the record it displayed in sharing the task of caring for the refugees from last Friday night's catastrophe at Morgan. Never in the history of the city was there a quicker or more spontaneous response to the appeals for help. If the records could be secured, they would show that Plainfield was even ahead of its sister comunities in holding out the helping hand and making the homeless ones feel that they were among friends.

To William H. Wherry, Jr., chairman of the Civilian Relief Committee, much of the credit is due for the good work that went on all of Saturday and Sunday in this city and afterward extended to Perth and South Amboys. As soon as word came from the stricken area that thousands of persons were to be turned out of their homes to go, no one knew where, Mr. Wherry got his organization into perfect working order and met the emergency. Closely associated with him was Mrs. C. R. Banks, of the local Red Cross Chapter, who assembled her many assistants as if by magic. When the first of the refugees entered the city, they received a welcome they will never forget; those who needed food were given it; those who needed rest did not lack for a cot, and those who lacked clothing were quickly clad. By nightfall, three hundred persons, ranging from infants in arms to feeble old men, were under the guarding wing of the Plainfield people and they lacked for nothing all the while they were here.

Mr. Wherry and Mrs. Banks have endeavored to express their own appreciation for the help accorded them but it is impossible to reach every individual. They feel especially grateful to the Plainfield Elks, who sheltered 125 of the homeless ones, to the Knights of Columbus, who placed their big hall and clubhouse at the disposal of the Relief Committee, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A. and numerous other organizations and scores of individuals. At one household, that of Henry Romond, twenty-three persons were provided with food and given shelter over night, an evidence of fraternalism that makes everyone stop and think. The Armour Company, through Mr. Paul, the local manager, donated the use of a big truck, and with Barton K. Davis in charge, went as far as Somerville collecting cots and bedding. Men went down in their pockets for dollars and women even took blankets off their own beds in order to make sure that the little folks turned out on the world did not suffer from cold through the night. It was a grand and inspiring outburst of sympathy on the part of the people, the kind that makes one feel that whenever the helping hand is needed it will not be held back in Plainfield.

Mr. Wherry and his committee have not stopped with the temporary work of succor as seen in town on Saturday and Sunday. They have extended their efforts to the immediate vicinity of Morgan and are carrying on to the limit of their resources the task of caring for the people who are still homeless, their own houses having been rendered unfit for habitation. On Sunday night a big van load of bedding and cots was sent to Perth Amboy, even more than came from Newark, with all its resources and organized relief commissions. On Monday and Tuesday still more supplies were sent to the Amboys and the Plainfield Red Cross intends that they shall keep on going until every available supply has been exhausted.

It has taken the explosion to show that, when the time came, the Plainfield Red Cross was ready to meet an emergency. It was like bringing the frightful war directly to our own door step, giving the people a chance to see what Belgium had to suffer from the time of the invasion of 1914 up to the present day. In previous years the citizens have done their share in helping out stricken Europe and last Saturday showed that they can help out stricken New Jersey or any other part of the country. The Red Cross and the citizens have a right to feel proud of their achievement.

THE SENATORIAL PRIMARY RESULT.

Now that practically complete returns are at hand of the New Jersey senatorial primary it affords an opportunity of making some interesting comparisons. The total Republican vote for the long term was 121,923, of this Governor Edge received 87,941. The Democratic vote was 64,695. La Monte received 18,076, a minority candidate. Senator Baird, for the short term, received 97,080. This will indicate a loss of 24,843, or about 20 per cent., from the full Republican vote and at first thought it may be considered as a result of Senator Baird's stand on woman suffrage, but such is not the case when we consider that Mr. Hennessy received 51,797, an indicated loss of the same amount, i. e., 20 per cent. Mr. Hennessy stood with the President on the woman suffrage question, so that had nothing to do with the vote, for both long and short terms was the same. The election is not likely to change the proportions and as Governor Edge will poll the full party vote, he will have a majority of 57,228, and Senator Baird will have a majority of 45,283. Evidently New Jersey is still a Republican State.

EXPLOSION EXCHOES.

We beg to advise that early last Saturday morning we suffered an acute attack of insomnia.

The malady seemed to be prevalent within a radius of twenty-five miles about a small town to the South of us named Morgan.

The explosion had one chance to save itself from being an ill wind but it lost out. The "hole in the wall" still stands in South Amboy as mean and small as it ever was. If it had only been blown big enough to allow two automobiles to pass at one time we could have forgiven the annoyances brought about by the rebellious T. N. T.

Perhaps the Fool Killer is busy in some other part of the country but nevertheless there is plenty of work for him in this immediate section. His presence is urgently needed to take care of people who carry loaded shells away from Morgan as souvenirs and women who tell children where a loaded gun is so they can send a bullet through a girl's body.

At last we have learned what's the matter with the Nott. The poor thing has a chronic case of influenza and should be given hot drinks and put to bed for a sweat, instead of being yanked out in the open air without a moment's warning.

Just as the churches had gotten together and adopted "Bondward Christian Soldiers," as the official hymn next Sunday, the Board of Health closes them up until the flu bug flies away. Well, never mind, fellow sneezers, your heart is in the right place and your individual solo will help a whole lot.

Our esteemed fellow townsman, William (Brockton Bill) Smith, is uffering from a pair of hot ankles generated early last Friday morning in putting 29,400 lineal yards between himself and Morgan, N. J. Incidentally, Mr. Smith will be at home to his friends all winter at the Elks' Club, having decided that he and the T. A. Gillespie Company have nothing in common.

Everett Maplesden, another of our popular young citizens, anonunces that he has resigned his position with the T. A. Gillespie Company at Morgan in favor of a near-sighted stranger from Indiana who has poor hearing and can't read the newspapers. The job is all right, Mr. Maplesden says, but he never did care about sticking around a place where you can't look cross-eyed at things without their going off.

A week ago last Saturday night all was jollification, good fellowship and patriotic ferver at the local Elks' Club as the members tried to outdo themselves in giving a royal welcome to the scarred veterans of the French army band. Last Saturday night, with grim faces, easy tread and hearts welling over with sympathy, these same members set about the task of housing 125 men, women and children made homeless by the explosion at Morgan. Is it any wonder they call the "THE BEST PEOPLE ON EARTH!"

'Ware the sneezer in these days of Spanish influenza. He may scatter a million germs into the air you breathe. Which brings the thought—Why not muzzle the sneezers? Put a gas mask on 'em. Or lock 'em up till the epidemic subsides.

Saw "Joe" Farlee going down the street the other day with a mild-eyed goat in his express auto. On inquiry, we learned that it formerly belonged to the common peepul but was taken from them by the Public Service Corporation, after the two-cent fare increase was announced.

The pathetic stories coming out of the Morgan explosion predominate, yet there are a number of a humorous nature that shed a ray of sunshine on the dark spots. One of the best of the latter is told about a colored hostler employed in the Joseph F. Burke stables on the Gillespie grounds. He was finishing up his work for the night on the eventful Friday of last week, when the first big explosion rocked the buildings for miles around. Mr. Colored Man didn't need to be told what was the matter. He had been on the job long enough to know the signs, and grabbing up a few personal belongings he had nearby, missed all the low places getting to the Morgan station. Rushing up to the agent he threw down a roll of bills and yelled:

The station agent naturally asked where he wanted to go but the excited darky answered that it didn't make much difference but if it was all the same to the company, he would like to get to California or some other distant point as soon as possible. Again the station agent asked for some definite destination, whereat the colored man exclaimed:

"Listen, Mister, do you hear that awful noise up there on the hill?"

"Well, Boss, that racket is being made by T. N. T. and T. N. T. means 'Travel, Nigger, Travel,' so for God's sake, give me a ticket to the end of the line and give it to me quick."

Clergyman Compares Young Lieutenant's Life With That of Clean-Souled General Grant

One of the largest assembles that has been noted at any funeral service in St. Mary's church the present year was in evidence on Tuesday morning, when a solemn high mass of requiem was said for the repose of the soul of Lieutenant Edward Aloysius Carty, of this city, who gave up his life for the cause of liberty while at Camp Sevier, Greenville, S. C. The untimely demise and sudden termination of a promising military career brought sorrow to the entire community and a ready response when the last sad rites were held in the home town the young man had quitted only a short time before, radiant in the bloom of perfect health and manhood.

Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church was the celebrant of the mass and he was assisted by Rev. Father Campbell, of St. Joseph's church, the borough, as deacon, and Rev. Father Holsters, assistant at St. Mary's, as sub-deacon. The offertory was rendered as a duet by Miss Mary Donnelly and Miss Eleanora McCarthy, of the church choid, and they also sang the recessional, "Jesus, Saviour of My Soul."

In a brief address to the bereaved parents and friends, Father Bogan extolled the life of Lieutenant Carty, which, he said, was one that might well be followed by others. Incidentally he referred to a letter which had been forwarded to the young man's mother by Col. Van Schaick, commanding the 20th Train Headquarters at Camp Sevier, in which he said: "I never heard him say a word that might not have been said in your presence. I never knew him to do a thing that he could not have done with his mother watching him."

With these words in mind, Father Bogan likened the clean heart of Lieutenant Carty to that of General Grant, who, when a profane officer remarked that he could say what he wanted to because there were no ladies present, "There are no ladies but I wish to remind you that there are gentlemen here."

Masses of flowers, many of the larger set pieces having come from the officers and soldiers at Camp Sevier, were displayed about the casket. Some of them came from friends in this city, Jersey City and New York, and one large token was the remembrance of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, of which the young lieutenant was an active member.

The body was borne to its last resting place in St. Mary's cemetery by the following bearers: Andrew E. Kenney, H. P. Greenwod, George J. Tobin, Peter F. Cogley, James L. Conway and John C. Traynor.

The death of Lieutenant Carty occurred at Camp Sevier last Friday, and a funeral service was held at Greenville, Saturday afternoon, before all that was mortal of the young soldier was started on its journey to Plainfield. The service is thus described by the Greenville Star:

"The funeral services over the remains of First Lieut. Edward A. Carty, Adjutant of the 20th Infantry Military Police, were held at No. 707 Buncombe street at 4:30 Saturday afternoon, Father Robert L. Mulcahey, chaplain of the 48th Infantry, officiating. The remains were accompanied to the Southern R. R. station by the band of the 50th Infantry and by an escort of honor from Lieut. Carty's old company, the Machine Gun Company of the 48th Infantry. The officers of the 20th Military Police attended in a body. John Carty, a brother, and Mrs. Colonel Bond were among the attendants. Covered with the flag of the land he loved and served, the body was shipped to another hero mother of young American manhood at Plainfield, New Jersey, for interment."

Lieutenant Carty was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Carty, of Orchard place, and had always lived in Plainfield. He was born at the Orchard place address of his parents and after being graduated from St. Mary's School began a business career in New York. When only a youth, he associated himself with the Duplex Razor Company, of Jersey City, which concern, now one of the largest in the country, is headed by Thomas Sheehan, a former Plainfielder. Lieutenant Carty was rapidly promoted from one position to another, until a few years ago he was made chief travelling salesman. In this capacity, he had been touring the United States, Cuba and Porto Rico and had built up a splendid trade for the Duplex people. He was in line for still further advancement when war was declared on Germany and he decided to enter the Officers' Training School at Fort Myer, Va. He passed all examinations with flying colors and was one of the first young men from this vicinity to be commissioned a lieutenant. He was a splendid specimen of young manhood, standing full six feet in height and built in proportion, thus possessing a figure that made him an attractive officer. In addition, he possessed the executive ability so vitally necessary in the qualifications of an able officer.

After leaving the Training School, the young lieutenant was assigned to duty at Norfolk, Va., where for many months he gave the Government excellent service as instructor. He repeatedly asked for overseas duty, but this was refused because of his need at home. Two months ago he was transferred to Camp Sevier, and there made adjutant and personnel officer of the 48th Machine Gun Company, attached to the 90th Division, now being organized to full strength for early service at the front. It was while he was working early and late, at this station, that he contracted the fatal illness which caused his death.

Only a few days before the fatal telegram came, announcing the end of the young lieutenant's career, his parents received a letter from him in which he told of his promotion and enthusiastically declared that he intended to try harder than ever for further advancement. He stated in this epistle that he was enjoying good health, consequently the first news of his illness, flashed by wire, proved to be a great shock. His brother, John J. Carty, connected with the executive department of the local telephone exchange, started for Greenville, Friday noon, hoping to reach the dying lad's bedside before the end came. As a matter of fact death had ensued at 1 o'clock Friday morning, the telegram arriving in Plainfield shortly after the brother had taken his departure. The telephone company got in communication with their offices at Baltimore and Washington and he was apprised of the news at Wilmington, Del. He continued on, however, and on reaching Camp Sevier, took charge of the body, returning to Plainfield with it Sunday night.

Lieutenant Carty, beside being a communicant of St. Mary's church, was one of the most active members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus. When he was at home for brief periods after long trips, he never lost a chance to aid in any of the organization's work, displaying the true spirit of a Knight, at every possible occasion. His demise came as an especial loss to the Council, already sorrowing for two other members who had given up lives in Uncle Sam's service from the same cause. They were Joseph Murray, of West Fourth street, who passed away at the Newport Naval Station two weeks ago, and James Whelan, of East Second street, claimed by influenza at the Hampton Roads Naval Base Hospital on Thursday of last week.

Members of the Council assembled at the Carty home Monday night, where ritualistic services were held in memory of the departed brother. The ceremonies were in charge of Grand Knight Charles L. Kling and Rev. Father B. M. Bogan offered the invocation.

Beside his parents and brother, John, Lieutenant Carty is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Edward Feiring and Miss Maria Carty, and three other brothers, Thomas F., Joseph C., and George Carty.

The letter from Colonel Van Schaick, referred to by Father Bogan at the funeral service, was as follows:

"My dear Mrs. Carty:

"I want to express to you my propound sorrow in the loss of your son, Edward.

"Lieutenant Carty was my adjutant. I knew him well. He died for his country just as though he had died in a front line trench in France. We all loved and respected him. I had recommended him for promotion to the grade of first lieutenant and was waiting for the order promoting him in order to recommend him for a further promotion to captain. He was worthy to be a captain in this war. I never heard him say a word that might not have been said in your presence. I never knew him to do a thing that he could not have done with his mother watching him. When time lessens your grief, I hope you may be able to think with joy and pride of this soldier of yours who gave himself to his country.

"Sincerely,

"LOUIS J. VAN SCHAICK,
"Colonel Infantry, Commanding 20th Train Headquarters."

LaMonte's Opponents Concede Nomination

It is now conceded by both his opponents in the Democratic primary that George M. La Monte has won the nomination for United States Senator.

Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessy, who is the nominee for the short term, decided two days after the primary that La Monte's lead assured him the nomination for the regular term, and Tuesday Alexander Simpson, the closest rival of La Monte for the regular term, telephoned the Bound Brook man, conceding his nomination. Mr. Simpson added that he was ready to do all in his power to support Mr. La Monte.

Tuesday night Mr. Simpson said that he made arrangements to stump the State in the interest of Mr. La Monte.

Plans Made For Voting By Soldiers In Home Camps

Regulations under which officers and men of the army stations in home camps may vote in the primary or geheral elections of their States were announced this week by Acting Secretary Crowell. The general staff has arranged to permit election officials to go into the various camps and establish headquarters for registering the men and taking their ballots, and state representatives of political organizations have been asked to designate representatives for the purpose.

Literature designed to instruct the voter in the manner of casting his ballot may be distributed from camp election booths, but distribution of literature designed to influence him in regard to his choice is forbidden.

TRADES' COUNCIL GIVES UP MEETINGS.

The Building Trades' Council regular meeting for tonight has been declared off and no more will be arranged until notice is given by Business Agent William Lunger.

The meetings of all unions connected with the Council have also been dicontinued and Mr. Lunger will give notice of these when the time comes for resumption.

HARRY GOELLER OVERSEAS.

Mrs. William Goeller, of 108 New street, has received word that her son, Corporal Harry Goeller, has arrived safely overseas. He left Plainfield several months ago for Camp Humphreys, Va., and after a very short period of training, was picked for work at the front.

MACHINISTS' MEETINGS OFF.

Local No. 167, International Association of Machinists, has abandoned all meetings until after the Board of Health's closing order has been lifted. When the meetings are to be assumed, due notice will be given by the secretary.

Does Plainfield Need A Stimulant to Patriotism

DOES Success in the Liberty Loan drive depend upon those public demonstrations and spectacular activities which are prohibited in the interest of public health?

DOES our sense of patriotic duty depend upon brass bands, bunting and oratory? Must the Liberty Loan Committee despair of finding a patriotic response in Plainfield because the inspiration and the entertainment and the enthusiasm of public gatherings are not attainable?

IN OUR OPINION, NO!

We have gone beyond the orders of the Board of Health in abstaining from any activity which would endanger the welfare of the community.

We believe that not one dollar will be withheld on this account.

We believe that conscience is the best persuasion---that duty is not a matter of enthusiasm, and that Plainfield patriotism needs no inspiration.

LIBERTY DAY, TOMORROW, will be a day of consecration, rather than a day of celebration. Its purpose will not be marred by the absence of a holiday program.

LIBERTY DAY is a day upon which there should be an enrollment of bond subscribers as great as the total of the two weeks previous.

Plainfield should record nearly $1,000,000 between 10 o'clock and 3 o'clock tomorrow. Plainfield knows what must be done---it knows from the records how little of the job it has so far disposed of---it will have the opportunity tomorrow to catch up with the job.

Banks will be open from 10 o'clock to 3 o'clock TOMORROW for LIBERTY LOAN business only.

WHY NOT help us to prove TOMORROW that Ours is Not a TIN-PAN Patriotism ?

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The employes of all of Plainfield's industrial plants have been among the heaviest buyers of Liberty Bonds in the present campaign. Other purchases announced this week, include $2,000 bought by Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., and $1,000 by St. Mary's Parish.

Dr. David J. Hill, of Newark, a former ambassador to Germany, will be the principal speaker at the 100th anniversary of the First Baptist church, of this city, to be observed with an elaborate program on November 3, 4, and 5. Dr. Hill is the son of a former pastor of the church and has a wide acquaintance in Plainfield.

By the will of the late Charles B. Matthewson, who died at his home on Sandford avenue, this city, on September 20, the residue of his estate, amounting to a considerable sum, is bequeathed his niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Matthewson Lufburrow, wife of Charles B. Lufburrow, of West Front street. A carnelian ring, which Dr. Matthewson cherished highly, because of associations, is left Dr. Lufburrow. Miss Adele Kirby, as trust officer of the Plainfield Trust Company, which was named as executor, made the application for probating the will at the office of the surrogate the past week.

Although all public gatherings are forbidden at present, because of the influenza epidemic, Plainfield's policemen are completing arrangements for their annual ball on Friday, November 1, in Columbus Hall. his date had been set before the Board of Health issued the present prohibitory order. It is the general belief that the ban will be lifted by November and the blue coats have kept at work in order to make their only annual social event duplicate successes of other years.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walton, the aged couple who were overcome by leaking gas in their apartment at 120 West Front street, last Friday, were discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday. Both have fully recovered from the near suffocation although when first discovered they were in a serious condition. Mr. Walton was for years employed in Muhlenberg Hospital as night orderly but since last spring has been working for the Borden Milk Company.

Max A. Maximoff, known professionally as "Maximus," has given up his private practice in Plainfield in order to enlist in the Army Hospital Corps and has been stationed at the Colonia Hospital, for reconstruction work among wounded soldiers. During the years he has been in Plainfield, Mr. Maximoff has had wonderful success in the treatment of dislocated vertebrae and misplaced ligaments, and in transferring his endeavors to soldier boys in need of such valuable service is a patriotic move that is highly appreciated by his many friends. His sanitarium on lower Park avenue has been given up for the time being but will be reopened on his return to the city.

Every retail grocer in Plainfield, in common with those throughout the United States, will be asked this week to sign a pledge to conform to the rules and regulations of the food administration and to co-operate in the enormous food saving program necessary if America is to fulfill its obligation to its associates in the war and to European neutrals.

Bertram F. Tallamy, of 548 West Front street, purchased at auction the Neal property at 556 West Front street, adjoining his own premises. The property was for many years known as the Manning-Vermeule place and was one of the best known in that section of the city. It eventually came into the possession of the late Frank Neal, and has been held up to now by his widow.

Heavy volumes of smoke pouring out from the side of the building at 310 Liberty street, occupied by Joe Rigandi, caused someone to turn in a fire alarm from box 46 at 5:10, Tuesday afternoon. The firemen responded promptly but found nothing to do as the smoke came from a bonfire in the yard where Joe was burning up some old tar paper.

Deeply humiliated because he had been arrested for intoxication and sentenced to a term of thirty days, Amedeo Church, thirty-four years old, of Somerset street, committed suicide in the borough jail, Monday night, by hanging himself with his belt. He bore an excellent reputation and the belief exists that he felt he was irrevocably disgraced in the eyes of his friends. Church conducted a shoe repairing establishment on upper Somerset street and was an accomplished musician, being especially proficient with the cornet and violin. He is survived by his mother and three brothers, one of whom, Louis Church, is in the service. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The application of Albert Lederer, of North Plainfield, to be released from the Somerset county jail, where he has been incarcerated for three weeks for failure to pay alimony to his wife, Mrs. Florence Lederer, of New York, was denied, Tuesday, by Vice Chancellor Lane. The application was made by Arthur Murphy, of this city. Lederer is supposed to pay his wife seven dollars and fifty cents a week, and now owes her two hundred and ninety dollars. He has also been fined fifty dollars and costs by the court, because of his attempts at evasion.

The City Council, at its meeting Monday night, awarded Michael Mango, a contract for an extension to the sanitary sewer. His bed of $2,733.70 was accepted over that of one submitted by Frank Mobus for $4,597.60. At the same meeting, B. Joseph Dukszta asked permission to install a gasoline tank in front of his place of business on West Second street and the Wayne Oil Company asked a similar permit for a tank in front of the Packard Agency at Park avenue and Seventh street. Both were referred to the fire and buildings committee.

INJURY TO HAND COSTS HIM A THUMB.

William J. Mottley, of 507 South Second street, suffered the amputation of a thumb at Muhlenberg Hospital, a few days ago, following an injury to his hand while working at the Queen City Garage on East Fifth street.

Mottley was engaged in repairing a motor and accidenetally caught his hand in the mechanism while testing it out. The thumb was so badly torn that the physicians found it impossible to save it. He was to have remained at Muhlenberg Hospital, but owing to the great rush at the institution because of the influx of pneumonia patients, he was removed to his home for further treatment.

"COUNT" CORBIN ENTERS THE AVIATION CORPS.

Charles Corbin, of 707 West Fourth street, known to his friends as "Count," has been accepted by the aviation corps as a motor mechanic. He will leave for Longley Field, Va., tomorrow, to begin his training.

"Count" was given a farewell reception by a party of friends Monday night, John Cose, Jr., acting as chairman. One of the evening's features was musical selections by Professor Kogan, the celebrated violinist, formerly of Plainfield but now living in New York. Refreshments were served in conclusion.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. O'Brien, of Perth Amboy, are both ill with influenza at the home of Mrs. O'Brien's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Connolly, of West Sixth street.

PERSONAL

Jesse G. Mulford, of Woodland avenue, who has been in a base hospital at Mineola, L. I., for the past four months, following an illness with pneumonia, is reported as being almost back to his normal strength and may possibly soon return to active service in the Aviation Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Fynn, of 545 East Second street, are the parents of a young son, who arrived at their home Monday. The little fellow has twin sisters, Florence and Helen, now two years ago, who were the pets of the Halsey Island colony at Lake Hopatcong, the past summer. Mr. Fynn is proprietor of the Van Dyk Store on East Front street.

Elton Giles, of West Fifth street, who has been in the naval service for the past year, was a visitor in town over the week-end, following his arrival on this side of the Atlantic after his tenth "trans-Atlantic" trip. He was accompanied here by his "bunk-mate," Fred Wiggin, of Tilton, New Hampshire. At the conclusion of the next round trip, Mr. Giles will proceed to New Hampshire with Mr. Wiggin for a week's deer hunting.

Joseph Miner, of Liberty street, is among the Plainfielders arriving overseas recently. Word to this effect was received by his wife, this week. Mr. Miner was formerly a member of the city fire department stationed at headquarters.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Carolyn Gale Slausson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Slausson, of East Front street, to Ernest Warner Van Zandt, of this city. No date for the wedding has been set.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Caleen, former residents of this city, who have been living in Chicago for the past eight years, have returned to Plainfield, and are temporarily making their home with Mrs. Caleen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Manning F. Gano, of Grove street. While in Chicago, Mr. Caleen was in the employ of a railway appliance manufacturing company but resigned to take a position in the cost department of the Pond Tool Works.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Skaggs, of Central avenue, are the parents of a daughter, born to them a few days ago. Mr. Skaggs is pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Mrs. Albert F. La Rock, of West Sixth street, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia for the past ten days, following an attack of influenza, is now much improved and gradually recovering her strength.

Thomas Simpson, of West Sixth street, is numbered among the latest local influenza sufferers. He was taken ill the forepart of the week and is at present "holding his own."

City Judge William G. DeMeza spent Tuesday at Greenwich, Conn., on business. While there, he took occasion to enjoy a brief chat with Ralph L. Morrow, formerly of the Plainfield Daily Press and now managing editor of the Greenwich Press.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper, of Willow avenue, are the parents of a baby daughter, born to them Monday.

Rev. Father Walter Hennessey, assistant rector at St. Mary's church, continues to improve at Muhlenberg Hospital, to which he was taken last Friday night, after an attack of influenza had turned into pneumonia. He was very low the forepart of the week but today was reported as "resting comfortably."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, of West Eighth street, returned home recently after spending the summer at Westhampton Beach, L. I.

Victor Crook, of Berckman street, who resigned as a member of the fire department several months ago and has recently been working for the T. A. Martin Express Company, has been reappointed to the department and is now stationed at headquarters.

Miss Kathlyn Hagan, of Liberty street, is confined to her home by an attack of the influenza, which made its appearance on Monday.

Fire Chief Andrew D. Jennings was among the Plainfielders permitted this week to enter the Gillespie grounds at Morgan, to witness the devastation caused by last Friday night's explosion. He was driven to the scene by Gus Romond and was extended every courtesy by the Coast Guards maintaining the cordon thrown around the place. The Chief sums up his opinion of the ruin and desolation at the plant and South Amboy by the brief expression: "It is simply terrible."

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kline, of West Third street, was the scene of a wedding, Sunday night, when their daughter, Miss Rose Kline, was made the wife of George Jacobs, formerly of New York, but now of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large gathering of friends by Rabbi Cantor, of this city. Following a wedding trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs will make their home on West Third street.

Charles F. McCann, of West Third street, who has been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for nearly two weeks, suffering from influenza and pneumonia, was reported today as improving steadily. In the early part of his illness, his life was despaired of for several days.

S. Clark Mundy, of the borough, for seventeen years in the employ of Mayor William L. Smalley, at his Park avenue market, has taken a position with Clifford L. Applegate, at the latter's East Front street market.

The home of Vincent W. Nash on Prospect avenue resembles a miniature hospital. Mr. Nash, himself, is ill with gallstones and complications, Mrs. Nash is confined to her bed by a severe attack of rheumatism and her daufhter, Miss Margaret C. Nash, has influenza in an advanced form.

Charles P. Titsworth, of Madison avenue, is at the Hotel Chatham, Vanderbilt avenue, New York. A great many New Jersey people of refined tastes have sbought this hotel for the same reason that Newport society has made its New York headquarters there, the Chatham is not only luxurious and beautiful, but noiseless—a thing practically unknown in a mid-town hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newton Crane, who have been residing at 525 Madison avenue, have removed to 737 Kensington avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Crane lived for a number of years on Leland avenue and the former says it is like getting back home to return to the East End of town.

of the Building Trades Employers Association, but that, pending further instructions from Washington, the names of the members of the committee would not be publicly announced. The committee, however, is now ready to receive applications of owners, architects and contractors having building operations in project which they consider to have merits of essentiality. These applications may be made through Mr. Newell, Secretary, Room 617, Hall of Records.

Building material prices have no definite basis a the moment. All quotations are subject to immediate acceptance and are likely to change from day to day. There is a firm market for composition roofing materials, however, with the market strong on demand. Slate surface roll is now quoted as $2 at the mill and tarred felt per ton at $59, a gain of two dollars over previous quotations. Slate surfaces asphalt, shingles are quoted by one manufacturer at $5 for read or green in car load lots on 85 pound material, while less than car lod lots are a little higher. Slate surfaced asphalt shingles R or G are $5.15, with insulating or sheathing paper running now at $1.80 for medium, 20 lb. rolls of 500 ft. heavy 35 pounds at $2.13 and extra heavy at 45 pounds at $2.85. The Government has large options on available asphalt and this fact keeps the price stiff and uncertain as to further upward shifts. Linseed oil has shown signs of weakening within the last few weeks. Glass is steady to firm with discounts tending toward further shortening. Common brick is entirely in a sellers' barket, although the distributors have not been inclined to buy at the levels prevailing.

NO MORE SUGAR CARDS FOR CANNING PURPOSES.

The local Food Administrator was notified yesterday by State Administrator Tyler that no more sugar cards for canning purposes are to be issued. All housewives who have been given cards, but as yet have not bought the sugar, may do so, and all the residents who have fruit or vegetables on hand for preserving, which require sugar, are requested to notify the local office immediately.

Plate Glass Men Meeting Rush After The Big Explosion

Out of very seriously depleted stocks the window and plate glass jobbers and wholesale distributors of Newark and New York over Sunday made it possible to assure Central New Jersey that the widespread damage to window panes resulting from the Amboy explosion could be made good without prolonged delay, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

When the trade reached its offices Saturday morning and the far-reaching effects of the big explosion began to be realized by frantic calls from Elizabeth, Rahway, New Brunswick, Plainfield and Pereth and South Amboys for glass to conserve as far as possible the meagre coal supplies in homes and stores it was realized that heroic measures would have to be taken to meet the demand, the full extent of which was not then apparent as far as actual demand was concerned. N. W. Faulks, general manager of the Newark branch of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, and Clifford Miller, sales manager for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company in New York, at once got into communication and checked up available stocks. Special representatives were at once sent to the scene of the explosion and checking off reports of glass casualties in twenty cities and towns, including New York and Brooklyn, which also reported some breakage from the explosion it was known that, by placing New York stocks at the disposal of the Newark office, if demand should warrant it, almost any emergency could be met although such a sudden drain upon the very low glass stocks on hand would undoubtedly delay building orders for the time being.

"We cannot estimate the quantity of glass that will be required in Central New Jersey," said Mr. Faulks, to any inquirer, "but we are making every effort to make a survey of the situation. In the mean time we are preparing to meet almost any size demand for we realize that with Spanish influenza an epidemic it is quite as necessary to replace this glass as it would be if it were mid-winter. The entire glass resources of our company have been rallied to meet this emergeny and by Monday we will have enough glass on hand to meet the demand."

Clifford Miller, of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company's New York office, said: "While this explosion will not tax the capacity of the glass companies as seriously as the Black Tom explosion, still it will have an important effect upon the amount of glass on hand. The mills have practically been closed down for some time and the output of glass has been limited. Stocks in jobbers hands in New York are very ragged, but Newark is in good shape. We hope by Monday to have available for any emergency that Newark may be called upon to meet, sufficient glass, both plate and window varities. There are so many towns involved in this explosion that it probably will outrank in glass requirements the Halifax explosion and we are preparing for the widest possible contingencies."

No one was willing this week to venture the opinion that the Federal authorities would consent to an earlier date than December for resuming the eastern glass making fires in view of the heavy depletion of glass supplies, but it was freely hinted that unless some means was provided for replenishing the heavy drain upon glass stocks delays might ensue among the big Government building operations, such as store houses, etc., now nearing completion.

Reconstruction of the big shell loading plant, it was said, would be started at once. If this plan is carried out there will be a heavy call for building trades artisans from this city, but it was estimated that if permits were immediately granted it would be possible by using such methods to have the plant in working order at least in part by the middle of December.

Other building material interests announced that they could provide enough rough construction material to enable the company to loose little if any time in continuing its delivery orders to the French armies.

Building interests in New York were informed last week that the Mayor's Committee on Supervision of Non-War Construction permits would consist of practical building men selected mainly from the membership

Draft Board Orders 105 Sept. 12 Registrants To Appear for Examination

Secretary Freeman, of the local Exemption Board, today announced the names of 105 September 12 registrants who were to appear at the Evergreen Avenue School next week for physical examination. One hundred were to be called and the extra five have been named to take the places of others who are ill with influenza.

Secretary Freeman today also announced the names of the last fifteen eligible draftees of previous registrations who are to go to camp next week in response to a call from General Crowder. Four men are to go to Fort Du Pont, Delaware, four others Fort Howard, Md., and fourteen more were to go to Fort Hancock, at Sandy Hook, but as this number is not available, the remaining seven are all that can be sent to the last place. They will entrain during the five-day period beginning October 21. The fifteen draftees are as follows:

November Date For Opening of Red Cross Shop

The old post office quarters in the Babcock building are today a veritable hive of industry, as a corps of workmen exerts itself to make the premises ready for the Red Cross shop which is soon to be opened there under the supervision of patriotic Plainfield and North Plainfield women, headed by Mrs. J. M. Charles. Although still in its infancy, the project has met with enthusiastic support, that its success is already assured and everyone is looking forward to the opening. Just when this will be is not definite today but the probabilities are that it will be the first week in November. As soon as practicable the date will be announced in the local papers.

The Red Cross scheme has already been worked out successfully in Los Angeles, where during the first eight months of its existence it added the sum of almost $100,000 to the treasury of the National organization. The example of Los Angeles has been followed by quite a number of other towns in Southern California and by towns in several other States. It may be added also that shops of this kind have existed and met with great success ever since the war began, in England, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. Plainfield has not started the idea but it is hoped to make her shop "second to none."

To accomplish this the co-operation of everyone is needed. Wonderful encouragement has been given at the start by the warm-hearted enthusiasm of all who have been asked to help. The shop will be open Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays each week.

The stock-in-trade of the Red Cross shop will consist entirely of donated articles. Things you don't want or longer need or are willing to sacrifice for the cause may find here a ready sale. Houses, lands, automobiles, furniture, jewelry, china, laces, books, pictures, silverware, fancy work, jellies, cigarettes, canned vegetable, pickles, cakes and clean rags to be made into rugs, etc.

Goods you cannot bring will be sent for; telephone Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, 1874. All clothing, wooly toys and upholstered articles will be put through a fumigating process before being put on sale.

The members of the Business Men's Association have already promised their enthusiastic support to the venture at a meeting held about two weeks ago, and this alone promises much for the success of the shop.

George L. Babcock has most generously given rent free, the floor space in the Babcock building formerly occupied by the post office. Willing and patriotic workmen of Plainfield under the leadership of William H. Lunger and master builders, have already begun work renovating these splendid quarters and adapting them to their new use. The lumbeer, electrical equipment, plumbing fixtures and supplies of paint, etc., have been coming in from generous and patriotic men whose names will be known later.

Mrs. J. M. Charles has very happily been chosen as general manager of the enterprise, with Mrs. Henry E. Butler as assistant manager, and Miss Lillie E. Moore as floor manager.

A lunch and tea room will be a feature of the shop and should prove a great attraction during the winter months. In connection with the enterprise plans are being made for a salvage station, details of which will be given later. Save everything, have a hamper or closet set aside for articles that can be sold in the shop and collect for salvage also all rubber, rope, tin-foil, paper, string, etc., bearing in mind that all such things can be turned to good account in the right hands, and that the soldier-boys will benefit by your care.

COUNTY COLLECTOR ANNOUNCES LOCAL BANK ASSESSMENTS

Plainfield Trust Company, $3,833.86; City National Bank, $2,824.86; First National Bank, $2,281.74; State Trust Company, $959.72.

The above cut is reproduced from a drawing by Artist Walter Whitehead, of 202 East Ninth street, this city, and submitted by him to the National Liberty Loan committee in the poster competition conducted previous to the present campaign.

A special committee passed upon 400 drawings, the work of as many artists in various parts of the country, and these were sifted down to what was considered the twenty best. These twenty were then handed to Secretary McAdoo for a final consideration and selection of ten to be reproduced in poster form for Liberty Loan advertising purposes. Mr. Whitehead's drawing was one of the selected ten.

The poster is now to be seen in every city, town and village in the United States and has attracted widespread comment. He has been in receipt of congratulatory letters from recognized critics in New York, Chicago and other places, each one complimenting him on the originality of idea and design.

Mr. Whitehead has been a resident of Plainfield for the past five years but has become widely known locally through his meritorious work.

Standard Lets Out 700 Of Its Working Force

Acting on orders from Washington, as recommended by the Hughes Investigating Committee, the Standard Aero Corporation yesterday dispensed with forty per cent. of its working force, thereby dismissing 700 employes in the Elizabeth and Plainfield shops.

A big cut in the salaries of officials has also been ordered to take place within the week.

Death Comes to Henry Windham

Henry Frederick Windham, proprietor of the Hotel Waldorf, on East Front street, died at his home there at 5:20 yesterday afternoon. He had been ill only a few days with pneumonia, but his condition had been critical almost from the start. His physician, Dr. Pittis, held a consultation with Dr. Hedges, yesterday, and injected the new Mayo serum, but without avail.

The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church privately next Monday morning at 10 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Windham was born in Holland, Germany, September 27, 1855, but came to this country when a lad of thirteen. He had been a resident of Plainfield thirty-two years. He was first employed by Joseph A. Blatz, but later opened a cafe at 117 East Front street. From there he removed to the Hotel Arlington at Somerset street and Greenbrook road and twenty years ago became proprietor of the Hotel Waldorf. He was one of the city's best known businessmen and his sudden death came as a great shock.

Mr. Windham is survived by his wife, who was Miss Herold, of this city, two daughters, Margaret and Clara, and one son, Henry F. Windham, Jr.

THOMAS C. VAIL
SLIGHTLY IMPROVED.

Thomas C. Vail, superintendent of the Spicer Universal Joint plant at South Plainfield, who has been seriously ill at his home on Lee place, was reported today, as being slightly improved. His illness is due to a stomach trouble and not pneumonia, as has been reported.

Mr. Vail is one of the city's best known residents and as one of the organizers and president of the West End Civic Association, has done much in the past six years to promote civic interest in the West End of town.

Plainfield Will Reach Loan Quota

At noon today, it was announced by the Plainfield Liberty Loan committee that the total subscriptions were $2,700,000 and that the remaining $800,000 to complete the quota would without a doubt be in hand by tomorrow night.

It has been announced by the National Committee that there would be no extension of the drive and in consequence the Plainfield committee is exerting itself to the utmost to get every available dollar before the finish. A number of big subscriptions are in view for tonight or tomorrow, among them possibly $200,000 from the local factory owners. The employes of these plants have already subscribed $200,000 individually and Muhlenberg Hospital's Board of Governos has invested eighty thousand dollars of the money left it by the late A. C. Stebbins for the bonds.

The local committee has arranged to have "conscience booths" erected all about the city tomorrow for direct appeals to citizens. They will be located at the North avenue station and at street corners all over town. These will take the place of the windows public gathering, abandoned because of the influenza epidemic.

North Plainfield is also working toward its quota and will undoubtedly go over the top. Encouraging reports are coming in from all nearby cities and towns and although the subscriptions lagged at the beginning it is now believed the full six billion will be subscribed by the entire country.

REV. FATHER HENNESSEY
SLIGHLTY IMPROVED.

Rev. Father Walter J. Hennessey, assistant rector at St. Mary's church, was reported from Muhlenberg Hospital at noon today as being slightly improved and with much better chances for recovery than what were noted during the previous three days.

Rev. Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's, who was ill with influenza, has recovered sufficiently to return to his pastoral duties.

DEATH OF MRS. PITTIS.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stoddard Pittis, wife of Bertram Pittis, formerly of this city, died at her home in New York city, yesterday, from pneumonia. She and Mr. Pittis were married on September 7 last, since which time they had been residing at 510 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, New York. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow night and burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Beloved Sister Of St. Mary's Pneumonia Victim

Following one week's illness with pneumonia, death came at 9:45 last night to Sister Regina Michaella, of the Sisters of Charity connected with St. Mary's parish. Heroic methods had been adopted to stay the ravages of the disease but without avail. It was realized three days ago that it was practically impossible for her to recover and relatives had been summoned to her bedside.

Sister Regina Michaella taught the fourth grade in St. Mary's School and was idolized by pupils and parents alike. She was of a light-hearted disposition but always keenly sympathetic, bringing joy and sunshine wherever she went. In the convent she was an especial favorite and her death came to her associates there as a great blow. She had also been a teacher in the Sunday-school at St. Bernard's chapel from the time of its beginning and seemed to put her entire heart and soul into the work.

Previous to entering the sisterhood, Sister Regina Michaella was Miss Marry McCorriston, of Millville, where she was born thirty-four years ago. Her parents, who survive her, reside there but were able to get to this city before the end came. She is also survived by three brothers, Paul, Cyril and Walter; also five sisters, Mrs. Thomas Rapes, Mrs. Harold Haines, the Misses Agnes and Regina and Sister Margaret Anna, the latter stationed at Paterson. One of the brothers, Cyril, is in the navy. Several uncles and cousins are priests and it developed today that none of them could attend the funeral service as each one had a particular sorrow of his own through the death of relatives whose funerals would conflict.

The body will lie in state at the convent, Sixth and Liberty streets, this afternoon and tonight, in order to permit friends to view the beloved features for the last time. The funeral will be in St. Mary's church tomorrow morn at 10 o'clock and a solemn high mass of requiem will be offered by Rev. Father Bogan. Burial will be at Millville.

HELEN J. LOGAN.

Helen J. Logan, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Logan, of Manson place, died last night from pneumonia. She leaves beside her parents, two sisters, Louise and Mildred. The funeral will be private.

MRS. O'ROURKE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret O'Rourke, wife of Frank O'Rourke, who died on McKinley place, yesterday morning, will be held at Wilkes-Barre, tomorrow, and interment will be at that place. Mrs. O'Rourke was twenty-eight years old and died of pneumonia.

Eight More Succumb As Grip Epidemic Continues Spreading Through City

Seventy-six New Influenza and Six Additional Pneumonia Cases Show Malady Is Not Decreasing---Date for Removing Board of Health Closing Order Not Yet Definitely Decided

It was stated positively from the office of the Board of Health, today, that the influenza epidemic is still a serious matter and instead of waning, as believed by some persons, it is really as bad as at any time since September 18, when it first became noticed.

Within the week beginning last Friday, there have been twenty-four deaths from the disease and resultant pneumonia, while the number of new cases are in the many hundreds. Today's report for the last twenty-four hours, ending at 11 o'clock this morning, was seventy-six new influenza cases and six pneumonia. The deaths since 11 o'clock yesterday were eight, making a total of forty-eight since September 18. The total number of influenza cases reported in the city is 1,511 and of pneumonia 143. These do not include any cases in North Plainfield nor do the figures include persons dying of the disease at Muhlenberg Hospital who are received from North Plainfield or surrounding towns.

Muhlenberg Hospital is still exerting itself to its utmost to care for the rapidly increasing number of patients and so far has done splendidly. In response to an appeal made by Rev. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, scores of women have volunteered their services to do whatever they can and have been of big help to the regular staff. Phincipal Lindsey Best and young men from the Plainfield High School have also volunteered and are assisting in the laundry work and at any post where they can be of service.

The number of patients at the hospital at noon today was 153. Since midnight Wednesday, there have been the following deaths at the institution:

Fannie Goldstein, seven years old, 296 Grove street, North Plainfield; Mrs. Esther Schinasi, 231 Manning avenue, North Plainfield; Martin Giddes, 817 South Second street; Mrs. Alice Cook, sixty-three years old, 413 Sycamore street; Mrs. Caroline Santonastaco, 825 South Second street; also three infants.

The Board of Health is today continuing its campaign of education as a means of preventing the spread of the disease. Pamphlets, telling how to avoid catching influenza and how to treat it in its first stages are being distributed at all the factories and business houses in the city. The Board of Health officers and Health Officer Chandler are exerting every influence to combating the spread and have hopes of an early cessation.

Although the State Board of Health has fixed October 24 as a tentative date for removing the closing order, this is by no means definite. A report came from Trenton this morning that the date might even be extended through the State as in many places the disease is getting worse. After the State ban is removed the local Board may use its own discretion on permitting theatres and other public gathering places to open.

Rumors that the Seventy-eigth Division of the army, which includes the 311th Infantry, had gone into action on the French front during the early part of September, were confirmed this week when the official casualties lists were given out. Already scores of New Jersey soldiers among them a number of Plainfielders, and all of them members of this division, have been included in the men who have been either killed or wounded.

The majority of the Plainfield and North Plainfield drafted men are in the 311th Infantry, while those from Essex county are in the 312th. It is easy to see that these two units were in the thick of heavy fighting during the middle of September as the casualties include the names of infantrymen in these two districts. The lists given out from Washington are generally from three weeks to a month behind the date of the killing or wounded although relatives are informed sooner than this by direct telegraphic communication.

Plainfield has been exceptionally fortunate so far in having but very few of its boys numbered among the casualties. This has been because the enlisted men were scattered among a wide variety of units but with the ordering up front of the Seventy-eighth Division it is now conceited that direct reports may come here more frequently. Next to the 311th, the largest percentage of Plainfield and North Plainfield men are in the 113th Infantry, which absorbs most of Company K's men after they went to Camp McClellan. The remainder of the old organization is divided among the Field Artillery and Machine Gun Companies of the Twenty-ninth Division. This is in the fighting zone but so far the casualties have not contained the names of any local members.

During the past week news came to Plainfield that two of her brave lads had given up their lives on the battlefield that Liberty and Right might live. In addition four others received wounds of a degree not determined as yet.

The two who died in action were George R. Ball, son of George Ball, of Linden avenue, the borough, and William Ross, the twenty-one-year-old son of Mrs. Mary Ross, of 811 South Second street. The former was refused enlistment on several occasions but was finally sent to Camp Dix as a selective last February. He went overseas in June, shortly after he had been made a corporal in Company G, 311th Infantry, and according to the official telegram to his parents, died like a true American defending his country on September 21.

William Ross was a private in the Marine Corps, having resigned his position with the Home Insurance Company in New York to enlist last April. He went to France in August and was killed in action on September 17. Beside his mother, he leaves a sister, Miss Jessie Duncan Ross; a brother, Fred Ross, employed by the State Trust Company, and aunt, Mrs. Jessie Duncan, of South Second street.

The local men listed among the casualties as having been wounded include Benjamin Bornman, twenty-six years old, son of John Bornman, of 317 East Second street, who is a member of the 311th Infantry; Thomas Graham, twenty-nine years old, of 772 Woodland avenue, at which address his wife resides; John W. Van Nest, Jr. of 417 West Fourth street, where his wife and parents reside, and Rudolph Waudrup, twenty-six years old, of East Front street, all were members of thr 311th Infantry and were wounded during the fighting in September.

MISS ELIZABETH ELLIS VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA.

Miss Elizabeth Ellis, the twenty-one-year-old daughter of James L. Ellis, of Arlington avenue, died early yesterday morning, after an illness with pneumonia. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Beside her father, Miss Ellis is survived by three sisters and a brothers. They are Mrs. Ellen Lyons, of New Brunswick; Mrs. Mary O'Keefe and Miss Anna Ellis, of this city, and Corporal James L. Ellis, now in France as a member of the Telegraph Battalion of the Signal Corps.

Miss Maida Hyde Dies of Influenza

Miss Maida Hyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorsey Hyde, for many years prominent residents of this city, died last Friday night at her parents' home in Gilmanton, N. H., after a few days' illness with Influenza. The funeral and interment took place at Gilmanton, Monday morning.

Up to last fall, Miss Hyde had been a resident of Paris, France, where the family went from this city eight years ago. At the outbreak of the war, Miss Hyde volunteered her services for nursing work in army hospitals and rendered a splendid service but at the expense of her own physical welfare. She returned to Plainfield last fall for a much needed rest and remained here until last spring, at which time she went to Gilmanton. Because of her run down condition, she fell a ready victim to the influenza when it was contracted.

Miss Hyde was twenty-seven years old and a most charming young woman in every way. News of her death came to her many friends in Plainfield as a severe shock.

The Star ★ of Gold

An American Mother's Plea to Her Countrymen

MY SON sleeps beneath the soil of France. I don't know where. Perhaps I shall never know. But, often in the silent hours, my memory returns to the day he came to us. How gloriously happy we were. What brave plans we made. How we hoped and prayed for the little fellow's future.

I saw him grow into childhood. I watched through weary hours of illness. I helped him over the hard places. He was my idol, my life I remember his merry laugh at toy soldiers battles around the Christmas tree.

He grew to manhood. He entered a profession, and everything seemed bright. Then, the war clouds gathered. True to the urge of his conscience, he longed to go. I told him, through the tears, there was but one thing to do. My boy became a soldier. Proudly I wore a service pin with star of blue. In October, 1917, I said good-bye---the last good-bye, but I didn't know it.

One evening during March, the Germans attacked our lines, first with gas, then with high explosives. Concussion carried away my boy's mask. An instant later, a shell tore off an arm. My service star has turned to gold.

He is but one son, I am but one mother---but he was all I had. One mother does not count for much, perhaps---but there are thousands of mothers who have given all they had.

In the name of the mothers I ask you today to lend your dollars that our gifts may not be in vain.

Think what winning the war means to you---think what it means to us---the mothers whose cherished Stars of Blue have turned to Stars of Gold. The war must be won! Will you help?

A dollar or two a week buys a Bond. Bonds are buying guns, powder, bullets---Victory. These dollars which you send out to fight will return, with interest.

My son whom I sent out to fight---will never return.

Every day more Stars of Gold are replacing the Stars of Blue. Won't you buy your Liberty Bonds today---all the Bonds you can.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The October Grand Jury returned a batch of forty-four indictments to Judge Carlton B. Pierce, in the Court of Special Sessions today. The work of the term was disposed of in a little more than two weeks. Judge Pierce excused the jurors until they are wanted later in the month to consider several cases prepared by Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield. There will bt no session of Orphans' Court until after October 24. Arraignments on the indictments will not take place until after that time, nor will there be any criminal trials. Judge Pierce received instructions from Justice Bergen today to discontinue all sessions during the influenza epidemic.

In the Union County Court, Wednesday, a non-suit was granted upon motion by counsel for the defendants in a suit brought by William E. Case, of Lee place, as administrator, against Otto Stapf and Anna Yute, of Piscataway township. William A. Coddington, attorney for the defendants, alleged that Stapf was not responsible for the death of Case's son. He also said that Miss Yute was in no way connected with the case, but had been made co-defendant because she was reputed to be wealthy, while her brother-in-law was not. The death of the boy occurred on Lee place, on July 14 of this year. He was playing ball in the street, according to evidence presented by the defendants in court, and in running after it struck an automobile run by Stapf, but which had been brought to a standstill. In falling to the ground, it is declared, he struck a stone and fractured his skull, death resulting. The suit of Edna L. Boardman, of this city, against the George M. Brewster Construction Company, which was started before Judge Silzer, in the same court, on Wednesday, was put off because of the illness of several of the principal witnesses. It has been set down for the latter part of the term.

William Olson, of 706 South avenue, had both hands severely burned in a slight fire at his home, Sunday night at 6 o'clock. His son, Frank Olson, was vulcanizing an automobile tire and in some way set fire to a heap of rubbish. The father was burned while helping to put out the flames. An alarm from box 63 called the fire department to the scene but the blaze had been extinguished before its arrival.

A two-horse American Express truck swinging along North avenue, near Watchung avenue, Monday night, hooked fast to the rear of a coach belonging to William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, standing in front of the North avenue station. The latter vehicle was yanked around in a circle and started on a backward journey with the horse offering up a stubborn resistance. When the offending express truck came to a stop, it required ten minutes' walk from half a dozen men to get the two vehicles separated. The Smith coach was badly damaged.

Mrs. Lillian Canter, of Arlington avenue, is the first Plainfield woman admitted to the Marine Corps on enlistment. She has been assigned to the paymaster's office at Washington and is entitled to wear the prescribed uniform designated by the Government for female clerks in this branch of the service.

One evidence of how severe the influenza epidemic is in Plainfield is accorded by the report from the International Motor Works. Out of the fourteen hundred persons employed at this plant nearly two hundred have been out for various periods of from two to ten days during the past two weeks because of the influenza and resultant diseases. Other shops in the city report a large number of men out but not nearly in the proportion experienced by the International.

In response to a plea from Exalted Ruler James W. Hart, Plainfield Lodge of Elks has collected nearly five hundred canes for the use of wounded soldiers at the Colonia Hospital. Over three hundred were collected from all parts of the city and borough in one day. The sticks were of all shapes, sizes and ages. One of them donated by Rev. E. G. Read, of Second place, was more than a hundred years old and had been in the family for three generations.

Major Evarts Tracy, of Hillside avenue, who recently returned after a year's service in France, left for Washington, Tuesday, to receive an assignment for camouflage instruction in a home camp. Major Tracy was in General Pershing's first camouflage division and has been doing a great work overseas.

Reports of American men wounded in France during the past week include those of two Plainfielders and a former Plainfielder. The latter is Stanley Bellows, son of Col. C. E. S. Bellows, formerly of Woodland avenue, but now of Brooklyn. The young man went out from Westfield as a member of Company A, 311th Infantry. The degree of his wound has not been determined. Mrs. John W. Van Nest, Jr., of 417 West Fourth street, received word Monday that her husband, a member of Company A, 311th Infantry, had been wounded on September 22. No details were given in the brief government message. On Saturday last, Peter C. Thompson, of 306 East Front street, was informed that his nephew, Rudolph Wardrup, had received a bullet wound while fighting with the 311th Infantry. Private Wardrup before entering the service was employed in this city as a chauffeur.

James Coleman, of 532 West Fourth street, and Frank Sikers, of Terrill road, the two passengers injured in a head-on collision between two Union Line trolleys at West Front street, near Jefferson avenue, at 6:15 Monday morning, were discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday. Both sustained severe cuts about the lower part of the body and numerous bad bruises. Henry Closson, of this city, and George Otto, of Dunellen, the two motormen implicated in the smash, escaped with a few bruises although the vestibules of the two cars were badly smashed. The accident was caused through one of the motormen failing to notice a warning light and swinging in on the single track near Jefferson avenue as the other car was speeding for the double track switch. It was dark at he time and neither motorman saw the other car until it was too late to avoid a crash.

James McCarthy, of 649 East Sixth street; Raymond Brick, of Terrill road, and Augustus Schlick, of 695 West Third street, left on the 10:31 train yesterday morning for Easton, Pa., where they will take a mechanical course under military supervision at Lafayette College. All three young men were local draftees and were inducted into service by the Plainfield Exemption Board.

Lie Spreaders Working Overtime on Dix Epidemic

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

The influenza epidemic has given the pro-German propagandist a new direction for his work, and he had spread broadcast a rumor that several army surgeons at Dix have been caught inoculating soldiers with the bacilli of influenza and have been court-martialed and shot. The fact that a new pneumonia serum is being injected into volunteers gave a basis for the story, and many have believed the fake yarn.

So widespread have become the rumors that Major General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, has issued an official denial of the story as follows:

"I authorize you to absolutely deny all such baseless and cruel fabrications. Our medical officers, one and all, have been working day and night, ceaselessly, with the utmost zeal, self-sacrifice, and to the limit of efficiency permitted by our present medical knowledge."

Another yarn was to the effect that men suffering from influenza were given little attention and were dying for the want of care. In the early days of the epidemic, when the hospitals were crowded with patients, the same attention is given in normal times was, of course, lacking, but with the assistance of volunteer nurses and doctors from nearby towns and medical officers from other posts the officers at Dix soon had command of the situation and the men have been given every possible care.

One of many similar letters received by General Scott will show that visitors at Dix found conditions entirely satisfactory. It may be added that the commander personally has replied to all letters from anxious relatives seeking light as to the condition of their sons or other kinsmen. The writer of the following letter was the father of a soldier. He sent the communication after his returned to his home at Kingston, N. Y.:

"For the past two weeks, with many other axious parents, we have had occasion to visit the base hospital at Camp Dix, owing to the critical conditions of my son, who was suffering with pneumonia, and I feel compelled to express my utmost appreciation, admiration and respect to those who are responsible for such a wonderful organization and splendid equipment, providing the boys in the service with the best of care.

"The never-failing courtesy of Adjutant H. G. Stephens and Lieutenant Weiss, of Ward 3, and nurses at the Base Hospital; its absolute cleanliness throughout; the personnel and fine spirit, were very noticeable, and to me a splendid tribute to the commander and his staff."

Another nurse was added this week to the grip victims, making three who have succumbed while fighting the disease. She was Miss Katheryn Fischer, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and was enrolled as a regular army nurse.

Despite the fact that no direct drive is being made at Camp Dix among the soldiers for subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan, yet the men are showing their willingness not only to give their lives if necessary, but their small earnings as well, in order that victory may be made certain and their comrades "over there" given the necessary food and ammunition to "carry on." The Thirty-fourth, or Sandstorm, Division, which is in traing at Dix and waiting for the word to start "over there," the organization that has come to the front with a grand rush, as their total of $133,650 in bonds, as the week's subscription, will attest. And this is not all the sum, for already a number of unofficial reports have been made, which, if correct, will bring the sum over $206,000.

Captain Edward A. Campbell, the insurance officer, who is in charge of the loan drive at Camp Dix, reports a total of $259,300 for the camp, the sums subscribed by the other organizations being as follows: Depot Brigade, $94,850; Bakers and Cooks' School, $2,500; Ordnance Department, $1,350; Remount Depot, $6,650; Quartermaster Corps, $2,550; Dental Corps, $7,600; Camp Medical Detachment, $6,800; Bakery Company, $150; 413th Reserve Labor Battalion, $1,900, and Camp Headquarters Detachment, $1,250.

Major-General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, has given his approval to the plans of Camp Dramatic Director Norman Hackett to organize the soldier talent of the camp and to present a musical show in camp and afterward in the larger cities of the East probably around Christmas time. A prize of $5 has been offered for the soldier who can suggest the shortest, snappiest and best title for the production.

Four men have been selected to attend the Signal Corps School at Camp Meade, Md., and have been transferred to the Fourteenth Service Company, Signal Corps. They are George S. Taylor, Quartermaster Corps, Bayonne; Michael Rothstein, Quartermaster Corps, New York city; Charles Clark, Signal Corps, Jersey City, and Guy L. Rixford, Company 13, of Wellsville, N. Y.

Relatives of soldiers, who are given passes to visit men sick in the hospital, are not to make other visits about the camp. Lately it has been noticed thta visitors have wandered to various sections and have not obeyed the spirit of the passes. Organization commanders have been instructed to notify civilians of the rules when issuing the passes and to notify the military police if visitors are found in their areas.

During the quarantine the Y. M. C. A. will continue the entertainment in the various huts with camp talent. As soon as the ban is lifted Leopold Lane, Y. M. C. A. dramatic director, will produce five plays, the casts having been picked from the different organizations, and rehearsals are now being held.

The ban against the sale of ice cream, cake, pie and soft drinks in the canteens at Camp Dix will likely be continued after the quarantine is lifted, according to Major L. C. Bolton, camp sanitary inspector, and visitors to the camp will be unable to purchase edibles at the exchanges, as in the past. It has been found that the men spent a great deal of time and money in the canteens and thus were unable to do justice to their meals served in the barracks. The ban will mean a loss to the company funds, but it is felt that it will mean better health to the soldiers. Mess sergeants have been instructed to furnish milk and also more "fancy dishes" in order that the men's craving for sweets may be satisfied at their meals.

Don't Call Doctors Or Nurses Unless The Need Is Urgent

Unnecessary calls for both doctors and nurses must cease in order that both professions may give their time to any critical cases if illness during the present epidemic. This is the warning sent out from Washington by Surgeon General Rupert Blue, of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service.

In a communication to all newspapers asking that the facts be placed before the people, Dr. Blue says that 30,000 physicians and as many nurses have been called to the colors to fill the need of the armed forces. The result, he says, is "an acute shortage" of both for civilian purposes, which makes it imperative that doctors be called only in need, and that th ecalls be sent in the morning when possible, so that routes can be made up with regard for the time element.

To reduce as much as possible the demand upon physicians and nurses' time, Dr. Blue appeals to the people to learn something about home care of the sick, especially those suffering from influenza in its milder forms. He points out that "the present generation has been spoiled in having expert medical and nursing care readily available." In the days of our grandmothers, he recalls, "every good housewife was expected to know a good deal about the care of the sick." The present generation, he thinws, has come to rely too much upon the doctor and the graduate nurse.

Dr. Blue then gives broadly the principles that should control the care of an influenza patient under home conditions. The patient who develops the familiar symptoms of influenza—head, back and leg pains, fever, a tendency to prostration and the general symptoms of a heavy cold with bronchial involvement—should be put to bed at once in a well ventilated room, free from drafts. Castor oil or Rochelle salts should be given if necessary, depending upon the persons' activity of the eliminatory processes.

The sick room should be cleared of all unnecessary furniture and fixings. Wash basin, pitcher and slop bowl, soap and towels should be at hand, in the room or just outside the door. If the patient's fever is noticeably high a doctor should be called at once. This should be done in any case if the patient appears very sick, coughs up pinkish sputum or breathes rapidly or heavily.

The handkerchief should be barred from the sick rom. Mucus emitted from the nose and throat should be collected on clean rags, tissue paper or paper napkins, the rag or paper placed in a paper bag to be kept beside the bed for the purpose, and burned as they accumulate.

The diet should be light—"milk, a soft-boiled egg, some toast or crackers, a bit of jelly or jam, stewed fruit, some cooked cereal like oatmeal, hominy or rice—these will suffice in most cases."

The patient's comfort will depend, continues Dr. Blue upon good ventilation—the sick room should be opened widely in order to air it, but first the patient should be thoroughly protected against cold and drafts.

Care for the person attending the sick is also directed. As the disease is spread by 'breathing germ-laden matter sprayed into the air by the patient in coughing or even in ordinary breathing," the home nurse, as well as the hospital attendant, should wear a gauze mask over mouth and nose while actually attending the sick.

The mask required is made by folding a piece of gauze, of sufficient size, so that it will be four folds thick; sewing nieces of tape of the required length at the four corners, and tying the upper tapes back of the head, over the ears, and the lower ones behind the neck, so as to keep the mask down over the chin. When folded the mask should be about six inches square, covering the nose from just below the eyes and extending down well over the mouth. It can be boiled in water, dried and used again.

The attendant should always wash her face and hands with soap and water immediately after touching the patient. "Carelessness in this direction may easily cause the attendant to become infected." A washable gown or an apron completely covering the dress will also aid the attendant in avoiding infection. Use of the fever thermometer should be learned, of course, so that accurate knowledge can be had of the most dangerous element in the disease. Such thermometers are obtainable from druggists, who will explain their use.

TWO REASONS FOR THE 'PHONE GIRLS QUESTION.

There are two reasons advanced for the New York Telephone Company's new order instructing its operators to ask "Is this a necessary call?" every time a subscriber wishes to secure a connection. The Telephone Company says the move is made merely to save calls during a stringent period of decreased forces, due to employes contracting influenza and the unprecedented demand upon its resources by the present epidemic and rush of telephone communication because of the abandonment of all public gathering.

On the other hand, the employes of the corporation insist that the question is not the result of influenza's ravages among the working staff or the extra rush of calls. They claim that the New York Telephone Company persistently refuses to give its operators, instrument setters, inspectors or linemen an increase in pay despite the advanced cost of living and in consequence they are quitting their positions for others bringing larger salaries. This has been vouched for repeatedly, members of the different departments and during the past week numerous letters have been printed in newspapers telling the employes' side.

In the meantime, the business man and householder who pays a high rate for his monthly telephone service, wonder whether the Telephone Company is really acting in good faith or whether it is prying into their private affairs to hold its working force together until after the labor shortage is over. The company is claiming that about 800 calls a day are being saved in Plainfield alone, but of course this is of no special benefit to the subscriber who refrains from using a service that he has contracted for and thought he was to get for his money. In Philadelphia, where the exasperating quiry of "Is this call necessary?" was first started, it is asserted that the switchboard connections were cut down fifty per cent. If this is true, it means a lessening of operating expense and should be the forerunner of reduced telephone rates, but the company makes no promise of this kind. Consequently the telephone users are trying to figure out just where they get off in the innovation and are anxiously awaiting the corporation's decision for the giving up of paid for service.

One of the best explanations of the employes' side of the company's move is contained in the following letter from a girl operator, printed in the New York World of Tuesday night last:

To the Editor of the Evening World:

Being an employe of the New York Telephone Company (Murray Hill operator), I would like to inform the public just why they must put up with the "rotten service," and it is all in a nutshell—underpaid employes and inefficient heads.

As everyone knows, living conditions have gone up 50 per cent. or more. And every concern in the United States has had to co-operate with their employes in raising salaries.

Not so with the Telephone Company. Rather than keep their experienced help, they let them go and got the "kindergarten force" in all of the central offices. Although telephone capital stands at $125,000,000 today, they cannot afford to pay a living salary to their most essential employes.

The "Switch Board Soldiers" they call us. Yes, on $14 a week we are expected to buy Liberty Bonds, War Saving Stamps, help the Red Cross, and pay board and dress—when, how, where?

To think of it is enough to drive one insane. Now, Mr. Editor, see what you can do for us. We are without hope, for, as you know as in the Western Union, there is no union—all for themselves—and we drift on—to what?

PLAINFIELD WILL GO OVER THE TOP.

At noon today it seemed an assured fact that Plainfield would reach its quota of $3,500,000 in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. The citizens are now striving for the last few hundred thousands of the needed amount and Sherman B. Joost, chairman of the supervising committee that has been doing a wonderful work, makes no hesitation in saying that the city will go over the top for an honor flag.

The record of subscriptions is indeed a most remarkable one. It represents an outpouring of patriotic enthusiasm, an absolute determination to back up the boys on the battle field and the extreme form of announced support to President Wilson. When the figure of $3,500,000 was first announced, it seemed staggering in fact, almost impossible. Added to this was the unexpected shutting off of all public gatherings that never failed to result in spreading enthusiasm, leaving the committee to its own resources to bring the facts of the situation directly home to the people.

That they have succeeded is now a known fact. The full amount will be in hand by tomorrow night and Plainfield, as in the three previous campaigns, can say to President Wilson and the gallant boys in France: "We have stood by you."

Wife: "John, this is Election Day, don't fail to go to the polls to vote."

Husband: "Mary, I am ashamed to say that I forgot to register and have lost my vote."

Wife: "Oh, John, how could you have been so careless. I have always said that I did not want the vote because you represented me."

Daughter (A Suffragist): "Father, just you wait until I have the right to vote, then you can stay at home."

Mother: "My son, your father always did his duty as a citizen and I am sorry that his son has failed in his."

Moral: Be a good citizen, do your duty by State and family and register on October 22, 1918, and vote on Election Day, November 5, 1918.

Yes, Rollo, you are right. The Home Wheels are turning much more freely since the two-cent chunks of axle grease began crowding themselves into the pay-as-you-enter boxes.

Trolley Superintendent George Luhr gave his annual pig roast at his home Monday night, and those let in on the party howled with delight as generous slabs of delicious meat were cut away from the sides of the roasted sucklings.

—o—

Glad to hear that all hands had a good time but the little get-together won't be a marker to the hilarity that will reign supreme at the next annual meeting of Mr. Luhr's company as the Board of Directors cut the big juicy melon plucked from the Common peepul's garden.

Hey, there, Friend, Patriot, bought those bonds today as we've been advising you to? If not, hustle to the banks and buy 'em tonight. Plainfield wants to show at least three and a half million by tomorrow night.

—o—

If it is true that the Germans have spread the Spanish influenza in this country then Germany has some circulation.

—o—

In these days of paper conserving it seems a waste of good, white writing material for the Board of Health's influenza expert to keep on advising the people not to kiss as one way of preventing the spread of the malady. Those who don't indulge in face-tasting are too crabby to catch influenza or anything else and those who do do it would be much obliged to the Board of Health if it would mind its own business.

See where "Whit" Frazee, the original pony express man, is all "het up" because someone started the rumor that he was dead. Clam yourself, Whitney, clam yourself. Merely the jealous work of a rival cornetist who heard you tear off a few yards of "The Maiden's Prayer."

—o—

Listen, my charming-voiced young lady at the other end of the string: Supposing you had postponed three full meals and didn't have a cent and someone told you where there was a guy who owed you two dollars and you went to the 'phone to get in touch with him and as you pushed the receiver against your ear a feminine kill-joy asked in a most exasperating tone: "Is this a necessary call?" wouldn't it make you angry, vexed, peeved and perturbed? Well, rawther."

—o—

No man can be considered a 100 per cent. patriot as long as he spends his time figuring upon what he is going to make or save out of the war. Nothing matters but complete victory, because that unwon means everything lost.

—o—

Now is the time to hit harder, move faster and give 'em no rest. We've got 'em going and will finish 'em if we keep on. Buy the bonds.

Ignoring the time and expense involved, the Record has been seeking to get the exact time in which William (Brockton Bill) Smith made his famous slide for life from the Gillespie plant to Plainfield on October 5, but unfortunately has been unable to check up the last lap from Rahway to Plainfield because the stop watch refused to work in a vacuum. From Morgan to Perth Amboy, the distance of three and three-fourths miles, was made in nothing, while from Perth Amboy to Rahway, five and one-fifth miles, was done in less than that. From Rahway to Plainfield it can only be conjectured as Mr. Smith, himself, says, this was the particular section where his ankles got hot. All he remembers was that he passed a field of corn first and a field of beans second, but he was velocitating so rapidly the two looked to him like succotash. He denies absolutely that he ordered a fleeting rabbit to step aside and let somebody run that could run as the only thing he remembers passing was the Congressional Limited on its westward trip to Washington.

Private Funeral Accorded Co-Founder of Civil War Musicians' National Association

Board of Health restrictions prohibited the accordance, yesterday, of full military honors to Joseph Newton Bogart, a widely known Civil War veteran and one of the founders of the National Association of Civil War Musicians, whose death occurred at his home at 83 Duer street, North Plainfield, Monday night. Only a private service could be held at the house and the attendance was limited to members of the family. Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, was the officiating clergyman. A detachment from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which Mr. Bogart had been one of the most active members for years, acted as an escort for the body from the house to the burial plot in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Bogart was born in Plainfield in 1843, the son of Samuel B. and Margaret Bogart, prominent residents of this place at that time. When only a boy, Mr. Bogart's parents removed to Belvidere, Warren county, and later to Easton, Pa., where he remained until a young man. Later in life, he opened a candy and confectionery business at Somerville, but gave this up to enter the employ of L. L. Compton & Son, then proprietors of the largest candy-making establishment in this vicinity. Their factory and store were at 28 West Front street, now 144 West Front street, the Fass building. This was about forty years ago. After remaining with this firm for a short time, Mr. Bogart spent five years with the Western Union Telegraph Company and then went with the New York Central Railroad, remaining with it thirty years. His last position was as immigrant agent, retiring from the post a few years ago, when his health began to fail. He was primarily a victim of stomach trouble but this developed complications which, for two years, had made him an invalid.

During the War of the Rebellion, Mr. Bogart enlisted in Company I, 31st New Jersey Vounteer Infantry, and seved through a part of the conflict as a drummer.

Company I was organized at Flemington, but was mustered in at New York in September, 1862. From there the regiment moved on to Washington, D. C., and went into camp at Capitol Hill but was soon transferred to and encamped near Tennallytown, D. C., where it was assigned to a provisional brigade, "Casey's Division," for the Defenses of Washington. It remained in this vicinity engaged in picket and other duties until December 1, 1862, when it was ordered to Aquia Creek, Va., en route to the front. At this place, it was assigned to duty in the Army of the Potomac and proceeded to Belle Plains, Va. There it remained doing guard and provost duty until January, 1863, when it marched to the front and joined the main army. It took part in a number of big engagements, one of which was the Battle of Chancellorsville, Va., on May 2 and 3, 1863. Mr. Bogart went through each conflict without any serious injury, although on numerous occasions he was in tight positions. He was one of the survivors of the original company who returned to New Jersey in the summer of 1863 and was mustered out at Flemington.

When peace had been restored and men had time to think of other things, Mr. Bogart became associated with LeRoy Van Horn, of Chicago, in organizing the National Association of Civil War Musicians. This was made up only of fifers, drummers and buglers and was given the place of honor in all processions at National Encampments. The corp of veterans as they marched down the street were always greeted with tumultuous applause and Mr. Bogart was present on many of these occasions. Mr. Van Horn is also the founder of Flag Day, the national observance of which is held every year on une 14. He originated this idea about eighteen yJears ago and the celebrations are becoming more and more elaborate as time goes on.

Beyond the National Musicians Association and Winfield Scott Post, Mr. Bogart's only other affiliation was with Trinity Reformed church, where he was a faithful attendant for many years. Surviving him are his son, Samuel B. Bogart, formerly in business in New York, but now with the International Motor Company, and three daughters, the Misses Helen H., Elizabeth B. and Annie A. Bogart, all of Duer street.

Westfield Police Case to Be Tried Again Next Month

In accordance with the Supreme Court's ruling that there had been a miscarriage of justice and that the proceedings were a travesty on law, Counsellor Robert Newton Crane, of this city, will next week make application for the date of the re-hearing in the case of George Manner, of Westfield, against Chief John C. Rosecrans and Patrolman Martin L. Howarth, of the Westfield police force, originally tried in the District Court here last April.

Manner sought to recover $500 damages for the rough treatment accorded him by Rosecrans and Howarth after they had arrested him on suspicion of being the man who had assaulted the ticket agent at the Westfield station and robbed the cash drawer. The case was heard before Judge J. Henry Crane and a jury which rendered a verdict of no cause for action. Mr. Crane appear for Manner and former Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein represented the defendants. The jury reaching the verdict deliberated only an hour and a half although the trial lasted all day. The "twelve men good and true" who decided that Manner had no occasion to ask Rosecrans and Howarth for $500 damages were the following well-known Plainfielders: George O. Stevens, John Oswald, Adam Blair, Walter Apgar, Chauncey Stout, Joseph Harrigan, James Taylor, Charles Higgins, Edward Dacey, Leslie Stewart, John J. Kenney and Percy A. McVoy.

The date for the new trial will be fixed by Judge J. Henry Crane and it will probably be during the first week of November. The case has had Westfield in a turmoil for nearly a year and the chances are there will be a bigger legal battle than ever when the proceedings are gone over again.

The policemen were sued by Manner for assault and battery, false arrest and taking and preserving his finger prints as those of a criminal. The two suits were tried together and a verdict given for the defendant in each instance.

The facts most favorable to the policemen, as viewed by the Supreme Court, were their own stories, from which it appeared that a crime had been committed at the Westfield railroad station, that they suspected Manner and caused him to be arrested and brought to the police station.

"The gravament of the complaint is what happened after that," said the court, "and, according to the story of the defendants, Howarth, at the suggestion of Rosecrans, struck the plaintiff in the face. The most favorable conclusion to be drawn from the defendants' testimony is that they were endeavoring to make him confess to a crime, that he was half intoxicated and that he was slapped in the face because he would not answer the questions put to him in endeavoring to have him admit the crime.

"We can see no justification for the treatment which the plaintiff underwent at the hands of these policemen. Their conduct was brutal and without the slightest justification in law. Policemen have no right, after a man has been arrested, to lay their hands on him, except in the execution of their duty, and this these policemen exceeded.

"The whole manner of the trial was a travesty on justice. This plaintiff was charged with a crime of which it is now admitted he was not guilty, and, although the circumstances were such at the time that the policemen might be justified in a suspicion, still there was nothing strong enough to warrant their holding him all night, then discharging him when they found that the finger prints on the electric bulb were not those of the plaintiff."

MRS. NEAF APGAR AND SON LEAVE MUHLENBERG.

Mrs. Neaf Apgar and her son, Hazelwood, who were both under treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital for influenza, were discharged from the institution the past week. Mrs. Apgar went home Sunday, after being a patient three weeks, and her son was discharged the following day after a two weeks' stay. The full recovery of each is now assured.

The Apgar family has been one of the most unfortunate in the city through the influenza epidemic. Two sons, William and Paul Rolla Apgar, died within thirty-six hours of each other, and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Dunlap, passed away a week later, all three being victims of the disease. Mrs. Apgar was in the hospital when Mrs. Dunlap died in an adjoining room and Hazelwood was stricken two days after his sister's funeral.

THIRD IN FAMILY DIES WITHIN A WEEK.

Elwood Harrison, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, of 212 Manson place, died last night, the third member of the family to pass away since Monday. The first was a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Harrison Reed, who died at Bonnie Burn, Monday, and the second was a son, William, three years old, who died Wednesday. The funeral of the latter will be held this afternoon.

The funeral of Elwood will be held Sunday afternoon at the Higgins chapel on West Fourth street and burial will be at Coonton.

MORRIS HIGGINS.

Morris Higgins, a former resident of South Plainfield, where he kept a hotel, died yesterday in Jersey City. The funeral will be held in Sacred Heart church, South Plainfield, tomorrow morning, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery, this city. Mr. Higgins leaves one son, John Higgins. He was an uncle to Lieutenant Morris Higgins, of the local police force.

"Europe's Prize Waltzer" Writes Mother of Fun He Has Chasing Germans and Cooties

There went to France with the first draft an Irish lad with whom his own mother had always been between a blow and a laugh. She tried to make a priest of him, but he fled to the Gashouse district and became a great fellow around the corner saloons. Presently he was touting at the race tracks. He wasn't a good lad and he wasn't altogether bad. He was as generous as he was reckless.

The army got him and put him to shooting at Germans—a vocation none too exciting for this youth—and occasionally he has written a letter to his mother. The last she got put her, as she said, between the two familiar emotions. She would have slapped his impudent face until it was read. Then she would have hugged him. But she laughed when she revealed the breezy, impudent, irrepressible phraseology of this son of hers.

The letter has made an entire parish laugh. The Sun has the privilege of printing it—names, of course, being eliminated:

August 19, 1918.

My Dear Beneficiary:

Your scathing letter of July 19 at hand and needless to say it found your big, handsome son enjoying existence.

Now, darling, by the tone of this violet scented note you can readily see I am in the pink of condition. My step is quick, my eye is clear and my fertile brain is working overtime. The beer muscles have melted from my Greeklike figure. Dissipation is scratched. I have placed Church in the entries and with a good ride we'll finish way up in the money.

I am thoroughly converted and hereafter I'll be a friend of the cops. I am very sorry now I did not follow your advice and become a member of the cloth, but the ecclesiastical calling did not appeal to me then. I know you would be tickled to death to see Rev. attached to my monicker. just another case of a misguided youth.

Never mind, old sparring partner, every time a steel tube busted over my handsome nut it found me murmuring "Our Father, who art in heaven," etc., long before its fragments settled on terra firma. Nothing lukewarm about your dazzling Wilbur.

So you say ——— paid you a visit. His advice may be O. K., but all I can say is "Truly Warner doesn't make 'em small enough." He has the brains of Gunboat Smith. It's about time the family asked for waivers on him. "Where there's no sense there's no feeling." Give him the ozone the next time he drops in and tries to talk you into making a sky pilot of me.

His notorious son, after diligent study and hard work, has been rewarded with the glorious honor of a promotion. He is now first class private. The other boy, I'm told, is working to advance himself from the rank of common sailor and become a sailor. I can see no reason why, with the backing of the community, the prayers of his family and a strict adherence to the straight and narrow, that the finish of the international quarrel will not find one son an acting corporal and the other lab swabbing even an Admiral's side of the quarter deck. Barnum had the right done and Sherman knew five or six. The old man has as many friends as an alarm clock.

Yes, old gal, I do get lonely once in a while. It was only yesterday I sat thinking of the old Visitation and St. Michael's outings. Them was the happy days. Even the priest carried a gun on those rackets. I sure miss them this month, but I'm going to pour this into your shelllike ear I'll be back on deck for their next occasions. We got the Potsdam bunch grabbing the rollers back to the Rhine. Our slogan is "Heaven, Hell or Hoboken by Christmas!"

So you miss me very much at home now, eh? Well, ain't it wonderful the change one short year does bring! You never missed me in the old days—every one of your Dresden cups caromed off my think tank in these good old days. If Rube Marquard had your speed and control McGraw would never have let him go. All because I was under the influence of one glass of hops occasionally. Of course I'm strong, so I'll be merciful. There was one thing about dad—he never raised a hand to me except in self-defence.

Your money order, sent through the Eagle office, was a godsend. I must admit I was in hock for fair. The contribution was small, but I know 'twas given with a willing heart. I rushed the crisp to Epsom Downs and lost it all on the Derby. I'm sorry I didn't play the nag both ways, as he turned around at the barrier and ran in the opposite direction. Any more spon yon or Johnny want to send will be welcomed through the same channels. I received it two days after my birthday. You can do just as well by mailing it direct. The Eagle makes very good fly paper. In fact it's a scream. Give me the Ladies Home Journal any day, with its great big sporting page.

——— is doing fine in the base hospital, according to his letter to me. He expects to be on the firing line soon—so don't worry about him. His leg is pretty well bruised up, but taking it all into consideration he can't kick. It could be worse. Picture if he was a buck and wing dancer! That's the only way to look at it. I know if I lost mine I would want to go over the top in a wheel chair. Human nature is a funny thing, and I must admit my tumultuous nature is aroused.

——— wishes to be remembered to you and will drop you a line soon. Not because he thinks you a fish, but just to be sociable. He often speaks of the night he was in our mansion. I invited him to make a New Year's call on us. I know you won't mind a little company, so I'll bring our company out. Keep the croquette floors well oiled for dancing.

I know the truth will leak out sooner or later, so I must risk shocking your delicate nature by telling you I've had cooties.

Yes, darling, for the past month every available opportunity finds me with my b. v. d.'s in my mitt. I give them the north and south and take it from me I have found them as large as oats on the underwear. They are as scarce as flivvers on a Detroit boulevard. My pastime has been reading the shirt. Hence the seeming neglect of corresponding with those near and dear to me. At last I have the cooties beaten. I take my shirt off, take a handful of salt and walk down to a brook. Arriving at the brook I throw salt all over the shirt. In a few minutes those gigantic cooties have tasted the salt, leave the shirt to quench their thirst and wander to the stream. And then, while the cooties are intent on drinking and have their faces down so they can't see me, I tiptoe away and at last make a bee line to camp, freed of the demons for the night. But don't worry, dearest, about the little cooties lost in the dark beside the lovely little brook. In the gathering dawn they find they way back to me.

Well, darling, I guess I'll call it a day. Hoping you, dad and the rest of the family enjoy your vacation at Poverty Beach, I remain,

Your Big, Handsome Meal Ticket.

(Europe's Prize Waltzer).

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. ROY L. WILLIS.

Mrs. Willena Priest Willis, wife of Roy L. Willis, of 715 Carlton avenue, died at her home, Tuesday night, after a ten days' illness with influenza and pneumonia. She contracted the disease from her two children, whom she nursed through a critical illness, but who are now fully recovered. They are Miss Rhoda Willis and Robert Willis, both of them pupils at the Evergreen Avenue School.

The funeral was held at the family home Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery and later will be taken to St. Louis for burial.

Mrs. Willis was born at Rensselaer, Mo., and came to this city with her husband five years ago. Mr. Willis is a chemical engineer and was in Chicago superintending the erection of a chemical plant for the Government when the illness of his wife and children called him home. He is a member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks and his associates in this organization have been especially pronounced in their expressions of sympathy during his hour of trouble. Beside her husband and children, Mrs. Willis is survived by her mother, the latter living in Texas.

MRS. WILLIAM REID.
WILLIAM D. HARRISON.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Harrison, of 212 Manson place, were twice bereaved this week, although one of the deaths was caused by the influenza epidemic. This was the demise of their twenty-year-old daughter, Mrs. Ethel Harrison Reid, wife of William Reid, who passed away Monday morning at Bonnie Burn Sanatorium after a long illness with pulmonary complaint.

Early Wednesday morning Mr. and Mrs. Harrison's son, William D., aged two and a half years, died from influenza. In addition to these two sad blows, a third child, Elmer, aged eight, is seriously ill with the prevailing malady.

Mrs. Reid is survived by a four-months' old child, and in addition to her parents and brother mentioned, leaves a sister, Mrs. Oliver Ulmer, of Belmont avenue.

Mrs. Reid's funeral took place at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins on West Fourth street, Wednesday afternoon, and was in charge of Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville. Burial was in the cemetery at Millington. Rev. Mr. Bowers also officiated at the service for the little brother, which was also held at the Higgins chapel yesterday afternoon. Burial in this instance was in the Coontown cemetery.

ARTHUR B. DAVIS.

The funeral of Arthur B. Davis, aged forty-three years, who died Tuesday night, after a brief illness with influenza and pneumonia, was held at his late home on Grove street, the borough, last night. Rev. Dr. Phillip B. Strong officiated. A further service was held this morning at Pottersville, where interment was made.

Mr. Davis was a machinist at the Spicer Universal Joint plant in South Plainfield. He is survived by his wife and one child.

MICHAEL SEADER.

Michael Seader, the first uniformed driver in the Plainfield Fire Department, died at his home on Lafayette street, Jersey City, Monday night, after an illness of only three days with pneumonia. The body was brought to this city, and the funeral was held at the chapel of Cole & High at 200 West Second street, Wednesday morning, Rev. John Y. Brock, of Trinity church, officiating. Burial was in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery, brothers of the deceased acting as pall-bearers.

Mr. Seader was born at Springdale fifty-one years ago but came to Plainfield when only a boy. At an early age, he entered the employ of the late George Conover, truckman and mover, and when the latter took the contract to provide a team for Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, of the city's volunteer fire department, Mr. Seader was made the regular driver. He slept at No. 1 house on West Second street and later was given the added dignity of a uniform. When the city purchased horses for No. 1 and No. 2 steamer and hook and ladder company in 1890, Mr. Seader was made a regular paid driver of the department at a salary of thirty-five dollars a month and one day off in thirty. A little later the late Eugene Wood and his brother, Robert Wood, were appointed drivers and these were the nucleus of the city's present fire department of forty officers and men. Mr. Seader was also the first driver of the aerial hook and ladder truck which the Fire Board took out of active service the past summer. He left the department twenty years ago and after remaining in Plainfield two years, went to Jersey City as a carpenter for the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

Mr. Seader is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Josephine Wilson and Mrs. Anna Wilson, and three brothers, Peter, Adam and Henry P. Seader, of the borough.

MARY VELARD.

Mary Velard, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luonardo Velard, of 829 Richmond street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday night, a victim of pneumonia. Beside her parents, she is survived by several brothers and sisters. The funeral was held privately in St. Mary's church this morning, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. DANIEL FACEY.

Mrs. Sophia Facey, wife of Daniel Facey, died Wednesday morning at her home at Watchung, after one week's illness. She was thirty-nine years old and had lived at Watchung since 1915. Beside her husband, she leaves one son. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow morning, in charge of Rev. C. W. Attlee, of this city, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. WILLIAM H. CALLAHAN.

Mrs. Emma Callahan, wife of William H. Callahan, and a former resident of Woodland avenue, this city, died Tuesday night, at her home on Cumberland street, Westfield. She had been ill only one week with pneumonia. Mrs. Callahan was formerly Miss Emma Ortleb, and was a native of Westfield, although she lived here for a number of years after her marriage. Beside her husband and four sons, she is survived by her mother, one sister, Miss Mary Ortleb, and two brothers, George and Charles Ortleb, of Westfield. The funeral was held yesterday and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

HOWARD J. BREESE.

Howard J. Breese, of 507 Watchung avenue, who enlisted in the Tank Corps last May, died at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa., Monday night, of influenza and resultant pneumonia. Mrs. Breese was summoned to the camp Monday and reached her husband's bedside just before he passed away. The funeral and burial will take place at his former home in Somerville.

Mr. Breese, who was twenty-nine years old, came to this city from Somerville, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Breese, still reside on Davenport street. Previous to his enlistment, he was employed in the construction department of the New York Telephone Company in this district. Beside his parents and wife, he leaves one child. Mrs. Breese was formerly Miss Miltner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Miltner, of 215 Church street. Her two brothers, Henry J. and Martin, are both in the service, the former in the navy and the latter in the engineers' corps in the army.

FRANK X. HERMAN.

Pneumonia contracted in the rush to get away from South Amboy during the Morgan shell plant peril on October 5, resulted Wednesday night in the death of Frank X. Herman, a former well-known Plainfielder, at the home of his mother, Mrs. Theodore Abbott, of Martinsville. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the place of death and will be in charge of Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, this city.

Mr. Herman was thirty-six years old, and had lived in either the city or borough most of his life. He was employed for a number of years by his uncle, Benjamin Fowler, the former East Front street confectioner, and also for some time by the Woodbrook Farms. Recently he removed to South Amboy to take a position with the Gillespie Loading Company at Morgan and was located there when the fire and explosions occurred on the night of October 4. When the order was given to the people of South Amboy to vacate their homes, the following morning, he over-exerted himself getting his wife and two children of the imperiled town to his mother's home at Martinsville. Influenza set in and pneumonia followed a short time later.

Beside his mother and family, Mr. Herman is survived by two brothers, George Herman, of this city, and Benjamin Herman, of Bath Beach; also a sister, Miss Phoebe Herman, of this city.

ETHEL IRENE GASKILL.

Ethel Irene Gaskill, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Winifred and the late George Gaskill, of 720 East Sixth street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday night. She was a victim of influenza and pneumonia. The funeral was held privately in St. Mary's church this morning. Rev. Father Holsters offering the requiem mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Gaskill was a pupil at St. Mary's commercial school and beside her mother, leaves one sister, Ruth, and two brothers, George and Lester Gaskill. Her father was killed in an automobile accident at Park avenue and Sixth street three years ago.

CARL KREMER.

Carl Kremer, aged thirty-eight years, of Westfield, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday morning, after an illness of pneumonia. He had no near relatives. The funeral was held in J. J. & C. A. Higgins' chapel on West Fourth street, yesterday morning, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

EDWARD H. FRITZ.

Edward H. Fritz, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. L. Fritz, of Stansberry avenue, Scotch Plains, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday. Pneumonia was the cause. The funeral will be held at the parents' home this afternoon and burial will be in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

CLARENCE GOSS.

Clarence Goss, a prominent resident of Plainfield for nearly twenty-five years, during which time he was employed at the Scott Press Works as pattern maker, died last Saturday at Doylestown, Pa., where he was visiting friends. His home for the past four years was at Philadelphia and on going to Doylestown for a brief stay was stricken with pneumonia.

The body was brought to this city, Wednesday morning, and the funeral service was held at the graveside in Hillside cemetery, under the supervision of Jerusalem Lodge, F. and A. M., of which he was a member. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, chaplain of the lodge, officiated, and the following members acted as pall-bearers: William Reynolds, Henry Liefke, B. Frank Coriell, William McD. Coriell, Charles Russell and Samuel Hollingsworth.

MRS. MARY ZENZEL.

Mrs. Mary Zenzel, widow of Harry Zenzel, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday mornin. She was a victim of pneumonia following influenza. The funeral was held in St. Joseph's church, Tuesday morning, Rev. Father Thomas Campbell officiating, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Zenzel was thirty years old and lived at 87 Somerset street. Her husband died about three years ago. Her only near surviving relatives are four children of tender years.

AUGUST SHUPBACH.

Following an illness of only three days with pneumonia, death came Tuesday afternoon to August Shupbach, thirty-four years old, of 314 Stebbins place. He was a letter carrier attached to Station P, New York, and contracted the disease while performing his duty. The body was taken to his father's home at 1144 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, where the funeral service was held yesterday afternoon. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Shupbach came to this city from Brooklyn four years old because he preferred a suburban residence to one in the city. He commuted to his work in New York each day, and was apparently in the best of health when the pneumonia developed. His home here had always been on Stebbins place and he was greatly liked by his neighbors. Beside his father, Mr. Shupbach is survived by his wife and three little girls, Margaret, Evelyn and Emma Shupbach.

ANDREW T. BOZACK.

Andrew T. Bozack, thirty-five years old, of 134 Jackson avenue, died Monday afternoon at his home, a victim of pneumonia following influenza. The latter malady was contracted at the Gillespie plant, at Morgan, where he had been employed as a tinsmith. He had been ill in all about two weeks.

The funeral was held at the late home, yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, when Rev. Father Holsters, of St. Mary's church, officiated at a private service. The floral tributes included set pieces from Court Providence, I. O. F., of Westfield; Miantonomo Tribe, of Red Men, of this city, and Plainfield Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, and the Plainfield Tinners' Union, to all of which he belonged. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

The pall-bearers were: James C. Hansen, Alfred Luthman, Louis Funk, Nels Johanson, William Carson and W. V. Sutton.

Mr. Bozack came to this city from Bernardsville, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthias Bozack and a sister still live. He was employed for a number of years by local contractors at his trade of tinner, the last one before he went to Morgan being Den. J. Galbraith. He had a very wide acquaintance in the city and borough. Beside his parents and sister, he is survived by his wife, one son, Elmer, and a daughter, Anna Mathilda Bozack.

MISS HELEN McCARTHY.

The funeral of Miss Helen McCarthy, the twenty-three-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. McCarthy, of West Fifth street, who died last Friday morning, from influenza, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Rev. Father Thomas Campbell officiated and interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss McCarthy is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Edward J. Harding, Jr., of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Frank Jaeger, of West Fifth street, and one brother, James McCarthy, now stationed at Camp Humphreys, Va. Mrs. McCarthy, mother of the deceased, and the two sisters, Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Jaeger, were all recent sufferers from influenza but have recovered.

JOHN E. SCHWARB.

John E. Schwarb, who was at one time engaged in the hotel business at Bernardsville, died at his home on Kensington avenue, this city, last Friday, a victom of pneumonia. He contracted the disease in Boston, where he was located taking care of his business, that of automobile trucking from New York city to points in Massachusetts. He hurried home as soon as he became ill but his condition rapidly grew worse.

Mr. Schwarb was forty-six years old and had had an extensive business career. His residence here had only been for a short period. He was a member of Poughkeepsie, New York, Lodge of Elks, and the Plainfield Elks assisted in the funeral arrangements. Two of the latter, Joseph A. Harrigan and William R. Townsend, served as pall-bearers, at the funeral, Monday morning. It was held in St. Mary's church, and the requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father Bogan. The body was sent to Philadelphia for burial in the New Cathedral cemetery.

Mr. Schwarb leaves his wife, an adopted daughter and three sisters. The latter are: Sister Alocoque, a members of the Sisters of Charity, stationed at Elizabeth; Miss Sophie Schwarb and Mrs. Charles E. Loumeister, of New York.

WILLIAM J. HUMPHREY.

William J. Humphrey, of West Fourth street and Evona avenue, succumbed to pneumonia following influenza at Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday morning. He was sixty years old and a gardener by occupation. He had lived in the West End of the city for many years.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning, Rev. Fathers Holsters officiating. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

ROY F. BRYAN.

Roy F. Bryan, aged thirty years, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Fenwick Bryan, of 202 Clinton avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday morning, another victim of the influenza and pneumonia malady. He had been ill about a week and, just previous to his removal to Muhlenberg seemed to be getting better. The funeral was held at the family home Monday night in charge of Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, of which the young man was a member, and burial was at Succasunna.

Mr. Bryan had been a resident of Plainfield about four years, coming here with his parents from Dunellen. Previous to that they lived at Dover. The young man was a machinist by trade and had been employed at the Pond Tool Works. He had a wide acquaintance, especially in the West End, but was well-known in other parts of the city and in the borough. The parents have been the recipients of sincere expressions of sympathy as the deceased was their only child.

CHARLES FRANCIS BOTONY.

Charles Francis Botony, a three-year-old boy whose father, Anthony Botony, of Hunter avenue, Scotch Plains, died in Muhlenberg Hospital on Thursday of last week, passed away at the same institution, Monday morning. Both father and son were victims of pneumonia. The child's funeral was held Monday afternoo and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

EDWARD JOSEPH MURPHY.

Edward Joseph Murphy, aged twenty-three years years, died Saturday afternoon at his home at 971 Arlington avenue, only a few days after he had reached home from Virginia. He contracted influenza in that State, and realizing that his condition was serious, the physicians there directed him to return to Plainfield as soon as posisble. Pneumonia developed and his demise occurred a short time afterward.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning, and in accordance with the Board of Health ruling, was open only to members of the family. Rev. Father Holsters offered the requiem mass and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Murphy was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Murphy and had lived in this city practically all his life. His father was in the employ of former Mayor Charles J. Fisk as gardener for many years. The young man was a lineman by occupation, having learned the trade with the Public Service Corporation. He left it temporarily about a year ago to enter the Plainfield fire department, but after serving a short time went back with the Public Service. The past summer he received a flattering offer from a company in Virginia to do line and electrical work and accepted the terms. He was engaged in this work and had risen to the position of foreman when the fatal illness overtook him.

Mr. Murphy, in addition to his parents, is survived by his wife and two children, also two sisters and two brothers. The latter are the Misses Anna, Catherine and John Murphy, who live at the parental home on Arlington avenue, and Private James Murphy, now serving overseas as an infantryman in the 113th Regiment. He was originally a member of Company K and trained with the old Plainfield unit at Camp McClellan.

DAVID M. STEWART.

The funeral of David M. Stewart, whose death occurred Friday night, after an illness with pneumonia, was held at his late home in West Third street, Monday afternoon. Rev. H. St. George Burrill, of Holy Cross church, conducted the service and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Stewart was thirty-two years old and had lived here but a short time. He was employed by local contractors as a carpenter. He is survived by his wife and his parents, the latter living in Scotland.

GEORGE V. LITTELL.

George V. Littell, the eight months' old son of Anna and the late George V. Littell, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday. The little fellow was the victim of influenza and pneumonia, the same disease that claimed his father on Sunday, October 6. The mother, who was Miss Valenquais, of Scotch Plains, is now ill in the hospital with the same malady. The family lived on Road Ending, although Mr. Littel's home for many years was in Bound Brook, where his grandfather was postmaster for a quarter of a century.

The funeral of the child was held at Bound Brook, Thursday, and was in charge of Rev. Mr. Terwilliger, who officiated at the father's funeral last week. Burial was in the Bound Brook cemetery.

DOMINIO SARTE.

Dominio Starte, the three months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Sarte, of 13 Harmony street, the borough, died Sunday. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MISS GENEVIEVE CORRIEL.

In the same undertaking parlors at 56 Somerset street, from which her mother, Mrs. Lulu Corriel Minerd, was buried only four days previous, the funeral of Miss Genevieve Corriel was conducted Sunday afternoon. She was the third in the family to die of influenza within two weeks, the first victim being her brother, Harry Corriel, aged twenty-one, who succumbed three weeks ago. The mother was ill at the time and died in Muhlenberg Hospital, October 7. Her funeral took place on October 9 and the daughter died on October 11. The family had been residing at 17 Harmony street, the borough.

The funeral of Miss Corriel, who was twenty years old, was in charge of Rev. Robert Love, the same clergyman who officiated at the services for the mother and son. Burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery, relatives of the family acting as pall-bearers. Miss Corriel was the daughter of the late Walter Corriel, who at the time of his death was employed by the United States Express Company. She had always lived in Plainfield and at he time her illness began was employed in a Front street store.

MISS ALICIA M. BREEN.

A private funeral service for Miss Alicia M. Breen, daughter of Patrick Breen, of 216 Muhlenberg place, was held in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Rev. Father Thomas Campbell, of St. Joseph's church, offered the requiem mass and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall-bearers were Eugene, Joseph and Charles Renz, Albert Jaeger, John Driscoll, Jr., and Thomas Mattel.

Miss Breen, who was twenty-one years old, was one of the many local young people who have succumbed to pneumonia. She was a sister to the late Private Hugh Breen, of the 311th Infantry, who died of heart trouble at Camp Dix on March 28 last. Her only near surviving relatives are her father, and aunt, Miss Maria Kelly, of Muhlenberg place.

MRS. PURNELL BOWEN.

Mrs. Georgiana Bowen, wife of Purnell Bowen, of 707 East Seventh street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday afternoon, after a brief illness with pneumonia resulting from influenza. The body was taken to Bristol, Pa., where the funeral and interment took place Wednesday.

The Bowen family had lived in this city only two years, coming here from South Jersey. Beside her husband, Mrs. Bowen is survived by one son, Purnell Bowen, Jr., four years old.

T. TOWNSEND BUCKLEY.

The funeral of T. Townsend Buckley, whose death occurred Friday afternoon from influenza and resultant pneumonia, was held at his late home at 607 West Front street, Monday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace Episcopal church, and was private in accordance with the Board of Health epidemic regulations. Burial was private.

Mr. Buckley, who was forty-three years old, was a native of New York. He and his mother, Mrs. W. T. Buckley, who survives him, moved here a few years ago after the death of his father, who was a member of the New York dry goods firm of Dunham Buckley & Company. The young man was graduated from Princeton University, and for many years was engaged in the marine insurance business in New York. He possessed a genial, democratic disposition which won him a host of friends during the short time he had resided in Plainfield. His mother, who lives at the West Front street address, is his only near surviving relative.

WILLIAM CARSON.

The funeral of Corporal William Carson, whose death occurred at Camp Merritt, Saturday night, after a long illness with pneumonia, was held privately at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Carson, of Norwood avenue, yesterday morning at 10:30. Rev. H. St. George Burrill, rector of Holy Cross church, officiated, and in accordance with the Board of Health's rules only members of the family we present. A military escort, composed of soldiers from Camp Merritt, walked beside the hearse from the family residence to Hillside cemetery, where burial was made. Many handsome floral tributes were extended by friends of the young man, who were greatly shocked at the career that was ended so early.

Corporal Carson was born in the borough twenty-one years ago and had always resided there. He was graduated from the North Plainfield Hig hSchool in June, 1917, receiving numerous honors for efficiency in his wokr. Last December he enlisted in the Quartermasters' Corps and was sent from Fort Slocum, where he entered the service, to Camp Merritt, Meigs, Washington. After remaining there a few months, he was transferred to Camp Merritt, where he had been doing splendid work as an overseer of camp supplies. His illness began last July, originally with pneumonia, but later complications developed and he continued in a serious state until the end came. His promotion as corporal came while he was still confined to his bed.

The young man was a member of the Church of the Holy Cross and of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. It is no distortion of facts to say that for a young man, his circle of friends was one of the widest in the city and borough, as he possessed all the traits that readily make and maintain acquaintances.

Beside his parents, the Corporal is survive donly by two brothr E.lsei survived by twin brothers, Elliot and Robert Carson, eighteen years old, and living at the jarental home.

DARWIN K. LAHEY.

Darwin K. Lahey, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lahey, of 12 Duer street, the borough, died Monday morning. His demise was brought about by influenza, one of the youngest personages to die in this locality of the prevalent malady.

The funeral was held at the parents' home, Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, and the burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. JOHN W. REED.

Mrs. Susan Reed, wife of John W. Reed, died at her home, 606 East Third street, Sunday, following an illness with pneumonia. She was an active member of the Mt. Olive Baptist church for many years, and a former pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson, now of New Brunswick, officiated at the funeral service Wednesday afternoon. It took place at the late home and was private in accordance with the Board of Health's rule. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

JOSEPH M. MACK.

Joseph M. Mack, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mack, of 435 Elizabeth street, died Monday afternoon, after a brief illness with influenza and resultant pneumonia. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, when mass was offered by the lad's uncle, Rev. Michael Glennen, of Morris Plains.

Only relatives of the family were at the service but many friends barred from attending by the Board of Health prohibition sent numerous floral tributes as evidence of their deep sympathy. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The pall-bearers were the following six young men who were his classmates in the eighth grade at St. Mary's School: John O'Keefe, George Regan, Frank Thompson, Edward Connors, Francis Hickey and Robert Vanderweg.

The young man had graduated from St. Mary's Grammar School last June and was in his first year at the Plainfield High School. He was exceptionally popular with his classmates and greatly liked by all with whom he came in contact. Beside his parents, he is survived by a brother and a sister.

WADSWORTH A. PARKER, JR.

Wadsworth Asher Parker, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth A. Parker, of 965 West Seventh street, died of bronchial pneumonia, Tuesday morning. The funeral was held privately at the parents' home yesterday in charge of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace Episcopal church, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

The young man was in his fifteenth year and a pupil at the Wardlaw School in the fourth form. In addition to being especially proficient in his studies he was an enthusiastic athlete, taking the lead in many of the school activities. He was manager of the junior baseball and basketball teams and had been looking forward to an especially busy season for the latter. He was the only son in the family.

Mr. Parker, the father, is one of the executive officers of the American Type Foundry and has been active as an official and member of the Shackamaxon Golf Club.

Learn Your New Food Rules and Avoid Argument

Get on the job, you restaurant, lunch wagon, and hotel patrons and make yourself acquainted with what you can do and what you can't do, what you will get and what you won't get at your favorite eating place after next Monday.

The Food Administration has just issued twelve new orders to cover the public sale of "vittals" and, of course, unless you are up-to-date on conservation etiquette you and the waiter are likely to hook, for instance, the obliging gentleman in the white starched coat can only give you one lump of sugar for your coffee no matter what nurturing you have given your sweet tooth. If you are a munition worker, or some other get-rihc-quick citizen, with sufficient funds to invest in a course dinner, this same white-coated fellow can't bring you any bread to nibble on until after the first course is served. Neither can he let you have extra bread, extra butter or anything else extra except a slight increase on your check. He is also tabooed from even giving you extra dishes, or more than one set of eating tools, the supply being cut down to conserve hot water, soap and all the other necessities to win the war. Even the menu card is to be cut down and simplified because of the tons of paper that are needlessly used to let you know what's being gotten in shape back in the kitchen.

Therefore, Mr. Restaurant, Lunch-Wagon or Hotel Patron, commit the following by heart if you want to conserve time by avoiding an argument in your favorite hash-house:

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served any bread or other bakery product which does not contain at least twenty per cent. of wheat flour substitutes, nor shall it serve or permit to be served more than two ounces of this bread, known as Victory bread, or if no Victory bread is served, more than four ounces of other breads(such as corn bread, muffins, Boston brown bread, etc.). Sandwiches or bread served at boardinfi camps, and rye bread containing fifty per cent. or more of pure rye flour, are excepted.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served bread or toast as a garniture or under meat.

No public eating place shall allow any bread to be brought to the table until after the first course is served.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served to one patron at any one meal more than one kind of meat. For the purpose of this rule meat shall be considered as including beef, mutton, pork, poultry and any by-products thereof.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served any bacon as a garniture.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served to any one person at any one meal more than one-half ounce of butter.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served to any one person at any one meal more than one-half ounce of Cheddar, commonly called American cheese.

No public eating place shall use or permit the use of the sugar bowl on the table or lunch counter. Nor shall any public eating place serve sugar or permit it to be served unless the guest so requests, and in no event shall the amount served to any one person at any one meal exceed one teasponful or its equivalent.

No public eating place shall use or permit the use of an amount of sugar in excess of two pounds for every ninety meals served, including all uses of sugar on the table and in cooking, excepting such sugar as may be allotted by the federal food administrators to hotels holding a bakery license. No sugar allotted for this special baking purpose shall be used for any other purpose.

No public eating place shall burn any food or permit any food to be burned and all waste shall be saved to feed animals or reduced to obtain fats.

No public eating place shall display or permit to be displayed food on its premises in any such manner as may cause its deterioration so that it cannot be used for human consumption.

No public eating place shall serve or permit to be served what is known as double cream or cream "de luxe;" and in any event no cream containing over twenty per cent. of butter fat shall be served. Attention is especially directed toward the conservation of bread and butter, cereals, meats, fats, sugar, coffee, cheese and ice, to fresh vegetables and fruits, which should be served when possible, and to unnecessary suppers, teas, luncheons and banquets which are condemned as "fourth meals." The food administration also wishes the preparation and serving of fried dishes to be kept to a minimum.

Simplified service, with meats and vegetables on one plate, instead of in side dishes, and only necessary silverware, and simplification of the menu and menu card, are urged as means of saving not only food, but labor and paper. The general bill of fare should be abandoned, it is said, because the great variety of dishes listed makes waste through spoilage. Simple bills for breakfast, luncheon and dinner, with limited dishes, changed from day to day for variety, are recommended, also the use of hors d'oeuvres, vegetable salads, fruits, sea food, made over dishes and animal by-products, which save staples and utilize many available foods.

John McClinton, of West Third street, contracted influenza last Sunday and since then has been in a serious condition.

Tremley May Be Terminus of New Belt Line Railroad

When the actual construction of the proposed belt line railroad through northern New Jersey is started in the near future the starting point will be at Piermont-on-the-Hudson, and the terminals probably will be at Tremley Point.

Engineers completed the surveying of the route suggested for the road several weeks ago and deals are now under way for the acquiring of the land from the various owners. Until the right of way has been fully established it is not likely that any construction work will be undertaken.

Newark interests have been attempting to insure the building of the line over such a route that would touch the outskirts of the city. It was proposed that after touching Elizabeth the road should cut across the meadows to Newark and thence to Bayonne, where the terminus would be.

That plan has been abandoned, judging from the fact that when the survey was made the course taken was from Elizabeth to Tremley Point.

In picking the latter location for a terminus it is understood that the New York and New Jersey Port Commission had in mind the present congestion around New York harbor and the possibility thta the road would grow to such proportions that unlimited space would be needed. Tremley Point has been considered an ideal site for such a project by realty and transportation men.

The movement for the deepening of the Staten Island Sound to permit the entrance of ocean-going vessels is further referred to favorably by those indorsing the selection of Tremley Point. They declare that it would be possible to bring the products of North Jersey's industrial centers direct to a point where docking facilities could be established.

The financial support for the building of the road is expected to be furnished by the government. The project already has been brought to the attention of officials at Washington, and one of the first men to approve it was General George W. Goethals, formerly State highway engineer.

Christmas gifts for men serving on naval vessels abroad must reach New York not later than November 15, it was announced this week by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The regulations provide that packages sent by parcel post must be inclosed in substantial boxes, with hinge or screw on top so as to facilitate opening and inspection.

Boxes sent by express are limited are twenty pounds, should not be more than two cubic feet in volume, be of wood, well strapped and have hinge or screw tops. No perishable food products other than those in cans or glass jars should be packed.

All packages must be marked with the name and address of the sender, with a notation, "Christmas box," and must be forwarded in care of the supply officer, Fleet Supply Base, twenty-ninth street and Third avenue, South Brooklyn, New York.

Army regulations governing the sending of Christmas packages to American soldiers overseas will apply also to members of the marine corps, whose address is "American Expeditionary Forces," according to reports from Washington. For all other marines the ordinary naval regulations will govern the transmission of gift parcels. Packages for shipment abroad must be in the mail by November 20, bearing the address tags to be obtained from local Red Cross chapters.

March Reports on Shipment of Troops

More than 1,850,000 troops have been embarked for overseas service. During the month of September alone ,more than 250,000 were placed on shipboard.

This was the answer this week made by General March, Chief of Staff, to reports that overseas troop movements have slowed up. The General explained that this shipment was despite the presence of more than 100,000 cases of Spanish influenza in the various camps of the country.

There has been a readjustment in the manner of moving troops from the camps to embarkation points as a result of the spread of the disease. It is a rule of the department that no man shall be selected for overseas duty who has been affected by the disease or who has been exposed to possible contagion.

General March did not indicate whether there will be any retardment in overseas troop movements in the future as the result of the influenza epidemic.

EDGE SPENT $6,347.79 SECURING NOMINATION

Governor Edge recently filed with Secretary of State Martin a supplemental expense account to the one filed before the primaries, when his expenses amounted to $4,593.45. Since that time he has expended $1,754.34, most of which is for clerical work and postage.

Prompt Action Promised On U. S. Seizure Claims

Persons having claims against the government growing out of seizure of property for war or other purposes can obtain prompt action if their applications are filed in the Court of Claims in Washington, it was stated this week by Assistant Attorney General Huston Thompson, in charge of defense of these suits. The docket now has been cleared of all cases in which a plaintiff must await action by the government, he stated.

Cases growing out of the Civil War have been finished within the last few years, and only two years ago the docket was cleared of the French spoliation claims developing a century ago from Napoleon's seizures of American merchant vessels. The last of the Indian depredation cases were disposed of within this year.

Economy Desired in Use of Postage Stamps

The Post Office Department calls attention to the economy in using large denomination stamps on all mail matter. Instead of using 3 one-cent stamps, use one 3-cent stamp, or instead of using 5 two-cent stamps use one ten-cent stamp. The economy in the saving of paper and printing stamps will be considerable to the department and the co-operation of the public is earnestly requested.

The prohibition against selling more than one hundred dollars worth of Thrift Stamps at one time has been removed, and any one may now buy any amount at once up to $1,000 worth. This is also true of War Saxing Stamps. In addition any one person may now own up to $1,000 worth of each issue of both Thrift Stamps and War Saving Stamps. That is you may own $1,000 of the issue of 1918 and also $1,000 of the issue of 1919.

Coast Artillery Wants Men to Seek Commissions

In a statement made at Trenton by Colonel W. E. Ellis, commanding the coast defence of the Potomas, he said that the public has not a clear comprehenston of the duties and functions of the Coast Artillery in the present war. He also stated that there is a great demand for physically qualified overseas service men, and those who join the Coast Artillery now will be sent to France for service with the heavy artillery units of the American expeditionary forces.

The War Department has authorized the chief of the Coast Artillery, in order to secure the services of men who are specially needed, to induct September 12 registrants in the following classes:

Candidates for cimmissions in the Coast Artillery Corps; stenographers, radio operators, electricians, draftsmen, automobile mechanics, cooks and bandsmen. It is quite likely that the privilege of this particular induction will be only for a limited time owing to the fact that after a man is once called for service by his local board he will ordinarily not be allowed to select the arm of the service to which he will be sent.

Colonel Ellis said that material for officers is especially desired and that any man from 18 to 45 physically fit for overseas, whoch is known to be of good moral character and who possesses the necessary educational qualifications is eligible for a commission as a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps. He also stated that those men who are inducted with a view to securing commissions are sent for a period of time, varying from one to six weeks, to a coast artillery fort in the vicinity of their homes, where they are given special training to qualify them to enter the officer candidates' school at Fort Monroe, Virginia. The basic qualifications for admission in this school include a good working knowledge of algebra up through the higher mathematics.

Red Cross Postpones Its Annual Meeting

Restrictions on gatherings of all kinds as placed by the Board of Health have resulted in the postponement of the annual meeting of the Plainfield-North Plainfield Chapter of the Red Cross, scheduled for the Plainfield High School on Wednesday night, October 23.

The meeting was to have been public in character and was intended to include the presentation of reports and the election of officers. As there is no telling when the Board of Health ban will be lifted, no arrangements for a new date can be made at this time but due notice will be given as soon as possible.

Siberian Xmas Packages Must Start by October 25

Christmas packages for American soldiers in Siberia should be in the mail before October 25, the War Department has announced. Each package should bear besides the soldier's name and regiment the words "American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia," and should not weigh more than seven pounds. More than one package may be sent each soldier if desired.

Uncle Sam Spends $33,000 a Minute On the Present War

The War is costing the United States Government $18,000,000,000 a year. The actual expenditures for July were $1,509,282,650. This is at the rate of $50,000,000 a day, or more than $2,000,000 an hour. To make it simpler and more emphatic we can say the costs are $33,000 a minute, or $555 a second. But the success of Our Boys in France is well worth it. Let's keep them going by investing in Liberty Bonds of the Fourth Loan.

Governor Edge Has a Busy Day at Washington

About four hours before the hour appointed for the Democratic Senatorial candidates from New Jersey to call at the White House, Monday, Governor Walter E. Edge, the long term Republican nominee, strolled in and passed a few pleasantries with Secretary Tumulty as to the state of political affairs in New Jersey and the relation of Washington thereto.

Governor Edge also appeared before the National Highways Council with tate Highway Engineer William S. Thompson, of the New Jersey Highway Commission, relative to obtaining priority orders for material needed in building New Jersey State roads that have a military use. Favorable consideration was promised. Mr. Edge also conferred with Senator Curtis, of Kansas, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committe, about prospects in New Jersey.

State Gets $75,000 To Fight Tuberculosis

New Jersey will receive $75,000 as its share of the $2,500,000 appropriation given to the National Tuberculosis Association by the War Council of the American Red Cross to carry on the campaign against tuberculosis. In making this announcement the New Jersey Anti-Tuberculosis League whose headquarters is at 45 Clinton street, Newark, says the State's allotment will have to take the place of the fund usually raised by the Red Cross Christmas seal sale, which will not be held this year as a result of Washington's request that financial campaigns be reduced to a minimum.

The $75,000 appropriation will be available for anti-tuberculosis work next year. It will be received by the New Jersey League in quarterly allotments and will be divided among the communities according to their respective needs.

Because of the influenza epidemic, the New Jersey Joint Conference on Tuberculosis, which was to have been held in Perth Amboy November 2, has been tentatively postponed until November 23. The North Atlantic Conference, scheduled for Pittsburgh October 17-18, has been postponed indefinitely.

HUGHES COMMITTEE COMPLETING PLANE PROBE.

Hearings in the investigation of airplane production by the department of justice practically were completed this week, and final drafting of the report will begin at once.

Charles E. Hughes, who is conducting the investigation, declines to say how long it will take to complete the work, but it is understood two or three weeks will be required. Rumors that the report already had been sent to President Wilson were denied yesterday by Mr. Hughes.

Among the last witnesses to be examined were Major-Gen. George O. Squier, chief signal officer, who had supervision of the airplane program during most of the period included in the investigation, and Colonel E. A. Deeds, former member of the aircraft board. Both spent many hours on the stand, but the nature of their testimony was not disclosed.

JOHN J. GIVENS DIES AT HAZELTON, PA.

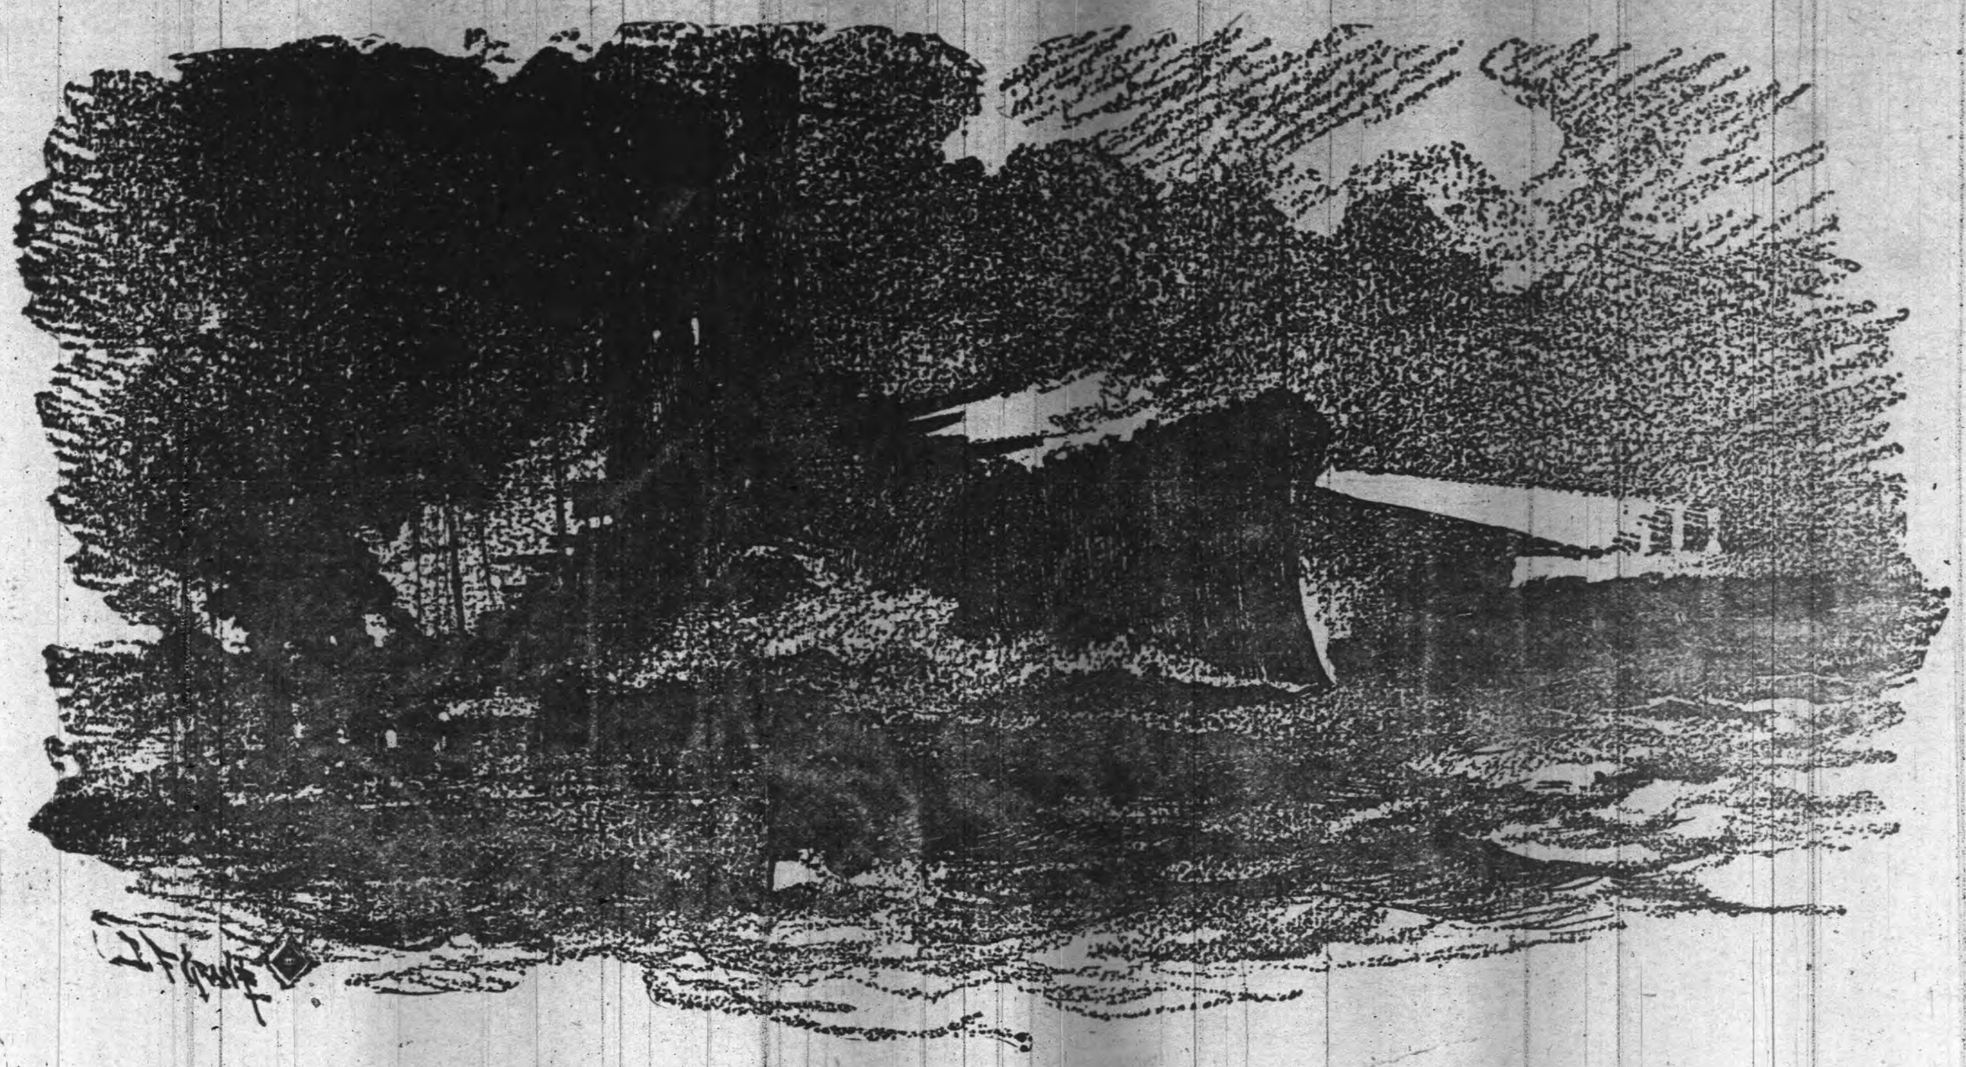
John J. Givens, a former well-known Plainfielder, died at Hazelton, Pa., a few days ago, a victim of influenza and pneumonia. He contracted the disease at Bayonne, where he was working at the time but left for Hazelton to be among relatives when it was seen that his condition was becoming serious. The funeral and interment took place in the Pennsylvania city.

Mr. Givens was about thirty-six years old and leaves a wife and family beside his parents. While in Plainfield, he was employed as an expert accountant at the Ransome Concrete Works. He was a member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks and news of his death was conveyed to this organization by the Hazelton lodge.

CLAIMS HE HAS AN INFLUENZA CURE.

Dr. George F. Baer, of the Homeopathic Hospital staff at Pittsburgh, announced this week that he has found a successful cure and preventive for influenza. Dr. Baer said patients suffering from the disease and having fever of 103 have recovered under the treatment, which also has proved a successful inoculation against the malady.

In announcing the result of experiments since the epidemic began Dr. Baer said the preparation used is not a scientific secret but a combination of iodine and creosote.



When the Guns Begin to Roar

in that great decisive sea battle

WE shall have the men, thousands of them, brave American sailors, fired with the same spirit that lived in John Paul Jones.

When danger threatens— .

When the searchlight picks the enemy ship out of the blackness, and the giant guns begin to roar their message of death,

What comfort can we send—

We who lie safe in comfortable beds?

We can put courage and nerve and daring into the heart of every seaman as he leaps to his post—and we can do it now!

We can send him into the fight, knowing that there are enough guns, and enough shells to answer the enemy, shot for shot—and more.

That up from the hold where the sweaty ammunition passers toil, round after round will swing in a never-failing stream.

That his ship, from bow to stern, is equipped for Victory.

Let us do it. Let us lend the way they fight
Let us buy bonds to our utmost—for Victory

PERSONAL

James Fraser, of John street, is still confined to his bed after a week's illness with influenza, although he is recovering gradually and may be able to be out early next week.

Mrs. Fred Zweifel, of Grant avenue, who was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital last Saturday, to be treated for pneumonia resulting from influenza, was reported today as being considerably improved. Mrs. Zweifel's little son, Fred, Jr., was also ill with the malady but has since recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emory Ricketts, who were married last Saturday, have returned from their wedding trip and are temporarily making their home with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Manning, of East Randolph road. Mrs. Ricketts was formerly Miss Florence Lucille Manning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong, only relatives of the families being present, owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. T. H. Ricketts, of Westervelt avenue. Miss Mae Manning, of East Orange, acted as bridesmaid at the ceremony, and Cadet Noble G. Ricketts, of San Francisco, a cousin of the bridegroom, was best man.

Fireman William Jaeger, of headquarters, has been confined to his home on West Fourth street for the past week by an attack of the influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Dunham, of Madison avenue, recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Conant, of Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. Frank LeRoy Young and daughter, of Knoxville, Tenn., are stopping with Mrs. Young's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Brownlee, of Putnam avenue. Mrs. Young was formerly Miss Mildred Brownlee. Her husband has been in the medical department of the service for some time and was recently commissioned as captain.

Charles McCarthy, Jr., of Manson place, returned to his position in the office of the Pond Tool Works, Tuesday, after a ten days' confinement to his home by influenza.

Miss Helen Hyde, of Johnston's Drive, who was recently ill at the home of her grandmother in Pottersville, returned to her home the past week.

Miss Mary Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Cook, of West Third street, has been seriously ill with influenza during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Cliffton, of Kenyon avenue, left this week for their winter home at Braidentown, Florida, where they will remain until next May.

Timothy Meaney, of 683 West Fourth street, is among the West End residents suffering from influenza. He was quite ill the first of the week but is now much improved.

Edward V. McEvoy, Jr., a member of the Merchant Marine, stationed at Boston, spent the past week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. McEvoy, of John street.

Mrs. William E. Wilson, of West Front street and Clinton avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this week, suffering from pneumonia, which developed after an attack of influenza. Her condition today was reported as being favorable.

Among the recent arrivals overseas are those of Major William A. Townsend, son of former Mayor and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of the borough; Private 'Jack" Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Force, of Richmond street, and Private Frank Remppies, son of John Remppies, of Webster place.

George Mellick, of Summit avenue, the borough, is suffering from influenza. He contracted the disease shortly after returning home from Camp Humphreys, to which place he was called by the illness of his son, who contracted pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Westergard, who were married last Saturday night, are to make their home for the winter with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. R. Dunham, of Chatham place. Mrs. Westergard was formerly Miss Marielle Dunham and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring. Mr. Westergard is employed in the wire chief's department at the local telephone exchange.

Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, of West Front street, recently appointed to a captain's commission in the army, is now stationed at hte Base Hospital at Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa. He was formerly in service at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Mrs. John Donaldson, of Stebbins place, returned home Monday, after a two weeks' stay at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Wilson, of Providence, R. I. Mrs. Donaldson contracted influenza while away and came home before she had fully recovered because her husband was stricken here with the same disease. The latter is now much improved. James Wilson, Mrs. Donaldson's nephew, accompanied her back to Plainfield and is spending the present week at her home.

Frank H. Evans, a former well-known resident, who has been in Wisconsin for the past six years, was a visitor in town during the present week. He was called East by the death of his mother, Mrs. Ettie Evans, of Clinton, who lived for a number of years on Somerset street, the borough. Mrs. Evans was fifty-six years old, and was buried at Carverstown, Pa., in the same grave with the body of her husband. Mr. Evans, the son, was connected with the commercial office of the Public Service Corporation here when he went to Wisconsin. He was located at La Crosse for about four years as a department manager for the American Utilities Corporation but is now at Fond du Lac, with the same concern. Mrs. Evans' wife was formerly Miss Mabel Batty and previous to her marriage was a teacher in the Plainfield High School. Mr. Evans left for Fond du Lac, Wednesday.

NEW CEREAL RULES IN EFFECT THIS WEEK.

In order to facilitate the sale of substitutes with wheat flour, the food Administration announced this week that the trade will be permitted to pack corn meal, corn flour, barley flour and oat flour in packages of six and twelve pounds and rye flour in packages of sixteen and thirty-two pounds. This amends the rule which requires these commodities to be packed in either very small packages of one to five pounds or larger packages twenty-five to 100 pounds. In order to avoid the waste of cartons, permission has been given in a number of special cases for the use of odd-sized packages already on hand.

The order issued by the government for the conserving of labor and material for war work has been observed to the fullest extent by the Union county authorities in drawing up the 1919 road program. Whereas in years past as high as $500,000 has been appropriated in one year, during the coming twelve months a total of only $165,000 will be expended, and that only on necessary work.

The twenty-one municipalities in the county are also observing the edict. But few of them are planning for the undertaking of new work, and the amount of money to be expended on reconstruction and maintenance will also be materially reduced, according to schedules which have been filed with County Engineer Jacob L. Bauer. They have been passed upon by Mr. Bauer and, together with the county program, have been forwarded to the State Highway Commission for approval. The government will have the final say as regards the proposed work.

No new work will be done by the county. The only reconstruction work that approval is sought for is for a half-mile stretch of St. George avenue, from Orchard street to Colonia road, Rahway. It is part of the stretch which the government recently decided was not sufficiently important to be reconstructed. It is planned to spend $40.000 on the improvement.

Only $125,000 will be spent on the maintaining of the roads under county control, even if the State and national governments give approval to the entire program. That is the lowest estimate that Engineer Bauer and his advisers decided would be cufficient to keep the main arteries of travel in condition.

A number of municipalities expect to undertake new construction work, but Mr. Bauer is of the opinion that none of it will be approved. Garwood has planned to appropriate $75,000 for the rebuilding of a large portion of its roads; Hillside seeks $5,000 for new work, and Roselle Park $1,800. It is doubtful if Plainfield will be allowed to spend $64,000 on reconstruction work as planned. Linden wishes to spend $15,000; Summit $4,000, and Scotch Plains $5,000.

In the aggregate, the various local road officials want to spend something over $300,000 on the maintenance of their road systems. Elizabeth, with sixty-nine and a fraction miles of thoroughfares, only plans to spend $35,000, while Plainfield and Westfield have more elaborate plans. The list of places and the amounts they anticipate spending on maintenance, providing approval is forthcoming, is as follows:

Plainfield, $85,000; Westfield, $85,000; Elizabeth, $35,000; Rahway, $25,000; Clark, $1,000; Cranford, $14,000; Scotch Plains, $5,000; Linden Township, $49,000; New Providence Township, $1,400; Springfield, $2,137.50; Union, $8,000; Kenilworth, $1,000; Hillside, $8,500; Roselle, $12,000; Garwood, $500; Linden Borough, $3,000; Mountainside, $1,500; New Providence Borough, $2,000; and Roselle Park, $8,000.

County and City Fuel Administrators Give Assurances of Ample Coal Supply Locally

Assurances from County Fuel Administrator John K. English that shipments of coal to Plainfield would be speeded up, and that orders for one tons from householders would hereafter be given preference over one-third allotments, came as welcome news to local people this week. Up to recently deliveries have been far behind and prospects of last winter's dire stringency being repeated were gradually assuming larger proportions.

The city's new fuel commissioner, George T. Rogers, also gives assurance that Plainfielders will not undergo the same experience the coming cold months as they did last January, February and March.

"In the first place," said Mr. Rogers to a Record reporter, "the weather of last winter was of a most unprecedented character. We, of this generation, may never see another like it as it was without a parallel as far as we could trace back. There are records of colder days but not for such a continued period as we had last January and February.

"In addition to the prospect of better weather," continued Mr. Rogers, "the railroads now have the freight movements better regulated and the people have been doing their share in conserving supplies. While the daily number of carloads coming into Plainfield have not been what was expected, the supply is now on a fairly good basis and in a short time will be sufficient to meet all needs. I am new to the local office but not to the coal dealers, as I have been a wholesale broker for many years, and once I get the local situation in hand there will be no need of last winter's deplorable state of affairs. I shall be glad to confer with any citizen at any time on matters pertaining to the coal supply but I feel safe in saying now that there will be no waiting in line for coal orders or frantic appeals for fuel, such as we had not long since."

Mr. Rogers was named by County Administrator English to succeed John J. Kenney. His home is at 44 Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, but he has been in close touch with Plainfield affairs ever since locating here. He has established his offices in the second floor of the City Building at 149 North avenue, where he is at his desk from 9 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. His telephone number is 2440.

The statement issued by County Administrator English, in which he promises increased shipments for Plainfield, and tells of the one-ton preference, is as follows:

"The situation in Union county in regard to coal has been bad but within a week the danger from suffering probably will be over because of action taken and to be taken shortly. The matter of distribution has been left by the State Administrator with one of the assistants in his office to whom has been delegated the matter of distribution of domestic consumers' coal throughout the State and nothing else."

"I spent the whole of last Saturday afternoon with this gentleman and, as a result of our conference, the following was agreed upon:

"1. That I should be allowed to issue a new order to all dealers of the county directing them to cease distribution of one-third of annual requirements to each applicant and instead to deliver only one ton at a time until all families having no coal should be supplied to this extent. Such order was issued today and is as follows:

"'To Retail Dealers of Union County, N. J.

"'The State Fuel Administrator is now making a calculation from which he is to decide upon a basis of distribution to the various counties of New Jersey and tells me that coal cannot be sent to Union county more rapidly than now until this calculation is completed.

"'Thousands of families in Union county have no coal and in hundreds of such families there are aged or sick persons or babies. An epidemic is in our midst. We cannot wait. Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the U. S. Fuel Administrator for the State of New Jersey, I do hereby order that every applicant ready to take and pay for the same and who now has no coal shall receive one ton before any deliveries of larger amounts are made to any other consumer. This rule applies to every domestic consumer who already has signed his order or who shall sign it between no wand October 31, 1918, inclusive.

"'JOHN K. ENGLISH,
"'U. S. Fuel Administrator
for Union County, N. J.'

"2. Promise was obtained that immediate action would be taken toward supplying the moderate needs of the so-called 'bare spots' in this county and that within a week coal should be flowing to such places with great rapidity. The particular 'bare spots' are Plainfield, Rahway and Elizabethport. Today word was received from the State Administrator's Office that action in accordance with the promise of Saturday already had been taken; that allotment calculations would be complete within a few days and that a fair supply would arrive within ten days.

"3. New Jersey, by order of the Federal authorities is to receive a certain increased allotment over the supply of 1918. This distribution of this allotment to various counties is made by the State Administrator in accordance with his opinion as to the needs of such counties respectively. This matter was left to a committee composed of gentlemen from various counties and only a small increased allotment for Union county was advised by such committee. At the conference on Saturday the needs of Union county were set forth and the argument made that it had grown more in the last two years than nearly any other county in the State and various other arguments were advanced. As a result the representative of the State Administrator agreed that our arguments were sound and a very much larger tentative allotment was made, which allotment is subject only to confirmation by the State Fuel Administrator.

"The order as to one ton deliveries shortly should take care of immediate needs; the suggested action as to the so-called 'bare spots' should enable all in the county very soon to receive one-third of their year's supply and the increased allotment should make it possible for all consumers to secure in time at least five-sixths of their requirements."

Michael L. Shannon, manager of the Plainfield Theatre, returned Tuesday, after a week's stay at Atlantic City. "Mike" had a slight touch of the influenza when he went away but his sojourn at the shore seemed to drive it away.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—The Americans covered themselves with glory in the hand-to-hand fighting in the streets of Fismes yesterday when they captured that German base. The fighting is said to have been the bitterest of the whole war, the Prussian Guards asking no quarter and being bayonetted or clubbed to death as they stood by their machine guns.

Dem. Committeeman.

When You Fight— FIGHT

Fight as these American soldiers fought in the streets of Fismes.

"They covered themselves with glory," the papers say. Of course they did—they are Americans.

They met the finest of the enemy troops in a terrific hand-to-hand struggle. They used their guns—their bayonets—their bare fists. Every American soldier went after his man desperately, fearlessly, persistently, with one great driving purpose—to whip that Prussian Guard, to silence its machine guns—to win!

It's a pretty good way to fight—this American way. It wins battles over there, it will win a splendid Victory over here—if we fight when we fight—if we buy Liberty Bonds to our utmost.

When you fight—fight!
When you buy—buy!

Building Owners Sue To Recover Room And Bath "Lost" Many Years

A bath-room and an adjoining bed room in the Roberts building on North avenue, now owned by the Union Investment Company of New Jersey, became lost in the shuffle about a dozen years ago in a foreclisure action and only just came to light this summer when the upper floors were being remodeled into apartments.

County Collector Nate Leavitt, of Elizabeth, the guideing star of the company, was much surprised when the bath-room and the adjoining bedroom appeared on the scene, and more so when he found that they had been in use all these years by the tenants of the McVey building adjoining, now owned by Councilman Peter J. McDonough, into which building they opened. A prompt demand was made therefore on the occupants to skedaddle, but they thought that it was some joke too and concluded that it would be just as well to see what the courts said about it before giving up their morning tub, as they had a ninety-nine years' lease tucked up the sleeve of their bathrobe, which lease they contended, had not been cut out by the foreclosure proceedings.

Mr. Leavitt promptly commenced an ejectment action in the Supreme Court, and Mr. McDonough consulted Jurge Newcorn and Counsellor W. S. Angleman and stood pat. The case came to trail this week before Judge Silzer without a jury in the Supreme Court Circuit at Elizabeth.

From the records produced by Mr. McDonough's counsel the Court concluded that the lease had not been cut out by the foreclosure proceedings and still held good, and that therefore the bath-room and the adjoining bedroom, which structurally are a part and parcel of the Union Investment Company's building, belong for the time being and for several generations to come to the owner of the McDonough building and are being held in mid-air by the Union Investment Company's beams for the benefit of the McDonough building's tenants. But on Mr. Leavitt's plea to allow him to put in a brief the final decision was held up for a week.

The lawyers who have passed the title, and there were several, are now wondering where they slipped a cog.

Borough Soldier Describes Thrilling Trip From English Camp to Battle Line in France

Included in the personnel of the 312th Field Signal Battalion, Medical Detachment, which recently went into action on the French front, is Harry F. Martin, of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield. He has been in service only a little more than two months, going out of the borough as a selective to Camp Dix, where, after less than a month's training, he was transferred to an outgoing overseas battalion. He passed within sight of Ireland, stopped at two British rest camps in England for a brief period and then crossed the English channel to war-ridden France, where he is now located somewhere on the line where real action has been taking place.

Private Martin's travels previous to his becoming a soldier were somewhat limited and being of an observing nature, he naturally profited by his new experiences and he writes of them in a most interesting way in a letter received this week by his brother, Borough Clerk Frederick A. Martin. Omitting personal mention, and including one deletion by the censor, it is as follows:

Somewhere in France,
Sept. 20, 1918.

Dear Fred:

You know I had done a little traveling before going to Camp Dix, saw a few of the different States, etc., back home. I recall one little trip from Morristown, to Lynn, Mass., quite a trip taking in four States—New Jersey, New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts. Just a nice little morning's walk as an appetizer, compared with my traveling of the last month. At that time I recorded my traveling by States, now its by countries, and "the sky as the limit." I had one little ride of about 1,500 miles, "as near as I can figure," in a side door Pullman, lasting about two nights and a day and a half. I don't envy the life of a "Hobo" one little bit.

Coming over I had a glimpse of Ireland from the boat. I've stopped at two camps in England, and at the last camp I met "Bill" Jeffery. I believe I mentioned it in my last letter though. The country surrounding the last camp in England was quite pretty; it was near a good sized city. The trolley line at that place resembled our Fifth avenue buses in New York. I was under the impression I was cured of the "wanderlust" after being home nearly three years. It must of broke out again, as I couldn't resist the temptation to hop on that funny looking trolley and see the city. The fare was two pennies—English pennies—equal to four cents in our money. I ran across a Military Police who had something for supper that didn't agree with him and he spoiled my little excursion by insisting on me going back to camp. Such is life in the army,—you can't always have your own way.

After crossing the English channel my next stop was a rest camp in France. From there we took our "side door Pullman" ride to the camp we are now located at, "Somewhere in France." At one time we passed within a stone's throw of Paris. The climate is warm for this time of the year where we are now located. This is my day off duty. I'm sitting in the public park, and as I look up I can see before me a tower that was built in the year 1200, and has a history attached to it. The whistles on the steam engines here have the shrillest and most piercing sound. I don't think I'll ever forget them. I sometimes wonder if you can hear them as you sit in the office. We are the first troops to locate in the village where we are now situated. I'm about tempted to break out and smoke again. I scoured the village and can't buy any chocolate or candy of any description. I'll rejoice the day the good old Y. M. C. A. locates here; if I stay here that long. I discovered a little store the other day that had a few cakes for sale. The cakes were about the size of a chocolate imperial; you know what they are, don't you. They couldn't compare with a chocolate imperial though. I paid one franc, equal to 17½ cents in our money, and received seven little cakes in exchange. Having had experience in the grocery line, I would say they were worth, or rather sold, at the modest price of about a dollar and a half a pound. I was cured of cigarettes in the States and I think they will cure me of sweet stuffs here at that rate. I forgot to tell you we crossed the English channel in a cattle coat, it taking from 6 p. m. until the following morning, landing at Havre, France, about 11 a. m.

We had life preservers on at all times, eating and sleeping with them. We slept any old place we could find, on deck on in the hold. I picked out a bunk on deck and thought I was fixed for the night. The rain beating down on my face awoke me and made me look up new quarters for the balance of the night. I then went down below. Our overcoats certainly did come in handy as the air was real cold, especially sleeping on deck. We also wore life-preservers crossing the Atlantic, the only time we were allowed to take them off was at night. We slept with our clothes on the entire trip, life-preservers in the bunk, handy in case of emergency. When we get to the front we will have to carry a gas mask at all times, sleep with them within arm's length. If we are within —— miles of the front we carry them in the alert position, that's up across the chest. If further back than —— miles, at the slung position, that's at the side. Between our packs, they sure are heavy, life-preservers and gas masks. I'll feel lost when I get back in civilian life if I can't carry home three or four bags of flour, or a sack of potatoes from the grocer's once or twice a day for mother. I started this letter September 20th and mentioned at the time that we might move before I could finish it. We have. This is the second stop since then. Today is the twenty-fifth of September.

We are now located at a very small village, nothing here at all. I think we will move again shortly. It's quite warm here in the day time, and a little cold at night. I'll mail you a postal of the village where I started this letter. I'm in good health and spirits. I consider myself very fortunate in having good health up to the present date. "Knock wood." The men who are taken sick are left behind and become casualties. In some rare cases they are picked up against by their old company, usually they are assigned to some other company, possibly in some other branch. When we left Havre, France, I felt a little groggy, taped up my feet and put on two pair of socks. That certainly did help my feet. I was a little sick for the first time since leaving Dix. Will power and a little "guts," pardon the expression, have got medicine tied to a post in some cases. I took my old pack and fell in line when the order came to move and hike. That night I ate a good supper and also discovered I had hiked most all the soreness out of my feet. I certainly would hate to have to become a casualty. It's about one month to the day since pulling out of New York harbor. We left 10:30 at night. I remained on deck and watched the lights in the harbor and the Statue of Liberty fade in the distance as we neared Sandy Hook. If we were allowed to cheer we certainly would of made the old harbor ring. Orders were to remain silent. I personally think it fitted the occasion as well as cheering, as the majority of the boys would much rather be silent with their thoughts and memories for this one last time, especially for those who are familiar with that dear old scene. Boy! boy! how we'll welcome that on our return. Condense the news and write as much as possible when writing. It's a little over a month since leaving the States and I haven't received any mail to date. I'm sort of running a marathon and it probably hasn't caught up to me as yet. I'm living in hopes, so make it worth while when I get it.

Your loving brother.
HARRY.

Private Service Tomorrow For Wolcott Calkins

At the home of Mayor and Mrs. Leighton Calkins, at 929 Madison avenue, a strictly private funeral service will be held tomorrow morning for their son, Wolcott Calkins, who died after a brief illness with pneumonia in the Union College Infirmary at Schenectady, N. Y.

Rev. Dr. Raymond Calkins, of Cambridge, Mass., brother of Mayor Calkins will officiate and only members of the immediate family will be present.

The young man was in his nineteenth year. He was graduated from the Plainfield High school last June and entered Union College as a Fresh man this fall. He was taken ill last Sunday, the malady becoming serious almost from the start. Mayor and Mrs. Calkins and the latter's mother, Mrs. J. M. Whiton, hurried to Schenectady and were present when the end came at 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

Wolcott joned the Student Army Training Corps at Union College when he entered last month which brought him regularly into the military service as a private in the National Army. He was working for a commission when he died. At a church service at St. George's church, Schenectady, yesterday morning, the casket was covered with the American flag and a detachment of officers and men of the Union College Student Army Training Corps acted as a guard of honor.

He had been taken into the Sigma Phi Society and was living at the Sigma Phi Club when he became sick, although he would soon have been transferred to the U. S. Government barracks for the Student Army Corps nearing completion. For burial he was dressed in the United States Army uniform. He was intensely patriotic and keen for service.

The body was cremated at Troy, yesterday afternoon. After the private services at the house tomorrow morning, interment of the ashes will be made at Hillside cemetery.

Twice "over the top" in one night and subjected for three days to a heavy German barrage and gas attack are a part of the thrilling enperiences recently undergone in France by William McCarthy, of 649 East Sixth street, as a member of the 311th Infantry now in action.

Despite the fact he is new at the soldier game, Private McCarthy tells of the work he is doing in a matter of fact way, even belittling a dose of gas he received in striking at the foe. This is how he modestly tells of what he has done in a letter received by his mother, Mrs. William McCarthy, of East Sixth street, yesterday.

Somewhere in France,
Sept. 20, 1918

My dear Mother:—

Just a few lines to let you know I received your first and long looked for letter on Sept. 11th and the most remarkable thing about it was that I received it in the trenches on the eve of the big drive in St. Mihiel but I did not have an opportunity to read it until a few days ago. Things were very busy for a while but they are kind of settled down now.

I had the pleasure of going over the top twice in the drive and the second time over, on the morning of the 14th at 4:30 I was slightly gassed but so far it has not proven dangtrous I am now in the base hospital in France and am getting along pretty good and expect to be out soon again, so do not get alarmed or worried as I am well taken care of and will be all right soon.

Well, dear Mother, I have certainly had a wonderful experience in the last two weeks and it is one that will never be forgotten. You can never realize what war is until you are really in it. We certainly cleaned out that sector of Boches to perfection. Everywhere you looked all over the battlefield for miles were strewn dead Germans, and all that died or were hit by us when we came over, just threw up their hands and hollered Kamerade, but it was so tempting we just had to do it.

The place we took they have had for four years and they certainly had a fine home of it, but when we got through with it, it looked like a big dump. Our losses were very small. Old Fritz certainly gave us a warm reception but it was too late, we just had our minds made up to take it or die. He bombarded us with artillery and gas three days and nights in succession. I surely thought my days were over, but I came through OK.

I will have to close as I am getting weak so will say good-bye and will write more in the near future. With love and best wishes to all and thoughts of you and home, dear Mother, I am as ever,

Your son,
Willie.

Dies After Inoculation

Thrown into a spasm by the injection of influenza vaccine, at the Spicer plant, Wednesday afternoon, Harry Friedman, of 111 Washington street, fell to the floor fracturing his skull. He died in Muhlenberg hospital a few hours later.

All employees at Spicer's were being inoculated by a specialist and Friedman's case is the only one reported of any ill effect. He recently underwent an operation which may have had something to do with producing the spasm.

DELINQUENT ALIMONY KEEPS HIM IN JAIL

Albert Lederer, of this city, who has been in the Somerset county jail for nearly six weeks, because of his failure to pay alimony to his former wife, must continue to languish in a cell according to a ruling handed down Tuesday by Vice-Chancellor Lane.

Attorney Arthur Murphy, of Plainfield, made application to the Vice-Chancellor to have Lederer released but as it was not believed by the Court that Lederer had been punished sufficiently or shown any inclination to liquidate the accrued alimony, an order for release was denied.

Excessive Grief Fatal To Sister Margaret Anna

Excessive grief induced by the death of her sister, Sister Regina Michaella a week ago resulted last night in the death at St. Mary's Convent, of Sister Margaret Anna. She had been stationed in the convent attached to St. Joseph's parish, Paterson, but came to Painfield when her sister's illness became critical. She collapsed completely at the time of the latter's death and later in her weakened condition fell an easy victim to pneumonia.

Mrs. Michael McCorriston, of Millville, mother of Sister Margaret Anna arrived in Plainfield one hour before her daughter's demise but her father and a brother were unable to reach here until 3 o'clock this morning. All came here last week on a similar sad mission, the deaths of the two daughters occuring just a week apart within a few hours.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary church, tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock when a solemn high mass of requiem will be offered and the body will afterward be taken to Millville for burial beside that of Sister Regina Michaella.

Sister Margaret Anna was twenty-eight years old. Previous to entaering the sisterhood, six years ago, her name was Miss Helen McCorriston. Beside her parents, she is survived by three brothers and four sisters.

MEN!

Muhlenberg Wants You

Men of Plainfield, Muhlenberg Hospital appeals to you for assistance. Worn almost to the point of utter exhaustion through caring for the never ceasing flow of influenza patients, the noble nurses and their equally noble women volunteers are finding the task telling upon them. They have worked night and day for four weeks and must keep on working if your loved ones are to be restored to health. A timely lift from you, Mr. Plainfielder, will help them in their task and perhaps be the means of saving life.

Don't excuse yourself with the belief that there is nothing you can do. You can be just as helpful as the willing members of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Home Defense Leagues who are presenting themseles at the institution every night after their own day's work is over and saying: "Here I am; what do you want done?" The next moment they are at work on some task, sometimes a small one, sometimes a big one.

Go on out to the hospital tonight, you who have been holding back, and derive an inspiration from the sacrificing women who have borne more than their share in this battle against disease. They have been on the firing line as it were and three, two, or even one hour of your time and strength will give them the necessary rest for labor on another day.

Private Schomp's Funeral Tomorrow

The funeral of Private John Wilbur Schomp, of North Plainfield, who died at Camp Meade, last Friday night, will be held at the chapel of Cole and High on West Second street tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. It will be in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, and burial will be at Readington, Hunterdon county.

Private Schomp was the son of Mrs. Rose Schomp, of 166 Grove street, the borough, and was born at Child's, Kansas, thirty years ago. He came to North Plainfield when a young man and just to his going to Camp Meade last August as a member of Company A, 11th Motor Supply Train, he had been engaged in the express business here with his brother, Carl Schomp. His wife died about two years ago, and beside his mother and brother, his only near surviving relative is one sister, Miss Evelyn Schomp, of Grove street.

FIELD MASSES AT ST. MARY'S SUNDAY

Outdoor gatherings haveing been permitted by the Board of Health, Rev. Father Bogan announced today that Field Masses would be resumed at St. Mary's church next Sunday. The services will be held on the lawn at 7 and 10 A. M. A similar service will be held at St. Bernard's chapel at 8 A. M.

AN APPROACHING WEDDING

Miss Margaret Duning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dunning, of Orange, will be married to Captain Wetmore Holloway Titus, of this city at the church of St. Andrew, South Orange, on Saturday, November 2. Captain Titus, is at present stationed in Washington and he and his bride will reside in that city.

Soldier Lad Dies As Result of Duty At Gillespie Plant

Influenza, contracted while doing guard duty at the Gillespie plant, at Morgan, following the big explosion, of October 5, resulted Tuesday in the death of Martin J. Kane, of this city in the military hospital at Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook. He was stationed at that point as a member of Company D, 15th Battalion, United States Coast Guards. Immediately after the catastrophe occurred, at the Morgan plant the commanding officer at Hancock ordered out a detachment of men to form a cordon around the premises and prevent crowds of sight seers from placing themselves in danger beforé the last of the magazines had blown up. The Plainfielder was included in the company sent out and because of the long hours on duty, and the difficulty of securing the proper rations, weakened himself to such an extent, that influenza set in.

Mr. Kane was borne in Ireland in 1895 and had lived in Plainfield only three years. He made his home with his uncle, Martin J. Regan, of 209 Spooner avenue. Previous to entering the service, he was employed at the Spicer plant in South Plainfield. Beside the uncle mentioned, he leaves two other uncles here, James Regan, of Liberty street and Patrick Regan, of Harrison avenue, North Plainfield, also his parents, brothers and sisters living in Ireland.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery. It is probable that an escort of soldiers from a nearby station will act as an escort from the church to the burial place, and accord military honors.

Epidemic Ban In Force At Least Another Week

Board Of Health At Special Meeting Decides Danger Of Influenza's Spread Still Too Great To Lift Quarantine--Outdoor Meetings May Be Held--Many New Cases Reported Today

Following a secial meeting held last night announcement came from the Board of Health office, today, that the closing order placed on the influenza epidemic would be continued for at least a week longer, with only one modification. This is that out door meetings may be held but otherwise no public gatherings of any kind are to be allowed. The latter will include churches and funerals Permission for out door gatherings will allow the holding of Field Masses at St. Mary's church which were abandoned after the drastic measures were first taoken.

At the meeting last night, the Health Board considered every phase of the situation and decided that while the epidemic has not materially increased the past week, it has not materially decdeased. The number of new cases reported continue to average about thirty daily, too great a number to remove the precautions at this time.

At Muhlenberg ospital today, there are 148 patients, a slight decrease during the week. There were two deaths last night, only one of them from pneumonia. This was Donato Deleo, a twelve year old girl whose father is critically ill at the institution. Many other patients are also in a critical condition.

The cases and deaths reported to date are as follows:

New cases of Influenza	30
New cases of Pneumonia	9
Deaths	5
The totals
Influenza	1868
Pneumonia	213

Examinations Yield Sixty-nine 1-A Men For General Service

Physical examinations conducted at the Evergreen avenue school Tuesday, Wednesday and yesterday afternoons resulted in sixty-nine of the September 12 registrants being placed in class 1-A. Eleven others were classified for limited military service, fifteen designated as "remedial" cases and nine rejected entirely because of physical defects.

A total of 104 men appeared before the physicians and a number of others given the call failed to appear because of illness or for other reasons. The local Draft Board now has 300 more registrants of September 12 in waiting for examination, but they will not be called until the present rush for doctors' services, because of the grip epidemic is over.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED FOR CEMETERY WORK

Volunteers are again wanted for work at St. Mary's cemetery next Sunday. Owing to the large number of graves to be oened, the employees are unable to meet the demand and the burial of bodies has been greatly hampered. Men of the parish who wish to assists are requested to present themselves at the cemetery anytime Sunday.

MORE PLAINFIELDERS ON CASUALTY LISTS

More Plainfield names appeared on the casualty lists as given out during the past week. They include, Sergeant Timore George Kane, son of Mrs. August Bandle, of West Third street; Charles Edward Gleantzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gleantzer, of Lafayette place; Michael Waldron, of 125 West Fourth street and Edward Blair, of Golf avenue.

The degree of the wound in each case was said to be slight.

ADMITS EMBEZZING $1.000 FROM COURIER-NEWS

Frederick A. Magee, a young man whose home in on Duer street, North Plainfield, was arraigned in the Union County Court this week on a charge of embezzling $1,000 from the Courier-News Publishing Company by which he was employed as auditor. He admitted his guilt and was remanded for sentence today.

Complaint against Magee was made by Charles H. Frost, president of the Courier-News Publishing Company, and the defendent was held for trial by City Judge William G. DeMeza. He is married and formerly resided at 163 East Second street.

FATHER CAMPBELL ILL

Rev. Father Campbell, of St. Joseph's church, became ill this week with influenza but today was reported as being able to sit out of bed.

FATHER HENNESEY IMPROVING

Rev. Father Hennessey, who has been at Muhlenberg hospital for three weeks critically ill with pneumonia, continues to improve. His condition today was considered quite good.

JAMES W. HART ILL

James W. Hart, Exalted Ruler of Plainfield Lodge of Elks, is ill at his home on Gresham road with an attack of influenza. He contracted the malady in New York on Tuesday but immediately hurried to Plainfield and has since been in bed. His condition today was quite good and a speedy recovery is expected.

Miss Eleanor Marie Keely, of Carlton avenue, and Edward William Hines, of Liberty street, who were married in St. Mary's church at 6 o'clock Wednesday night. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, in the presence of only the members of the bridal party.

The Right Men in the Right Jobs Will Win The War

THE true American wants to work where he will help win the war. He wants to fit in. America needs the Right Men in the Right Jobs. Only when this comes about can maximum production be obtained to support our armies at the front.

The needs of all war industries can be anticipated and met by the Government if employers and laborers will avail themselves solely of the nation-wide machinery which is at hand. The length of the War depends directly on our Country's ability to supply all War Industry with the best workers the country can produce the moment they are needed.

The U. S. Employment Service is the official bureau of the Federal Government in charge of the distribution of labor. The President has declared that it is the official agency for recruiting and distributing unskilled labor for war work.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

"Industry plays as essential and honorable a role in this great struggle as do our military armaments. We all recognize the truth of this, but we must also see its necessary implications—namely, that industry, doing a vital task for the nation, must receive the support and assistance of the nation."

• • •

"Therefore, I solemly urge all employers engaged in war work to refrain after August 1st, 1918, from recruiting unskilled labor in any manner except through this central agency. I urge labor to respond as loyally as heretofore to any calls issued by this agency for voluntary enlistment in essential industry. And I ask them both alike to remember that no sacrifice will have been in vain, if we are able to prove beyond all question that the highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people."

WOODROW WILSON.

It has over 500 branches throughout the nation, and 20,000 U. S. Public Service Reserve enrollment agents. Ask the local post office or newspaper for name and address of the nearest representative, or write to the U. S. Employment Service, Washington, D. C.

Those employers in war work who seek to get labor through their own or private recruiting agencies are interfering with the Government's machinery and preferring their interests to those of the nation. Only through strict compliance with the Government's program can the constant, restless shifting of labor from one war job to another, with the consequent diminution in production and efficiency, be prevented

Above all, the Government urges every man engaged in war work to stick to his job until the Government recommends that he change. Any man not engaged in war work should put himself at the disposal of the nation by registering with the Public Service Reserve. This is a tremendously important duty! The war worker ranks with the fighter in the trenches. He will help beat the Hun.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Judge Carlton Pierce has named the following Plainfielders to serve as petit jurors in the Union County Court for two weeks, beginning October 28: William H. Heinecke, Frederick Kling, Louis Rosenthal, Frank P. Sheppard, William F. Moore, Samuel Schwartz and Charles A. Sturtevant. William H. Roberts will serve from Scotch Plains.

The North Plainfield "drys" are conducting a quiet but vigorous campaign to bring out a full vote on the saloon question at the general election next month. Should a majority of citizens show by their ballots that they want prohibition in the borough limits, the county court will refuse to renew the retail licenses of William Feaster and Frederick Moore and the wholesale licenses of Mrs. L. Hoerster and Henry Haurand.

Paul Dumsick, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dumsick, of 650 South Second street, wandered to the New Jersey Central tracks directly in the rear of his home Monday and was run down by a freight train. One of the little fellow's feet was crushed to a pulp from the ankle down and it was amputated later at Muhlenberg Hospital. He was reported today as suffering from shock and loss of blood but would eventually recover.

Reginald G. Sykes, of Prospect avenue, this city, is included among thirty-six men selected from Brown University, to attend the Officers' Training Corps at Camp Lee, Va.

So acute has been the need of grave diggers at St. Mary's cemetery, which has received the largest number of bodies of any local burying ground as a result of the influenza epidemic, that twenty men of the parish volunteered their services last Sunday. They were in charge of Councilman Theodore Martin, John Keeley and Albert F. LaRock, and spent the entire day in clearing up debris left in the hurry for new work and also dug a half a dozen receptacles. Mr. Keeley kindly loaned enough horses and carts to remove all surplus earth. The "lift" was so greatly appreciated by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan that he publicly extended his thanks to the volunteers. Since the epidemic began St. Mary's cemetery has been opening ten new graves on the average each day as families in North Plainfield, Dunellen, Fanwood, Scotch Plains, South Plainfield, Westfield and Cranford have plots in its confines.

Phillip Sciglino, of Watchung, was fined $10 Monday in the borough police court for speeding. He also agreed to pay for repairs to Harry LaVine's machine, with which he collided.

Frederick A. Gasman, thirty-five years old, of Dunellen, and his friend, William Krug, of 48 Twenty-fifth street, Bayonne, were run down and killed by a train at the Washington avenue crossing of the New Jersey Central at Dunellen, Sunday night. Krug and his family had gone to Dunellen to visit the Gasman family, and all hands went to the Dunellen station as time came for the visitors to go home. The two men, finding they had some time to spare, walked over to a North avenue store for some tobacco and were returning when the accident happened. They mistook an approaching train for the one the Krugs were to take and ran under the crossing gates directly in front of it. Gasman was a fireman on the Jersey Central and Krug worked for the Tide-Water Oil Company at Bayonne.

Chief Kiely and his men are working on several clues that will probably result in the arrest of the burglars who on Monday night gained entrance to the Front street stores of Harry Dreier and the St. Stephen's Candy Company, carrying away $1,000 worth of goods from the Dreier place and $20 in cash from St. Stephen's. Access to the places were gained first through a skylight to Drier's and thence through a communicating door to the candy shop. The proprietors say they had kept open until nearly midnight and a light was burning in each store when they went home. The goods taken from Mr. Dreier's shop included pistols, guns, traveling bags, fountain pens, cameras and numerous other articles sufficient in all to make a wagon load. The police believe that a vehicle was used to carry them away.

Walter Halliwell, of 961 South Second street, was a member of the crew of the United States ship "Amphion," which was recently attacked by a U-boat and escaped only after a running fight of two hours. One member of the crew was killed and seven others were injured, but Mr. Halliwell escaped harm. He arrived at an Atlantic port Monday and has since been spending a ten days' furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Halliwell.

Three North Plainfield men were numbered among a Somerset county contingent of selectives sent to Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, Tuesday. They were Michael Lowry, Andrew Judge and H. W. Dress. Mayor W. L. Smalley and Home Defense Commissioner Andrew Kenney wished the boys God-speed as they started by automobile for Somerville, at which place they entrained. Roy Stewart, of Lincoln place, left yesterday for Camp Howard, Md., also as a borough selective.

William B. Coleman, colored, was fined $50 by Judge DeMeza in the city court for having a revolver in his possession when he was arrested with a number of other men found shooting crap on Sherman avenue. The magistrate also added a five-dollar fine for the gambling part of Coleman's lawlessness. Thomas Jones, another of the crowd, was fined five dollars for his part in the crap game and sentence was suspended on several others. The men were arrested by Patrolman Charles Wicht.

In preventing a crash with an Arlington avenue trolley, brought about by their own carelessness, two young men whose identity is unknown, sent an automobile into the curb at Seventh street and Arlington avenue, Sunday morning, wrecking the machine badly. The two occupants hurried away immediately after the accident but the auto was removed later by a garage crew from New Brunswick. Through the license tag the local police learned that the car belonged to Ellis Selbod, of New Brunswikc.

New Trolley Fares Give Jitney Buses Rush of Business

Jitney bus owners, whose cars operate on West Front street and West Fourth street, report an increase of forty per cent. in their business since the advance in fare to seven cents went into effect on the Public Service trolley lines. Although the increase on the first day of the new fare was slight the jitney men claim that they were swamped with passengers on the second day, since which time there has been a steady advance in the number of passengers carried.

Criticism of the seven-cent fare plan is heard from many patrons of the trolley cars, and many Plainfielders have given up car riding and taken to walking. There are numerous instance where persons accustomed to using the cars for short rides have walked to their destinations.

During the rush hours the reported decrease in trolley passengers and increase in jitney patrons has been hardly noticeable. Since the war the conditions at the early morning and evening periods have been such in this city that a ride on either a trolley or a jitney has been an uncomfortable proposition and the change in trolley fares has given but slight relief to the trolley car congestion.

Trolley car conductors seem to be the persons most affected by the increased fares. They find the job of providing change in pennies one to tax their patience to the extreme. When the extra cent for a transfer was granted in August the burdens of the conductors were appreciably increased, but now they have more than ever to contend with.

The growth in popularity of jitneys has been more noticeable in Newark than in any other city in the State. When the five-cent fare was in effect the nightly crowds of New York commuters gathered at the tube terminal waiting for jitneys to take them to their homes averaged about 500. Since the fare jumped to seven cents the size of the crowd is said to have nightly increased to 2,000.

Conductors on all of Plainfield's lines continue to hand out the extra two-cent receipt checks if they are asked for, these checks to be redeemed by the Public Service Corporation should the Court of Errors and Appeals decide that the raise is not legal. This decision will probably be given on November 18, which is opinion day in this branch of the State judiciary. Judge Swayze's declaration on Friday last that the Public Utilities Commission was within its rights when it granted the Public Service Corporation the extra two and three cents, however, leads to the impression that the new rate will remain until the war is over at least.

To Train Infantry Officers In New School in California

Establishment of an infantry officers' training school at Camp Fremont, Cal., to open December 1, for enlisted men and civilians, was announced this week by the War Department. Graduates will be commissioned second lieutenants. Those eligible are selective service registrants between eighteen and forty-six, who are physically qualified for general military service, except registrants in Class I physically qualified and who registered prior to September 12, and registrants in deferred classification on account of occupation, industry or agricultural employment. A high school education or its equivalent is essential.

Major Roy S. Brown has been detailed at the War Department to receive applications of civilians who wish to be admitted to any of the officers' training schools now maintained by the army. Civilians may take the applications to the army officer on duty at the nearest educational institution.

Interesting Facts About the World's Output of Sugar and Its Manufacture

Sugar! What a strange thing that this article has come to occupy such a place in the attention and interest of the world! There are millions of people who do not dream for a moment that they could live without sugar. They must have their coffee—before breakfast, and at breakfast and after dinner, and their cup or glass of tea at other intervals, and with ninety-nine people out of every hundred this means that they must have sugar, more or less, but generally more, with every cup, observes a writer in the New Orleans Picayune. They must have their daily dessert, and they don't like cake without icing, and they have never heard of such a thing as not taking a sugared drink when they are downtown. So it goes, and among many people there is little inclination to yield these luxuries, even though they know that we must save if we would keep the men at he front supplied with what they sorely need.

Sugar!

Yes there was a time in the world's history when no one had sugar in any form, and man drew his sweetening from honey, fruits and berries.

Did you ever consider the romance of the sugar cane and its faraway beginnings, when the world was young?

Growing wild on the banks of the Ganges, say the ancient Vedas. And it was first planted there by a venerable hermit to serve as heavenly food for Raja Trishanku, who was simply determined to be translated to heaven during his lifetime. Indra, the monarch of the celestial regions, was not ready to admit him; so the old hermit prepared a temporary paradise for him, and so it was that he planted the cane. Afterward the young Raja changed his plans, and abandoned his paradise, which must have been very humdrum, after all, and there was a wild inrush of mortals—just common people, who wanted samples of the wonderful cane as souvenirs

Thus it was spread all through the land of mortals.

It will be seen at once that this story is absolutely true.

All through the pages of history one finds traces of this strange growth. The fellow travelers of Alexander the Great tell us of a reed growing in India which produced honey without the aid of bees. The Indian provinces sent presents of sugar cane to the Emperor of China, and so it was spread through Cathay. Here and there, in various countries, it took root and grew—but it was still only sugar cane, and men did not dream of its wonderful possibilities.

Until about four or five hundred years after the Christian era, when the Byzantines invaded Dastergad, in Persia, in 627, A. D., sugar was among the spoils of conquest. About the same time, the Emperor Tai Tsung sent ambassadors to India to learn how to make sugar.

The new art spread into many lands. The making of sugar up to that time consisted merely in evaporating the juice to dryness, and it is due to the ancient Arabs and Egyptians that the art was developed into purifying raw sugar by recrystallization.

Even Marco Poolo had stories to tell how the Chinese made a light colored sugar by draining off the molasses.

Sugar cane was taken to Sicily by the Arabs in the year 703, and to Spain by Abdurrahman; to the entire Mediterranean country by the Arabs and Chinese. The Crusaders established it in the Holy Land. The Portuguese took it to the Madeira Islands, as well as to the Azores; the Spanish and Portuguese took it to Brazil; the Antilles and Guiana—and "in consequence of the colonization of these countries the production of sugar increased so rapidly that the latter, which up to now had been a very costly article, only to be indulged in as a medicine or as a luxury by the very rich, became in quite a short time an article of common consumption."

Now suppose that you had to limit your sugar to just enough to serve as a medicine, or as an afterthought to a very disagreeable medicine, which no doubt this author means—then, indeed, you might complain. Yet you are given two whole pounds at a time, and are still complaining. Some people are never satisfied.

Pages and pages might be written concerning the spread of sugar cane through all the tropical and subtropical countries; and the ups and downs of the business of sugar-making: of the rise and decline of the industry according as labor was plentiful or scarce; of how wars and politics have interfered with it; of the tariffs and bounties that have made and unmade it—but after all, there are other questions to consider.

For instance, what has caused this year's very serious shortage?

There are reasons which may be given. One of these is that a large part of the world was supplied with beet sugar, before the beginning of this war, and got along with it very comfortably. The war itself has blotted out two of the great beet-sugar countries, Russia and Germany, from the list of sugar producers, so far as other countries are concerned; and this same war has so far destroyed the beet-growing industry in France that it is hardly to be considered. Not only that, lack of tonnage has till now practically eliminated Java from the sugar-producing countries so far as the Allies are concerned. In this manner it has happened that the great part of the burden of furnishing sugar for the Allies has fallen upon the West Indies and the United States. Add to this the fact that several cargoes of sugar were sunk by submarines and you will understand why it has been necessary to limit milady to two pounds.

Within a little matter of about three months, now, sugar will begin to make its way into our markets; and it is believed that though the acreage was somewhat diminished during the past season, the crop will be rather a fair one. The Louisiana sugars will begin to move first. About the middle of January we may expect the first fruits of the Cuban crop. In normal times the sugar from Java comes in later than the Cuban, but that is when we have tonnage, be it understood.

It is said that the United States has made arrangements with Holland to furnish tonnage for something like 100,000 tons of sugar, and if this be true, it would go far toward relieving the situation in this country. If the ships could be detached from the ordinary course of commerce now in order to ply to and from Java, it would mean a great deal to this country and the Allies, for that island ranks second, or next to Cuba, in the exportation of raw sugar.

And Java has been wholly eliminated, it must be remembered, on account of the war. Java not only has exported raw sugar in great quantities, but has made a special grade that went to Great Britain and to China.

The Hawaiian sugar, as a matter of course, comes to the United States—landing on the Western coast and being largely refined there; though much of it is taken through to New York. It comes during the winter; so that for a period of six months, at least, sugars are coming to the market in this country.

In the year 1917, the domestic production of the United States was 2,263,000 pounds; while we received from Hawaii 1,163,000; from Porto Rico 977,000,000; from the Philippines, 268,000,000; from Cuba, 4,669,000,000, and from other countries, 396,000,000, bringing a total of 9,740,000,000.

And yet, more was needed than had ever been needed before; and more was exported, or sent to the Allied armies, during the first three years of the war, than had even been exported, in any five previous years.

And this year, as has been said, there is a shortage.

There are questions in this connection which cannot be discussed by sugar experts without great heat and some intemperate language. They will talk of "sugars" and "seconds" and "thirds" and "black strap," and of the prices set on hese various commodities, and of the manifest injustice of these prices, until you, listening, are bewildered beyond measure. What are seconds and thirds, and all those other technical things?

And what is this thing they call "raw" sugar?

Do you remember—I am speaking now to readers whose memories are able to run swiftly back along the years to that period known as "befo'-de-wah"—do you remember when almost every householder bought his sugar by the barrel, and it was likely to be brown or light brown or yellow, or some one of those beatific shades? It had lumps in it—delightful lumps, which you carefully sneaked out of the barrel and ate, standing at attention behind the kitchen door If you lived at that time, you will never forget the sugar of those halcyon days.

Well, the aw sugar is a good deal like that old-time sugar which is as extinct as the dodo.

Now take this raw sugar and "refine" it, making the pure white granulated sugar which is said to be demanded by an educated taste; and there you have it in its purest form.

But the syrup from which this sugar was made had a plentiful supply of bacteria, or micro-organisms; and when the granulated sugar was produced these were left in the syrup. The syrup is put through another process and brings out an inferior grade of sugar, known as seconds; and it contains a bacterial supply of its own. Then the syrup is put through still another process, and we have the thirds, which are full of micro-organisms.

What to do with these seconds and thirds?

Yes, they have their uses, but they are limited. A leading manufacturing druggist visited the sugar exchange the other day and examined a consignment of seconds, with the result that he declared they were useless in his business. They might possibly be used to some extent in the manufacture of chocolate candy, he said, but they would not do in any other kind, and if he should use them in any other kind of soft drink it would ruin it.

There are reasons for all this, also.

The sucrose, or cane sugar, is attacked by those busy micro-organisms and swiftly converted into "reducing sugar," which is made up of levulose and dextrose. These are non-crystallizing sugars, and in a little while are partially lost through fermentation and are converted into alcohols and acids.

After the sugar has inverted, however, as the first part of this change is called, it still has some value. That which has not yet fermented goes back into molasses. If the inversion takes place before the separation, the reducing sugars formed will be recovered in molasses.

Strange to say, there are certain of these seconds and thirds which deteriorate very readily, and some which will not deteriorate at all. The cause of his is yet to be found.

Why is the raw sugar not used just as it comes from the island mills?

As has been said, the claim is made that the people of this country have been educated to like none but white sugars—just as the English who first used the yellow Demarara sugars will now have none but yellow, and those who would cater to the English trade must dye their sugars with a yellow aniline dye called "Golden Bloom." An instance is told of a South Carolina cotton mill investing in a large amount of raw sugar for their mill hands; but the hands would have none of it; and the company had to return their sugar to the broker.

The price-setting and the difficulty of selling—these are the things that arouse the ire of those who make sugar their business in life. In the first place, they claim, the seconds and thirds and the blackstrap molasses are not sugar products at all—they are by-products. They are obtained from the molasses after the sugar has been withdrawn. The government is not supposed to set a price on by-products, they say. It sets a price on wheat, but not on bran; on oil and gasolene, but not on dyes and all the hundred-and-one things which are made in the big oil refineries. Mr. Hoover is a mining engineer, they say, and he knows all this as well as they do. Why, then, should he "meddle and make" with the by-products of sugar? The solution of the entire trouble, they claim, is to be found in classing these articles in their proper place, as by-products, and keeping the governmental hands off them.

A recent decision of the food administration practically accepts this view and has withdrawn restrictions on the sale of "seconds" and "thirds," of which a stock of some ten million pounds has accumulated in Louisiana. Those industries for which these substances are available were quick to respond and are absorbing the stock on hand at a rapid rate and at prices that will help materially in financing the new crop that will be ready for the grinding in the early winter.

These are only a few of the angles to this great subject, which is far too large to be handled in any one newspaper article, and in many of its phases too controversial for casual treatment therein.

As for the old "open-kettle" sugar, which delighted our hearts in the long-gone days—no, you can't find any of it now—but there are three or four small mills, notably in Plaquemines Parish—which still make the open-kettle sugar. Certain men who are wise to the secret manage to take it all, with as little noise as possible. It is said that a prominent biscuit manufacturer takes the whole output of one mill. You and I haven't even the ghost of a chance.

Still Another Loan Will Be Necessary

Long before the fourth Liberty Loan figures have been counted up, or the honor flags have been entirely distributed, or the money paid in, preparations have been started at the Treasury for the fifth Liberty Loan, whatever it may be called.

The date has not been determined, nor the amount, nor any other features. The only certain knowledge is that there will be another and that it probably will come in the spring of 1919—in March or April. Whether present German manoeuvers for peace are successful or not, the government by that time will need more billions to pay the war costs which can decrease only gradually, even if cessation of military effort should come. Within a few months, the Treasury will again begin issuing new certificates of indebtedness as a means of financing itself, and by next spring the accumulated billions of these must be redeemed out of proceeds from sale of more bonds.

So with this situation in mind, the loan organization of the Treasury today had turned its attention to campaign plans for the next loan. Two features have been given study this far in advance—publicity and campaign methods, both closely connected.

As for publicity, it is probable that there will be a fifth Liberty Loan honor flag, honor buttons for subscribers, window cards for the homes of bond buyers, percentages stickers and art posters. It has been suggested that the honor flag, instead of bearing five bars, might carry the Roman numeral V, standing not only for "five," but also for "Victory." Applications for the manufacture of these articles already have been received.

As for campaign methods, one feature of the fourth loan has strongly impressed national managers—the success of the communities which organized systematic house-to-house canvassing with trained salesmen responsible to the local committee for the homes assigned to them, with individuals and businesses rated at their probable purchasing power in advance, with a minimum of "hurrah" spirit and a maximum of calm determination. It is highly probable that these methods will be recommended to cities and towns in the fifth campaign.

Moving picture theatres also will be counted on to repeat the work for which they were prepared in the fourth loan, but which the closing of theatres on account of influenza largely prevented their accomplishing. They will be asked to make scenarios with the leading actors of the profession, driving home the lesson of bond buying, and to show these to millions of prospective bond buyers.

Sergeant William Mulford Darling, who went to Camp Wadsworth, Spartenburg, S. C., with a contingent of forty-seven Plainfield selectives three months ago, is spending a ten days' furlough at the home of his mother, Mrs. Emma Darling, of Lyman place. He has been located at Camp Hill, Newport News, Va., but will leave next week for Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., to enter the Officers' Training School for infantry commission.

THE COMMUNITY SHARES ITS EXECUTIVE'S GRIEF.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended Mayor and Mrs. Calkins in their hour of bereavement. Death is never a welcome visitor, but when it stalks into the family, and plucks from the inner circle an only son its presence is doubly odious.

It seemed only a few days ago that Wolcott Calkins was in the full bloom of youthful health and spirits. He was just at the age where the parents realized that the child of yesterday had gone and the man of today was entering upon the career they had planned for him almost from the hour that his baby eyes had first peered from the folds of a blanket. They could see him carrying out their ambitions, proving a credit to himself and themselves and reaching the goal that people called success. Then of a sudden, everything changes. The baby, the boy, the youth has gone; no more companionship, no more hopes and no more career to watch. The Grime Reaper who, as Bryant says, claims "the youth in life's green spring, matron or maid, the speechless babe and he who goes in the full strength of years," had taken another unto himself.

It is a hard blow that has been dealt Mayor and Mrs. Calkins, but its force might be reduced by the thought that in their time of sorrow a sympathetic community realizes the poignancy of their grief and would willingly share it with them were such a thing possible.

THE GOOD RESULT OF CO-OPERATION.

It is with untold appreciation, that we received the Board of Health's assertion that the lethal influenza epidemic is receding. The number of new cases being reported are becoming less each day and from an average of ten deaths in the community, every twenty-four hours, the number has dwindled to three or four. Everyone will welcome the hour when it becomes known for a certainty that the malady has run its course and the people can return to their normal living.

There is no denying the fact that although Plainfield suffered severely it was not as hard hit as other cities in the State. In Trenton, Camden, and Phillipsburg figures show that the disease ran amuck and claimed a much higher mortality percentage than what was recorded here. It has been shown that neither the Health Boards or the people of these communities realized the seriousness of the impending attack and consequently lost much valuable time.

In Plainfield the Board of Health was quick to put an end to all public gatherings and while a few persons who suffered financial loss were inclined to grumble, the majority accepted the closing order as a necessary proposition. They lived up to the ban in the strictest sense of the word and they have the thanks of hundreds of persons, who otherwise might have lain on sick beds for weeks and possibly not a few would have gone to their graves. It was a situation that does not confront us very often, but when it does it has to be met with the feeling that others have rights that cannot be disregarded.

Contrast the proceedings in Plainfield with those of Newark and Jersey City. In these big centers of population, it seemed to be the purpose of the Chief Executives to promote rather than to eliminate the disease. After the State Board of Health had issued a mandatory order, closing up theatres, hotels, churches and all public gathering places, the Mayors and Chiefs of Police of the two municipalities apparently tried to see how near they could come to evading the injunction without actually disregarding it. The theatres continued to remain open for some time and the saloons closed up in front but opened up in back. Last Tuesday, two days before the State Board date for lifting the quarantine had arrived, the Mayor of Newark and the Mayor of Jersey City, threw everything wide open. They claimed that the danger had passed and that there was no longer any need of keeping up the abnormal condition of affairs.

It is fortunate for Plainfield and the rest of the law-abiding cities, that the Mayors of Newark and Jersey City do not exercise supervision over the health of the State, otherwise we might soon again be experiencing another epidemic such as the one we are still combating. When the State Board issued its order, it was the result of investigations by men who make the protection of public health a study. They knew whereof they spoke and furthermore they are given superiority over municipal officers no matter what the latter might think.

The ban in Plainfield is soon to be lifted and when the time comes the people will understand fully that their co-operation with the officials had much to do with the early abatement of the ravaging disease.

SAVING COAL AT ELECTION BOARD'S EXPENSE.

The State Legislature decreed that the Election Boards should use the school houses where ever possible, but in doing so it entertained the belief that the school authorities would provide at least enough heat to keep the election clerks' fingers sufficiently nimble to perform the necessary writing.

The Election Boards themselves in Plainfield thought the same thing but when they arrived at the school buildings Tuesday to carry on the registration of voters they found they were sadly mistaken. Each one of the structures was like a barn and some of the members will be lucky if the "flu" bug doesn't get them before the week is out. When they begged the janitors for at least the heating of one room they were told that the orders from their superior officer were to build no fires in the furnaces. They protested but the Board of Education worked slower than the grinding of the mills of the Gods and they were compelled to endure the frigid temperature until sympathetic outsiders canvassed the neighborhoods for alleviating oilstoves.

If this thing is to continue we may expect wholesale resignations from the Board of Elections or else read in their obituaries that they "passed away" as a result of colds contracted in the performance of their duty.

CONTRASTING INVESTING WITH GIVING.

With close to $4,000,000 subscribed, Plainfield admittedly did itself proud in the Liberty Loan campaign just ended. When the quota of $3,500,000 was first announced, it seemed a staggering figure for a community, which had previously contributed millions within a year, but after the first week there was no doubt as to its being secured. The response was spontaneous, especially from the working class of people. They seemed to realize in the full measure of the term that the boys "Over There" needed backing up and the assistance was forthcoming. The number of individual purchases runs into the many thousand and represents the hard work and patriotic impulses of a people stirred to action.

The boast of neighboring communities that they did even better than Plainfield, according to percentage of population, leads to a thought. The purchase of bonds in one sense of the word is an investment. Contributions to war organizations, such as the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, and Jewish Relief societies, represents giving in its sincerest form. Plainfield not only invested heavily in bonds but has never failed to give until it hurt. If the figures were procured and prepared it would show that this city stands in the front rank of charitable contributions although it may be back a line or two in investing. Which is the more preferably when it comes to a matter of dollars and cents?

NOT EXACTLY NECESSARY; MERELY VITALLY ESSENTIAL.

Wonder what on earth the telephone folks will do when the Board of Health lifts the quarantine?

Last winter, "relieving the situation" was worked to a frazzle and this fall "on account of the influenza" is providing the necessary support. It's a bum corporation that can't wiggle out somehow.

A Park Avenue lawyer who used to do quite a little business over the wire, at least enough to pay his cigarette bill, got the surprise of his life yesterday afternoon. His telephone bell actually rang.

After sitting up all night and imbibing copious quantities of the stuff that is consumed on the talkative side of the mahogany we have at last discovered a way to get back at the folks who do business where ever you see a blue bell sign hung out. Just wait until they call up to jog your memory about the 'phone bill and ask them if it's necessary.

The local diciples of Alexander Bell tell us that the first day the "necessary" con-game was pushed over on the customers 800 calls were saved in one hour. Not being in a position to deny the statistics we pause to inquire for whom were they saved?

By the way, have you noticed that it even comes high nowadays to have the pleasure of saying "Good morning, Judge," inside the building at Fourth and Sycamore Streets. We remember the days when you could have your name plastered all over a pink and white index card for two, three or five dollars, but in the rush of big things now, if you get away for less than twenty-five or fifty you are accused of having the St. Mary's Avenue vote in your vest pocket.

There seems to be much criticism of the complicated nature of the questionaires the registrants have to sign. Why criticize when by having them complicated it serves to make red tapish sorts of jobs for thousands who might otherwise never experience the surpassing comfort and peace of the government payroll?

Here's a good chance for the collar and cuff soldiers to get some real military experience while doing a good turn for the community. St. Mary's cemetery needs grave-diggers and needs them badly. The swivel chair warriors could volunteer their services and beside experiencing the thrill of "digging in" could get a back stage impression of life in the trenches.

The smelling power of the human nose is very keen at times. We personally know that a trained sniffer can locate among the four luncheries located within 500 feet of this sanctum the one that uses onions in the morning hash.

If you want to hand yourself an honest to goodness giggle, stand on the back end of a Fourth Street trolley car and see how eagerly the patrons snatch at the two cent receipts. And the best part of it all is the No. 2 Skulled boobs really believe the slips of paper will some day be worth a piece of change.

Flu bugs on the decrease, slightly, the medicos tell us; which is well. Business in the town and state been at the slacker stage plenty long enough. And say, haven't those guys who know the trick of coming through the rye, with vine leaves in their hair been lonesome since the likker places shut up shop.

We believe in shelling the retreating Germans, but a line of portable kitchen ordorous with kraut and goulash right at the heels of the fugitives would bring tens of thousands of 'em back as prisoners.

"Mike" Shannon, the genial Generalissimo of the Second street show shop, never makes a trip out of town but what he comes back with a humslicker of a story. He ambled to the big town the other night, met Dave Marion at Forty-seventh Street, and Windjammer alley, and was handed the following:

Four colored soldiers attached to the American forces were standing in a group waiting for the word to go over the top when a TNT shell dropped along side and blew all four high in the air. When they came back to terra firma they were a badly damaged lot. One was minus a leg, another had lost an arm and the other two were in need of general overhauling. None of them made an outcry, however, with the exception of the private who gave one arm to his country and he berated his luck in sulphurous terms. The gentleman destined to use a crutch the rest of his life, told him to can the chatter as everybody else had suffered as badly as he did and besides an arm wasn't much to howl about. "Ah, I ain't makin' no disturbance 'bout da ahm," he retorted, "ah's only sore because it was da one that had mah wrist watch on it."

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS?

When street knitters were a common sight?

When "Bobbie" Crane's most ardent desire was to become the owner of a lunch wagon?

When "Charlie" Hand used to sing, "Her Bright Eyes Haunt Me Still" and Annie Yeaman's song hit "I feel just as happy as a big Sun Flower"?

When party line telephones rang every time there was a call anywhere on the circuit and you knew when you were wanted by counting the jingles on the bell as follows: "A", one ring; "B" two rings; "F", three rings; "I", four rings; "M", five rings.

When the boys of Gazelle Hook and Ladder company gave an amateur firemen's play in Van-Deventer's hall and jealous members of No. 2 engine company choked up the gas pipes, putting the lights out and giving them a chance to steal the truck company's paraphenalia including the girls?

What Will America Get For Her Part In The War?

Assuming that disintegration of powers allied with Germany continues that Germany herself recognizes the inevitable and decides to stop her awful losses in man power and other resources, and peace comes to the world, a dictated peace founded on the rights of humanity, and comes within a reasonable time, what has the United States to show for its participation in the world's war?

Latest statistics show that Great Britain has lost more than 1,000,000 men by death in the war. The French figures must be larger. The Russians are known to have been larger. To date American casualties are not quite 54,000, of which deaths in the army from all causes do not number 17,000. Our share of the bloodshed is a very small percentage of Allied outpouring. That fact does not comfort those who have lost dear ones, but individual griefs count for little in this great adventure to make the world a better place to live in.

As to the financial status, assuming speedy end of the conflict, it may be that the United States will have paid out as net cost of its participation $20,000,000,000. This is probably too high. In that event however, the cost to each of us in this country will have been less than $200, and we are supposed to have of the money in circulation some $55 each. Though the total has an ominous sound, reduced as above, the sum is insignificant.

What will we have to show for our money? Was the game worth the candle? Emphatically yes! The price was small compared with benefits secured.

We woke up from a fat lethargy, turned from money grubbing to things that make life worth living. The spiritual side of us resumed development. We are a different people from what we were four years ago.

Patriotism had become a sickly plant. Look at it now, in its supreme beauty of perfection. We were selfish, everybody looking out for No. 1, "and the devil take the hindmost." We have poured unprecedented treasure into the pockets of the Red Cross and allied humanitarian organizations and did it gladly. We have a new viewpoint of the Salvation Army, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Men's Hebrew Association, the Knights of Columbus, and those organizations will have a hold upon us, and an influence for good in all communities, which only the war made possible. We have learned the pleasures of giving.

Up went our national pride in swelling crescendo, when we realized our power and efficiency for real work, and proved that Americans had lost none of the characteristics which made the country in a single century, one of the powers of the world, in fact today the first power, a power devoting its strength to make conditions of life all over the world worth while.

Every big man in every nation is dwelling upon the merits of co-operation, in fact, the necessities of it. It is for the moment devoted to war purposes, but will not be abandoned with the coming of peace. It is the union in which there is greatest strength and applies with equal force to business as to war. We will never go back to isolated individual efforts whether of men or of nations. The lesson has been so well taught to be forgotten. Trade of the world will be on a totally different basis from what it was five years ago. Dealings will be between friends, that kind of friends that can be developed only by trouble, and this war was the greatest of all troubles.

When that co-operative idea is adopted, as it must be, in the relations between employer and employe, not alone here but all over the world, the great step in the adjustment of problems, beginning with the first day one man worked for another, has been taken and it will never be retraced. Labor in Europe has proved its devotion to country. It will have more to say, and properly so, than it ever has had to say in making of laws and regulating business conditions. It has earned a new place (just as the women of the Allied nations have earned the suffrage) and takes a new "place in the sun." Co-operation and profit sharing are the roads to an amalgamation of business interests which have been smoothed by the war for easy treading.

We have shown to our best business customers, England and France, some of the American characteristics, and right on their own soil, that have amazed by their stupendous accomplishment. That means more orders for machinery and goods than we ever had and a cultivation of intimacies absolutely impossible before the war. Every man knows what values there are in any business in these friendships.

America's man power has been in no way reduced; it has been strengthened many per cent. by the physical development of more than 5,000,000 of the flower of its manhood. With that physical growth has come knowledge of world-wide things, lessons in sanitation and health, which might never have been learned. In fact, there has been built up an army of 5,000,000 of the most sterling manhood in the world. Nearly half of it has for the first time seen other countries and learned other customs than those of home, and that is education in the highest sense of the term.

Then we have become a nation of investors; that means providing all the ciptal that can be used in trade expansion. The common people have become acquainted with their banks and found out that they are not the cold-blooded institutions they were popularly supposed to be. That means better business everywhere. Cultivation of the small business man, heretofore neglected, will be scientifically prosecute dand this is just as big a thing in its way as the lessons taught to farmers as to merits of the best stock, best seed, best fertilizers, etc., etc.

How much would it have cost without the war to develop the unanimity with which 106,000,000 complied with the requests of their Government for "gasless Sunday," for changed food menus, and for conservation of necessities to our Allies? From a political standpoint what has the country gained from the proof, only possible through the war, that its melting pot for all nationalities has turned out a sterling product absolutely free from dross so that, on every military roster, and on every list of subscribers to the Liberty Loans, surrounding purely American names, are the cognomens of every nationality on the face of the earth, proud to show in these ways their Americanism. What chance is there in a people, of that kind, for heresies of the Bolsheviki, when their lives and money have been freely tendered for what the United States stands for "life liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

How about class distinction in the future here or in Europe? War has been the great leveller; has done more than anything else to strengthen the dictum of Thomas Jefferson that "all men were born free and equal." What they may do after they are born is another matter, but the new world resulting from the war will give every child a chance which it never before possessed.

Enough of this review, although the list could be almost indefinitely extended in other ways. Was the game worth the candle? Emphatically yes! What has been gained has been bought at infinitesimal cost. Weigh the sum of $200 per capita in the scale against the benefits, and realize (if the war is over) what a small price this country had to pay for what the world has learned of the three great virtues, Faith, Hope and Charity. Faith in the brotherhood of man and of nations. Hope for a world better than it has ever been, and a Charity of world-wide dimensions applicable to every walk in life, whether of business or pleasure.

Nobody will deny that there is going to be a new world, and as President Wilson puts it, a world "fit for free men to live in," and there is tremendous power in those two words, "fit" and "free." Our part in it may cost each of us $200.—Edward Jones in Daily News Record.

Face To Face With Enemy, Casey Brothers Meet Supreme Test In Defending Their Country's Honor

How two Plainfield brothers who, only a little more than a year ago were engaged in civil pursuits and utterly devoid of military knowledge, are giving a good account of themselves on the French front is gleaned from letters received this week from John F. Casey, Jr., and James P. Casey, sons of John F. Casey, head of the undertaking firm of Casey & Son.

Both have been taking an active part in the big pushes directed against Fritz and which have been sending him many miles back toward his own country. John went through the big battle of Chateau-Thierry and emerged without a scratch. James, or "Jim," has not been so fortunate. He was fighting as only an American soldier and a Plainfield lad can do when aroused in the drive on Metz when the dastardly German gas got him. He is now in the base hospital at Di-Jou, France, but from the tone of his letter seems not to be in a serious condition.

John has been in the service more than a year, going out of Plainfield with the first big selective contingent of September, 1917. After a short stay in the infantry at Camp Dix, he was transferred to Battery B, 320th Field Artillery, and underwent his training at Camp Gordon Ga. He went overseas last May. "Jim," who is even more familiarly known as "Kid," went to Camp Dix in the spring but did not get nearly as much training as the selectives who went with him at the time as an affection of a toe kept him in the hospital for quite a while. He also crossed the Atlantic in May, although on reaching London, he was again consigned to the hospital on account of the same offending toe. At the present time he is listed as a member of Company A, 311th Infantry.

This unit was in the midst of the heavy fighting of September, as has been indicated by the casualty lists of the past few weeks. In his letter, which is addressed to his uncle, Daniel J. Shea, of West Fourth street, "Jim" confirms the statement that the Plainfield boys have been experiencing some hot work. He asserts that the first day his company went into action is suffered twenty-seven casualties, a start that is considered bad by the boys "Over There." Another company, which includes Andrew Brady, of West Front street, a former pal of "Jim's," was badly hit at the same time and when he wrote, "Jim" was unable to tell how his friend made out. This is how he describes his part in the big push:

"I was co-runner and was on a trip to Battalion Headquarters when the Germans put over that big barrage. You must have read about it in the papers. Well, I hit a shell hole immediately and intended to wait him out but instead of letting up he started to lay them all around, so I took it on the run, and aside from a few minor happenings and the gas, I got to headquarters and back to the outfit and was carried down in the morning pretty much sick, I'll say.

"It was my seventh day in and it was plenty for one time. We had twenty-seven casualties the first day in our company, and that is considered a pretty bad start over here. I had the honor of being detailed to plant some of the 'land owners,' me being an undertaker, got me the job. You can imagine what some of them looked like.

"Before I was gassed, I had some great souvenirs but lost them in the rush. In some of the dug-outs were bowling alleys, billiard tables pianos and the like. Fritz never intended to move out of this section till we changed his mind for him. The prisoners taken say they don't like the way the Americans fight. We got about 15,000 in all and guns and ammunition dumps a plenty. Our artillery just turned the guns around and shot his own stuff back to him. It was in this push that Lieutenant Putman, the American flyer, was lost.

"I am now feeling as good as possible under the circumstances. This is an American hospital and it is better than the English. I know because I have tried both.

"Sincerely,

"JIM."

The letter from John Casey is also addressed to Mr. Shea and is very descriptive as the following excerpts will show:

"I am now acting as regimental adjutant, a fine healthy job as I suppose you know. I have all kinds of company and they sure do play. Every time I have to get off my horse and rub my back on a tree, I think of what you used to tell me. We haven't had our clothes off since the middle of July, but are getting used to it now.

"This gas proposition is getting awful. One kind that they use, called mustard gas, is worse than third-rail booze. Our masks only protect us inwardly from it. It works its way around your body, causing many of the boys to lose their arms and legs.

"On arriving in France, I was put on detched service in charge of twenty-three men from different outfits of the cavalry and artillery. We traveled from one end of France to the other and was in the principal cities of England and spent three days in Spain. While in Bordeaux, France, which is a seaport city of great importance lying near the Spanish coast, our outfit was called to the front and I joined it a Chateau-Thierry, where, believe me, there were big doings. We are now at a different front.

"I was on the guns for a short time, but was relieved to go on this job, which is anything but cheerful, but it beats being tied down night and day on the cannon. On this job, I am my own boss while out with dispatches which sometime keep me away for two or three nights. I eat and drink wherever I can get either. Last night was a wicked one and I was bottled up for a while but got in at daybreak. Any road here will lead into the German lines and we have lost much through mistakes. Everything moves at night. In the daytime everything is under cover, the country at present being surrounded by German spies, and our forces trust nobody, not even 'phones and telegraphs. I suppose you won't believe me when I say that there are gin mills along the front, women running them and without any fear. A place doing business tonight might be in ruins in the morning. There are great times in them in the morning, everybody telling of their experiences during the night, but they can't lose me, I always have one better for them.

"Drop me a line. I'll be glad to read some real news before the Boches turn my toes up. It may be that I'll be three and a half weeks dead when you get this.

"I received a letter from Bill Hogan last week. He says he is having a great time. He's some lucky being in the engineers. Some time ago I wrote "Paddy" Guinee. Tell him and all the old-timers I am still in the land of the living or was when I wrote this. Also kindly give my kind regards to John Sullivan, of the Hotel Kensington: Dave Angerbauer and Joe Freed. Send Bill Breen's address.

"This is about the tenth time I have started this letter. It is blowing hard and raining, facts that make it hard for them to send over gas. I am glad of it for it is hard enough keeping a mask on yourself and when it comes to fighting a horse all night keeping his on, you are pretty well tired in the morning.

"With regards to all,

"JOHN."

Apoplexy Fatal to Mrs. MacFarland

Mrs. Sarah S. MacFarland, widow of Harris MacFarland, and one of the oldest residents of this city, died suddenly Tuesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Waldorf, of 34 Crescent avenue. The night previous to her demise, Mrs. MacFarland was apparently enjoying her customary good health but shortly after arising at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning was seized with apaplexy. Her calls for assistance brought a ready response and everything that physicians could devise was done for her but she passed away at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The funeral will be held at Mrs. Waldorf's home this afternoon at 230. It will be in charge of Rev. W. J. Swaffield of the Park avenue Baptist church, of which she was a member, but will be private because of the Health Board's ban against gatherings and the possible spread of influenza. Interment will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery Elizabeth.

Mrs. MacFarland was born at Pleasant Valley, Dutchess County, N. Y., on December 22, 1834, thus, making her in her eighty-fourth year. Her maiden name was Sarah Skidmore Humphrey. After completing her grammar and high school course, she attended the Normal school and was graduated as a teacher. She taught in the schools of Dutchess County for many years. Mrs. MacFarland was a woman of unusal ability and was particularly fond of deep intellectual study. She was not only widely-read on a wide variety of subjects but also kept in close touch with affairs of the day.

Despite her advanced age, her faculties were as keen and alert as those of a woman half her years and being a ready conversationalist, it was a pleasure to be in her company. The present world war, did not find her lacking in Europe's geography or political history and she was able to enlightenmany of her associates on problems that, ordinarily prove vexatious to th general reader. She devoted much of her time to knitting and preparing articles for the soldier boys from Plainfield and not a one went out of the city but what her prayers were with them.

During the past ten years, Mrs. MacFarland divided her time between remaining in Plainfield with Mrs. Waldorf and visiting with another daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Martin, of Buffalo. She thought nothing of making the trip between the two cities alone and even made occasional journeys to Chicago to visit her only son, who was located there until recently. For several summers past, Mrs. MacFarland had also enjoyed stays at Lake Hopatcong where she attracted much attenetion by numbering herself among the canoeists. She was very fond of the sport and never hesitated to venture out with younger folks no matter how rough the water happened to be. Her acquaintanceship in Plainfield was very wide and although she had passed far beyond the allotted three score and ten mark, her death came as a distinct schock to everyone.

Besides her daughters, mentioned, Mrs. MacFarland is survived by one son, David MacFarland, at present of Cranford but who was to return to Chicago this week, as Western representative for the Atlas Cement Company. He was at his home in Cranford when his mother was stricken and he was able to be at her bedside when the end came, but Mrs. Martin did not arrive in Plainfield until late Tuesday night. Mrs. MacFarland also leaves a grandson, Edmund Waldorf, of Crescent avenue, and several nephews and nieces, one of the latter being Miss Ethel E. Humphrey, of Park avenue, this city, who is now in France as a member of an army nursing corps.

War Produces Better Health For Army Men

With the American Armies in France, October 2 (by mail).—Whether he used to be frail or strong, the doughboy is becoming one of the huskiest chaps on this side of the line. War agrees with the American boy, judging from the solid, healthy looking specimens you see trudging up and down the lines and holding them.

It is a series of surprises you have wit hthe American army, continually meeting some husky whom you hardly recognize because back in the States he was "that frail little William Jones." Under Uncle Sam's care he has grown shoulders of a football player, and he marches on a pair of legs twice as stout as they used to be, and you couldn't call him William if you had to—his only name is Bill, now that he has joined the heavyweight class.

Despite the fears of the family for the boy, it has done him good to join up in Uncle Sam's army. His present healthful condition is due to a number of causes, not the least of which is the physical training he has undergone to enable him to stand hardship. The chap who couldn't take gymnasium at high school because he had a weak heart has become a doughboy who thinks nothing of marching all night with a pack on his beck and then standing guard next day. He could go on a patrol the following night, if they needed him.

Outdoor work almost continually and being tired enough at the end of the day to drop down and sleep anywhere has been just the thing to inure the boy to hardships. He is out not only in summer when it is pleasant, but in rain and wind, and his life has made him hard and rugged, and a far better man physically than when he came to France. Jogging up and down roads on an artillery caisson, or handling a huge truck, has given the former drug clerk muscles like those of the blacksmith's apprentice.

The kind of food he has had to eat has been encouraging, too. Good solid "chow," like beef, beans, potatoes, and bread, make man-power and they have lots of it in the American army. It is served up at regular intervals, and it builds muscles in the soldier's arms and legs and makes him have broader, better filled-out shoulders. They have dessert, too, in this man's army, but instead of the pies and cakes of peace days, it is rice pudding, or canned fruit, or something that the soldier needs.

Then the boys keep pretty good habits with the army here in France, except for his night hours, which he becomes accustomed to, and which he makes up with sleep in the daylight hours when Germans could see him if he worked. The means of going even on mild "tears" are not at the doughboy's disposal in the army, and anyway he is too busy beating the Germans to thing about anything but his work, a situation which is helpful to his state of mind, as well as his body. He is learning good living and clean habits in the army.

Then there are those army doctors who are continually watching to nip anything in the bud that might break down the health of the men. A good football team in training never averaged higher in medical attention than Uncle Sam's fighters. Inspection takes place every so often, and is careful. The men, knowing they are entitled to treatment freely, report sooned for attention. Dentists are far more popular than they used to be, as well as doctors.

Even the chaps who are sent back to hospitals gain by the deal, despite the popular belief. By far the larger number of men in hospitals have merely temporary disabilities. The army hospitals run on one basis, that of making a man better for service than he was before. Of course, there are men who must go back home after their hospital sojourns, but with the exception of a few cases, they, too, leave hospitals in healthier condition than they were in when they joined the army.

The reason is this: Every means of science is used freely to find out what ails the doughboy who enters the hospitals, and before he leaves every means known to cure him has been tried. There is no question of cost or whether or not he wants to take the treatment. He gets it—which is important, say physicians, since an enormous amount of disability in civilians is allowed to increase, because of antipathy of many people to medical treatment.

The soldier who arrives at a hospital is practically certain to get an X-ray examination all over, unless his trouble is a mere scratch and he is all right otherwise. If anything ails him the medical men find it out, and they go right after the ailment at once. Thus the soldier who came in to get his appendix removed may have his lungs treated, his teeth fixed and his deaf ear operated upon and made perfect. He is a decidedly better human being for his hospital experience.

Substitution of chickens, ducks and geese for Thanksgiving Day turkeys, in order to supply the men of the army and navy with turkey dinners, is being urged on the public by market experts in New York.

The government has contracted for the entire supply of cold storage turkey, it was said, and has also arranged to purchase most of the fresh killed fowl. Consumers who insist upon turkey for Thanksgiving will be compelled to take their chances in a scanty market, and the prices, it is predicted, will "soar sky high."

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. ANNIE JUDGE

Mrs. Annie Judge, aged fifty-two years, died Tuesday night in Muhlenberg Hospital following an illness with influenza and pneumonia. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church this morning when Rev. Father Holsters offered a requiem Mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Judge was a sister to Mrs. Edward Murphy of Arlington avenue and made her home with her. She was a communicant of St. Mary's church and had many friends in the parish.

FRANK KRESKY

Frank Kresky, a well-known resident of South Plainfield, succumbed to pneumonia at Muhlenberg hospital Tuesday night. He had been ill only a short time. Surviving him are a wife and several children.

The funeral will be held in Sacred Heart church, South Plainfield, this afternoon, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. LUKE J. LYONS

The funeral of Mrs. Luke J. Lyons, a former Plainfield resident, whose death occured at New Brunswick on Monday morning after an illness with influenza and pneumonia, was held in St. Peter's church, New Brunswick Wednesday morning. The requiem Mass was offered by Rev. Father Brennan. Knights of Columbus Chaplain stationed at Camp Raritan. Only the immediate relatives were in attendance, because of the restrictions to prevent the spread of the present epiremic. Burial was in St. Peter's cemetery, New Brunswick.

Mrs. Lyons was the daughter of James S. Ellis, of 951 Arlington avenue, and her death was the second that this family experienced within a week. On the Wednesday previous to her demise, her sister, Miss Elizabeth Marie Ellis, passed away at her father's home after an illness of about two weeks with influenza and pneumonia. She was unable to attend the funeral in St. Mary's church, Saturday morning last as she was critically ill herself at the time. Her husband, who is a policeman on the New Brunswick force, and two children are also ill with the same disease.

Mrs. Lyons was twenty-nine years old and up to the time of her marriage had always lived in Plainfield. She had a host of friends and the sympathy of all have been extended to the bereaved relatives. Beside her husband, children and father, she is survived by two other sisters, Mrs. John O'Keefe, of West Fifth street, and Miss Anne Ellis, of Arlington avenue; also one brother, Corporal James Ellis, now with the Telegraph Signal Battalion in France.

MRS. ANNIE DONATO

Mrs. Annie Donato, whose home was in South Plainfield, died from the effects of influenza and pneumonia, at Muhlenberg hospital, Tuesday night. She was thirty-three years old ad is survived by her husband and three children.

The funeral took place in the Italian Mission this city, in charge of Rev. R. Mangione. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. NICHOLAS KARYTIOUS

Mrs. Anastasia Karytious, wife of Nicholas Karytious, of 32 Elm place died Wednesday morning at her home after a brief illness with pneumonia. She was married to Mr. Karytious only two weeks ago at Syracuse, N. Y., and had lived in Plainfield only since that time. She was thirty years old.

The body was sent to Syracuse, where she has a number of relatives, and the funeral and interment will take place in that city today.

MARY STELLATO

Mary Stellato, the one year and eight months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stellato, of 217 West Third street, died Tuesday night. The funeral was held at the parents' home yesterday, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. GUSTAVE EDLUND

Mrs. Olga A. Edlund, wife of Gustave Edlund, died yesterday morning at her home at 821 Second place just four days after the death of her infant daughter, Olga Maria Edlund.

Mrs. Edlund was tweney-two years old and is survived by her husband. The funeral will be strictly private and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

HAROLD VAN NEST.

The funeral of Harold Van Nest, whose death occurred Monday afternoon at his home at 239A East Second street, after an illness of two weeks with typhoid fever, was held at the late residence yesterday afternoon. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace Episcopal church, officiated in the presence of only the immediate family owing to the Board of Health's epidemic restrictions.

The floral tributes included handsome set pieces from Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and Company H, Uniform Rank of the Juniors, to both of which he belonged. There was also another set piece from the officials at the Standard Aero Corporation's local plant, where he was employed and where he was a great favorite. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, members of Company H and Franklin Council acting as pall-bearers.

Mr. Van Nest was perhaps known to everyone in Plainfield and vicinity as "Toots." This name was conferred upon his because of his diminutive stature inasmuch as he was only about fifty inches tall. Nevertheless he was the fortunate possessor of splendid health until the time of his last illness, and was very active as a boy and regularly employed after reaching manhood. He was born in Plainfield November 23, 1895. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Van Nest, of 239A East Second street, where he had lived for a number of years.

As a youngster, "Toots" accompanied the baseball teams of the Plainfield police and fire departments, then engaged in a series with out of town municipal teams on all their trips, serving as mascot. He never failed to attract widespread attention and had the ability to carry out the part demanded by his dwarfish figure. These baseball teams were in existence for several years but have since become a matter of history.

After concluding his school studies, "Toots" secured employment with Frank Hedden as driver and later learned to run an automobile. He afterward worked for William H. Abbott, proprietor of the Plainfield Cab Company, but three months ago was appointed driver of the officials' car for the Standard Aero Company. He was serving in this capacity when stricken with typhoid.

Beside his parents, the young man is survived by four sisters and three brothers. They are: Mrs. J. A. Stryker, of Newark; Mrs. Alfred McDonald, of West Fourth street; and the Misses Jessie and Ella Van Nest, Frederick Milton and Edward Van Nest, of East Second street, and Raymond Van Nest, now with the American Expeditionary Force in France.

CHARLES TAYNOR.

Charles Taynor, a former resident of Plainfield, died of pneumonia, Monday, in the Elizabeth General Hospital. He had been living in Rahway for the past four years, and the funeral was held at 91 Montgomery street that place, Wednesday afternoon. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery, this city.

Mr. Taynor was born at Smalleytown fifty-seven years ago, but spent most of his life in North Plainfield. While residing here, he was engaged in the coal and wood business. He is survived by two daughters and three sons, Mrs. George Allen, Miss Bessie Taynor, Harold, Eugene and Roy Taynor, all of Rahway. Roy is at present in the service. Mrs. Horace G. Adams, of Johnston avenue, this city, is a sister of the deceased.

MRS. MARY C. CROWLEY.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary C. Crowley, a former resident of this city, who died at Flemington, Monday, was held at the chapel of Cole & High, on West Second street, Wednesday afternoon. It was followed by burial in Hillside cemetery. Mrs. Crowley, who was forty-two years old, was the widow of Whynder Crowley, and leaves two daughters, Mrs. Mary Jackson and Miss Ruth Crowley.

MRS. WILLIAM F. WILSON.

In St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock this moning, a private funeral service took place over the body of Mrs. William F. Wilson, of West Front street and Clinton avenue, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday afternoon. She had been ill about two weeks with influenza and resultant pneumonia. She had been at the institution for a week, but from the time of her admission there was very little hope of her recovery.

The requiem mass this morning was offered by Rev. Father Bogan, but only the immediate relatives were in attendance. Those who were barred from paying their last respects sent beautiful floral tributes There were many of them as the deceased was a most estimable woman in every way, devoted to her home and family and highly regarded by everyone who knew her. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Wilson was formerly Miss Bertha Colvin and was the daughter of Michael Colvin, of 301 Clinton avenue. She was born at Somerville, at which place her mother died some years ago. She was a communicant of St. Mary's church and a member of Court Watchung, Daughters of Isabella. Her acquaintanceship in Plainfield was very wide and she also had scores of friends in Somerville and other places by whom her untimely death is deeply regretted.

Beside her husband and father, Mrs. Wilson is survived by three children, the eldest being eight years old. They are: Catherine, Veronica and William. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. John Mohan, of Dunellen, and five brothers. The latter are: William, now in service in France; Bernard, in service at Camp Dix; Frank, Leo and Vincent, all living at the home of their father on Clinton avenue.

WILLIAM HULSCHER.

William Hulscher, aged thirty-seven years, died Sunday at his home on Front street, Scotch Plains, after a brief illness with pneumonia. He was engaged in the nursery business at the Front street address.

The funeral was held at the late home Wednesday, when Rv. A. B. Strickland, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, conducted a private service. Burial was in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

PAUL E. PIERCE.

Paul E. Pierce, the nine months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Pusey Pierce, of 18 Duer street, died Monday morning. The funeral was held at the parents' home at 10:30 Thursday morning, in charge of Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. LOUIS BRADY.

Mrs. Mary A. Brady, wife of Louis Brady, of 1242 Columbia avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday morning, after an illness with pneumonia. She was thirty-eight years old and had lived in this city but a short time. Beside her husband, she leaves one daughter, Adelaide, and a son, William F. Brady.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock and was private. The requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father Holsters in the presence of only the immediate family. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

THOMAS J. NEYLON.

The funeral of Thomas J. Neylon, who died at his home on Liberty street, Saturday afternoon, after what seemed only to be a few hours' illness with influenza, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan offered the requiem mass in the presence of only the near relatives because of the Board of Health's prohibition of gatherings. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall-bearers being: A. Hass, Louis C. Quern, W. J. Dodd, Michael Lapole, M. T. Kenney and Frank Young. Numerous floral tributes were in evidence as the deceased had a wide acquaintance throughout the city and borough. One of the set pieces was contributed by the Plumbers' Local Union, of which he was a member.

Mr. Neylon was born in Plainfield thirty-two years ago and had always resided here. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Neylon, of Stebbins place, who are well known residents of that section of the city. He had always followed the trade of plumber.

Beside his parents, Mr. Neylon leaves a wife and three children, four sisters and two brothers. His wife is still a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital following the birth of the youngest child one week ago today. The sisters are: Mrs. Samuel McClung, Mrs. John J. Sullivan, Mrs. Richard D. Thompson, Mrs. John Duncan and the brothers Patrick E. Neylon and John J. Neylon, all of this city.

JAMES A. RALPH.

James A. Ralph, of Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night. He had not been in the best of health for several weeks and on contracting influenza was in no condition to ward off pneumonia. He was twenty-five years old and had been employed for some time by James Smith, the Somerset street florist. He is survived by his wife and two children and also by his uncle, Charles Ralph, a sister and a half-sister, living in Watchung.

The funeral was held at the late home, yesterday afternoon, and was in charge of Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville. Burial was at Mt. Bethel.

MISS ISABELLE McNICOL.

A number of friends from this city were included in a gathering at the Sacred Heart church, West New Brighton, S. I., Wednesday morning, when a double funeral service was held over the body of Miss Isabelle McNicol, a graduate of Muhlenberg Hospital's training school, who gave up her life in the performance of her duty at the institution, Saturday night, and that of her brother, Robert A. McNicol, who passed away at his home in West New Brighton, Sunday.

Both young people were extremely popular in their home town, but owing to the prevalence of influenza the attendance at the requiem mass was limited. It was offered by the church rector and burial followed in Sacred Heart cemetery, West New Brighton. The floral tributes included se pieces from the Nurses' Alumni Association of Muhlenberg and the hospital Board of Governors.

Miss McNicol, whose home was at 303 East Fifth street, contracted the influenza while working day and night at Muhlenberg Hospital as supervisor of the Annex opened since the epidemic began. She had given almost every ounce of her strength for the forty-five patients of whom she was in charge and when the malady attacked her she lacked the necessary resistance to fight it off. Pneumonia developed and her death came a few days after she took to her bed.

Miss McNicola was in her twenty-ninth year and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward McNicol, of 1229 Castleton avenue, West New Brighton. She decided upon nursing as a life professioin and entered Muhlenberg's training school in 1910. She proved a worthy pupil and was graduated with honors in the class of 1913. Since then she had been practicing her profession locally, each succeeding patient becoming one of her firmest friends and staunchest admirers.

When the declaration of was war made by President Wilson, Miss McNicol sought to enlist in the Red Cross service but denied admission to the Nursing Corps because of a slight physical defect. Although deeply disappointed, she did the best she could under the circumstances and gave her services to the local chapter as instructor of first aid work. When the influenza began filling Muhlenberg Hospital to its capacity, she placed herself at the disposal of the executive staff for whatever duties she might be able to perform. She was placed in charge of the Annex and was doing a wonderful work when the very disease that called her into action claimed her as a victim. Her sad ending had a depressing effect on the entire official and nursing corps at Muhlenberg, which still remains.

Mr. and Mrs. McNicol, the parents, were called to Plainfield when their daughter's condition became serious, but they were unable to remain all the time as their son, Robert, was also dangerously ill. In their distraction they were alternating between West New Brighton and this city but were fortunately here when Miss McNicol was in her last conscious moments. They had no more than made arrangements for the removal of the body to the family home than they were apprised of the fact that the son was sinking fast, compelling them to hasten back to his bedside. He passed away Sunday, without knowing that his sister had preceded him in death.

Mr. and Mrs. McNicol have three other daughters and two other sons. They are: The Misses Agnes and Tdith McNicol and Mrs. William J. Quinlan, of Staten Island; William, of New York, and Edward, of Staten Island.

VINCENT LA FRANO.

Vincent La Frano, aged sixteen years, died at the home of his parents on Amboy avenue, South Plainfield, Sunday. He was a victim of pneumonia. The funeral was held in Sacred Heart church, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

MARION MELEK.

Marion Melek, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Melek, of 833 Midway avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday night following a brief illness with influenza and pneumonia. Beside her parents, she is survived by two sisters. The funeral was held Monday afternoon and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

GEORGE J. VOUSDEN.

The funeral of George J. Vousden, of 141 Duer street, the borough, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday morning, from pneumonia, was held in St. Joseph's church, Tuesday morning. Rev. Father Thomas Campbell offered a high mass of requiem and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Vousden was thirty-three years old and because of an affliction had not been able to work in some years. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. James Cassidy; also two brothers and four sisters, living on Duer street.

MRS. ALMOND SCHMEYER.

The funeral of Mrs. Elsie Schmeyer, wife of Almond Schmeyer, whose death occurred at her home, 1226 Cameron avenue, Saturday, was held at the late residence, Monday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. Mr. Berryman, of Aahway, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Schmeyer was a native of Rahway and is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Thomas, of that city.

DANIEL McDONALD.

The funeral of Daniel McDonald, one of the city's most popular young men, who passed away in Muhlenberg Hospital, after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Owing to the Board of Health rule prohibiting gatherings of any kind, the service was private, but many friends accompanied the body to its last resting place in St. Mary's cemetery. Rev. Father Holsters offered the high mass of requiem in the presence of only the immediate surviving relatives.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, numbers of set pieces being extended by the Spicer plant, where Mr. McDonald was chief of the police for two years; the firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, of New York, for whom he formerly acted as house-detective at the Hudson Terminal, and by local friends. The pall-bearers were: John Francis Payne, Bernard Cook, Dennis F. O'Keefe, Thomas Burke, Joseph Carroll and Joseph Moran.

Mr. McDonald was born at White Haven, Pa., in 1883, but came to Plainfield when about fifteen years old. He was then employed by Drs. E. W. and B. Van D. Hedges, with whom he remained until 1905, at which time he was appointed a member of the local police force. He proved a most capable and efficient officer, so much so that in the last days of his service here, Chief Kiely promoted him to plain clothes duty. It afforded him an excellent chance to learn the tricks of the detective profession and his capabilities attracted the attention of former Mayor Fisk who drafted him to the ranks of the Harvy Fisk & Sons' detective force when the big Church street terminal of the Hudson Tubes was opened. Ther Mr. McDonald maintained the excellent record that had marked his career as an officer, but left the New York position two years ago to become the head of the big force of watchmen and police maintained by the Spicer Company at its South Plainfield plant. He was giving the concern the best that was in him when the present epidemic of pneumonia laid hold of him and caused his removal to Muhlenberg Hospital. He lived only about a week after he first made known that he was not well.

Mr. McDonald, or "Dan," as everyone knew him, had one of those likeable dispositions that never failed to attract. In addition, he was a splendid specimen of young manhood, robust of form and clear cut of feature, essential qualifications to the making of a successful officer. His friends in Plainfield were numbered by the many hundreds and his acquaintanceship in down town New York, through his connection with the Fisk house, was equally as wide. The news that he was ill had barely spread about when it was followed by the word of his death and his well-wishers were hardly prepared for the dreaded blow, so impossible did it seem for them for one of such physical perfection to become a victim so quick.

Mr. McDonald had been making his home with Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Cook, of Liberty street, as his parents have been dead many years. His only near surviving relatives are a sister, Mrs. Mary Costello, of New York; an uncle, Andrew McDonald, of Somerville, and two aunts and a grandmother living in New York. The aunts are the Misses Helen and Mary McDonald, who formerly lived in Plainfield.

MRS. HAYDEN B. STEHMAN.

The body of Mrs. Hayden B. Stehman, who passed away at her home, 822 Monroe avenue, Friday night, following an illness with influenza and pneumonia, was forwarded Monday to her former home at Landisville, Pa., where the funeral and interment took place on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Stehman was twenty-nine years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Aungst, of Landisville, where she was born. After being graduated from the Landisville High School in 1903, she entered the State Normal College at Millersville, Pa., where she qualified as a teacher three years later.

She followed her profession in schools at Manasquan and Franklin, resigning her position at the latter place at the time of her marriage to Mr. Stehman. For a time she lived in the Bronx, N. Y., but removed to Plainfield last May.

Beside her parents, Mrs. Stehman is survived by three sisters and three brothers, one of the latter being D. Fred Aungst, of Wilkinsville, Pa.; Amos W. Aungst, of Bloomingdale; D. Maude Aungst, of Springfield, Mass.; Margaret C. Aungst, of New York city; Mrs. I. N. Newcomer, of Landisville, Pa.

MISS S. J. LAURITZEN.

The body of Miss Sonna J. Lauritzen, of 1500 West Front street, this city, who died in Muhlenberg Hospita, Friday night, was sent to Trenton, where the funeral took place Monday morning. Interment was in a Trenton cemetery.

Miss Lauritzen was thirty-eight years old and came to this city from Trenton in 1913. She was a twin sister of Lauritz Lauritzen, of 1500 West Front street, who is a motorman on the Netherwood trolley line. She was a member of St. Mary's church and of the Rosary Society. She contracted influenza and pneumonia developed within a few days. She was removed to the hospital as her last resort but the disease had made such inroads that the case was considered hopeless from the time she entered the institution.

Beside the brother mentioned, Miss Lauritzen is survived by her mother and another brother, Jeremiah, of Trenton, and one sister, Mrs. Patrick Fay, of North Front street, this city.

Negro Soldiers Make A Record On French Front

With the American armies in Francefi Oct. 3 (by mail).—Colored troops from America already have established themselves in Europe as being cool and reliable fighters in the front line. Both American and French commands say so, and if the Germans ever discovered who it was that held part of the line through Argonne Forest when the Boche failed to get through some time ago, the German command has a decidedly high respect for American colored infantry.

Up and down the line, after est test of a year's service, you hear no doubts expressed regarding the colored infantry. The darkie doughboys have made good in the line as well as behind. They have proven themselves cool and brave soldiers in the trenches, and gentlemen when back at rest in French towns. You are continually running into units of these colored chaps as you travel up and down the line from Switzerland to Flanders.

Down in a little village some miles back of Verdun the United Press correspondent encountered a large unit of these colored chaps, all from Chicago or thereabouts. They had just come back to rest, after a long period in the Argonne Forest trenches. Like their predecessors, a negro unit from New York, they had made a great hit with the French officers in high command of the sector. Unlike the New York negroes, these Chicago boys had encountered no big fighting, and they were disapointed at being taken from the trenches before doing big fighting.

The French officers explained that good soldiers can be recognized just as well when they are holding the line as wsen they are fighting, but the darkie doughboys were still disappointed. Finally the French general of the army came down to review the negro outfit. Down by the creek they went through some of the snappiest exereises ever seen, and the French general was delighted. When the review as it had been planned was finished the general turned to the American colored.

"If I were an American general, what would I do now?" asked the Frenchman.

"Most anything," replied the colonel. "These boys will do anything you wish."

"Well, suppose the Germans were across the creek," replied the general. "I'd like to have this nearest company attack them."

The captain of the nearest company was given the order, and he marched his men across the meadow, where they suddenly disappeared. Pretty soon a whistle sounded, and the company was up and running toward the creek. Only a minute, and then they dropped, waiting, then running, always skirmishing in the latest approved French fashion. When they dropped it was with two skirmish lines in advance and two support lines leading off to the rear, with each man dropping over the legs of the chap in front of him. Tin derbies and packs covered the upper portions of their bodies.

After a bit of flank movement by a couple of platoons, the supposed German positions along the creek were stormed and taken. The French general was delighted beyond words for a moment. Finally he said, "My oldest veterans could do it no better, even if they were warned it was on the program, and your boys did that extemporaneously." The general remembered the review, and a few days later these colored chaps from Chicago received a fine letter from him, congratulating them on their esprit de corps and their work.

It was interesting to see how these colored boys mixed with the Fernch inhabitants of the village, with whom the Americans were billeted. The French folk like the colored boys, and felt highly honored at the way the latter learned French. The darkies are getting extremely fluent, and it fits entirely with their scheme of things to use all French forms of politeness.

Down the battle line a large unit of colored troops was encountered at serious business. It was going into the line, taking over a hilly and important secto r formerly held by French troops. It was the first taste of the trenches or of the front for the boys in this unit. These men were mostly from the South. They had been trained in the Middle West, and some more in France, but never had been on duty under shell fire.

Yet on this dark night, while the Germans bombarded, these thousands of darkie doughboys, chiefly under direction of colored officers, though some were white, took over a difficult and long sector without a mishap, and with less noise than usual, so the French officers said. The have held that long sector for some time now and there has been no slip, from the farthest outpost to the rear supply truck.

Yanks on the Job, Private Gleason Says

That America is going to push the Germans back and push them quick is the belief of John V. Gleason, of this city, now in France, as a member of the 311th Infantry, in a letter addressed to his sister, Mrs. Frank Van Nest, of 222 Church street.

Private Gleason says among other things that the boys on the firing line have heard all about the new draft from 18 to 45 years and take it to mean that the United States is going into the fight for all it is worth ending it just as soon as possible if not sooner. Already, he says, the big ush is on and at the time he wrote his letter, he was in territory that only a short time before had been occupied by Germans.

Water, Private Gleason stys, is a very scace commodity in the egion where he and his associates are located. They have to walk three miles to wash and even at that do not get the facilities enjoyed by the folks at home. In conclusion, he states that he is well and happy but like all the rest of the American boys, taking part in the shove that is sending Fritz back to Berlin he has very little time to write.

Cannot Brew Beer Even For Carbonizing

Not even the so-called Kruezen or new beer for carbonizing old beer can be brewed after December 1, under a ruling announced this week by Food Administrator Hoover and Fuel Administrator Garfield. Brewers had asked that they be allowed to brew new beer for this purpose after the date fixed by the President for all brewing to cease.

If necessary to use up the malt and other material now on hand brewers may use as much of their fuel allotment as they choose between now and December 1, it was announced. However, for the purpose of refrigeration after December 1 it is considered that the allotment of fuel under the order of last June 1 is sufficient and it will be necessary for the brewers to save enough coal out of their allowance for refrigerating purposes.

Scotch Plains Couple Have Double Funeral

Funeral services for Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Brown, who died within an hour of each other Saturday, were held Tuesday afternoon at their home in Union avenue, Scotch Plains. The services were private and were conducted on the porch of the house. Burial was in Tilton, where the parents of both live.

Mr. Brown was thirty years of age and contracted influenza while doing guard duty in the Amboys after the Morgan explosion as a member of the State Militia. He was ill ten days. Mrs. Brown was twenty-nine years old. She was taken ill Thursday of last week and both died Saturday.

Army Objectors a Government Problem

"The War Department's policy regarding conscientious objectors has from the beginning been based on the provisions of the Federal Draft Law and subsequent executive orders," declared the Third Secretary of War in a statement given out at Trenton, this week, by the State Council of Defense, and authorized by the War Department.

"It has been the liberal American policy of according a measure of self-determination to the few who in all sincerity have not been able to adjust their minds to the needs of the present, sudden and desperate emergency; to whom direct participation in the war would violate religious conviction as well as a sense of self-respect and integrity of character."

Continuing, the War Secretary deccared that in dealing with objectors the difficulties have not been primarily those of policy, but of practical procedure. First of all the insincere have had to be differentiated from the sincere, he asserted, and forced into full service or subjected to fitting penalties. The second difficulty has concerned the disposition of sincere objectors in ways that would conserve the man-power of the nation. This has been complicated by misunderstandings and by peculiar local situations; but with growing experience many complications have been eliminated as requisite governmental machinery to this end has been perfected, says the secretary.

"Every effort is being made to respec tthe sincere scruples of a small minority of our people, at the same time that their power to contribute to the nation's efficiency is turned to good account. There is unquestionably strong sentiment in many quarters against the granting of immunity from military service to any group of our population, however small. But many objectors are not without the courage of their convictions. They would resist compulsion to the end, and to shoot them or imprison them would be too much like Prussianism," concluded the secretary's statement.

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

Major-General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, and Lieut.-Col. H. R. Beery, camp surgeon, have flatly denied the stories sent broadcast that whisky was commandeered by Camp Dix officials and given the soldiers as an influenza cure. In fact, according to Lieut.-Col. W. Cole Davis, commandant of the base hospital, not a drop of whisky was prescribed for any soldier during the epidemic.

The only whisky on hand at the hospital was fifteen quarts sent there when the hospital was being stocked with medicine, and the fifteen quarts are still in the supply raam.

Opportunities to obtain an education are now being afforded men at Camp Dix in the developement battalion whose chances in life have been limited. There are about 1,600 men in the battalion of various degrees of education, and as there is little drill for them because of their physical condition, classes have been organized. When they are discharged from the army they will be better fitted to take up their work in civil life.

The work is being carried on in Y. M. Hut No. 7 by Cyrus T. Green, of Chicago, a graduate of Lincoln University, who is educational director of the hut, and Shelby J. Davidson, of Washington, the general secretery of the building.

Under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. educational directors many classes have been established for non-English-speaking soldiers, but it is with the negro selectives of the Fifth Training Group that the greatest progress is being made. The work was first started with the 349th and 350th Field Artillery and 223 illiterates were given instruction so that in a few months all but fifteen could read and write.

Dr. Cotton's Discovery That Teeth Cause Insanity Marks An Epoch In Mental Cures

Striking results following eleven years of careful scientific experimentations at the State Hospital at Trenton are outlined in a special report submitted by Dr. Henry A. Cotton, the medical director, to the State Board of Charities and Corrections.

Dr. Cotton believes the years of work carried on at the hospital have demonstrated the possibility of effectively curing some cases of insanity by extracting infected teeth, divulged by an X-ray examination, and removing infected tonsils and clearing up the gastro-intestinal-infection.

Commissioner Burdeee G. Lewis, who has been keeping in close touch with the work at the hospital, expressed the belief that if Dr. Cotton's conclusion as to the real reason for a number of recoveries set for in his report are true, the discoveries are epoch-making in the treatment of insanity.

Outlining the results of experimental work at the State Hospital, Dr. Cotton's report said in part:

"We are able to cure early cases in a very short time, prevent the disease from becoming chronic in a large number of cases and restore a certain number who have been in the hospital for as long as nine years. This we are doing daily. We have found that infection of the chronic type and the resulting toxemia are the basis of many mental disturbances. These chronic infections are known as focal infections, and may be present for years without their existence becoming known to the patient and until quite recently the physicians and the dentists have been ignorant of their existence.

"We are practically prepared to state that this infection originates in the teeth, as we find the same organism in the abscessed teeth, tonsils, stomach and duodenum, and in no cases have we been able to eliminate the teeth as the origin of the infection. It would appear that the infection of the stomach and duodenum was in the wall of these organs and that the organism migrated from the teeth to the lympathics and in certain fatal cases infected the whole system. We have had five acute maniacal cases who died within a short time after coming to the hospital. Formerly the cause of death was considered due to exhaustion from excitement, but a bacteriological study in these cases showed all the organs practically infected with these organisms. We feel that we have established a very important fact as applicable to general medicine as to nervous and mental diseases, that is, that the infection originates in the teeth, and, after some years, infects their organs through the lympathic system.

"We are pleased to report that the study of the cause of a large majority of mental diseases, from the standpoint of the clinical laboratory, has at least proved successful. For the last three years we have been convinced that the etiology and treatment of these psychoses would be solved by the laboratory and we are now in a position to confirm our theories regarding this subject. In working out the problems we have deviated from the traditional conception of the cause in all these psychoses, especially those of dementia praecox and the manic depressive group.

"In making routine examinations of the blood especially the fixation test for the chronic streptococcic types, we found a great number of our patients who gave a positive reaction showing that they were suffering from a chronic infection. At first the teeth and tonsils were thoroughly investigated. In many cases the infected teeth were extracted, producing gratifying results in some cases, but in the majority no improvement was noted. Some twenty-two of these cases had their infected tonsils removed and again we noted a marked improvement and even recovery in one-half of these cases.

"The next point of attack was the astro-intestinal tract, for many of the patients showed evidence of a chronic gastro-intestinal infection. Finally in April of the present year, we were able to utilize a method of accurately determining the infection of the stomach and duodenum by making direct cultures from these organisms. This method was first used by Dr. Martin W. Rehfus, of Philadelphia, in the ordinary gastro-testinal conditions and since we have adopted this method we have examined 275 cases and found that the stomach or duodenum, or in some cases both, were infected with the Connellan-King diplococcus, and in a number of cases it was also found that a virulent colon bacilis was present.

"By utilizing these methods we have been able to definitely prove the organism responsible for the gastro-intestinal infection and by frequent irrigations of the stomach and duodenum, combined with treatbent by vaccines of the Connellan-King diplococcus and colon bacillus we have been able to clear up a large number of cases."

Describing conditions found in some of the patients, Dr. Cotton discussed among other things bad dental work. He said the practice of the ordinary dentist, who lacks knowledge of the relation of infected teeth and stomach conditions in putting in gold caps, fixed bridge work and pivot teeth, without making radiographs to determine whether the root is infected, is largely responsible for the sources of infection in the patients' teeth.

Dr. Ctoon found that few of the better cared for class of patients received at the hospital are free from caps and pivot teeth or bridge work, and in all cases these have been found to be seriously infected. As a consequence, it has been the practice of the institutional dentist to remove the bridgew ork and extract the infected teeth at once.

Another group of patients, especially the poorer class, showed absolute neglect of their teeth, both from the viewpoint of delayed cleanings and cafe of the dentist. In such cases Dr. Cotton said it has been found necessary to remove all the teeth.

A third class referred to in the report is composed of patients with severe infection of long standing, it appearing that infection came from parents, possibly during childhood. This has been especially evident, Dr. Cotton said, in many cases where it has been possible to examine the condition of the teeth of parents of such patients. Dr. Cotton believes that infection by contact, such as kissing or using the same eating utensilsfi is not only possible, but extremely probable, in many cases of this type.

In view of the facts disclosed by the investigation, Dr. Cotton recommends a campaign of education respecting the care and treatment of teeth, to the end that physicians, dentists and the public at large will realize the danger of infected teeth, not in producing nervous and mental diseases, but in undermining the general health. He said it has been recognized by most progressive men in medicine for some years that focal infection arising from infected teeth is the cause of many diseases which have heretofore been considered obscure, such as rheumatism, kidney disease and heart disease. The fact that the gastro-intestinal tract could be infected from abscessed teeth, the report added, has not been shown before.

"It has proven successful in a large number of cases and consists of rather radical measures. All infected teeth are extracted and infested tonsils are removed. Infection of the gastro-intestinal tract, especially the stomach and duodenum, has been treated by frequent irrigations of the stomach, and these organs and a hypodermic administration of autogenous vaccines made from the bacteria found on examination. In a certain proportion of cases, especially those in which the tooth infection is of recent origin, merely extracting the teeth will clear up the mental condition."

Plainfield Allotted 83,000 Tons of Coal

In accordance with the schedule of anthracite distribution for New Jersey, as submitted by State Fuel Administrator Jenkinson to the anthracite committee of the United States Fuel Administration, the anthracite commitee has directed producers and distributors to increase shipments to sixteen communities in this State, based 1918-19 coal year.

There is a general increase in tonnage to all these places over the 1916-17 distribution figures, as rearranged by Mr. Jenkinson from the total State tonnage of 5,460,784 tons, to best meet the fuel needs of the respective communities which require immediate attention.

The revised tonnage for Camden has been made 136,452 tons, an increase of nearly 30,000 tons over the 1916-17 figures. Gloucester will get 20,296 tons, which will make a 7,000-ton increase. Mapleshade, near Merchantville, will get 1,053 tons, a 300-ton boost. Alpha's tonnage is included with that of Vulcanite, which will get 1,372 tons, and Manville-Finderne is included with Manville to get 1,836 tons.

Other communities on the list include Elizabeth, which will get 94,436 tons; Elizabethport, 87,482 tons; Plainfield, 83,000 tons; Perth Amboy, 81,129 tons; Rahway, 16,000 tons; Metuchen, 10,772 tons; Dunellen, 5,179 tons; New Egypt, 1,200 tons, and Minatola, 682 tons.

Union County Shy of Coal Quota

Union county is included among the sections of the State where there is a noticeable shortage of coal, it was admitted by State Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson yesterday, at the same time that he announced the completion of arrangements for covering the "bare" spots. Taken as a whole, he says that there is more coal in New Jersey than at the same period last year.

An extra allotment of ten per cent. has been allowed to this State and it is that which Administrator Jenkinson depends upon to supply the places now without coal. He will make the opportionment to Union county and County Administrator John K. English will distribute it among the municipalities.

Speaking of the coal situation in the State as a whole, Mr. Jenkinson said:

"Our efforts in New Jersey have been expended in an effort to spread the coal equally over the State and to give everyone a supply. Of course, this is an impossible task. Some of the 'hogs' get more than their share and some of the people have been improvident and have never filed their cards. Nevertheless, on September 1 we had 2,15,325 tons in homes and coal pockets. Our quota for the five months beginning last April was 2,067,350, showing that we got 105,975 more thans than was exptced."

PERSONAL

John L. Honan, of Newark, formerly of this city, but now located in Newark, where he is manual training instructor in the Madison School, spent the forepart of the week at the home of his mother, Mrs. William Fairbank, of West Fourth street.

Charles LeRoy Mowen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Mowen, of Leland avenue, who recently enlisted in the Motor Section of the Aviation Corps, is now located at Langley Field, Va.

Herbert Hand, son of Charles H. Hand, of Watchung avenue, has been seriously ill during the past week with pneumonia. He is at his father's home and today was reported as being improved.

Charles F. McCann, night station master at the Communipaw terminal, who was seriously ill for several weeks with pneumonia, has been discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, and is now recuperating at his home on West Third street.

John J. Curran, of Arlington avenue, who recently was transferred from the cavalry to the 60th Field Artillery, is now located at Camp Jackson, S. C. He writes friends that he has been there for the past month, but expects to go overseas very shortly. He was stationed at Fort Myer, Va., from the time of his enlistment in May until last September.

Cecil M. Newcorn, son of Judge and Mrs. William Newcorn, who is attending a military academy in Virginia, has been appointed a corporal in the Signal Corps.

John Moran, of this city, who has been engaged in plumbing work at munition plants in various parts of the country for the past two years, returned from Nitro, West Virginia, recently and is at present at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas J. Comerford, of 727 West Fourth street. He expects to leave shortly to resume work at a munition plant in Virginia.

Miss Julia Rowley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rowley, of Grove street, is home from Syracuse University because of the institution's closing on account of the influenza epidemic.

Private James J. McCarthy, of East Fifth street, who came home from Camp Humphreys to attend the funeral if his sister, Miss Helen McCathy, and who was afterward stricken with appendicitis, is well on the road to recovery at Muhlenberg Hospital. Following his operation last week, his condition was serious for a time but the offending complications afterward cleared up. Private McCarthy is attached to the 215th Engineers.

Miss Lulu Acker, of Somerset street, returned to her duties as secretary at Muhlenbereg Hospital, Tuesday, following an illness of two weeks with influenza. Her condition for a time was quite serious, but pneumonia was kept from developing through prompt medical attention.

"Tony" Bressan, of Chatham place, the borough, is able to be out after a two weeks' illness with influenza. Pneumonia did not develop but the malady was so severe while it lasted that Mr. Bressan's friends hardly knew him when he came out to renew acquaintances.

Miss Anna Loretta Whalen, of West Front street, was married Monday night, to Frederick W. Nichols, of Salt Lake City, Utah. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Swaffield in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Mr. Nichols is in the Naval Transport service and is expecting to shortly begin his seventh trip overseas.

John C. Mottley, of West Fourth street, who was a patient in the Crouse-Irving Hospital at Syracuse, N. Y., for two months, following an attack of pneumonia, was discharged from the institution this week and has been returned to the Syracuse Military Barracks.

Walter J. Bennett, of East Second street, has been confined to his home since Monday by an attack of the influenza. He is connected with the meter department of the local office of the Plainfield-Union Water Company.

Dr. Harold D. Corbusier, of Park avenue, left for a southern camp, Tuesday night, after spending a short leave of absence in town. He has been at Camp Meade for the past few months, but is now to assume charge of the orthopedic work at a new cantonment base hospital.

Mrs. Fred Zweifel, of Grant avenue, who was a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital, for a week, suffering from influenza, was discharged from the institution Tuesday. She is not fully well as yet but is recovering slowly but surely.

Richard Harrigan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Harrigan, of South avenue, was recently commissioned a second lieutenant and placed with a new division in France. He was formerly a sergeant-major in the 311th Infantry. When Lieutenant Harrigan first entered the service at Camp Dix he weighed 237 pounds but in the last letter to his parents, he stated that he had lowered himself to the "fighting weight" of 181 pounds.

Cornelius McCarthy, formerly of this city, but more recently of South Plainfield, is a patient at Muhlenberg suffering from influenza. His condition for several days was considered critical but he is now somewhat improved and gaining each day. Mr. McCarthy was a patrolman on the local police force for nearly ten years.

John T. Traynor, Jr., of East Second street, who has been at Fort Thomas, Ky., for the past month, sent word to friends this week that he was enjoying good health, although the influenza was prevalent at his post. He says that he expects to be moved to another location within a few days. Previous to entering the service Mr. Traynor was employed in the freight traffic department of the New Jersey Central.

Dr. Sydney R. Titsworth, of Hillside avenue, who has been in the army service for the past four months, following his being commissioned as a captain, is now located in France doing orthopedic work at a base hospital.

Mrs. Charles L. Ryder, of Grant avenue, was called to Brooklyn, Tuesday, by the death of her only aunt, Mrs. Slover, for many years a resident of Jamaica, L. I.

Daniel W. Mundy, of Woodland avenue, received word this week that his two sons, George and Arthur Mundy, members of the 311th Infantry, have been in action but had returned from the trenches safely and were in a rest camp at the time of writing. The two young men went to Camp Dix with the first contingent of Plainfield selectives in September, 1917.

Walter L. Righter, of West Seventh street, has been accepted as a candidate for the Field Artillery Officers' Training School, at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky.

Relatives and friends on Wednesday heard for the first time from Sergeant William J. Mahoney, of Liberty street, who went overseas three months ago. A severe illness contracted when he landed on the other side prevented him from sending word any sooner but he informed the anxious ones that he "was now perfectly well and happy." Sergeant Mahoney is attached to a Field Artillery unit.

Women "Y" Workers Supplanting Males In Camp Dix Huts

Women workers in the Y. M. huts at Dix will not be an uncommon sight after the first of the year. Plans have been approved by Major-General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, for the erection near the Hostess House of a residence where these women will reside while in camp. For some months past the plan of having women secretaries has been discussed, and the fact that the age limit for service in the army has been raised, making it harder to get male secretaries, played an important part in the decision of the Y. M. C. A. to call on the women.

A leader of women' work will be in charge of the workers under the direction of the camp general secretary, and will be a member of the headquarters staff. She will reside with the workers, and at all times will have supervision over them. Two women will be assigned to each hut, and their duty will be to tend to the information bureau and desk work, releasing the men for duties outside. A matron will have charge of the activities inside of the residence, which will be a two-story building containing accommodations for twenty workers. It will also contain a dining-room and a large living room.

All applications for positions as workers should be sent to the secretary in charge of women's work at the Y. M. C. A. headquarters, 347 Madison avenue, New York city, and not to Camp Dix. All the workers will be volunteers, and a thorough investigation will be made of each application before a worker is accepted. No women having relatives at the camp will be accepted. The permanent secretaries will wear a uniform, while the women who are performing temporary service, will wear a distinctive arm band.

Public Service Getting Points On Zone System

Investigation of the street railway zoning plan as adopted by several New England municipalities will be made this week by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Railway Company, supplementing his recent visit to Western cities. Mr. McCarter, who left Tuesday and expects to return Saturday night, is accompanied by Harry C. Donecker, assistant general manager of the railway; Matthew R. Boylan, general auditor, and Dr. Thomas Conway, of the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania. The latter three compose the sub-committee of the special zoning committee named by Mr. McCarter from the officials of the company.

The itinerary of the party includes New London, Conn.; Portland, Me.; Providence, R. I.; Springfield, Holyoke and Boston, Mass. In all of the cities with the exception of Boston, the zone fare collection plan is now in effect, and the investigators will inquire into ride lengths in the various zones, methods of fare collection and other details. In Boston the street railways have been much in the public eye recently because of their financial difficulties, and the party will get a coise up view of the present situation.

While thousands of workmen are busy day and night reconstructing the huge shell-loading plant of the T. A. Gillespie Company at Morgan, two miles from South Amboy, where a series of terrific explosions wreaked fearful havoc and took a toll of more than fifty lives three weeks ago, officials of adjacent cities and towns, Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker, of Middlesex county, and Congressman Thomas J. Scully, of the Third New Jersey District, are making separate efforts not only to have a thorough-going investigation into the causes of the disaster, but to get assurances from either the Gillespie company or the Federal Government that improved methods of construction and operation will be followed in the new plant. Senator Frelinghuysen has brought the matter of an investigation up in the Senate, and recently Mr. Scully sponsored a resolution appropriating $2,500,000 to pay claims of persons injured in the explosion.

Congressman Scully has introduced a resolution in Congress asking for a Congressional inquiry into the causes of the explosion and conditions that obtained at the Gillespie plant; Prosecutor Stricker is preparing evidence gathered by his detectives for submission to the Middlesex Grand Jury; officials of South Amboy acted Tuesday on a resolution calling for an investigation and asking that definite restrictions be put on the size of the new plant and the quantity of explosives which may be stored there; and the Home Defense Council of Perth Amboy, composed of many of that city's business and professional men, has sent to the New Jersey delegation in Congress and the War Department a memorial declaring that "it has been alleged and circumstances would seem to indicate the disaster was due to faulty construction and incompetent management."

Sweeping charges of inefficiency and carelessness in the conduct of the loading plant were made in a statement by Leo J. Coakley, city solicitor of South Amboy. He declared that enemy aliens and other workmen of foreign allegiance had been able to hold jobs in the plant. Men had entered the plant without passes, he said, and in some cases had gotten into shell-loading buildings without having been searched for matches. Locomotives not equipped with spark arresters had pushed box cars laden with TNT in and out of the Gillespie sidings, he averred, while underbrush had been permitted to grow between the unit buildings, so that fire spread quickly from one structure to another.

The charge was made that "the superintendent of the plant, Mr. Eldridge, left after the first explosion and went to the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark until the noise was all over." He referred to "T. A. Gillespie and the crowd of politicians," which, he said, surrounded Mr. Gillespie at the plant, as being without interest in the damage the blasts had done in South Amboy. "He has never as much as inquired if the town was still in existence of needed assistance," was a sentence in Mr. Coakley's statement.

"I must positively say the plant was well built and well managed," said Mr. Gillespie, president of the company, in replying to the charges of Mr. Coakley. "All the plans and the management of the property were entirely under the supervision of the Ordnance Department. Every care that could be taken was done in the construction and the operation of the plant."

"There's a lot of foolishness about this," was his first comment after he had glanced through a copy of Mr. Coakley's statement. Then he proceeded to reply to each charge in detail.

"We're most careful in our examination of the men," he remarked in taking up the statement by Mr. Coakley that enemy aliens and other foreigners had been able to get jobs in the pant. "We have a regular employment agency at the works. All names are checked up carefully by Captain Ainsworth, the Ordnance Department. Why, if we didn't accept men with foreign names we wouldn't get any at all. The casualty list from the other side are the proper reply to that.

"Even after we get the men in the plant, we keep watching them and checking them up all the time. Mr. von Keller, for instance, has a foreign name, but he is an American citizen. We were criticised on his account, but he came to us strongly indorsed by peoplei n whom we have great confidence.

"As to matches, I myself haven't been able to enter those plants without being questioned about matches. I can't believe that this is so.

"It is not true," continued Mr. Gillespie, "about locomotive being in there without spark arresters. On the contrary, all locomotives that went into the plant were fitted up with the very best American Locomotive Company design of spark arresters."

"There never was a crueler thing," was his comment on the charge that Mr. Eldridge deserted the scene of the explosion and went to the Robert Treat Hotel soon after the first explosion occurred. John Birmingham, another member of the company, told him, Mr. Gillespie said, that Mr. Eldridge stayed on the ground helping to direct the fight against the flames long after it had become unsafe to remain.

"I saw Mr. Eldridge myself," added Mr. Gillespie, "and was with him for quite a while Saturday morning after the explosion and he had been up all night doing everything he possibly could. He did go up to Newark for a few hours' rest Saturday about noon, but returned to Perth Amboy in the afternoon."

"The best reply I can make to the statement that T. A. Gillespie never so much as inquired if the town was still in existence is to refer Mr. Coakley to Oliver Ramsey, who represents the Red Cross in Perth Amboy and South Amboy, and to Ethan Allen, of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross in New York. I was with them every hour I could possibly spare to help through the Red Cross. But I would prefer to have you ask them about that.

"I don't know what Mr. Coakley means by 'T. A. Gillespie and his crowd of politicians.' I am not a politician. I have no politicians around me."

Then Mr. Gillespie added his statement about the plant being under the supervision of the Ordnance Department. Asked as to the amount of explosives that had been stored at the plant before the explosion, he replied that he did not known definitely.

South Amboy, a quiet city of 10,000 population before the coming of the shell plants brought hundreds of new-comers to town, is now recovering from the effects of the disaster dasily, according to the Newark News. The influenza epidemic, which was just beginning here when the blasts drove residents of the city into temporary exile, spead quickly as a result of the exposure of hundreds of men, women and children who fled from town while the explosives were in progress. Deaths from pneumonia have been numerous and the combined effects of the explosion and the influenza plague have thrown an atmosphere of gloom over the city.

"South Amboy is surrounded with TNT," Mayor Alfred T. Kerr declared. "There are six big powder and sheel plants within a distance of eight miles from the city. Freight trains are hauling cars filled with TNT and other explosives through South Amboy every day. In Cheesequake Creek they are loading barges with TNT."

"This city wants to do its share in winning the war," the mayor added. "It is willing to take its share of the risk, too. But why should all this great shell industry be located here in one place?"

Prosecutor Stricker at his home in Perth Amboy—the prosecutor's home, like that of Congressman Scully in South Amboy, suffered from the recurring shocks—said that if the evidence he was gathering indicated culpability on the part of any official or employe of the Gillespie plant, he would ask for indictments.

A youth now in the Middlesex county jail is awaiting trial on a charge that he was found smoking a cigarette in a shell-loading unit at the California Loading Company's plant, Mr. Stricker said. If it is shown to be true that the prisoner was able to get smoking materials into a building where a dangerous process of shell-loading was carried on, Mr. Stricker said, conditions at that plant should be investigated.

Besides the Gillespie plant, other explosive concerns near South Amboy are the Oliver Loading Company, the California Loading Company and the Evans Loading Company, popularly thought to be subsidiaries of the Gillespie concern; the E. L. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company at Parlin, four miles west of the Amboys, and the big shell-forwarding station at the United States army at Camp Raritan, scarcely ten miles north. The eastern section of Middlesex county, a belt twelve miles long and eight miles wide, contains a great part of the shell-loading and powder-making industry of the country. ust how big the part is no one other than the chief of the ordnance department of the army, Major General Williams, can say.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many kind friend in Plainfield, unknown to us, but none the less devoted, who so generously extended their help and sympathy upon the death of our daughter and sister, Sister Regina Michaella, we wish to convey our heartfelt thanks and appreciation.

Spicer Corporation's Use of Vaccine Big Factor in Causing Abatement of Influenza Epidemic

The undeniable waining of the influenza epidemic in this vicinity and a study of the causes that might have brought about the sudden lessening of cases has revealed the unmistakable evidence that the influenza vaccine introduced to Plainfield by the Spicer Manufacturing Corporation, has been the greatest factor in reducing the plague.

When the dreaded malady first made its appearance here, it seemed to be especially partial in attacking the employes of the South Plainfield concern. There were 1,400 of them all told at the time the trouble began and for several weeks it seemed as though the entire staff would fall victims. Hundreds of severe cases and an appalling death rate within its midst caused the company to cast about for a preventative. The search led to the newly discovered "influenza bacterin mixed," produced by the H. K. Mulford house of Philadelphia, and at an expense of many thousands of dollars, the Spicer firm purchased the supply that drove the pneumonia back across "No Man's Land." More than 1,000 employes and members of their families were inoculated, causing what seemed an absolute sudden termination of the disease's rampage through the mammoth South Plainfield plant. Today the number of employes suffering from influenza is almost nil while the death rate has been reduced to normal.

When the Spicer company first decided to spare no expense or trouble in securing a combatant against the spread of the "flu bug," it enlisted the aid of Dr. William A. Anthony, one of the city's best known practitioners. The Mulford vaccine had been recommended to him but as it is a comparatively new proposition, he hesitated at its wholesale introduction without first securing even more pronounced medical authority than his own. As a result he canvassed the medical profession to the extent of securing the unstinted approval of the following specialists: Dr. Edward Lindeman, the celebrated New York blood transfusion expert, whose wonderful operations have made Plainfielders marvel; Dr. Voorhees, professor of obstetrics at the Sloane Maternity Hospital; Professor Kerley, New York's leading specialist in children's diseases; the full staff of the Rockefeller Institute and the Army Medical Staff of the United States Government. The Government has been using the vaccine in camps and the Rockefeller Institute has been distributing and recommending the bacterin throughout the metropolitan district, consequently Dr. Anthony delayed not an instant longer than necessary when he had compiled all his information.

The Mulford company was so deluged with orders that it was almost impossible to send out the vaccine to all who wanted it. C. W. Spicer, the head of the local concern, decided that personal presentation would have more effect than pleading letters and he immediately hied himself to the Quaker City for a heart-to-heart talk with the vaccine distributors. His explanation of what urgent action was needed and the display of a certified check called forth an amount of the precious fluid sufficient to care for a big part of Plainfield's population. The trip to Philadelphia was a coup in itself for even while Mr. Spicer was in the laboratory, telephone calls for shipments were being refused and telegraph orders pigeon-holed for "future reference."

The Spicer company maintains a private hospital of its own. It takes care of all employes who are taken ill at the plant or who sustains injuries of various sorts. Dr. Anthony is the presiding head and he has a corps of three assisting nurses supervised by Miss Gertrude Hughes. As soon as the vaccine was received, the little staff got everything in preparation and the men and women at the shop were called in for inoculation. The process is very simple and close observation has failed to show any one case where the vaccine was responsible for any ill effects. One instance occurred where a young man, Harry Friedman, of 111 Washington street, was seized with a sort of fainting spell sometime after being inoculated and fell heavily to the concrete floor of the shop, sustaining a fractured skull that afterward caused his death in Muhlenberg Hospital. It has been established definitely that the injection of the vaccine had nothing whatsoever to do with his fainting spell as he had been in a more or less nervous state before treatment and left the inoculation station in the same condition he had entered.

Almost from the hour the vaccine was first administered, the lessening of influenza and grip was noted among the factory employes. Those who did contract the malady took it only in a light form, and were back at their posts within a day or so. The expressions of sympathy in the various departments, brought about by the news that another "good scout" had died through the night, became less and less until at the present time the Spicer shop is back to the point where it was when the epidemic first stalked broadcast through the plant. This lessening of cases has also decreased the grand total of victims in this city and the authorities have not been slow in recognizing the valuable service rendered by the Spicer company, the first in this part of the State to throw vaccine into the influenza fight.

The work of inoculation is still being conducted at the South Plainfield shop by Dr. Anthony, scores of men appearing before him each day. Members of employes' families are also being treated gratis and many have availed themselves of the opportunity to secure a fighting chance against influenza's attacks. It is understood that the success at Spicer's has induced other local industrial firms to consider the vaccine process and it is quite probable that the employes of all the other shops will be offered inoculation within the next few days.

A comprehensive idea of what composes the vaccine used at the Spicer plant and how it acts when given to a patient may be gleaned by the layman from the following explanation prepared for the Record by Dr. Henry J. Goeckel, pathologist at Muhlenberg Hospital:

"The vaccines sometimes called bacterins used as a preventative or prophylactic against influenza are suspensions of the killed germs from cases of influenza and the diseases which follow it and make it a serious infection.

"The germs used are known as the influenza and the Friedlander pneumonia bacilli, the pneumococci, the catarrhal cocci, and the various pus germs.

"These are carefully isolated from cases of the disease, grown in pure form in the laboratories; made up into definite strength suspensions, killed and bottled in sterile containers. Two hundred millions of these dead germs are usually injected under the skin in the first dose.

"The cells of the body act against these germs just as it does in the diseases excepting that there is no chance for the germs to grow and become numerous enough to poison the case to death. The ability thereby given to produce antitoxins and the other protective substances enables the person so immunized to destroy the few live germs with which he or she may later become infected before they can grow and multiply sufficient to produce the disease."

War Activities Show Loyalty of E. R. Ackerman

Ernest R. Ackerman, Republican candidate for Member of the House of Representatives from the Fifth New Jersey Congressional District of Union and Morris counties, comes before the voters for election on Tuesday, November 5th, which, by the way, will be the first opportunity that has ever been offered to Plainfielders to vote for one of their fellow-townsmen for Congress.

Mr. Ackerman's wholel ife has been consecutive series of public services entirely without remuneration save only for the six years that he served his State and county as member of the State Senate. His loyalty to his country is shown by the works of war service that he has rendered his community, all without any emolument save that of the consciousness of having been able to contribute in some degree to the winning of the war and toward standing by the flag when it was imperilled.

It was presented to him that his years of travel in more than one hundred foreign countries during which he had many opportunities to study at first hand many of the trade problems that will be sure to have a bearing upon the reconstruction period now probably not far off, fitted him preeminently for the important duties of congressman during the next two years from March 4, 1919.

His former public services date back to the time when he was a fearless champion of good government in the Plainfield Common Council and his services in the State Senate are doubtless remembered to this day by workingmen throughout the country, but particularly in New Jersey for the present Workingmen's Compensation bill under which they receive remuneration when injured in the performance of their duties is based upon the Employers' Liability bill which he had the courage to fight for and finally see enacted into law despite the opposition of many of his fellow employing manufacturers of the State. He was also the father of the Civil Service law in New Jersey besides nearly half a hundred other measures of direct benefit to the people.

James J. McCann Looming Up Strong In Pegister's Race

Motor License Agent James J. McCann, of this city, is making a determined fight for election next Tuesday as county registrar of deeds on the Democratic ticket, and seems to be gaining strength over his opponent, Edward L. Bauer, the Republican candidate, from Elizabeth.

Being a local resident, and having a wide acquaintance in Elizabeth, his former home, and throughout the county, Mr. McCann's friends feel certain that he will come through a winner. He is in every way qualified for the position and would make an excellent official. Republican voters in Plainfield in no small numbers have assured him that he has their support and similar reports come from Westfield, Summit and Rahway.

Mr. McCann has been active in local Democratic circles for twelve years. As automobile license agent, he has been most obliging and courteous to the extreme and this fact has helped materially in securing support for his candidacy. Many Plainfield people believe that he should have the county registrar's position as up to the present time it has always been held by a Plainfielder.

PROMOTED TO MAJOR.

Former Councilman Robert H. Cox, of West Seventh street, who has been in France since early last summer, was on October 8 promoted from captain to major. He is now in charge of a machine gun battalion in action on the front. Major Cox was a member of old Troop D and went to the Mexican border with that unit in 1816. Previous to going abroad in the present war, he was commanding officer of the 311th Machine Gun Company during its training period at Camp McClellan.

Two Hurt When Loaded Jitney and Auto Crash

Two persons were hurt and a score of others badly shaken up when a jitney bus belonging to Leonard McCracken, of 315 Lee place, and an automobile owned and driven by Morris Krauss, of Martinsville, crashed together at Plainfield avenue and West Front street at 7:30 last night.

Tobias Adlebitz, of 15 Prospect place, North Plainfield, who was riding with Krauss, was badly cut and bruised about the head and arms, and Benjamin Connors, of 4 Steiner place, North Plainfield, received severe contusions about the head and shoulders and glass cuts. Both men were treated by Dr. Albert Pittis.

The jitney bus was going east on West Front street, in charge of George Stites, the driver. It was carrying twenty-two persons in all. Krauss was running his machine west on Front street and started to turn to the left into Plainfield avenue, directly in the path of the approaching jitney. The impact was heavy enough to partially wreck both machines. The glass in the jitney windows and other fragments from the windshields flew through the air in a shower but fortunately escaped striking people in the faces or eyes. Several of the passengers had glass stuck all over their clothing when they made their way out of the jitney.

The accident occurred only about two blocks away from the fatal trolley car-jitney bus accident which occurred on September 8, killing one man and badly injuring a dozen others. In consequence, the passengers in the bus last night had visions of another such catastrophe and a small sized panic ensued before the truth of the situation was realized. When the accident was first reported about the city last night, it was rumored that three persons had been killed and many others hurt.

Lieutenant Higgins, of the local police force, reached the scene of the smash-up shortly after it happened and after helping to care for the injured persons, placed Krauss under arrest for reckless driving.

In the city court this morning, Judge DeMeza, after hearing Stites' testimony, found Krauss guilty as charged, but suspended sentence.

Epidemic Ban Lifted Tomorrow

With only twenty-five new cases of influenza and one of pneumonia reported to the Board of Health up to 10 o'clock this morning, it may be said that the epidemic locally is nearing its end. The ban which has been on the city for four weeks will be lifted entirely tomorrow.

Two deaths were reported today, making a total for the epidemic of 102 since September 18. The total number of influenza cases is 2,153, and of pneumonia 287.

Sudden Death of Mrs. Gallup

Mrs. Arthur T. Gallup, wife of former Councilman Gallup, died suddenly at her home, 551 West Front street, this morning at 7:30 of heart failure. She was out driving yesterday afternoon, and was apparently in the best of health on arising today. Death was almost instantaneous.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Gallup leaves one son, Cralos C. Gallup.

Pneumonia Fatal to Martin J. Regan

Following an illness of about a week with influenza and pneumonia, death came yesterday afternoon to Martin J. Regan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Regan, of 209 Spooner avenue. The funeral will be held at the parents' home at 9:30 tomorrow morning and in St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Regan was in his eighteenth year and was graduated from St. Mary's commercial school in June, 1917. Since then he had been employed as an accountant in the Jersey Central's offices at Jersey City. He was a model young man in every respect, unusually apt and destined for a successful career. His death has aroused extreme sympathy for the bereaved parents and relatives. He was a cousin to Private Martin Kane, who was buried from his father's home and later St. Mary's church last Saturday.

The deceased was a member of Division No. 4, A. O. H., and beside his parents, leaves two sisters and two brothers. They are George, John, Mary and Anna Regan.

Umbrella Sole Concern of Eighty-year-old Man Mangled Beneath Wheels of Train

An ordinary, everyday umbrella, lacking even the familiar handle embellishments peculiar to the petrician rain protector, was the sole concern of eighty-year-old Richard Lawrence, of 107 West Seventh street, after he had fallen beneath the wheels of the 5:21 express at the North avenue station Wednesday. When eager hands lifted him away, his right leg was crushed to a pulp from the knee down, he asked the bystanders not to forget the umbrella and later, as he sat upright on a stretcher, he insisted that it be handed to him. As he was hurried away to Muhlenberg Hospital, in the ambulance, the umbrella was clutched tightly to his breast, and given up only when a nurse gave her promise that she would be personally responsible for its safe keeping.

Within a short time after the accident, Dr. Ray Munger, of Fanwood, amputated the crushed leg. Mr. Lawrence, despite his advanced age, never lost his pertness or matter of fact manner over the injury up to the time of being placed under an anaesthetic and he emerged from the operation in apparently splendid condition. At last reports he was stated to be insisting that he would be out of the hospital within a week.

The accident occurred as Mr. Lawrence was about to alight from the express train at the North avenue station. He was in a hurry to get out and stepped from the platform before the train had come to a full stop. Without his noticing it, a freight was pulling alongside the express in the same direction and was taking the right of way. Stepping back quickly to avoid being hit, Mr. Lawrence fell beneath the wheels of the train from which he had just alighted. The crew was unable to do anything for him until after the freight had passed but he maintained his presence of mind and kept away from further harm.

Mr. Lawrence has been engaged in the lumber business in New York for many years, but recently went to the office only at intervals for a short time each day. He was in town later Wednesday than he had been for a long while and was extremely anxious to get home when arriving in Plainfield. The Seventh street address is the residence of Mrs. E. J. Berrien, at whose place he was a boarder. Previously he had boarded at Mrs. Hellstrom's on East Seventh street. He has three sons, one of whom, Frank V. Lawrence, lives on Denmark road, this city.

Business Men Resent Query of 'Phone Company

Driven to defensive measures because of the loss of business brought about by the New York Telephone Company's switchboard query, "Is this a necessary call?" the Plainfield Business Men's Association has practically decided to enter a formal protest against the continuance of the pertinent question.

Members of the association have talked the matter over among themselves and it is to be brought up at the regular meeting scheduled for next Monday night. At that time ways and means of getting at the bottom of the 'phone company's order and the best method possible to have it rescinded will be discussed. At present many of the association's members are in favor of lodging a vigorous objection with the concern's head officials, a plan that is underway in Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne and other cities in the metropolitan district.

When the Telephone Company first introduced the "necessary" question to a subscriber it had the effect of keeping many away from the telephone when it was intended to be used for a matter of business, although the concern makes the defense that it was intended only to stop idle gossiping over the wires. Scores of women in Plainfield who were in the habit of ordering meats, groceries and other foodstuffs by telephone adopted the plan of calling up one merchant and asking him to have his clerk bring the needed articles from other places. This was in many instances impossible and where the dealers said so over the wire, he was immediately put down as an unaccommodating, impolite man and consequently cut off the patronage list of the offended party. On the other hand, where the merchant obligingly gave the time of his men and the use of his rigs to gather up orders for someone else it resulted in considerable confusion and not a little loss to his own business.

The "necessary" query has now continued for more than two weeks and as the telephone corporation has given no reasonable argument for its action beyond saying the epidemic of influenza has shortened its working force, the merchants are desirous of knowing how much longer they are to be subjected to the inconsistent blockading of business. One West Front street storekeeper said yesterday:

"I have been short of help, too, because of the influenza but my customers did not consider it to the point of wrapping up their own goods and taking them home. They wanted the service they were paying for and if I failed to furnish it they would go somewhere else. The people are paying for telephone service but this "necessary" game has cut it down without their receiving any reduction in monthly bills. If the 'phone people could show me where they are giving any particular help to the Government in this city by scaring patrons off the wire or if it is really short of help because of the epidemic, I would pocket my own losses without a murmur but as it is I feel that I am being played for a 'sucker.'"

This is the way many of the other local merchants feel and for that reason the plan to give the matter a thorough discussion at next Monday night's meeting is being worked out.

Twenty-eight Men for Camp Dix November 15

Secretary Freeman, of the local Exemption Board, received word from General Crowder this morning, to send twenty-eight selectives to Camp Dix on Friday, November 15. All but three of these men will be from the September 12 registrants. Four other selectives are to be sent from Plainfield to Fort Hancock on a date yet to be fixed during the five-day period beginning November 11.

Secretary Freeman stated today that 100 more September 12 registrants would be examined at the Evergreen Avenue School next week. Fifty will appear on Wednesday afternoon and fifty others Thursday afternoon.

Miss Buckley an Influenza Victim

Miss Florence Buckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buckley, of 431 Orchard place, died at 9 o'clock this morning, after an illness of about four days with influenza and pneumonia. A sister, Miss Virginia Buckley, is dangerously ill at the present time with the same disease.

Miss Buckley was twenty-five years old and has always lived in this city. Her friends were numbered by the many hundreds. Beside her parents, she is survived by one brother, James Buckley, of West Third street, and three sisters, Mrs. Bert Botsford, West Fourth street; Mrs. Albert Bremmer, of Arlington avenue, and Miss Virginia Buckley.

Three Deaths in Family Rob Mother of Reason

Told That Her Husband and Babies Had Died, Mrs. Marie Damiano Goes Raving Mad at Muhlenberg Hospital and Is Removed to Morris Plains' Asylum

One of the most pathetic results of the recent severe influenza epidemic came yesterday, when Mrs. Marie Damiano, of 211 Richmond street, was removed from Muhlenberg Hospital to the Morris Plains insane asylum, a complete mental wreck.

Unable to survive the shock of being informed after she herself had recovered from a severe attack of the disease that her husband, Leo Damiano, and two little girls, Marie and Alberta, had died, she became a raving maniac. It was thought at first that her trouble was only temporary but as it grew worse instead of better there was no recourse but to remove her to the State's institution.

There was no home for Mrs. Damiano to go to as the only other member of the family surviving the ravages of the disease is a boy five years old. He is at present being cared for by friends.

The Damiano family contracted the influenza seemingly all at once about three weeks ago. When neighbors discovered their plight, one child was dead and the mother and father were in a semi-conscious condition. It was learned afterward that the father had tried to secure medical help but as it was just at the period when the doctors were working day and night they were not reached. The police were informed of the sorry circumstances and the living were removed to the hospital, while the body of the little girl was taken to Higgins' undertaking room.

Before arrangements could be made for the burial of the first child, the father and the other daughter passed away. All three were interred at the same time in the one grave in St. Mary's cemetery. The father was about twenty-seven years old and had been employed at the Pond Tool Works.

Exciting U-Boat Attack Told of By Andrew Brady

A three-hour running fight with a nest of Germany's biggest U-boats, during which all hands on the resisting transport were in readiness for a plunge into the sea in the event of their vessel being sunk, is vividly described by Andrew Brady, of this city, in a letter to his mother, Mrs. Catharine Brady, and aunt, Miss Mary Muldoon, of 671 West Front street.

Private Brady went to Camp Dix last summer and started overseas as a member of Company C, 309th Infantry, which is now in action near the Metz sector. With him in the same company is John Delke, of East Fifth street, to whom he refers in the communication to his relatives. Beside the U-boat attack, which was successfully warded off, Private Brady describes other thrilling events in the life of an American soldier on the French front, although he refers to them as thought they were rather commonplace. Previous to entering the service, the young man was connected with the local office of the Plainfield-Union Water Comany and the reproduction of his letter, devoid of personalities, will undoubtedly be of great interest to his friends. It is as follows:

Somewhere in France,
Sept. 8th, 1918.

Dear Mother and Aunt Mary:

Just a few lines to let you know that John and myself are feeling fine and hope that everything at home is the same.

Well, Mother and Aunt Mary, I will tell you about my little trip across the pond (yes, some pond). It took only sixteen days before we landed and we sure did have some time before we got off the boat. We only came across a net of subs four days from land, and sure did have some fight. I would say there were about eight subs in all and the firing going on from 5:30 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. steady all the time. Well, when it was all over there were two subs brought to the top of the water all knocked to h—— but still we were on the alert at all times, until we landed in docks, and while all this was going on John and myself stood by our raft with life belts on looking at all the fight, and it sure was some experience, something I hope we will never see again. Also have been in several air raids, in one case where Jerry dropped three bombs six feet tall, about two hundred feet away from our tents. That was on August 13th, and every night after that for one week, but with all this I did not mind a bit of the excitement, just forgot all about it.

Well, Mother and Aunt Mary, do not worry about what I have said in this letter because all this happened one month ago. So you can see everything is O. K., and where we are stationed now is just as safe as the U. S. A.

John received a package of Plainfield papers the other day and it sure did make the boys feel fine to see some news from the Queen City of New Jersey.

Mother and Aunt Mary, I pray every day that everything will go along smooth until I return to God's country, the United States of America.

The churches in the States are nothing to the ones in France. Talk about paintings and stone work, well, they sure have got that down to perfection, especially in Paris, where I have been in several of them and they are certainly great.

Send some Plainfield papers.

Feeling better than ever.

Remember me to all the neighbors.

With love to all,

Your loving son,
ANDREW.

Plans Progressing For the Opening of The Red Cross Shop

Plans are going busily forward in all that pertains to the Red Cross shop, soon to be opened in the Babcock building. All donations of articles for sale at the shop as well as everything you collect for salvage must be taken first to the sorting room at 306 West Front street. Nothing will be placed in the shop until it has been put through the fumigating room.

We want you to give us all you can spare or are willing to sacrifice in the way of furniture, men's, women's and children's clothes, toys, jams, jellies, glass, china, silver, jewelry, books, pictures, tobacco, sporting-goods and all household articles. If you cannot send your things call up Mrs. J. Hartley Melick, 1874, and she will send for them.

Besides things to be sold in the shop we want all kinds of material to sell as salvage. Collect all you can of the following:

Rags and gunny-sacks, burlap, books, brass, Beechnut jars, canvas, cold cream jars, copper, cord, string and rope, candy jars (glass), iron, khaki, lead tubes, magazines, mattresses (cotton or hair), "movie" posters, nickel, old kid gloves, old clothes, clean rags, mixed woolen or cotton, rubber of all kinds, auto and bicycle tires, rubber inner tubes, tin and lead foil (flat not rolled), typewriter ribbon boxes, metal spoons, thimbles, window-shades, wooden crates and boxes.

Everybody can save something and every little helps. Bring or send it to the sorting-room at 306 West Front street, or when you have saved up a quantity and cannot deliver it telephone 1874 and it will be collected. Don't think of it as going to the Red Cross shop but as going in the shape of some comfort to "our boys over there."

The sorting-room will be open on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this coming week.

More Sugar Is Allowed

Ernest R. Ackerman, Food Administrator for Union County, announces that with the concurrence of W. S. Tyler, State Food Administrator for New Jersey, and F. V. Stryker, Food Administrator for Somerset County, that beginning today, November 1st, that all matters appertaining to North Plainfield will be handled at the Plainfield office. He has also received a telegram which reads as follows:

"Owing to increased manufacture of beet sugar, increase in cane crop in South, together with patriotic conservation for the past four months, enables us to increase household allowance to 3 pounds per person per month basis. Same ratio to public eating places to take effect Nov. 1st. This makes administration's promise to increase household allowance earliest possible moment, and makes it possible for householders to more freely use apple, cranberries and grapefruit."

NOTICE

to Delinquent Taxpayers: "Taxes will be advertised November 4, 8, 11, 15, 18, 22, 25, 29, and December 2, 1918, and sold December 3, 1918, at 2 p. m.

...ys at ...p Dix Cast Their Ballots

Jersey soldiers at Camp Dix were given the opportunity of voting in the coming general election, and commissioners sent down there under the direction of the Secretary of State conducted the balloting, which was finished Wednesday.

The polls opened Monday with the Ninth, Fifth, Fourth and Sixteenth battalions voting in Y. M. Hut No. 3; the Eighth, Tenth and Eighteenth battalions and the 413th Reserve Labor battalion in Y. M. Hut No. 7, and the men in the lower end of camp at K. of C. building No. 4. The First, Second, Third and Sixth battalions voted at the main K. of C. building, and the last votes were cast by the members of the Twelfth and Seventeenth battalions, the camp headquarters company and the depot brigade headquarters company.

Tuesday night in the main K. of C. building musicians from the colored troops, who have organized a troupe known as the Camp Dix Jazzers, presented an entertainment under the direction of Leopold Lane, Y. M. dramatic director, and Shelby J. Davidson, secretary of Y. M. Hut No. 7.

Three new battalions are in process of formation at the camp. Development troops to be transferred to Dix from ports of embarkation will be formed in the Sixteenth battalion, while the Seventeenth will be known as a receiving battalion. The Eighteenth will be formed from men transferred from other depot brigade units.

The changing of the clocks, which means that darkness comes an hour earlier, has resulted in a new order for visiting hours at Dix and hereafter visitors will be allowed on the reservation only between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., except when the camp is closed to all visitors for military reasons. At 4:30 p. m. daily the fire siren will sound three long blasts as a notice to visitors that they have thirty minutes in which to leave the reservation. At 5 p. m. daily the fire siren will blow one long blast, informing everybody that the camp is closed to visitors.

In the area north of the Wrightstown-Lewistown road the camp visitors will confine themselves to the public highways and the road leading to the station. Visitors may inspect the trench zone, but loitering there or in the wooded areas is forbidden.

Girl clerks and stenographers are replacing men in the camp quartermaster's department. They are under civil service and already ten have been assigned to duty in the administration, finance and transportation offices. A total of twenty-four will be selected.

Chaplain Matthew J. Toohey, of Hoboken, who has been stationed at Dix in the depot brigade, has received his overseas order. Before receiving his commission Father Toohey was a curate at St. John's Roman Catholic church, Jersey City.

Second Lieutenant Norman R. Wynne, of Weehawken, has been relieved of duty at Dix and assigned to Camp McClellan, Ala., where he will assist in trade test work.

With the lifting of the quarantine, which has been in effect at Camp Dix since September 22, comes the announcement from camp headquarters that standard form of pass has been adopted. The new passes will be placed in the hands of the company commander and a record will be kept of all given out, showing the date of issue, date soldier is to return and the place to be visited.

Military police at the Camp Dix and Trenton stations will inspect all passes, and if a soldier does not hold a proper pass he will not be permitted to purchase a ticket or board a train. Jitney drivers, operating either in or out of camp, will also be instructed not to carry soldiers without passes. Frequent check will be made on the drivers and when it is found they are violating the new regulations the license to operate in camp will be revoked.

Orders will also be given to the military police not to allow the soldiers on pass to loiter on the streets in nearby towns after the hour for taps in camp.

Two Firms Enter Suit Against the Standard

Two suits have been filed in the Circuit Court clerk's office at the Elizabeth courthouse against the Standard Aircraft Company, of Plainfield, and Bayway. The first suit is by the Laing Auto Machine Company, of Plainfield, which seeks to recover $930.72 for labor and services rendered up to July 30 of this year, and which it alleges it has been unable to collect. The claims specified in the papers include the care of a Cadillac car of the company, which had been stored in a garage of the plaintiff concern for several months.

The second action is brought by Irving Kunzman, of this city, as trustee for the Phoenix Printing Company, of Plainfield on a book account. The action claims numerous bills for printing done for the defendant company, from April to July 30, remain unpaid. The amount is $744.20. Among the items of printing is an order for several thousand "Requests for an Interview" blanks. The printing company, as well as the Auto Machine Company, demands payment of the bills with interest.

If the cases are listed for trial they will probably appear on the January calendar.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wilmerding, of Belvidere avenue, has received word that their son, Sergeant Pelham C. Wilmerding, has arrived safely in France. The young man is attached to Company A, 4th Pioneer Infantry.

Local Soldiers Enter Town Held By Enemy Troops

Plainfield soldiers already have made their mark in the war against Germany and were given special mention in Wednesday's dispatches sent out by General Pershing. In his communique, announced by the War Department, Wednesday afternoon, General Pershing states that patrols of the Seventy-eighth division, which is composed of Plainfield boys and others from New Jersey, entered Labelle Joyuese, which they found unoccupied, it having been evacuated by the enemy.

General Pershing also reports that American aviators brought down three enemy planes Tuesday and one observation balloon in front of the first American army. His report follows:

"Section A—On the Verdun front the day was marked by heavy artillery fire on both sides of the Meuse. An enemy counter attack against the Bois de Belleau was repulsed. In the Woevre our detachments successfully raided the enemy's lines and captured prisoners. In spite of poor weather conditions our aviators were again active on the front of the first army and shot down three enemy airplanes and one observation balloon. All our machines returned.

"Section B—Reported 6.25 o'clock evening of October 29, northeast of Grand Pre, patrols of the Seventy-eighth division early in the morning of October 27, entered Labelle Joveuse, which they found unoccupied. It was reported at 10.35 a. m., October 28, increased enemy artillery activity with harassing fire, high explosives and gas, on Banthleville, Cuhel, Breulles and the Bois de Dan nevoux."

Citizens Warned of Perils Lurking In Wake of Influenza

Although the epidemic of influenza is rapidly abating in New Jersey, Dr. J. C. Price, of the State Department of Health, pointed out this week that there is danger of the influenza being followed by outbreaks of other diseases. The epidemic has left a large number of persons with lowered vitality, and hence especially susceptible to contagious and infectious diseases.

The United States Public Health Service, in co-operation with the State Health Department, urges that every effort be made by local communities for popular education in public health measures, and that districts create and establish adequate machinery for enforcing rules and regulations governing public health. Some of the lessons to be learned from the epidemic, coupled with suggestions to local communities, were outlined by Director Price as follows:

"Before the schools, churches, theatres, motion picture houses and other places where people congregate are opened again they should be thoroughly cleansed. Homes also should be cleansed and disinfected by thoroughly airing and flooded by sunlight if possible for days. More rigid disposition of sewage and garbage should be enforced in every community. After sweeping or cleaning, the streets should be sprinkled frequently. The handling of milk should be more carefully watched. Where food is handled the health of the employes should be supervised.

"In many places overcrowding exists. This is due in part to the lack of housing facilities, and in part to the herding together of the foreign element especially. This is not on account of poor wages, as most of these workmen are earning at least $25 a week and the family income often exceeds $200 per month.

"This epidemic has demonstrated the lack of community interest in many places. Only a handful of people in some towns are interested in health problems and willing to grapple with the situation. When an epidemic arises the need of outside assistance is imperative.

"To prevent future outbreaks of this and other diseases, the United States Public Health Service, in co-operation with the State Board of Health, is offering its assistance to those stricken communities to put their health seervice on an efficient basis. In all instances this will be done at the request of and in co-operation with the health authorities of the communities.

"All of these efforts will tend to conserve our man-power and help to build up a strong citizenship. Our women and children must be saved as well as the men. The government stands ready to assist in any movement that will make for stronger and more virile men, women and children'."

Government Warns Against Paying Fees

The public was asked by the War Department, this week, to bring to its attention any instance of persons seeking fees for collecting insurance or allotments of soldiers who have died in the service. Renewed assurance was given that the government will make settlements in such cases without outside intervention, and that beneficiaries who want legal advice may obtain it without charge from selective service district legal advisory boards.

State Department Advises Autoists On Motor Routes

State Highway Engineer W. S. Thompson reminds the motor-traveling public that all motor traffic bound directly from New Brunswick to Trenton or points south should avoid the Lincoln Highway between New Brunswick and Trenton and travel the road from New Brunswick to Hightstown, to Windsor, to Robbinsville, to Mercerville, to Trenton, as this is now, and will be during the winter, the best route for all vehicular traffic.

The State Highway Department now has under construction four miles of the Lincoln Highway, state highway route No. 13, between Kingston and a point south of Franklin Park, and, although the department has endeavored to direct motor travel to the Hightstown route from New Brunswick, many cars travel via the Lincoln Highway and, upon reaching the work now under construction, find it necessary to use a detour which is not in good condition for the lightest vehicles.

The Lincoln Highway between New Brunswick and Princeton will be under construction during the entire season of 1919, as the State Highway Department awarded a contract for four miles in addition to that now under construction and will, when governmental restrictions are removed, contract for the construction of the remaining four miles into New Brunswick. Should the governmental restrictions be removed early in the spring of 1919, there will be a smooth, hard pavement from New Brunswick to Kingston, over what is now a very poor road. Travel from the northern part of the state to Atlantic City will find good pavement from Camden to Bellin on state highway route No. 3 (commonly known as the White Horse pike).

During the coming winter motor traffic from Berlin to Atlantic City should travel from Berlin via Blue Anchor to Hammonton, thence along the White Horse pike to Atlantic City; this for the reason that the State Highway Department is now constructing four mies of concrete pavement from Berlin south on the White Horse pike.

Travel from New York, Newark and points in the northern part of New Jersey to the seashore from Sea Bright to Sea Girt, which, for the past three months, was obliged to detour at Middletown, will, within the next month, be able to travel over the pavement now being constructed by the State Highway Department between Middletown and Red Bank. With the exception of a two-mile stretch between Keyport and Middletown, the completion of the above mentioned pavement will provide hard pavement from Newark to Red Bank, available for travel during the coming winter.

Until further notice, motor vehicle travel from points north of Rahway to points south of Metuchen should go over the road from Rahway to Perth Amboy, thence to Metuchen, New Brunswick and the south, as the construction of pavement by the State Highway Department in the town of Metuchen will not permit traffic to pass over the Lincoln Highway in Metuchen. It is expected the work now under way in Metuchen will be completed in time to permit the use of this pavement during the coming winter, and thus to avoid the detour via Perth Amboy.

The state highway engineer states his office will keep all advised of any changes in the above directions as they may become possible.

The American Dollar's Value in Other Lands

How much is a franc? A ruble? A mark? To be well posted a man should be familiar with the money in circulation in foreign lands, observes the Columbus Dispatch. And if the man is of military age or inclination there is no telling how soon he may be called upon to exchange his perfectly good American dollars for the medium of circulation in France, England, Russia, Germany or other European countries.

Of course values are changing almost daily, as regards the exchange of foreign money for Uncle Sam's dollars, but under ordinary conditions it can be figured that in Germany the mark is worth 23.8 cents in United States money. The German thaler is equal to three marks, and the krone (a gold piece) equals ten marks. In England the sovereign (gold) is worth $4.8665, a pound sterling; the penny equals two of our cents, the crown $121 and the shilling 24 cents.

It is interesting to note that the franc of France (worth 19.3 cents) is also the unit of currency in Belgium and Switzerland, and that it is equal to the peseta of Spain, and lire of Italy, the drachma of Greece, the leu of Roumania, the dinar of Serbia and the bolivar of Venezuela. The Russian ruble, normally, is worth 51.5 cents, the piaster of Turkey 4.4 cents, the Japanese yen 49.8 cents, the Mexican peso (silver) 49.8 cents and the Chinese tael 75 cents to 82 cents. And there's no wonder that "Chinese monee" is tossed about so carelessly for the copper cash (China's monetary unit) is worth a United States dollar when you have 1,750 of them.

AUXILIARY ELECTS OFFICERS.

St. Mary's Auxiliary to the Red Cross, at a meeting Wednesday, elected these officers: Chairman, Mrs. John J. Green, secretary, Miss Mae Birmingham, and treasurer, Mrs. Frank Keenan.

Standard Changes Plan of Work at Its Bayway Plant

As if in answer to the loose-jointed tongue-wagging of the "know it alls," who predict that things will all go to smash at the Standard Aero plants as soon as hostilities cease in Europe, the company has started work on $400,000 worth of new buildings at the Bayway shops, in which hundreds of Plainfielders are employed.

President H. B. Mingle, in a statement made public a few days ago, asserts that still greater facilities are being planned and that instead of retrenching the company is arranging matters to further facilitate the production of air machines. The Bayway plant, however, is hereafter to be given over entirely to final assembly in place of manufacture. The parts of the scout and war plane will be produced in other shops and forwarded to the Bayway place for putting together.

While the new plans are being worked out, Mr. Mingle says, it has been necessary to lay off some of the employes. About 500 have been dismissed during the past three weeks but these are to be rehired when everything is in readiness for the increased assemblying. Mr. Mingle's statement on the company's plans is as follows:

"On account of our ideal location for shipping purposes the Government has requested that we alter our system of production so that airplanes might be turned out at this plant in greater numbers. To meet that requirement we have made arrangements to have sub-contractors build the different parts of the machines, and when these completed parts at received at the Bayway shops the workmen employed at the plant will do the assembly work.

"Our factory was originally constructed for assembly purposes solely, but at the outset of the airplane program of the country we, in conjunction with other plants, adapted ourselves to the system of building the many parts of an irplane. The new system ordered by the Government will no doubt result in a big increase in the number of airplanes which will be turned out in the future by our factory.

"The new system of working will be right in line with the co-ordination ideas of John D. Ryan, who has had charge of the work of reorganizing the aircraft industry. The new plan of building an airplane is exactly similar to the building of an ocean liner. If a shipyard built the hull, the boilers, the engines and the interior fittings of a ship all in the one yard it would probably take twice as long to build the boat as it would under the system of building the hull inthe shipyard, the boilers in the boiler works, the engines at a machine shop and the other fittings at plants built for that purpose.

"In the construction of our airplanes we will adopt the same idea. The airlons will be manufactured at a plant where they will specialize in the building of airlons only. The same method will apply to the wings, the stabilizers, the propellers, the fuselage, the motor and other parts.

"As we have not heretofore made these plans public no doubt some of the men laid off have become disgruntled, but in every case where a man has proved efficient he will be re-hired when the new system gets in working order. Work is being rushed on the plans for the new buildings, on which we will lay out $400,000, and as soon as we get in shape for the new idea airplanes will be assembled as fast as the various completed parts are received at this plant.

"The report that there has been no material received at Bayway within the past three weeks is true, but this failure to receive raw material has been in line withe the adoption of the new system. Naturally we didn't intend to manufacture parts we would not want raw material to be shipped there. All this material has been shipped to our sub-contractors and when they start sending the completed parts we will be ready to handle them and start production on a big scale."

At the Plainfield shops, which are controlled under a separate organization from the Standard's Bayway plant, operations will go on as before. The buildings are equipped for assemblying and also for manufacturing but only the latter is being done at present. The present force is very busy and new employes are being taken on in several of the departments.

Red Cross Further Explains Rules For Christmas Presents

Hundreds of persons who misunderstood the regulations concerning the mailing of Christmas packages to soldiers overseas have been calling daily at Red Cross headquarters inquiring about the Christmas labels distributed to the men in the Expeditionary Forces.

In order to make the situation clear to everyone(the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross yesterday issued a statement setting forth that the Red Cross has no part in the issuance of these labels.

The War Department has arranged the system for distriouting the labels. They are supplied to the soldiers in France and in no other way. Company commanders give them to the men. The soldiers are ordered to address them to the one person in this country from who mthey wish to receive gifts.

In no other way is it possible to get labels. Contrary to the seemingly general idea, the Red Cross has no supply of them and will receive none.

If a person has received no label, but wishes to forward a gift to a man in France, he must find the sole possessor of the label sent to this country by that man. It is possible that the local chapter can aid in the search, if the label was sent to a person in this city, but in no other way can the organization be of assistance.

The local chapter's responsibility begins when the label is brought to its office. Then it will give out a carton. After the carton has been filled and returned, it will inspect the container and see that it is wrapped correctly. The organization will then forward the package to the transportation point for shipment overseas, the sender paying the postage.

The Red Cross has announced that it is following War Department and Postoffice regulations in handling the Christmas packages. The rules must be obeyed to the letter. No infringement, however trivial, can be permitted, and infringement of the rules will probably lead to the sacrifice of the parcel itself.

The Red Cross also announces that it has no jurisdiction concerning packages for the Navy Department. These packages are not to be inspected by the Red Cross. All express parcels for the navy should be addressed to the Supply Base, Twenty-ninth street and Third avenue, South Brooklyn, N. Y.

Cheese Sandwiches May Be Luxury Soon

Cheese sandwiches made of American cheese, long a mainstay at lunch parties, outings and smokers, will be greatly curtailed if not eliminated entirely by the new food administration ruling recently promulgated for hotels and restaurants. This announcement was made yesterday by the State food administration, following instructions from Washington.

Under the new food orders as applied to hotels and restaurants, which went into effect Monday, the administration queried Washington as to the ruling on cheese. The reply was "that not more than one-half ounce of American cheese may be served per person per meal in any form of sandwich. If the sandwich is made with only one-half an ounce of cheese, which is less than the accustomed amount, only one sandwich per person may be served. Therefore, the effect of this rule is to practically prohibit American cheese sandwiches."

A supplemental ruling from Washington, however, says that Swiss cheese is not prohibited, although manufactured in America, and that Swiss cheese sandwiches may be served without hindrance. The one drawback to Swiss cheese is that the price is exceptionally high, and is likely to go still higher in view of the new restriction on American cheese.

Although there is a limt to the number of cheese sandwiches which may be served in hotels and restaurants there is no limit to the number of sandwiches other than cheese which may be served, according to Howard Hulick, secretary of the hotel and restaurant division of the food administration.

Baird Answered By Suffrage Head

Replying to a statement sent out last week by Senator Baird in an effort to explain his vote on the Federal Suffrage Amendment, Mrs. E. F. Reckert, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, said this week: "Senator Baird takes a strange position when he defends his vote by saying that he voted with twenty-three Democratic Senators. Why a Republican who cast his first vote in 1860, presumably for Abraham Lincoln as a member of a party formed to fight the policy of states rights as opposed to the right of the Nation as a whole, and to free the negro, should now align himself with a group of southern men who avowedly oppose giving the women of the Nation the same freedom as the negro men were given by the Republican Party half a century ago, because they do not wish negro women to vote, is hard to understand.

"Abraham Lincoln was an advocate of woman suffrage sixty years ago and his party has stood strongly for it in both State and Nation. The National Republican Committee endorsed the Federal Woman Suffrage Amendment in June, 1918, and the Republican Party of New Jersey put a plank for the amendment in its platform this month. Senator Baird tried to avoid standing on this plank in the platform on which he is running by claiming that it only binds representatives of the party, not bound by pri-primary pledges. Of course, we do not know what secret pledges Senator Baird may have given against woman suffrage previous to the Republican primaries, September 24th, but he, himself, claimed right up to that time that he had an open mind on the subject. The leaders of the Republican party in New Jersey, Governor Edge and Senator Frelinghuysen, are not afraid to stand by the suffrage plank. In a statement made last week, the Governor said that he believed that the woman movement has the sympathy of the great majority of the voters of New Jersey.

"Senator Baird also tried to justify his course by pointing out that nine other Republicans voted as he did. He fails to add, however, that he was the only man in the Senate bound by a specific promise to vote for the amendment. He was appointed by the Governor with the specific understanding that he would support all of President Wilson's war measures. Only the day before, Senator Baird cast his vote against the amendment, the President of the United States appeared before the Senate and stated in no uncertain words his belief that woman suffrage was an exceedingly important war measure. Senator Baird refers to this sarcastically in his statement, saying that the President must have known that Bulgaria, Germany, and Austria were already to collapse and therefore the Woman Suffrage Amendment was not a necessary war measure. The leaders of both of the great parties as well as the far-sighted men of England and Canada (both of whom have given their women full suffrage during the past year) understand as a man of Senator Baird's type does not, that other things besides bayonets, big guns, and submarines are necessary to bring this war to a successful conclusion and to reconstruct the affairs of the world afterwards in such a way that there may never be a recurrence of this world-devastating war. These men are glad to acknowledge the part which women have taken in the war and are anxious to give them a voice in the problems which will come to us all after the war.

"The women of New Jersey appeal to Republican voters of the State to vote against David Baird for the short term in the United States Senate. This term will expire March 4, and it is not likely that any problems of world-wide importance will come up in the United States Senate before then except the Federal Woman Suffrage Amendment. Send a man to Washington who will vote right on this question they ask the voters."

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Rev. Father P. J. Clune, who has been appointed rector of St. Joseph's church to succeed Rev. Father P. J. Hart, will assume charge of the parish next week. He will celebrate his first masses in St. Joseph's on Sunday morning, November 10. Father Clune will come to North Plainfield from Merchantsville, where he has been located for the past fifteen years. Rev. Father Hart, the former rector of St. Joseph's, is now in charge of the Church of the Sacred Heart at Trenton.

Charles Whitehall, who did notable work for the Y. M. C. A. on the French and Palestine fronts for four years; Rabbi Solomon Foster, of Newark, and former Assemblyman John C. Matthews, of Essex county, prominent in K. of C. circles, will be the principal speakers at the mass meeting in the Plainfield High School on uesday night next, to officially open the united War Work Campaign, although the drive itself does not commence until Monday, November 11. A. M. Harris is to be in charge of the meeting and Rabbi Foster will be honorary chairman. J. Herbert Case has been made general chairman for the campaign and C. W. McCutchen is chairman of the executive committee.

Beyond the first word received from the Government this week, Mr. and Mrs. George Kienzel, of 278 Netherwood avenue, have been given no further information by the government regarding their son, Private Arthur Kienzle, listed as "missing in action." Private Kienzle went overseas as a member of Company A, 311th Infantry, which has been taking part in the big drive of the American forces near the Metz salient. It is possible that he may have been separated from his command and again it is not improbable that he was taken prisoner. Before entering the service Private Kienzle was employed at the local plant of the Standard Aero Corporation.

Protesting that the court's decision was unjust, F. G. Crawford, of Myrtle avenue, paid a five-dollar fine after his arraignment before Recorder Fred Hand, of the borough, Tuesday morning, on a charge of recklessly driving an automobile. Crawford's machine rounded the corner at Craig place and Somerset street a few nights ago and crashed into a Somerset street car. The latter had to be hacked up before the ramming automobile could be released. Crawford was badly shaken up by the collision but otherwise escaped unhurt. His auto, however, will spend some time in a garage hospital befort it is again ready for use.

Beginning this week, the West End Auxiliary to the Red Cross will meet Wednesday afternoons, instead of Thursdays. The organization meets in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and is doing a splendid work. Its officers, selected recently, are the following: Chairman, Mrs. J. A. Babcock; vice chairman, Mrs. William Scott; treasurer, Mrs. Gates Willard; auditor and secretary, Mrs. C. E. Bordon; chairman of sewing committee, Mrs. J. I. Lyle; chairman of the knitting department, Mrs. Gates Willard.

Three members of the city fire department were several days in recovering from the effects of gas inhaled while they were fighting the fire in the cellar of the Gayle Hardware Company's place at Park avenue and Front street, shortly before noon Saturday. The heat of the flames burned off the gas pipes, thereby turning loose quantities of gas that did not ignite. Captain James Fitzpatrick, of headquarters, managed to keep his feet Saturday but Sunday was compelled to take to his bed. Firemen William Jaeger and William Reinman, also of headquarters, inhaled copious quantities of gas and frequently during the fight against the blaze nearly succumbed. They became very ill Saturday night and were in bed during the forepart of the evening. The fire was confined to the cellar of the building but caused $1,000 damage to stock and $500 to the structure. While the cause has not been made known it is believed it may have started through the head of a match flying off when one of the employes lighted a gas jet not far fram a quantity of oil and inflammable material. It is possible that the slight flame was unnoticed until it had gained considerable headway. The fire was one of the hardest the city department has had to contend with in many months and the fact that no greater damage was done has been the cause of much favorable commendation of the work accomplished by Chief Jennings and his men.

Members of the North Plainfield Home Defense League resumed their weekly drills last night, and at a business session discussed plans for a succession of events during the remainder of the fall and the coming winter. On Monday night last the League took part in the exercises accompanying the raising of a Liberty Loan honor flag at Borough Headquarters.

Professor Edward Marks has completed all arrangements for a masquerade and civic ball to be held in Columbus Hall next Friday night, for the benefit of the soldiers and sailors' smoke fund. Mr. Marks' orchestra will furnish music. As this is one of the first soldiers' affairs to be held after the lifting of the Board of Health influenza ban and the proceeds are for a very worthy cause, a capacity gathering is expected.

Patrons of the Plainfield Trust Company have been much elated to learn that Henry M. Cleaver, general manager of the Pond Machine Tool Works, has been made a director of this concern. He is a man of recognized ability and competent to carry on the good work of his predecessor on the board, the late Isaac W. Rushmore. Associated with Mr. Cleaver in the directorate of the Plainfield Trust Company are Messrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Frederick Geller, Arthur M. Harris, Augustus V. Heely, DeWitt Hubbell, James W. Jackson, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Charles W. McCutchen, Harry H. Pond, Charles A. Reed, Samuel Townsend, Cornelius B. Tyler, Lewis E. Waring and Orville T. Waring.

Oliver A. Ree, of 921 South avenue; Louis A. Hummer, of 147 Somerset street, and John E. Watson, of West Fifth street, are the organizers of the Oliver A. Reed Company, of this city, which filed articles of incorporation this week with the county clerk. The concern is to carry on a general business in automobiles, selling and repairing, and also to engage in auto trucking. The capital stock is fixed at $25,000, divided into 5,000 shares of five dollars each. The general office will be at 921 South avenue.

Judge Carlton B. Pierce has designated November 14 as the date for hearin gthe trial of Tony Circello, charged by Prosecutor Hetfield with atrocious assault with intent to kill on Matio Caparillo, in this city, on September 18 last. Circello waived the reading of the indictment against him when arraigned in court to plead last Monday and was released in $2,000 bail Caparillo, several years ago, was tried in the Union County Court for the killing of Thomas Dears, a local colored man, but his plea of self defense was upheld by the jury when it brought in a verdict of not guilty.) In the present affair, Circello stabbed Caparillo after an argument and the latter was in Muhlenberg Hospital hovering between life and death for several weeks. He eventually recovered.

Lieutenant Higgins and Patrolman Flatley broke up a party at the home of John Murphy, of 539 South Second street, Sunday night, and bagged a small army of colored men whom they took to headquarters on a disorderly conduct charge. Beside Murphy, the prisoners gave their names as Harry White, Walter Carr, John Jackson, Charles Jefferson, Fachel Tunstead, Charles Maden, John Chandler, James McPherson, and Samuel Liles. Judge DeMeza harkened to their pleas for clemency and placed suspended sentences of $20 fine or sixty days in jail over all with the exception of Murphy. In his case the ante was raised to $100 and sixty days with emphasis on the "and."

The local Draft Board this week announced the following inductions to fill vacancies and quotas sent away the preceding week: William Jeffrey, to Montgomery, Ala., to where he will join the ground aviation school; Nick Delnero, to Fort Howard, and Mike Merrill, to Fort du Pont.

The Hartridge School, closed because of the Board of Health's order to curb the spread of influenza, reopened Tuesday morning. In order to make up the time lost through the enforced "vacation," the pupils will have no holiday tomorrow and will also have to return to study on Friday, November 29, the day after Thanksgiving. After that other holidays will be given up until the number of days out are offset.

Andrew B. Compton, of 257 East Third street, had the unpleasant experience of being chucked through a windshield when the front axle on an automobile he was driving broke suddenly as he was passing through New Market, Sunday night. Beside having his equilibrium upset, Compton sustained enough cuts and bruises to land him at Muhlenberg Hospital. He went to his home after the injuries were dressed.

The old combination of a lighted match carelessly thrown and an obliging box of rubbish, resulted in the slumbers of the city firemen being rudely disturbed at 12:30 last Sunday morning. The match in the rubbish started a big smoke in front of Zeckendorf's toy shop on West Front street and a belated citizen, who saw visions of a terrible conflagration, sent in an alarm. One of the firemen kicked the fire out and he and his colleagues expressed the wish that they could do the same thing to the guy who pulled them out of their humble flea bags.

AIRCRAFT REPORT MAY BE GIVEN OUT PUBLICLY.

Attorney General Gregory, Wednesday stated that the Hughes report on the aircraft investigation had been completed and filed with him. Mr. Gregory declined to go into any details concerning the report. When asked whether it would be made public before the Congressional election of November 5, the attorney general said he thought it probably would be made public within a few days. Mr. Gregory said that the report has not yet been placed in the hands of President Wilson.

Are you for Nugent, Baird & Co. —or President Wilson?

There are just two parties in New Jersey. The first consists of the reactionists in the Republican and Democratic Parties, led by Nugent and Baird, who defeated President Wilson once and who are fighting his policies today.

The second party consists of intelligent, fair-minded men and women who believe in President Wilson, Victory, and an honest, democratic solution of the problems of economic reconstruction we shall face after the war.

I belong to the second party.

My Democratic and Republican opponents are supported by Nugent and Baird.

If elected to Congress, I pledge my support to President Wilson, to National Woman's Suffrage, to control of coal production and prices, to control of railroads and all public utilities, to legislation which will insure prosperity to farmers and good living to working men.

Where do my opponents stand on these questions?

News of the Theatre

Fred Bowers' New Show Full of Good Music and Comedy

Theatregoers nowadays want amusement of the lighter vein; they do not want to be serious and with this idea in mind, Victor Gabery wrote, "I'm So Happy," the new musical play that Frederick V. Bowers is starring in this season and which comes to the Plainfield Theatre next Monday afternoon and night. The farce that so well fits Mr. Bowers' ability as a light singing comedian, tells the story of a young married man who has just finished reading Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes adventures, and believing that he has the unusual powers of deduction, starts out to hunt down crime and criminals.

The scenes are laid in New York city on a lightless and foggy night. Arthur Fairfax, whom Mr. Bowers portrays, is strolling through Central Park looking for adventure when he bumps into an unescorted young lady who very cleverly extracts the would-be detective's card case from his pocket and informs him that she has lost her way in the dark and coyly asks to be escorted to the Winter Garden where she has an engagement.

The gay young actress sets the cogs of activity going when she puts in her appearance the next day at the married young man's residence and where he is forced to introduce her to his mother-in-law as his niece who has just arrived in the city on a visit. Everything goes along smoothly and merrily until his wife's unexpected arrival with the real niece. Up to this time young Arthur Fairfax has been a very nice quiet homelike husband, but being determined not to get caught telling a lie, he starts to lie out of it,—well, he has a deuce of a time straightening matters. It looks as though he is going to get caught every second but at the psychological moment he springs another lie that only gets him deeper into trouble.

Music plays no small part in the entertainment as there are fifteen big numbers interspersed throughout the three acts.

"Step Lively Girls" Certain to Please Plainfield Patrons

"Step Lively Girls," with a show practically new in every detail, will come to the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, matinee and night.

A two-act farcietta called "The Ladies Hotel," has been provided and is said to contain an abundance of those features that constitute a rattling good entertainment of this kind. Witty dialogue and exceedingly funny scenes and situations are said to have been abundantly supplied and these are punctuated at frequent intervals with lively musical numbers and vaudeville specialties that keep the performance moving rapidly from beginning to end. Several of last season's principals have been retained in the cast, among them Rich McAllister, Harry T. Shannon and Dotson, "The Midnite Stepper." The new members of the company include Jack Mundy, Anna Propp and Margie Wilson, and they are said to have succeeded in rounding out an organization of uncommon skill.

Messrs. McAllister, Shannond and Dotson have introduced much new material in their specialties, and the new extravaganza is said to give them greater opportunities than they had last season.

A large chorus of pretty, vivacious girls has been assembled and there is said to be prodigal display of beautiful scenery and costumes.

Plainfield Theatre Re-opens Tomorrow

The Plainfield Theatre will open its doors tomorrow afternoon, after more than four weeks' close-down because of the influenza epidemic. To mark the resumption of amusement activities at the Second street playhouse Manager Shannon has secured a most promising combination bill of vaudeville and pictures.

The principal feature of this program will be the five-reel farce comedy film, "Nearly Married," with Miss Madge Kennedy in the leading role. The play is from the pen of Edgar Selwyn and has been produced by Goldywn. A company of selected players gives faultless support to Miss Kennedy and the entire piece teems with comedy and action.

The vaudeville numbers are all high class, coming here direct from Broadway houses, where they were kept during the grip epidemic. One of the best offerings on the bill is that presented by Bertie Heron, a minstrel comedienne, and a new girl partner. Miss Heron has been seen here before and is a big favorite.

The theatre will offer Fred Bowers' musical comedy, "I'm So Happy," next Monday night; the "Step Lively Girls" on Tuesday, and after that for the remainder of the week vaudeville and pictures.

EXCHANGES PROPERTY.

F. C. Jennings, owner of the residential property at 6 Rockview avenue, the borough, has exchanged the premises for lots in the Bronx owned by William P. Corbett. Mr. Corbett has been occupying the former place, which was also the home of his father, the late Otis Corbett. It is one of the most attractive residential properties in that section of the borough and includes the wooded tract popularly known for many years as "Lover's Dell."

FATHER CAMPBELL OUT AGAIN.

Rev. Father Thomas Campbell, of St. Joseph's church, who has been ill for more than a week with influenza, is now able to be out again, although still feeling the effects of his enforced confinement to his room. He celebrated masses for the first since his illness this morning, and will again officiate next Sunday morning.

W. J. MOORE AT HOSPITAL.

William J. Moore, of 827 West Sixth street, who was ill for several days with influenza, developed double pneumonia on Tuesday and was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment. Mrs. Moore is suffering frm influenza, having contracted the malady from her husband. Mr. Moore is employed as mechanical engineer at the Singer shop in Elizabeth.

POLITICAL WEATHER-VANE POINTING REPUBLICANWARD.

The row stirred up by President Wilson has barely affected the political atmosphere in Plainfield, and as a result the closing hours of the present campaign finds no material change from that of the period previous to the recent Liberty Loan drive. As a matter of fact, it has been one of the most apathetic pre-election seasons in recent years. The leaders seem to be the only one deeply concerned as despite the importance of the best qualified men entering national office the people themselves have exhibited little or no interest in Tuesday's outcome.

In Plainfield as before, Ernest R. Ackerman is quite easily the favorite at this time in the Congressional race for the long term. He has refrained from campaigning because of war work activities, but because of his being a townsman and a former State official of recognized ability it has required neither platform speeches or printed matter to advocate his candidacy. Richard E. Clement, of Elizabeth, who made a splendid showing in the Democratic primaries, has also been quiescent in the county to a certain extent but in Elizabeth his stock has been rising. In other parts of the district, his status is an uncertain quantity at this time. The third congressional candidate, W. H. Clarke, of Mountain Lakes, bearing the standard of the National Party, has flooded the district with literature in his efforts to bring voters to his way of thinking. While he has advanced considerable argument worthy of second thought, it appears as though he had tried to cover "too much territory" and his rhetoric is falling short of the desired effect.

The Senatorial proposition is also sub-rosa. Governor Edge, by reason of his executive position, naturally has the advantage over his opponent, George M. LaMonte. Despite the adversed criticism aroused by his leaving the Governship or using it as a "stepping stone," as Mr. LaMonte puts it, to rise to a higher office, it is quite probable that the Governor will carry the city. Mr. LaMonte has made no especial attempt to meet the Plainfield voters direct and events have always shown that the man best known by reputation, irrespective of his particular platform, gets the majority of the ballots. It is generally conceded that Mr. Edge will be the successful senatorial candidate for the long term and that David Baird will return to his present senatorial seat for the short term despite the frantic appeal of Charles O'Connor Hennessey that is backed up by the suffragettes.

In our deeper interest in the long term Congressional election and our own candidate, Ernest R. Ackerman, we should not lose sight altogether that the Republicans have to elect William F. Birch, of Dover, for the short term to fill a vacancy. Mr. Birch has had wide experience in handling large business affairs and it is highly creditable to him that he is willing to make the sacrifice in going to Washington for so short a stay. It is of vast importance in view of all recent events that there shall be no break in the Republican representation from the Fifth District. No one knows in advance how important these next few months may be to the country and to the Republican party.

The Republican county Assembly ticket is undeniably another favorite. The candidates have all held office for several years and their Democratic opponents come into the field practically unknown, especially at this end of the county. James J. McCann, Democratic candidate for county registrar of deeds, will undoubtedly be given a large friendly vote but not sufficient to defeat Edward L. Bauer, the present incumbent, who is the Republican nominee, and who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Frank H. Smith.

Taken all in all, indications point to Republican victory despite the plea of President Wilson for the election of Democratic candiates.

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

At the polls next Tuesday, Mayor Leighton Calkinds will be given the sanction by the voters to insure his return to the office he has held for nearly four years. It will be almost a unanimous vote as the feeling since the primaries has been that inasmuch as he received such a splendid endorsement from the Republican party, he is entitled to full acclaim, not only as an endorsement for what he has done but to demonstrate renewed confidence on the part of the people.

The coming two years will be trying ones in Plainfield as the reorganization process goes on after the war. It will require a man in the mayoralty chair who understands local conditions thoroughly, who appreciates the needs of the community and can carry out projects of his own making. Leighton Calkins meets all the requirements and the vote of confidence will be his on Tuesday next.

"RUSHED TO DEATH"

is the slogan of the day. Everyone is busy. Almost everyone is too busy. Personal interests have been set aside by the many men and women who, in unselfish devotion, are laying time, strength and money on the altar of service.

But there is one personal obligation that should not be neglected, no matter how busy one may be, and that is the making of a will. The future safety of your family depends upon it. The safety of your estate depends upon your naming a competent executor.

This Company has demonstrated its ability to efficiently settle estates. Our officers will be glad to confer with you in regard to this vital matter.

UNEXCELLED BANKING AND TRUST SERVICE

"SUFS" ON THE WAR-PATH.

The political Squaws are putting on their war-paint and are going on the war-path after the political scalp of Senator Baird on account of his refusal to vote for the Federal Woman's Suffrage Amendment. It is contended by them that it was a war measure, hence this war-like opening paragraph. If the President had asked for a law creating a "Battalion of Death" that would have been an undesputed war measure. But changing the constitution, an irrevocable act, seemed to thirty-one Senators, including twenty Democrats, that is was instead of a war-measure, a peace measure. Senator Baird's platform distinctly states that he is not opposed to Woman Suffrage but only to the method. He still holds the Wilsonian theory of 1917 that it is a matter for the States to settle for themselves. Senator Baird's vote does not prevent the women of New Jersey from having the suffrage by a change in the State's constitution in 1920. A non-partisan method which would accomplish the result they supposedly desire, provided the sentiment of the voters has changed since 1915, when it was rejected by 50,000 majority. If there is not this changed sentiment why should it be forced on the State by a Federad amendment?

SETTING THE STAGE FOR TUESDAY'S TOUCH-DOWN.

Why not make it unanimous for Mayor Calkins? So little has been heard from the other man that only the City Clerk, who had to put his name on the ballot, knows he is running.

Giving the matter the twice over, it 'pears like as though Mr. Wilson wanted to interne the G. O. P. standard-bearers for the remainder of the war.

For a while it seemed as though the present campaign would go to pieces with dry rot but thanks to the suffragettes getting after Mr. Baird and the President giving Mr. Roosevelt a chance to get back in the limelight, there might be enough enthusiasm stirred up to bring out at least half a normal vote.

Quarantines may come and quarantines may go but the 'phone girls' "necessary" query may go on forever.

Pity poor North Plainfield: No theatre, no movie houses, no postoffice, no railroad station and now some of the trans-brookians want the rest to amble over to Plainfield for their morning's "morning."

Wuxtry! Wuxtry! Wuxtry! The Chicago World's Fair closed twenty-five years ago and the Courier-News has just heard of it. For further information, see Wednesday night's issue of that paper, eighth page, last item in the seventh column.

If the Yankee soldiers keep on bringing in German prisoners, General Pershing will have to play copy-cat on a certain corporation and ask of his men as they come along with a new bunch: "Is this a necessary batch?"

They say the Kaiser really did abdicate recently, but that the ruling classes wouldn't stand for it. But the Kaiser will abdicate and the ruling classes will quit ruling.

Maybe if the redoubtable Teddy would recollect he's an ex, and courtplaster his talk, like Taft does, it'd help some in the present peace atmosphere.

Says the New York Telephone Company in an ad for operators: "The American telephone operator is giving vitally essential service to the American people both over there and at home. She is the 'Soldier at the Switchboard' whether she wears the overseas service uniform or the ordinary clothing of the capable young business woman at home. Switchboard soldiers are not needed for overseas duty just now, but they are needed in local offices. If you are between 16 and 23 and wish to serve the Nation in a vitally essential way, while having good working hours and good pay, lunches at lost, the use of cosy sitting rooms and other pleasant conveniences, apply to Chief Operator at the local office."

Listens so good, don't see how any patriotic young women could resist. And don't forget also although it doesn't say so in the ad, that after the "Switchboard Soldiers" have helped the company roll up another $125,000,000 surplus they may get most as much as $9.25 a week.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When everybody in town knew when there was a fire?

When a man was considered a cheap skate if he entered a restaurant and ordered pork chops?

When it took a young doctor five years to build up a practice and he began by serving as a lodge physician?

When betting ran high on who would be elected councilman from the Fourth ward and all kinds of money was flashed on the front porch of the city hotel?

When coal dealers solicited your custom and didn't begrudge keeping your name on the credit book for six months or more?

When "Billy" Dean kept what is now Taylor's Hotel at Dunellen and most of his trade was supplied by the Plainfield youths who drove up in a livery rig?

When "Tom" McInerney and "Johnnie" King were promised fifty cents for trimming trees on a Liberty street property and after they had toiled and sweated a whole day the man who made the promise refused payment on the ground that he had never said any such thing, and anyhow the boys should have done it for nothing because of the benefit derived by the community at large?

George York Plans Local Garrison of Army and Navy Union

Sergeant at Arms George York, of the Plainfield District Court, who was once a member of the United States Regulary Army and who bears numerous scars as evidence of his soldier activities against the Sioux Indians in the uprisings of twenty-eight years old, has taken steps to organize a Plainfield Garrison of the Army and Navy Union. This organization is now represented in almost every part of the country and is growing rapidly. Unlike the G. A. R., which receives into membership only veterans of the Civil War, it invites the enrolment of United States soldiers or sailors who have been in any war fought by this country or who have been regularly enlisted in the standing army. This includes veterans of the Civil, the Spanish, the Indian uprisings and the present world-war. Each garrison pays sick and death benefits and makes by-laws to regulate itself but is subject to the national organization. The initiation and yearly membership fee are very reasonable.

Mr. York was originally a member of William Barry Garrison, No. 26, of Washington, D. C., joining twenty-eight years ago. Recently he demitted to Major General Harvey Ellicott, Garrison No. 92, of Rahway, which has a big roster of active workers. In his preliminary steps to organize a local garrison, Mr. York has met with a ready response from both Civil and Spanish War veterans and has already enough names on his list to apply for a charter. He will gladly furnish full information to any veteran, either soldier, sailor, marine or ex-service men who would like to join.

Among those who have already signified their intention of joining the Plainfield Garrison are Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, Councilman Theodore A. Martin, Roy Martin, Daniel J. Shea, Dennis O'Keefe, Michael D. O'Keefe, Joseph Dunlap and Charles A. Flynn.

The full text of the aims and objects of the Army and Navy Union is contained in the following circular letter addressed to newspapers in all parts of the United States by the national officers:

"The Army and Navy Union of the United States of America, incorporated in Ohio in 1888, the wearing of whose official badge on all occasions of ceremony in the Army and Navy is authorized by an Act of Congress, recently, at the Nineteenth National Encampment of the National Corps, held at Atlantic City, N. J., unanimously adopted a resolution amending the purpose and objects of the organization as follows, with a view of forming one great semi-military and naval patriotic organization veterans in this county, composed of veterans of the great world war and other veterans, including those now in active service, of the past and present, in order that their strength will not be divided into several different war organizations which is now the custom.

"Purpose. That we fraternally invite our comrades and shipmates the soldiers, sailors and marines, regulars and volunteers, commissioned officers and enlisted persons (men and women), veterans of the great world war, and those now in active service or who have served honorably at any time in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States of America, to join with us in forming one great perpetual patriotic semi-military and naval organization of veterans in this country, for the benefit of veterans of all wars and those now in active service; in order that our strength may be united in one grand body of veterans, and not be divided by several different semi-military war organizations all working along the same lines, as has been the custom in the past and present.

"That to this end we urgently appeal to all comrades and shipmates to get busy and lend us a hand by immediately joining the Army and Navy Union, and help carry out the following great objects to which we are all pledged to support and defend in the interest of all veterans of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

"Object. To promote patriotism, love for God and country, League of Nations to enforce Peace, universal military training not for war, but for police purposes only in this country and among the nations to promote peace, purity, honor, truth, freedom, liberty and humanity in this country and in the whole world of ma...

"To bring together and ... benevolent and social ... under the great Army and ... Union of the United States of America, all persons (men or women) who have served honorably and those in active service in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States, regulars or volunteers, and such members of the United States Coast Guard Service who have served honorably in time of war, as shown by honorable discharge or certificate of honorable service from the War or Navy Department; to provide for our comrades and shipmates when sick or in need; to assist in the burial of our dead; to extend a helping hand to the family or dependents of a deceased comrade or shipmate; to render such aid, pecuniary or otherwise, as may be necessary, for the welfare of any of our members; to foster that social and fraternal intercourse among our comrades and shipmates which forms the true bond of union and keeps alive those undying friendships formed in the service; to stand for and demand soldiers and sailors rights; to secure from Congress and other legislative bodies the enactment of laws beneficial to the welfare of our comrades and shipmates honorably discharged, retired, or in active service, and to secure employment for those who have returned to civil pursuits, in consonance with the laws of the United States which prefer honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines, for government employ, all things being equal.

"Eligibility to Membership. All persons (men or women) who are applicants for membership in the Army and Navy Union must possess an honorable discharge from the army, navy or marine corps of the United States of America, or be at date of application in active service of the same.

"A person who is an applicant from the United States Coast Guard service is eligible for membership if they can show an honorable discharge from a previous enlistment in some branch of the regular or volunteer military or naval service of the United States, or if they have served honorably in the United States Coast Guard service or revenue cutter service of the United States during the war, and have papers to prove the same.

"All persons, men or women, are eligible for membership in the Army and Navy Union, under the above-named conditions."

It is realized that one such great organization of veterans should be organized after the end of the world war, to carry out the above named objects that we and the whole world are now fighting for; and to this end the Army and Navy Union which has the grand nucleus of membership and ground work for such an organization, has started a campaign of advertising in all service papers with a view of getting the veterans and those now in active service (men or women) started to organize before the great world war ends.

At the next national encampment of the Army and Navy Union to be held at Cincinnati, O., September 10 to 13, 1919, delegates from all semi-military patriotic war societies, and from veterans and those in active service of the world war, will be invited to attend and help form and select a new for the proposed great world war veterans' union.

All military and naval ranks and uniform prescribed for the Army and Navy were abolished forever in the Army and Navy Union, by a resolution passed in the convention; and only titles of offices and uniform prescribed for the union will be used, so as not to conflict with rank and uniform of the Army and Navy. Sex barriers were abolished, as many women are now enlisted persons in the Army and Navy.

Veterans and persons in active service, men and women, are invited to organize immediately under the above-named objects or join as a member-at-large, for information and application blank write to Henry W. Lee, Adjutant General, 128 East Price street, Philadelphia, Pa. Get busy! Do it now! Or can apply to George Russell Downs, Past National Commander, 225 Peach street, Erie, Pa.

WALTER J. BENNETT

Walter J. Bennett, aged twenty-nine years, died last night at his home at 324 East Second street. The funeral will be held at the undertaking parlors, at 402 Park avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

IF IT WAS FAIR IN 1898 IT IS FAIR IN 1918

WHAT ROOSEVELT SAID IN 1898

In 1898 Colonel Roosevelt addressed the voters as follows, being a candidate for Governor of New York State at the time:

"Remember, that whether you will or not your votes this year will be viewed by the nations of Europe from one standpoint only. They will draw no fine distinction. A refusal to sustain the President this year will in their eyes be read as a refusal to sustain the war and to sustain the efforts of our peace commission to secure the fruits of war. Such a refusal may not inconceivably bring about a rupture of the peace negotiations. It will give heart to our defeated antagonists; it will make possible the interference of those doubtful neutral nations who in this struggle have wished us ill."

PRESIDENT WILSON'S PLEA

"My fellow countrymen: The Congressional elections are at hand. They occur in the most critical period our country has ever faced or is likely to face in our time. If you have approved my leadership and wish me to continue to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad, I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both the Senate and the House of Repre- and will accept your judgment sentatives. I am your servant without cavil, but my power to administer the great trust assigned me by the constitution would be seriously impaired should your judgment be adverse, and I must frankly tell you so because so many critical issues depend upon your verdict. No scruple of taste must in grim times like these be allowed to stand in the way of speaking the plain truth.

Minority Antis

"The leaders of the minority in the present Congress have unquestionably been pro-war, but they have been anti-administration. At almost every turn since we entered the war, they have sought to take the choice of policy and the conduct of the war out of my hands and put it under the control of instrumentalities of their own choosing. This is no time either for divided counsel or for divided leadership. Unit of command is as necessary now in civil action as it is upon the field of battle. If the control of the House and Senate should be taken away from the party now in power, an opposing majority could assume control of legislation and oblige all action to be taken amidst contest and obstruction.

"The return of a Republican majority to either House or the Congress would, moreover, certainly be interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership. Spokesmen of the Republican party are urging you to elect a Republican Congress in order to back up and support the President, but even if they should in this way impose upon some credulous voters on this side of the water, they would impose on no one of the other side. It is well understood there as well as here that the Republican leaders desire not so much to support the President as to control him. The peoples of the allied countries with whom we are associated against Germany are quite familiar with the significance of elections. They would find it very difficult to believe that the voters of the United States had chosen to support their President by electing to the Congress a majority controlled by those who are not in fact in sympathy with the attitude and action of the Administration.

"I need not tell you, my fellow countrymen, that I am asking your support not for my own sake or for the sake of a political party, but for the sake of the nation itself, in order that its inward unity of purpose may be evident to all the world. In ordinary times I would not feel at liberty to make such an appeal to you. In ordinary times divided counsels can be endured without permanent hurt to the country. But these are not ordinary times. If in these critical days it is your wish to sustain me with undivided minds, I beg you will say so in a way which will not be possible to misunderstand either here at home or among our associates on the other side of the sea. I submit my difficulties and my hopes to you."

FORMER PRESIDENT HARRISON'S APPEAL

Benjamin Harrison, former President, pleading for a Republican Congress to support McKinley, said in 1892:

"If the word goes forth that the people of the United States are standing solidly behind the President the task of the peace commissioners will be easy, but if there is a break in the ranks, if the Democrats score a telling victory, if Democratic Senators, Congressmen and Governors are elected—Spain will see in it a gleam of encouragement. She will take fresh hope and there will be a renewal of hostilities. More war may be necessary to retain what we have already won."

These Men Will Support President Wilson---They Will Back Him in Peace and War

George M. LaMonte

No More Comfort Kits For Soldiers

The Red Cross announced this week that chapters throughout the country had been asked to discontinue direct distribution of knitted articles among soldiers and sailors and that comfort kits would no longer be provided directly by the Red Cross for soldiers. Comfort kits are now barred from the baggage of soldiers because of the limited shipping space.

Edward J. Way Buys East Fifth Street Plot

Edward J. Way, of the Plainfield Auto Tire Company, has purchased from Syman Hirsch, a plot of ground on East Fifth street at the rear of the latter's property on the corner. It measures seventy feet front by fifty-five feet deep and on this Mr. Way will erect a one-story addition to his present Watchung avenue quarters, mank the entire building an L shape.

Permit for the new building has been granted by the War Control Board because of extensive tire setting Mr. Way does on army trucks and automobiles and the contracts will be let within a few days. When the building is completed, the Plainfield Auto Tire Company will have one of the most complete up-to-date automobile supply stores in this city.

THOMAS C. VAIL GOING TO AIKEN, S. C.

Superintendent Thomas C. Vail, of the Spicer plant at South Plainfield, who has been confined to his home on Lee place for several weeks through a severe illness with stomach trouble, has recovered sufficiently to be about a little each day.

Mr. Vail will eave in about ten days for Aiken, S. C., where he will remain for an indefinite period for the benefit of his health.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Herbert Smith, of Division street, who has been ill for the past week, with pneumonia, reached the crisis this morning and at present the outcome of his illness is uncertain.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. William F. Wilson and family wish to thank their friends and relatives, also the Knights of Columbus and Daughters of Isabella for their kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings in the loss of their beloved wife and mother.

How do you know you're a Republican?

The Republican Party was driven from power because it fostered selfish monopoly and opposed all constructive ideas.

Do you want the reactionaries of the Republican Party to decide after-the-war problems of public ownership, control of coal, railroads and water power; and economic questions concerning industry, a fair wage and honest prices of necessities?

Do you want Wilson leadership, or Root, Lodge and Baird leadership?

I am a legal specialist on industrial economics. It has been my business for twelve years to find the right, logical, legal solutions for the very problems this country must solve after the war.

I believe in President Wilson, Victory and orderly reconstruction after the war.

I believe in and will fight for Woman's Suffrage.

I believe that every man is entitled to a wage that means good living and future competence.

I believe that farmers are entitled to a fair profit and ample financial support from the Government.

I believe in controlling all public utilities and granting full initiative to private enterprise.

I believe in Progress, which is neither reactionary nor radical.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT IN NORTH PLAINFIELD

Both sides are confident today relative to the vote in North Plainfield, next Tuesday on the question of abolishing license liquor places. The hotel men have started a vigorous opposition to the antis which they feel will bring them success.

There are two hotels and three wholesale bottling establishments in the borough and should they be closed up it will cost the boroughites $2,470 in license fees.

SITUATION BETTER AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL

The situation at Muhlenberg hospital, where so many influenza patients have been cared for since the epidemic began, was reported today as being very much better. There are now 125 patients at the institution as against a high water mark of 160 during the extreme period of two weeks ago.

Only one death occured at the hospital since yesterday. This was Mrs. Catherin Pomponio, of South Plainfield.

MRS. MARY S. KLINE

Mrs. Mary S. Kline, widow of Peter N. Kline, died last night at her home at 609 Watchung avenue. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

FRANK MEIER.

Following an illness of only four days with influenza and pneumonia, death came Tuesday night to Frank Meier, one of Plainfield's best known young men. The end came at the home of his mother, Mrs. Annie G. Meier, of 211 Washington street, and occasioned a deep shock to his hosts of friends.

The funeral will be held at the late residence this afternoon at 2:30 and will be in charge of Rev. George Hauser, of the German Reformed church. Burial will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Meier was born in this city thirty-three years ago and had always resided here. His mother is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Goeller, whose home was on Plainfield avenue for a long time. After finishing school, Mr. Meier learned the molders' trade and for fifteen years was employed by the Plainfield Brass Foundry on West Front street, holding the foremanship of the foundry at the time of his resignation a month ago. Since then he had been working at the Scott shop.

Mr. Meier was a member of Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and of the Molders' Union. His father, the late William Meier, died many years ago and his surviving relatives beside his mother are four sisters and a brother. They are Mrs. John Taylor, of New Brunswick; Mrs. Frank Dien, of Manning avenue; Mrs. Charles J. Wilson of Mountain avenue; Miss Josephine Meier, residing at the parental home, and William Meier, of Leland avenue.

JOHN HAROLD VARDON.

John Harold Vardon, the two-year-old son of John D. and Minnie I. Vardon, of 84 Somerset street, the borough, died yesterday morning. The funeral will be held at the parents' home this afternoon and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery. Beside his father and mother the child is survived by two sisters and a brother.

THURE G. HELLSTROM.

The funeral of Thure G. Hellstrom, whose death occurred Friday, after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held at Aunyon's undertaking parlors at 402 Park avenue, Sunday afternoon. Rev. N. J. Wassell, pastor of the Swedish Pilgrim church, officiated and only near relatives were in attendance. Burial was in Hillside cemetery. The pallbearers were: Felix Wahlberg, Gustave Anderson, Eris Luthman, Albin Olson, Oscar Wassen and Oscar Christen.

Mr. Hellstrom was born in Sweden in 1882, but had lived in this country since little more than a boy. He came to Plainfield from Newark two years ago. He had been employed for a long time at the Newark offices of an adding machine company, and was to have gone abroad as representative in France when his plans were interrupted by the outbreak of the war. Although his residence here had been of short duration, he had a very wide acquaintance throughout the city.

Beside his widow, Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, proprietress of the private boarding apartments on East Seventh street, Mrs. Hellstrom is survived by his parents, living in Sweden; two brothers and a sister. They are Miss Hester Hellstrom and John and Arthur Hellstrom.

MACK EHRICH.

The funeral of Mack Ehrlich, of Randolph road, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital Sunday night, after an illness of only four days with influenza and pneumonia, was held at Higgins' mortuary chapel on West Fourth street, Tuesday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. B. H. McCoy and burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Ehrlich was thirty-three years old and came here from Brooklyn only five weeks ago to work for the Public Service Corporation as motorman. He removed his family to the Randolph road address just two days before he was taken ill. At the time he was motoring on the Fourth street line for Conductor Alvah Lindabury. Every attempt was made to stay the progress of the malady from the moment it was detected but without avail.

Mr. Ehrlich is survived by his wife and four children. Mrs. Ehrlich has been afflicted with an eye trouble and was to have undergone an operation when her husband's illness interrupted the plans.

LEO TESTON.

Leo Teston, employment agent at the International Motor plant on West Front street, died Sunday morning, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Teston, of Union avenue, Bound Brook, after a brief illness with influenza. The funeral was held in St. Joseph's church, Bound Brook, yesterday morning, and the wealth of floral tributes included beautiful set pieces from the employment and other departments at the local shop. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, Bound Brook.

Mr. Teston was twenty-four years old and previous to becoming associated with the International concern acted as Bound Brook correspondent for a number of newspapers. He was especially well versed in sporting subjects and was prominent in Plainfield as a baseball fan. Beside his parents, he is survived by one sister, Miss Mary Teston and two aunts, Miss Margaret Teston and Mrs. McInnis. Miss Teston, the aunt, is employed in a Plainfield department store and Mrs. McInnis resides in this city.

MISS AGNES E. MORTON.

The funarel of Miss Agnes E. Morton, whose death occurred Sunday night, at her home at 416 West Sixth street, was held Wednesday night, at the residence of her brother, J. W. Morton, 1039 West Seventh street. Rev. George B. Shaw, the former pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, officiated in the presence of near relatives, owing to the maintenance of the Board of Health influenza ban. Interment was made yesterday in the family plot at Vineland.

Miss Morton was born at Port au Prince, Haiti, in 1849, her parents being missionaries in that country at the time. They came to Plainfield a short time later, and Mr. Morton for several months acted as supply pastor at the local Seventh-Day Baptist church. He passed away many years since. Miss Morton was of extensive education and for some years served as teacher in the Plainfield schools. Being of a literary turn of mind, she wrote a number of books, several of them recently.

Beside her brother, Miss Morton is survived by four sisters, the Misses Susie, Minnie, Marguerite and Lillian Morton, of St. Paul, and a nephew, Ellis Ayers, living in Philadelphia.

JOHN SANTONOSTOCO.

John Santonostoco, the twenty-three months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Sanotonostoco, of 615 South Second street, died Sunday afternoon. The funeral was held Tuesday morning and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

CHARLES C. McBRIDE.

The funeral of Charles C. McBride, New Jersey's widely known newspaper editor, who died at his summer home at Ocean Grove, Monday, after on illness of three years with heart trouble, and finally influenza, will be held at his late residence at 118 West Grand street, Elizabeth, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. It is quite probable that a number of Plainfielders will be present as he had many acquaintances in this city. Former United States Senator James E. Martine was one of Mr. McBride's ardent admirers and has planned to travel from Washington to Elizabeth to attend the funeral. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, Elizabeth.

Mr. McBride was born near Pluckemin, Somerset county, and was the son of the late John and Rachel McBride. Following attendance at the public school in his native place, he became a student at the College of the City of New York, from which he was graduated. For several seasons thereafter he taught school in Somerset county. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Elizabeth. The practice of law not appealing to him he soon abandoned it for newspaper work.

It was in 1871 he became associated with the Elizabeth Daily Journal as a reporter. In 1887 he became its editor and continued as such until 1903, when he joined the editorial staff of the Newark News. Mr. McBride was affiliated with the First Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, having been an elder of it of long standing and clerk of the session. He was a member of the Court Childs, I. O. F., of Elizabeth. His widow was Miss Euphemie Florence Macdonald, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Macdonald, of Elizabeth. Besides the widow he leaves a brother, Walter McBride, of Elizabeth, and these sisters: Mrs. William W. Lever, of Montclair; Mrs. Charles Henry, and the Misses Anan and Florence McBride, all of Bound Brook.

MRS. LYDIA EMMONS

The funeral of Mrs. Lydia Emmons, whose death occurred Monday morning, at her home at 29 Stone street, the borough, was held at the late residence, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. church, officiated, and burial was at New Germantown, Hunterdon county.

Mrs. Emmons was eighty-three years old and was born in Hunterdon county. Her husband was the late John Emmons, who died a number of years ago. She had resided in the borough for a long time. She is survived by one son, Frederick Emmons, of the borough, and two daughters, Mrs. Alfred Thorne, of the borough, and Mrs. John Clarke, of this city.

ADDIE R. McKOY.

Addie R. McKoy, the one-year-and-seven-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. McKoy, of 835 Richmond street, died Tuesday night. She funeral was held at the parents' home, yesterday afternoon, and burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

RICHARD R. MUSER.

A number of relatives from this city were in attendance at the funeral of Richard Rene Muser, son-in-law of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Davis, of Park avenue, held Tuesday at the home of his mother, Mrs. Cecilia Muser, of 505 West End avenue, New York city.

Mr. Muser was thirty-three years old, and head of the firm Muser Brothers manufacturers of laces and embroideries. He died Sunday at Gedney Farms, near White Plains, N. Y., after a brief illness with pneumonia. Beside his mother, he is survived by his wife, who was Miss Anna Davis.

ELMER GREEN.

Elmer Green, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Green, of 917 West Third street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday morning. He had been ill only a short time with influenza and pneumonia.

The funeral was held at the parents' home, yesterday afternoon, and was in charge of Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of Heavenly Rest church. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MILDRED MAY KELLY.

The funeral of Mildred Kelly, daughter of Robert A. and Mildred M. Kelly, of Webster place, was held at the parents' home, Monday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. S. D. Townsend, of South Plainfield, and was private in accordance with the Board of Health's orders. Burial was in Hillside cemetery. The child was in her third year.

MRS. JOHN BUSH.

Mrs. Mary Bush, wife of John Bush, of Clinton avenue, Samptown, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday morning, after a brief illness with influenza. The entire family was stricken last week and at the present time the husband and three children are still suffering from the malady. One of the children is in Muhlenberg Hospital in a critical condition.

Because of the illness at home, the body was taken to Casey's mortuary chapel, where the funeral was held yesterday morning and later in St. Joseph's church, the borough, where a requiem mass was offered by Father Baldwin. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

WILLIAM E. TOWNSEND.
(My commission expires June 30, 1923.)

How do you know you're not a Nationalist?

Don't you believe in making it impossible for selfish monopolies to profiteer on necessities?

Don't you believe in controlling such essential industries as coal, railroads and public utilities?

Don't you believe that progress can be achieved without radical destruction?

Don't you believe that an intelligent, logical, right solution of national economic problems is better than a stupid, reactionary compromise between selfish interests and hair-brained, communistic visions?

Don't you believe that Republican and Democratic leaders in New Jersey, who are fighting President Wilson, should be defeated?

Don't you believe that women, who are helping win the war, should have the vote?

Don't you believe that workmen are entitled to good living, and that farmers are entitled to fair profit?

You can't believe in these vital truths and be a sincere Republican or Democrat. If you do believe in them, you are in sympathy with the Progressive National Party.

I stand for President Wilson, Victory and Orderly Progress.

Staving Off Old Age

You can keep your starter from getting rheumatic in its youth—your lamps from getting dim and your spark from losing its kick—by just a little care.

If you're in doubt about just what care is needed, you ought to drive around and ask us. It's our business to know.

There's another thing you ought to ask about—Threaded Rubber Insulation. It's the most important storage battery improvement in years.

Plainfield Storage Battery Co.

333 Park Ave.

We test, repair and recharge storage batteries and always carry a full supply of battery parts, new batteries and rental batteries.

With the Hood Off

in a jiffy we get right to work at repairing your car. Find the bad spot at once and start in to make it right again. Have both the skill and equipment necessary. We are good people to have restore your car's usefulness.

First Complete Description of the St. Mihiel Battle in Which the Gallant 311th Took Part

The most complete and comprehensive account yet given of the Battle of St. Mihiel officially listed as one of the greatest victories of the present American drive in France and in which scores of Plainfield boys participated, is contained in a recent issue of the Stars and Stripes, the soldiers' paper printed almost on the firing line.

It was this "slam" at St. Mihiel which started the Germans back on their great retreat and which yielded thousands of prisoners, millions of dollars' worth of booty and hundreds of square miles of territory. It also had a terribly depressing effect on the morale of the enemy troops, causing a giving away of the line at other points and permitting the victorious Yankees to advance still further after the first onrush.

Piercing the details together as they come in by official message, and soldiers' letters, it seems quite certain that Company A was the only one of the 311th infantry to take part in the beginning of the fighting on September 12. One reason for this supposition is that nearly all the Plainfielders wounded recently were in Company A. They include John W. VanNest, Jr., Edward Bornman, Elmore George Kane, Frank Burke, Jr., Michael Waldrop and Rudolph Wardrup. George Ball, of Linden avenue, who was killed, was a Company A man and so was Stanley Bellows, of Westfield, formerly of this city, who was among the severely hurt.

The greater part of the Plainfield boys who went to Camp Dix in the fall of 1917 were placed in Company A. It was headed by Captain L. R. Breen, of Watertown, N. Y., who was in command when the unit went overseas last summer. Many other Plainfielders and North Plainfielders were in Company G, 311th, which so far as reported, has very few casualties. While it is undoubtedly true that all of the units of the 311th were in the push at some time or other, it is possible that they took part in the rush after Company A and other divisions had delivered the first heavy blows.

At any rate, St. Mihiel will be told of many times in Plainfield in days to come and this is how the Stars and Stripes' clever reporter tells of it now:

The First American Army, commanded in the field by General John J. Pershing, struck its first blow last week.

It was a blow sudden, swift and beyond all shadow of doubt successful.

Supported by French Colonials, that Army closed like a giant pair of pincers on the old, heavily entrenched salient which the Germans had held ever since they dug themselves in after their failure at the first Battle of the Marne—closed in and in less than two days obliterated that salient from the fast-changing German war map.

The Germans immediately announced that they never had wanted the old salient anyway, that they had always had half a mind to evacuate it, that they knew the blow was coming and that they had craftily withdrawn just in time. But by way of comment on these protestations, the grinning doughboy can—and does—point to pens packed with more than 15,000 prisoners of all ranks and conditions, mor ethan 200 captured guns, hundreds upon hundreds of machine guns, a king's ransom in captured material, millions upon millions of dollars' worth of locomotives, railway supplies, shells, clothing, food and rifles, to say nothing of the great stores that were burned in the precipitate German retreat.

Apparently history will show that they meant to withdraw from part of the salient and were caught in the act.

If this was a withdrawal "according to plan," something must have gone slightly amiss with the plan.

The St. Mihiel salient was an ungainly snout projecting from the German line, an area of some 150 square miles, almost half the size of the Chateau-Thierry salient. The Germans had clung to it grimly since the second month of the war, because it held a bit of fair and fertile French land in bondage, because it annihilated a precious French railway junction and thus cut completely the short and easy communication between lonesome Verdun and Lorraine, and because it had proved, and might again prove, useful in any attack on Verdun.

The sentiment which fired the charging doughboys who, in two marvellous and unforgettable days, wiped that salient off the map, drew some of its strength from the fact that one of their points of departure was the American home sector, the oft-sung, oft-chronicled sector "northwest of Toul," which was taken over on that balmy and historic day nine months ago when American troops first entered the line to hold it.

Surely the advancing host was stimulated to high endeavor by the fact that behind them now lay Xivray, Seicheprey and Apremont Forest, that behind them, too, lay their shrine of Domremy, where Joan of Arc was born and which no German soldier shall ever profane by entering. Ahead of them—half-hopefully, half incredulously awaiting them—were many dear French towns and villages that had known the German officer as master through four most bitter years.

It was fine to witness the greeting which met them in each liberated village, the old folks creeping out of the cellars, fingering their beads and falling to their knees in prayers and tears of incoherent thanksgiving, the young girls flinging their arms around the embarassed but highly gratified doughboys and kissing them again and again in the name of Liberte, Egalite and Fraternite.

It was fine to she the small children gazing curiously at these soldiers, so different in looks and manner from the gray-clad troops who were the only soldiers they had ever beheld. It was fine to see the pathetic little tricolors that had been sewn in stealth against the dawn of the great day, brave, badly-made French flags, suddenly emerge from their hiding places and flutter joyously from many a shattered window.

It was fine to be in St. Mihiel redeemed on Thursday when Captain Clemenceau, son of the Tiger, led his Colonials into the wondering city, or again on that gala day—a week ago today—when once more French music sounded gaily in the square, when General Pershing and General Petain shook hands in the street and when Secretary Baker led the grandnephew of Lafayette to the bleak remains of the Lafayette chateau.

It had been a question of a carefully planned attack working with almost startling precision. A question of overwhelming artillery ripping up and disorganizing all the German works within the area. A question of a big, bouncing young Army, armed to the teeth and the teeth themselves glistening in a supremely confident grin. It had been a case of that Army's charging over the desolation that was No Man's Land, flattening out what resistance there was as a tank flattens out barbed wire entanglements and, by the quite unexpected swiftness of its rush, cutting off the retreat of the thousands upon thousands of Germans who had decided the time had come for them to leave.

The battle began in the first hours of Thursday, September 12, 1918.

Had one guessed what was coming and on Wednesday at midnight made his way to one of the crests that look out over the rolling, little-wooded countryside behind St. Mihiel, he would have been in position to behold one of the great spectacles of this war.

At midnight, the tanks were set, the infantry was ready, each man with his rounds of ammunition. Shoulder to shoulder with them were the groups of pioneer engineers, armed with wire-cutters and torpedoes, primed to go forward at the start to clear the paths and explode whatever of treacherous mines might lie in waiting. Behind on the roads, toiling silently forward, were the trucks of ammunition and the ration carts and kitchens, those faithful trains that work so doggedly in these great hours to the end that guns and doughboys shall be fed, come what may.

Behind, too, at many a headquarters switchboard, American telephone girls were working overtime and tickled to death at the chance. Then, somewhere—was it one kilometer, or 20 or 50?—somewhere in the mysterious, midnight darkness, was the Commander-in-Chief.

It was raining. It had been raining for several days, so that the ground was spongy underfoot, the carts were making headway with difficulty. But that same rain, with its black, laden clouds, had blindfolded the German watchers from the skies, and they knew less of what was astir than they might have known had the days been fair.

And from one end of the line to the other there coursed a quickening current of confidence. The Army, poised for its first blow, was just so many million pounds of confidence. They were set for a task they thought might be easy, but which they were determined to fulfill no matter how hard it should prove.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Thursday morning, the artillery preparation began. Suddenly out of the darkness, guns innumerable spoke. Spoke? They roared. They sang. They cursed. They filled the air with such a deafening and discordant salvo as soldiers seldom have heard since the world began. It was the tremendius overture of the score.

So it went for hours. Then, just before five, came the drum-fire, the steady, synchronized, harmonized barrage, the multitude of cannon firing as if a single hand were in control.

At its first notes, the spasmodic signals from the German lines changed suddenly in hue and quantity. Instead of the occasional inquisitive flares came rockets and star-shells, the lights that call for information giving way to all the greworks known to the German signal corps, the fireworks that light up the whole countryside and mean "For God's sake, give us everything you have." They are a cry in the night for help.

The rain had stopped and dawn was streaking the east. The tanks were under way. The aircraft hummed in the skies. It was such a concourse of airplanes as Orville and Wilbur Wright must have beheld in their first little credited visions—and perhaps not even they.

And these, all these multitudinous arms and aids, were working with but a single purpose, working in a single service, the service of the doughboy, working to bring him food and ammunition and information, working to clear his path and simplify his job. And now the doughboy, on the stroke of five, rose out of his hated, water-soaked trench and went roaring over the top.

The infantry swept across No Man's Land, across the trenches the Boches had been widening and deepening for four years, past dugouts whose none too hopeful occupants were still in hiding as a result of the artillery preparation.

They were advancing over a battle-field which, with its easy vistas and its gentle undulations, seemed made for maneuvers. The well-posted observer could sweep its operations for miles around. A movie man would have died of joy at the opportunity.

Indeed, it was a little like a movie war, that serene, unchecked advance, the infantry waves mounting and disappearing over crest after crest, their ranks unbroken, their jaunty trot unslackened. Generals went by on white horses. Twenty minutes after five the first prisoners came trickling back. Had anyone seen it in the movies he would have choked with laughter, at the ignorance of a director who thought a battle ever went as prettily as all that.

The ease of it, the speed of it—those were the two topics of the day.

The speed! Within little more than 24 hours after the first infantry charge, a division coming in from the west and a division coming in from the south met and clasped hands. The salient had been cut. That peninsula in the German war map had been inundated.

That was an electric hour at dawn last Friday morning when scouts from these divisions, groping their way into the town of Hattonville, each group from its separate side, came face to face in the streets and, each finding that the other was not Boche, whooped for joy and grasped each other's hands.

You may gauge that speed by a dozen facts. By that fact that a task which should, according to the most hopeful expectations, have taken two days, took only one. By the fact that before seven o'clock on the first morning, an entire company of German infantry was busy mending French roads for the passage of American trucks laden with American breakfasts. By the fact that at the same hour prisoners were being examined in pens as far back as corps headquarters. By the fact that one brigade pranced nine kilometers in five hours, the brigade P. C. moving breathlessly after, establishing itself in a ditch perhaps and yet suffered to stay there only long enough for the lieutenants attached to get the chocolate out of their musette bags and celebrate with about one bite each. By the fact that only cavalry and airplanes could keep up with the doughboys, who were scarcely bothering to send back their hundreds of Huns, but letting them drift back unguarded.

The master of one battle-scarred field kitchen who had sworn a mighty oath that he would keep the coffee going apace with his clamorous infantry pals tried hard for a while and gave it up in despair.

"Those travelin' fools!" he said, and roared with proud laughter.

The prisoners come in in droves. It was no uncommon sight on that first day to see a thousand paddling back four abreast through the late summer rain—each and every one displaying an incorrigible cheerfulness that would have deeply grieved the firm of Ludendorff and Hindenburg.

Regimental commanders, majors, lieutenant colonels, a count or two and one bespectacled professor who had invented a poisonous gas and ought to have been ashamed of himself, were among the first day's bag.

They surrendered in groups large and small. They came not singly but by battalions—actually. Some were caught in their dugouts, from which they emerged trustfully as soon as the doughboys arrived. Some surrendered in batches to cavalry. Some—notably the machine gunners—gave in only when they were quite surrounded and had done all the damage they could. Others yielded when cavalry had rounded them up, and still others lost all their stomach for this war at the sight of the first tank.

It is enough to disconcert the stoutest heart to be crouching over a machine gun watching uneasily for some explanation of the noise in the woods just ahead, and then to see the fringing foliage of that woods part here and there with the emergence of a group of terrifying monsters that spit lead and are themselves indifferent to lead—wildly painted monsters those coats are as many-colored as Joseph's and whose hides are so tough that, compared with them, the rhinoceros seems a sensitive jelly-fish.

They tell of one impatient sergeant who climbed out of his triumphant tank and sat on its turret with his rifle while it rounded up a terrified group.

Where Germans were not caught, it was obvious that they had escaped just in time. An American general taking over a dugout would find the still-burning cigar and the half quaffed liqueur of his predecessor waiting on the table. Or prisoners might be taken in batches not because they wanted to surrender, but because their flight was cut off just in time.

It was that way with the major commanding the 65th Landwehr Regiment. As the French Colonials came into St. Mihiel, he decided that the time had come for himself, his adjutant, his surgeon and his orderly to go away from there. They went, leaving the rest of the regiment to its fate. But on the way back through the corridor that led out of the salient, they walked straight into American troops. They were much pained to learn that their salient had been cut, a fact of which they might have been informed by their own chieftains had not the Allied guns played such havoc with the German communications.

Thus it befell that of this regiment, the first representatives to reach the prisoners' pen was the commanding officer. By that time his orderly was not very respectful, and when his air of indifference to his chief was made a subject of inquiry, he said, with the first free speech he had ever known:

"To hell with officers!"

Later 40 prisoners arrived from the same outfit. Did they know where their commanding officer was? Oh, safe in Germany by that time, they opined sourly. The examining officer jerked his finger toward the adjoining pen. They looked. Their eyes bulged. Then the whole 40 burst into prolonged and hearty laughter.

Indeed, laughter was the mood of the 15,000. Here and there an officer was sulky. One officer who had dressed up regardless and packed all his belongings in a neat kit ready to go to France was somewhat pained when he found that, for all his spotless white gloves, he would have to lend the hands within them to the portage of the nearest stretcher.

But for the most part the prisoners, after they found that they were not to be boiled in oil or scalped by the aboriginal Americans, were immencely jovial. You could see converging groups of them laughing and waving to each other. You could hear them telling how they had been studying the information as to Yankee rations that had been dropped over their lines, how they had compared the menus with their own dreary fare and how, in talking among themselves, they had confessed a secret determination to go over and get some of those rations at the first opportunity.

Beginning with the third day of the attack Saturday, the infantry settled down to the task of adjusting their new positions and making them habitable. By Wednesday they were leaving more and more of the combat to the artillery. All day and all night the big guns pounded away. Three times the Germans counter-attacked, but these assaults were brief and local, rather less than half-hearted blows which got nowhere and of which the sole result was to leave more prisoners in our hands.

Just such an attack was made Monday night, and the task was entrusted to a husky Boche storm battalion, which had been instructing at a school for "non-coms" just across the frontier when trouble broke loose, and it was rushed forward to reinforce the line. It was this battalion which led the fierce assault on the newly arrived New England troops at Seicheprey late last winter.

C. O. S. Finds Its Work Increased by Influenza Epidemic

The monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Charity Organization Society, postponed from the regular time of meeting earlier in the month, was held Tuesday evening. The regular reports for September were presented, and showed that that month had been unusually light, a great contrast to the informal report given of the situation during the past three weeks.

The influenza epidemic has hit the poor people very hard; and while conditions are improving the effect of the epidemic will be felt for many months. Care must be taken of those who have been weakened by sickness to guard against tuberculosis and other diseases. In some families the mother has died, leaving little ones for whom some plan must be made. A great deal of relief work has been done by volunteers, in this present emergency, all over the city, through various agencies and societies, and the generous response to the call for assistance has been much appreciated. This relief work has been a practical "Friendly Visiting," a branch of work on which the Charity Organization has always laid great stress and for which there is a great field for work twelve months of the year. Surely there must be many among these volunteers who will not be contented to drop this work which the epidemic has opened up to them, and the Friendly Visiting Committee of the Charity Organization Society will gladly welcome the assistance of all those who are interested to continue. Telephone 103 or call at the office in the Babcock building for details as to the line of work.

The board of trustees is much pleased to be able to announce that they have secured the services of Miss Margaret C. Holly as executive secretary, to succeed Miss Phillips, who has been on a six months' leave of absence and has now resigned to continue her work with the Red Cross. Miss Whelan, acting executive secretary, has also resigned to take up work in New York. Miss Holly will begin her duties on November 1, and will have associated with her Miss Ethel Skillman and Miss Helen Lovell.

The annual meeting of the society will be held on November 12, in the rooms of the Society in the Babcock building at 8 o'clock p. m. At that time reports for the year will be presented and the board of trustees to serve for the ensuing year will be elected. A cordial invitation is extended to all those who are interested in the welfare of the society.

I am neither a Reactionist nor a Destructionist

The Reactionist governs to advance his own personal interests. The Destructionist governs to advance nothing and destroy everything.

The reactionary leaders of the Republican and Democratic Parties in New Jersey are leagued together to defeat Wilson's policies, just as they have always tried to defeat them.

I believe in controlling monopoly without destroying industry.

I believe in prosperity without profiteering.

I believe that it's just as important to keep prices down to a fair level as it is to raise wages to a fair level.

I believe that coal, water power, railroads and all public utilities exist only to serve the Nation, and should be controlled by the Nation, but that individual initiative is essential in all private enterprise.

I believe that the prosperity of the farmer is the foundation of national prosperity.

I believe that National Woman's Suffrage is essential in a democratic League of Nations.

Because I believe in these things, I am a member of the progressive National Party.

CLARKE for Congress

Paid for by W. H. C. Clarke, Campaign Manager, Mountain Lakes, N. J.

PERSONAL

Mrs. Mark Strader, of New York, has returned after a few days' visit with Mrs. Walter F. Emmons, of Leland avenue.

William M. Sandford, of East Seventh street, left the past week for a trip to the Pacific coast and Mexico, to last about two months.

Chris Sorenson, Jr., of Putnam avenue, the well-known musician, was home during the past week because of a termination of theatrical contracts on the Pacific coast due to the influenza epidemic.

Mrs. Raymond Guinn, a former local resident, who convalesced at the home of her mother, Mrs. VanCleft, of Richmond street, following an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, returned to her home at Jamaica, L. I., a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Randolph, who have been residing on Lee place, have removed to the residence at 970 West Sixth street.

George Barry, of Howard street, the borough, who is attached to the Medical Corps, is home from Fort Oswego, N. Y., for a ten days' furlough. His brother, William Barry, will reach here tomorrow from Carlisle, Pa., where he is stationed as a member of the Medical Corps, to enjoy a week-end visit. He will make the third Barry son to be in town at present, as Harry Barry, of the Merchant Marine, is enjoying shore leave after a trans-Atlantic trip.

Miss Elizabeth T. Wilson, of Lennox avenue, who contracted pneumonia at Camp Merritt, where she was a member of the Army Nursing Corps, is now at her home here and improving rapidly.

John A. McIntyre, son of John F. McIntyre, of 140 North avenue, is a patient in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, following a severe intestinal operation performed by a noted surgeon, last week. The nature of Mr. McIntyre' trouble called for surgery of the most delicate nature, and several of the country's foremost specialists were in consultation on the case. At last reports the patient was improving, with excellent chances for slow but certain recovery.

Mrs. B. Lawton, of 517 West Sixth street, is in receipt of a letter from her son, Corporal Richard Lawton, to the effect that he had reached France safely and was now moving toward the firing line.

Former Fire Chief and Mrs. Thaddeus Osborne Doane quietly observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their home at 438 West Fifth street, Monday. They were the recipients of numerous presents and congratulatory messages from relatives and friends. The widely known couple were married in the Scotch Plains Baptist church on October 28, 1868, this being the first nuptial knot to be tied in this edifice. It was also the first wedding ceremony performed by the late Rev. Dr. J. C. Buchanan, father of the late J. Hervey Buchanan, of the borough, who was the officiating clergyman. Mrs. Doane was Abigail Elizabeth Christine Fitz-Randolph, daughter of Jacob Fitz-Randolph, whose home was in Washington Valley, near the New Providence-Feltville crossroads. She was born in the same house where her mother was born and in the room assigned to General Washington, when he once stopped at the domicile over night. Mr. and Mrs. Doane have lived at their present address for forty-three years. They have two sons, Thad Doane, Jr., of 311 West Fourth street, and Hervey K. Doane, of Miles City, Montana.

George O. Stevens, who has been residing on West Front street, has taken possession of the William Sandford property at 506 West Seventh street, which he recently purchased.

Clifford Conover, of the borough, who has been employed as receiving teller at the Cranford Trust Company, today assumed the position of paying teller with the Bound Brook Trust Company.

Frank H. McInerney, of East Seventh street, who is construction superintendent for the Kresge Company, spent the past week-end in town. He came up from Washington, D. C., where he is now supervising the erection of a new building, but during the past three months has spent most of his time at Omaha, Neb., and Council Bluffs, Ia. The Kresge concern has planned to erect a six-story structure in Washington, but the War Board refused to sanction the work because of the shortage of materials and only two stories are to be built at present.

Harry Hann, a member of the fire department stationed at fire headquarters, has recovered after a week's confinement to his home on Somerset place, with influenza.

Captain Albert I. Littell, of this city, who recently returned from France and was sent South to take a new command, is now located at Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.

Miss Constance Durant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Durant of West Fifth street, is convalescent after nearly a month's illness with influenza.

Private August Meyer, who has been stationed at Camp Humphreys, Va., the past two months as a member of the 218th Engineers, spent a forty-eight-hour furlough the past week-end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, of West Third street. Private Meyer expects to be transferred to a camp in Texas in the near future.

Miss Rosella Harkins, a member of an army nursing corps stationed at Camp Upton for the past four months, is convalescing at her home on South Second street, after an operation for appendicitis.

Miss Elizabeth Brown, of Plainfield avenue, is able to be about again, after two illness with influenza covering a period of four weeks. She had practically recovered from the first attack when a relapse occured.

Miss Catherine Lynch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lynch, of East Second street, is convalescent after a serious illness with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Strayer, of West Fourth street, are the parents of a son, born to them Sunday morning. Mrs. Strayer previous to her marriage was Miss Mary Murphy, of Spooner avenue.

Mrs. Leon Smith, of 106 Grant avenue, who has been seriously ill the past three weeks with influenza, continues to improve slowly. She is under the care of Dr. Cooley, of Dunellen.

Dr. E. B. Stowe, who has been spending the past few months at her old home at Birmingham, N. Y., has returned to Plainfield for the winter.

Miss Kathryn Connelly, of West Fourth street, is able to be about again after a week's illness with influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Raymond Randolph and children, of West Fourth street, were guests of relatives at Keyport the forepart of the week.

Leo Wilson, son of former Councilman and Mrs. W. W. Wilson of 836 West Third street, was home this week on a furlough from his duties as a member of the Merchant Marine.

How do you know you're a Democrat?

What does the Democratic Party stand for? What is its platform? What brains or will has it except President Wilson's? What principles, ideals or ideas has that party sponsored in the last fifty years?

The Southern reactionaries of the Democratic Party are in league with the Northern reactionaries of the Republican Party, and both are controlled by selfish interests.

The tremendous economic problems of reconstruction after the war will demand something more than Jeffersonian maxims and self-seeking reaction.

The Democratic Party of New Jersey is responsible for President Wilson's only defeat. It is fighting him today.

As a lawyer, I have specialized in the economics of industry. As an economist, I have specialized in an orderly, legal solution of the problems of monopoly, public control of utilities, and a working wage that has some relation to living costs.

I believe in and will fight for Woman's Suffrage.

I believe the working man is entitled to good living and the farmer to good profit.

I stand for common sense as opposed to selfish reaction or intemperate radicalism. That is why I belong to the Progressive National Party.

Made Fudge While Shells Rained Above

Calmly proceeding with the task of making a batch of fudge, in a front line trench dugout, while the Germans sprayed the ground above with shot and shell is the unique experience undergone by Sergeant William Coyle, of this city, a member of the medical department of the 305th Field Signal Battalion, now in action in France.

The circumstance is told of in a letter received by a Plainfielder from Sergeant Coyle on Tuesday. He explained that some of the boys in his company secured sugar, butter and canned milk but from where none but themselves knew. Given a few hours respite from duty, all hands proceeded to the dugout to try their hand at manufacturing the toothsome concoction and were making excellent headway when Fritz launched his barrage. The din of high explosives and shrieking shells was terrific but the candy makers ignored it in the anticipation of getting some sure enough fudge just like sister and girls back home use to handle. They made six pounds in all and enjoyed munching it while waiting the word to go back to the trenches and meet the Germans in their charge.

Sergeant Coyle also stated in the letter that he was getting along very well although his company had been in numerous engagements since the forepart of September. He added that he would be pleased to hear from any of his old friends, especially those with whom he played football in the best days of the Holy Cross eleven.

The young sergeant is the son of John Coyle, of Crescent Court, superintendent of the Levgar factory at West Dunellen. He secured his training at Camp Lee, Va., and went abroad late last winter.

Whence Came the Army Term of "Doughboy"

A doughboy is an American soldier, and American soldiers, infantrymen, artillerymen, medical department, signal corps sharps, officers and men alike, all are called doughboys. Our cartoonist is one, so is General Pershing.

The term "doughboys" dates back to the Civil War when army wit was aroused by large globular brass buttons on infantry uniforms. Somebody (he must have been a sailor), dubbed the buttons "doughboys" because they reminded him of the boiled dumplings of raised dough served in ships' messes and known to all sailors as doughboys. Originally it referred only to an enlisted infantryman, but the A. E. F. applies it to all branches and all grades of the service.—The Stars and Stripes.

ARMY NURSES MAY RECEIVE COMMISSIONS.

Lack of military rank for army nurses is seriously crippling the efficiency of our nurses and our military hospitals, according to a statement issued Monday by Red Cross and army nursing authorities, urging immediate passage of the Lewis-Raker bill granting relative rank, ranging from second lieutenant to major, to members of the army corps.

The proposed relative rank involves no increase in pay, only limited authority and no commission. It merely gives the right to wear an officer's insignia and confers the authority of an officer in hospital and sanitary matters, under the direction of the army doctors. A Senate hearing on the bill is expected soon.

George Marcus Not a Local Resident

One of this week's casualty lists contained the name of Corporal George Marcus, of 433 John street, this city, as having been seriously wounded. Inquiry at the John street address revealed the information that Corporal Marcus was the son of Mrs. Lena Marcus, who makes her home there with her daughter, Mrs. Louis Rosenthal. Mr. Rosenthal said that they had been informed of the injury by the young soldier himself, who wrote in a letter received last month that his leg had been badly mangled by an exploding shell on August 17. He was then in a hospital, he said, but the physicians thought they would be able to save the injured limb.

Marcus had always resided in New York but gave the Plainfield address in making his insurance and allotment over to his mother. He was a member of the regular infantry and went abroad last winter with the Rainbow Division.

Word that George V. Keating, of Willever street, had been wounded in action was also received here this week. The information came by telegram to his mother, Mrs. Mary Keating. It was stated that the degree of the wound had not been determined. Keating was a member of old Company K and secured his training for overseas duty at Camp McClellan. He went abroad with the 113th Infantry. A brother, Thomas Keating, is on the French firing line as a member of Company C, 309th Infantry.

STATION AT UNION NOW KNOWN AS "WEWANNA."

Union township this week received word from General Manager J. S. Caldwell, of the Rahway Valley Railroad Company, that the name Wewanna suggested by Union residents some time ago for the railroad company's station in Union has been adopted, beginning at once. All freight and express for Union residents sent over the Rahway Valley Railroad will or should now be addressed to Wewanna.

The question of a new name for the station came up in Union some time ago, when the residents also discussed the question of selecting a new name for the township. The latter proposition was voted down. The reason advanced for the change in the name for the township is the fact that very often mail sent to Union township goes to Union Hill or the town of Union before finding its proper destination, resulting in a considerable delay in the receiving of mail.

WILLIAM F. BIRCH

Having been successful in securing the nomination to fill the unexpired term of the late Honorable John H. Capstick, surely deserves the united support of the Republicans of the Fifth District, as this high class business man can reflect nothing but credit and good both to the people of this district and the Nation; in the first place his wide experience in handling large business problems, certainly fits him to serve the best interest of the people of the Country in Congress as well as the Boys that are "over there;" secondly, reconstruction is very important, plans must be made so that business will be such that after peace is declared that the boys being discharged from the service can secure good positions and not have the market flooded with men seeking positions. Also, arrange that the boys having been unfortunate enough to have lost a limb, can, through reconstruction, not only be fitted to earn a living but positions can be secured for them that they can fill. Every thinking person will agree that WILLIAM F. BIRCH, through his technical and mechanical training, together with his business experience, is fitted in a special manner for these particular trying times. His position is best explained by his Campaign Slogan: "Business Administration—War to Victory."

HUGHES RECOMMENDS COURT-MARTIAL OF ARMY OFFICER, PROSECUTION OF OTHERS

Special to the Courier-News:

Washington, Nov. 1.—Charles E. Hughes aircraft inquiry report made public today by Attorney General Gregory, recommends the trial by court martial of Col. Edward A. Deeds and the criminal prosecution of three other officers of the army.

The report, 50,000 words, is based on the testimony of 280 witnesses taken during a period of twenty-two weeks. It is dated October 25 and its figures are brought up to October 18 in some instances.

Attorney General Gregory, in a letter to the President accompanying the report, says he is substantially in accord with the statement of facts made by Judge Hughes, adding "I am of the opinion that it cannot fairly be charged that a managing officer of any contracting corporation has desired or attempted to delay production or been actuated by disloyal motives."

Mr. Gregory further explained: "I do not consider it germane to this investigation to enter into criticisms of the programme or of mistakes in policy or in the exercise of judgment."

The Hughes report reviews "delays and waste" due chiefly to "serious lack of competent direction." It specifies such shortcomings as "not a single pursuit or combat plane" has yet been sent abroad, but declares that under Assistant Secretary of War John D. Ryan and Assistant Director of Aircraft Production William C. Potter "there has been improvement in organization and progress has been made in gratifying measure." Major General George O. Squier, Chief Signal Officer, is described as "incompetent" but otherwise not reproachable. Civilian officials of the Aircraft Production Board, and the naval officers attached thereto, are freed from blame for the situation.

Lieut. Col. Jesse G. Vincent, in charge of the airplane engineering division of the Bureau of Aircraft Production, should be subjected to criminal prosecution in that "both before and after he received his commission in the army he had transactions with the Packard Motor Company of which he was formerly vice president and is still a stockholder, in which he acted on behalf of the Government."

Lieut. Col. George W. Mixter, production manager of the Bureau of Aircraft Production, for criminal prosecution in that he "acted as an officer or agent of the United States, contrary to prohibition, for the transaction of business with the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Corporation, in which he was a stockholder. His holdings were small, but it cannot be said that for that reason the statute is inapplicable."

Second Lieut. S. B. Vrooman, Jr., in charge of the inspection of propeller lumber, for criminal prosecution in that he was "the agent of the Government directly responsible for the proper inspection of the mahogany delivered by the S. B. Vrooman Company to the Government under its contracts, and that his acting as such agent for the transaction of business with the corporation in which he was a stockholder was in violation of the statute."

"In particular it is recommended that the activities in relation to spruce production, which, being largely centred on the Pacific coast, it was impracticable to embrace in the present inquiry, should be carefully scrutinized."

Because of the political intimations that have become current as a result of the release of the Hughes report at this time, interest attaches to a statement it contains regarding Henry Ford, candidate for United States Senator in Michigan, next Tuesday. One employee of the Ford Motor Company, it was testified, "reviled and even threatened the President." He pleaded guilty on prosecution and was fined $300. He was then "released, and the testimony is that he resumed work in the Ford plant."

There was further testimony as to Carl Emde, head of the "room in which the drafting work upon the Liberty engine is done," where "it is possible to bring about relays the causes of which, in view of the multiplicity of drawings involved, it would be difficult satisfactorily to place." There were "repeated reports of pronounced pro-German utterances by Emde," and a "conference was held on the subject at which Mr. Ford and the factory managers were present." There were demands for Emde's removal, and the report adds:

"Mr. Ford, however, was opposed to that course and overruled his associates. Mr. Ford's position and his reasons are thus set forth in the minutes:

"Mr. Ford deliberated and stated that he had heard numerous rumors, but in speaking of all he had heard there had not been one thing shown him which would make him change the present head of the draughting department.

"He felt that it as a time of sacrifice—that in the next few years every man would be called upon to make some sort of sacrifice, and that possibly Mr. Emde, German born, was making his sacrifice now when making drawings for the Liberty motor to be used ultimately against Germany."

MRS. ARTHUR GALLUP DIES SUDDENLY

Her Death a Shock to a Large Circle of Friends Who Had Known Her Long and Well

Mrs. Mary E. Gallup, wife of Arthur T. Gallup, died suddenly this morning at 7.30 o'clock of an attack of heart failure at her home on West Front street and Plainfield avenue. She appeared to be in her usual health yesterday and was out driving her automobile. Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

Mrs. Gallup rose as usual this morning and was about the house with no symptom of illness. She sat down in a chair, and with only a word, as if an exclamation of sudden sharp pain, died instantly. Her husband stood near her at the time and her son summoned a doctor in a very few minutes, but life was extinct.

Mrs. Gallup was born in Cooktown, Conn. She was a member of the Church of the Holy Cross and had been a resident of this city for the past thirty years. Besides her husband, she leaves one son, Carlos C. Gallup, and a sister, Mrs. J. J. Walker, of Brooklyn.

Cooktown, Mrs. Gallup's native place, is now known as Preston, but originally was named for her father, who was a manufacturer of woolens there. The town is about seven miles from Norwich.

Mrs. Gallup had a large circle of friends in this city and her death created a shock among them. She was for many years a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, and during the rectorship of the late Rev. T. Logan Murphy, in the earlier years of her residence here, was specially active in church work. She made many close friendships by her kindly obliging manner and thoughtfulness of others. In her recent years she had been more closely occupied at home, but continued her friendships and the lesser social engagements.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallup came to Plainfield when the Potter Press plant was removed here from Norwich Conn., and Mr. Gallup was connected with that plant many years until he changed his position for one in New York, where both he and their son are now engaged. Mr. Gallup was one of the Democratic members of the Common Council in the early part of the '90's.

Both he and his son have the sincere sympathy of a large number of Plainfield residents in their bereavement and sorrow.

THE FUNERAL OF MGR. F. O'NEIL

Interment Will Be Made in St. Andrew's Cemetery, Canada

Special to the Courier-News:

Elizabeth, Nov. 1.—The funeral of Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis O'Neill was held at 9 o'clock this morning and the body then was taken by automobile to the Grand Central Station, New York, to be sent to Boston, and then to his former home in Canada, where interment will be made in St. Andrew's.

Bishop John J. O'Connor of the Newark diocese conducted the solemn high requiem mass in St. Mary's church yesterday. Rt. Rev. Mgr. Isaac P. Whelan, of Newark, was celebrant of the mass, and assisting were Rev. Dr. Michael J. Mulligan, of Paterson; Rev. Edward Field, of Rockaway, and Rev. Thomas Judge, of Newark.

Rev. J. A. Dillon, superintendent of the parochial schools of the Newark diocese, delivered the eulogy.

After the services yesterday it was announced that the body would lie in state until this morning. All day yesterday people from all parts of the city visited the church. Rev. Henry J. Sheridan, curate of the church, conducted brief services this morning. Three motorcycle policemen escorted the cortege to the city line as it proceeded to New York. Arriving tomorrow in Canada, the body will lie in state all day.

ITALIANS PURSUE FLEEING FOE CAPTURING PRISONERS, GUNS AND VALUABLE MATERIALS

AMERICAN AVIATORS DROP BOMBS ON ROADS AND DUMPS NEAR TAILLY

Special to Courier-News:

Washington, Nov. 1—A report made public by the War Department this afternoon says: "Our aviators dropped three tons of bombs on the roads and dumps in the vicinity of Tailly, Barricourt and Villers. De-Vant, Dun, and machine gunned enemy troops and convoys.

In the course of the day seven army airplanes were shot down. All of our machines returned. On the previous night French bombing units attached to the first army successfully raided Mezieres and Poix Terron.

General Pershing reports dropping nearly twelve tons of explosives on the important railroads in that region. North of Verdun the communique continues, our troops drove the enemy from the village of Brieulles on the west bank of the Meuse.

Artillery fighting continued lively on the whole front throughout the day, reaching particular intensity between Aincreville and the Bois de Bantheville.

RUMOR THAT THE KAISER AND CROWN PRINCE HAVE ABDICATED

Special to the Courier-News:

Copenhagen, (Central News Cable), Nov. 1.—Rumors are current in Berlin that both the Kaiser and the Crown Prince have abdicated, according to the Vorwaerts. The Kaiser's abdication had not been officially confirmed from Berlin at midnight, the Copenhagen correspondent of a news agency reported today.

Delbruck, chief of the German privy council, has left for the German front on an important mission, believed to be to present official documents of the abdication of the Kaiser.

NURSES' AIDES NEEDED BY ARMY

Must Have Taken Elementary Hygiene and Home Care of Sick

To all the women in Plainfield and vicinity who have taken the course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick, the Surgeon-General of the Army is appealing through the Red Cross for help in the Overseas Hospitals.

The increase in the size of the army has necessitated a proportional increase in the nursing forces in France. Women who have learned the element of nursing through the Red Cross courses in home care of the sick can do an enormous amount in the wards to relieve the trained nurses for the work that only they are capable of doing.

The first appeal to the local chapter for nurses 'aides was for volunteers. The qualifications were as follows:

A. The Red Cross Course in Elementary Hygiene and Home Care of the Sick.

B. Ability to speak French or some knowledge of the language.

C. Age not below 35 years.

D. Passports will not be granted to women having husbands or sons in the service or to women under 25 years.

E. Good physical condition and willingness to serve wwherever assigned.

Within a short time a second appeal has come for those willing to go overesas at once. The qualifications are as follows:

A. Age between 25 and 45.

B. Instructions: Home Care of the Sick an done month hospital experience.

C. Salary: $30.00 a month with maintenance or allowance for same.

Are there any women in Plainfield who can and will respond to these appeals? They are absolutely essential to the well being of our boys overseas. For further information call Red Cross Headquarters, 1107 Watchung avenue. Telephone 645.

"GAS MASK" DAY IS REQUESTED AS MEASURE IN EVERY STATE

The Chemical Warfare Division of the army telegraphed yesterday to the Governors of all States, requesting that they follow the example of Gov. McCall, of Massachusetts, in designating by proclamation a "gas mask" day for gathering fruit pits and nutshells to make charcoal for gas masks. It is requested people be urged to save shells and pits for the day, and in rural communities to organize nutting expeditions. Gov. McCall recently designated November 9.

BULLET WOUND CLUE TO AUTO KILLING

Prosecutor Causes Arrest of Three Charged With Koenig's Death

Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, of this city, believes that he has cleared up the mystery as to the death of John Koenig, aged thirty-eight, an employe of the Standard Aircraft Company, at Elizabeth, who was struck and killed by an auto in St George avenue, Linden, on Sunday morning.

The dead man was well known in this city among the Standard employes. He was a foreman in the Elizabeth plant.

Robert Scott, John James and Elmer Wychie, of New Brunswick, all colored, are lodged in the Union county jail at Elizabeth, held as material witnesses to the death of Koenig, and George Radall, colored, of New Brunswick, alleged driver of the car, is held in the Middlesex county jail technically charged with the larceny of an auto, and will be turned over to the Union county officers on Saturday. Radall is a soldier, and it is alleged by Prosecutor Hetfield that he had taken "French leave" of Camp Dix some days previous to the day Koenig was struck and killed by an auto. Another material witness, Luther Hammond, is in custody in New Brunswick, and will be brought to Elizabeth.

Scott, James and Wychie were committed to jail by Judge Mahon at Elizabeth yesterday pending the investigation by the county prosecutor's office.

In discussing the arrest of the men Prosecutor Hetfield said the first clue was obtained when it was found that James' head had been grazed by a bullet and that he had a slight scalp wound.

On the morning of the death of Koenig officers in the neighboring municipalities were notified to be on the lookout for the machine believed to have struck Koenig. Officer Edwin Payne, of the Rahway police department, saw a speeding auto while on his beat and fired three shots at it. He hit two tires and also hit one of the men in the car. In view of the fact that James was found with a slight scalp wound, a further investigation was made. Prosecutor Hetfield hears that Radall was driving the car at the time.

Prosecutor Hetfield also states he had found the car which took Radall and his companions on the trip, and that he had also traced their route. Radall's alleged absence without leave from Camp Dix is also to be further investigated.

"Battle Has Been Won" Says the War Office Statement; British Take 13,000 Prisoners

PROGRESS IN FLANDERS

Anglo-French Troops Continue Thrust South of Valenciennes—Operations Were Successful—French Report Violent Artillery Actions During the Night in the Region of Guise

Special to the Courier-News:

Rome (Central News Cable), Nov. 1.—Pouring through the gap in the Austro-Hungarian lines, the Italians are swarming across the mountains to intercept the fleeing enemy, said a semi-official statement given out today. It follows:

"The battle, which began on October 24, is won. The enemy is retreating hurriedly, losing guns, prisoners and materials. He is leaving intact or partially destroying stores of supplies and also many horses. We are crossing the mountains to intercept the retreating enemy."

The Austro-Hungarian front in the sector of Monte Crappa has completely collapsed and all of the hostile artillery has been captured by the Italians, it was officially announced today. General Diaz, the Italian commander-in chief, reported that prisoners were swarming down the mountainside in flocks.

The Italian tenth army has forced a crossing of the Livenza River, on the Italian front, and is now driving toward the Tagliamento, according to dispatches from the front.

BRITISH STATEMENT

Special to the Courier-News:

London (Central News Cable), Nov. 1.—British troops fighting on the Italian battlefront have captured 13,000 prisoners, the War Office stated today. The important town of Sacile has been occupied and the tenth army has reached Brugnera and Grugnert. The defeated Austro-Hungarian armies continue their rapid flight toward their own borders.

The Flanders group of French and British armies have made now progress on the Belgian front and have captured a number of prisoners, the War Office announces in a special report on Flanders operations.

Successful minor enterprises were carried out by the British, the War Office announced today. Prisoners were taken at Le Quesnoy. Operations by the Allies this morning south of Valenciennes were making good progress, the statement said.

FRENCH REPORT

Paris (Central News Cable), Nov. 1.—During the night there was violent artillery action in the Guise region and west of St. Fergneux, the French War Office announced today. There is nothing to report elsewhere.

MURDERERS GET LONG SENTENCE

Life Imprisonment for One and Twenty Years Each for Three Others

Immediately after the conviction of Richard Hammock, Patsey Catoune, George Gardner, and Henry Englick, of Jersey City, on the charge of murdering Charles Hilbert, of Allentown, Pa., near Bound Brook, on August 21, in the Somerset County Court at Somerville yesterday, Justice Bergen passed sentence upon the men.

Hammock, who was found guilty of murder in the first degree, was given life imprisonment and the other men found guilty of murder in the second degree were each sentenced to serve not more than thirty years nor less than twenty.

Hilbert was employed by a silk manufacturer and was driving an auto truck loaded with silk from Allentown to Jersey City. He was held up on the outskirts of Bound Brook by the four men who sought to steal the silk. Hilbert put up a fight and was shot to death.

The highwaymen then drove off with the truck. They abandoned it near Cranford. It was through the observance of a Jersey City policemen that they were apprehended. This officer had seen the four men leaving Jersey City in an automobile on the day of the crime. The Jersey City police rounded up the crowd, confronted them with the crime, and secured evidence that justified holding them. Two other men who were parties to the crime are still at large.

BURN LEAVES IN BORO' TOMORROW

Chief Marshal George Weiss gives notice that residents in North Plainfield will be allowed to burn leaves tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, and that the fires must be extinguished by five o'clock. The authorities have issued this special notice owing to the request of many who desire to clean up their yards and tomorrow afternoon will be the alloted time for all to get busy.

The burning of leaves in the borough has not been permitted this year owing to the smoke being offensive to those who are ill.

Captains and Teams Named for City's $150,000 War Work Drive

At a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. last night, captains and respective teams to canvass the city for Plainfield's quota of $150,000 in the War Work Campaign, to begin next Monday and last a week, were named.

J. Herbert Case is general chairman of the campaign committee, and A. M. Harris, vice chairman. They predict that Plainfield's quota will be raised in the given time. The amount to be secured throughout the country is $170,000,000.

It was President Wilson's idea to have one campaign for funds to be used by organizations engaged in war work. He believed that this method was better than individual campaigns. The organizations to share in the money raised are: Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Jewish Welfare Board, American Library Association, War Camp Community and Salvation Army.

The general committee has a number of plans in view to stimulate interest in the campaign, one of which may be an exchange of greetings each day between the Elizabeth committee and the Plainfield committee by aeroplane. The Standard Corporation has promised a machine if a flyer can be secured.

The campaign had a preliminary opening last Tuesday night, when a mass meeting was held at the Plainfield High School. An audience numbering about 800 was in attendance and listened with rapt attention to the addresses.

'Phoning From Blazing House, Woman Is Asked If Call for Help "Is Necessary"

The New York Telephone Company's order to its operators to ask every subscriber if their call is necessary each time they ring up "Central" was carried to the extreme last Monday afternoon, when Mrs. Howard J. Armstrong, of 2 Washington avenue, sought to notify the fire department that her home was on fire.

Placing the receiver to her ear, Mrs. Armstrong exclaimed hurriedly to the "Hello Girl" answering:

"Central, give me fire headquarters, quick."

The next moment she was almost knocked off her feet by the cool, calm, deliberate query from the other end of the wire:

"Is this a necessary call?"

Ordinarily the question is enough to make anyone paying for the use of the telephone to "get hot under the collar," but in Mrs. Armstrong's instance, she was so greatly astonished that she hardly knew whether to get mad or give the operator a full account of what was happening at the house and let her use her own judgment as to the necessity of taking up some of the telephone company's time. The crackling of flames and the ever-increasing volumes of smoke, however, warned her that there was no time to be lost and she declared in emphatic tones that it was the most necessary call that she had ever made. She was then given the connection.

The fire originated from an overheated chimney at the Washington avenue home, which is owned by Miss Mary A. Brown and with whom Mrs. Armstrong resides, the latter's husband, Lieutenant Armstrong, a nephew of Miss Brown's, being in service in France. The fire had been smouldering during the afternoon and when finally it go to where there was a current of air the flames spread quickly to the second floor and thence to the attic. When the firemen arrived they found themselves contending with a stubborn blaze but by the use of chemicals got it out in remarkably quick time without any great damage to the household furniture. The residence, however, will have to undergo repairs amounting to perhaps $1,000. The loss on contents will be about $100.

The query as to whether or not the call to the fire department was necessary is the first of the kind that has been recorded since the telephone company put its ban on certain messages into effect, but is ascribed by fire department officials and others to a strict performance of duty on the part of the operator. The company, and not the girl, are to blame, they say.

West End Young Couple Soon To Be Married

Announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Traynor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Traynor, of 1041 South Second street, to Joseph Francis Bennett, of 1179 South Second street.

The ceremony will take place in St. Mary's church, Wednesday afternoon, November 27, at 4 o'clock. It will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Both Miss Traynor and Mr. Bennett are among the West End's best known and most popular young people. The latter is employed as machinist at one of the local industrial plants.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Lillian McGarry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McGarry, of Stebbins place, to Bernard J. Fee, of Spruce street. No date has been set for the wedding.

SERGEANT HERBERT TERRY MISSING IN ACTION.

B. A. Paroubek, of Watchung avenue, ahs received word from Tone Kulik, the former cornet player at the Plainfield Theatre, that he has arrived safely in France. Mr. Kulik sends his regards to all his old friends in Plainfield. He is a member of the Check Slovak Arms.

Republiccns Lose Fifteen Seats In New Jersey Assembly

Although the Republicans at Tuesday's election elected their nominees for the United States Senate—Governor Walter E. Edge for the long term and Senator David Baird for the short term—they lost besides at least one Representative in Congress, fifteen seats in the State Assembly.

With returns slowly from about three-quarters of the State, Governor Edge's plurality over Charles M. La Monte was 13,998, and Senator Baird's plurality over Charles O'Connor Hennessy was 8,826.

President Wilson's home town, Princeton, went Republican. Governor Edge carried the borough by 155 and the President's own district by 56 plurality.

In the State the Democrats elected thirty Assemblymen, just one-half of the total. This was a gain of sixteen Assemblymen for the Democrats, and means that the Republicans have lost their hold on the Assembly, although they still will retain control, on a joint ballot, of the Legislature, having a mafiority of nine. The 143d Legislature will consist of forty-five Republicans and thirty-six Democrats.

Complete returns from the Fifth Congressional district show that Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, was elected a member of the House of Representatives by 3,500 majority over Richard A. Clement, Democrat, of Elizabeth, for the long term. William F. Birch, Republican, of Dover, also defeated, Mr. Clement for the short term by 2,500 majority.

Charles L. Morgan, Arthur N. Pierson and Arthur E. Warner, Republican candidates for re-election to State Assembly, easily defeated the Democratic candidates, Charls P. Senger, Stanley McIntosh and John F. X. Cassely. The majorities in each instance were about 4,000, with Morgan leading the others.

One of the most surprising results in the county was the vote given James J. McCann, Oemocrat, of this city, in his race for the position of county registrar. He received a total vote of 1,207, although his Republican opponent, Edward L. Bauer, won out by a total vote of 12,401. Mr. McCann ran exceptionally well in Plainfield, showing that he was a big favorite with Republicans. He carried his own district, the First of the First ward, something new in the annals of local Democracy.

Mayor Leighton Calkins' majority over Charles P. Senger, Democratic candidate for mayor, was 1,106. The mayor received a total of 1,759 votes, while his opponent polled 653. The total vote in the city was light as the registration was about 2,800.

The other local officials elected were as follows: Tax collector, William R. Townsend, Republican, unopposed; councilman-at-large, Charles C. Graves, Republican, unopposed; councilmen, First ward, Nelson Y. Hull, Republican; Second ward, short term, Arthur Lovell; long term, Marion S. Ackerman; Third ward, G. Herbert Condict, Republican; Fourth ward, short term, James Maynard; long term, A. E. Force.

Congressman-elect Ernest R. Ackerman, from the Fifth New Jersey Congressional district, comprising Morris and Union counties, issued this statement at midnight Tuesday:

"Election to membership in the House of Representatives from the Fifth Congressional district, comprising a quarter of a million people, can have but one meaning; that the people of Morris and Union counties demand as vigorous and united a program for peace as that which was developed for the prosecution of the war. As a business man I pledge my best endeavors to obtain a board trade, commercial and industrial reconstruction program, the adoption of a budget system, strict economy in national financing and an accounting to the people of war expenditures. As a citizen I pledge responsiveness to the new era wherein the rights of all are respected and conserved. In this way I hope to convey through service my appreciation of the confidence that was reposed in me as expressed at the polls."

Air Service Open to Recent Registrants

The air service of the army has issued a call to red-blooded Americans of mechanical and business training to "get on the job and keep the American aces in the air." The production of airplanes has reached a quantity basis of such huge proportions that thousands of skilled mechanics are needed immediately to fill places in the great organization. To keep the airplanes soaring not only are men of technical training needed, but clerks, stenographers, storekeepers and men of general business experience must be obtained.

Announcement is made that registrants of September 12 only may be voluntarily inducted at the air service depot, Garden City, L. I., N. Y. It is stated that applicants who have a knowledge of any of the lines of service mentioned will be accepted. It is presumed that applicants will be stationed at the air service depot for a time. Either men classified for general or limited military service may be accepted.

New Clue May Lead to Arrest Of Man Killers

A new clue gained by the local police, yesterday, leads to the belief that the two unknown automobilists whose car ran down, and so badly injured Rafael Fanare, at East Front street and Terrill road, Sunday night, that he died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday morning, may yet be apprehended.

The two men, who were in a touring car, put on all speed after the accident and have not yet been located. Their windshield was smashed by the impact and this fact has led to the clue that is now being worked up.

The accident occurred at East Front street and Terrill road, Sunday night at 7:30, as Fanare was returning from Scotch Plains to his home on Raymond avenue, this city. He was carrying his two-year-old son, Tony, in his arms and when struck by the automobile, the son was hurled fully twenty feet away to the side of the road but escaped harm. The father was rendered unconscious and remained that way to the end.

The accident was witnessed by Louis Funk and Bertha Funk, of 127 Jackson avenue; Paul Smith, of 173 North avenue, and Gladys Boss, of 215 Jackson avenue. They were unable to get the number of the car or a good description of its occupants.

Louis Funk sent word to the police and she latter in turn despatched the ambulance from Muhlenberg Hospital to the scene but before it arrived Percy A. McVoy, of 1010 Prospect avenue, came along in his automobile and was apprised of the affair. He immediately placed Fanare in the machine and removed him to the institution.

The police took charge of the little boy but it was not until after 10 o'clock that Captain John Flynn established the identity of Fanare and delivered the little fellow to the anxious mother who was waiting for her husband and son's return.

Husband and Wife Die of Pneumonia

Herman Overland, of 346 Second street, Dunellen, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, from pneumonia. Has was twenty years old. His wife died at Dunellen yesterday with the same disease.

Mr. Overland is a nephew of Hermand Overland, of West Fourth street, and formerly resided here.

"Feeds and Speeds" Will Tell of Shop Doings at Pond's

The 1,000 employes of the Pond Machine Tool Company will soon be kept fully informed of all the doings and the different departments of the big plant by an eight-page news pamphlet in magazine form, which is soon to be issued by the company each month. The first edition will be ready for distribution November 15, and Emmett O'Brien, the managing editor, and his staff of reporters and correspondents are now busy on the details. Each department, such as the machine shop, foundry, drawing room, pattern shop and office, will have their own column for news matter, thus producing a corps of writers thoroughly conversant with each section. There will also be special stories of an interesting nature illustrated with cuts.

Works' Manager Clever offered a prize to the shop employe who would submit a name for the publication that would be acceptable to a committee of judges and this was won by Charles Pfeffer, of 412 Grant avenue, attached to the draughting department. His suggestion was "Feeds and Speeds," terms that apply to lathe and planer work and which are much used at the Pond plant. There were many other good suggestions, among them, "The Ponderer," "Pond Croakings," "Pond's Extracts," "Pond Lily," "Bench and Board," "Jib and Die," and "Chipnings," ome of these will be retained as headings for special columns.

The idea of a shop publication has been growing steadily in popularity in recent years and scores of the big plants in this part of the country sponsor them. The Spicer Company was the first to issue one locally, and soon afterward the Standard Aero Corporation introduced a publication called "The Traitor." The Pond effort will be the third of the city's shop publications.

CHARLES B. STEPHENS BURIED HERE SUNDAY.

The body of Charles B. Stephens, a former local letter carrier, who died at Bangor, Pa., yesterday, will be brought to Plainfield Sunday on the 2:27 train from Easton and buried in Hillside cemetery. The G. A. R. will be in charge of the service and Rev. J. O. McKelvey will officiate. Mr. Stephens was seventy-seven years old.

Armistice Unsigned But City Joyously Celebrates

Unofficial News That Kaiser's Forces Had Surrendered, Sufficient Excuse for Plainfield to Plunge Into A Delirium of Delight---Business Suspends to Permit Young and Old to Engage in Street Parades of Thanksgiving

Ten New Year's eves, seventeen old time election nights and a half a dozen old home weeks all rolled into one could not have produced as much joy as rampaged through Plainfield all yesterday afternoon and last night, after the welcome news came to this city that the world's greatest conflict was at an end.

While thousands of men, women and children rushed through the down-down streets, delirious with excitement, the armistice was still unsigned but a little thing like that made no difference to the multitude. The fact that Germany had stopped fighting was sufficient excuse to produce pandemonium and the kill-joys who kept insisting that the message was unofficial were told that it made no difference, the shot and shell had ceased to fly and some day soon the boys are coming home. That was the feeling that made everybody go almost stark, staring, raving mad with joy.

The fun started at about 2 o'clock directly after the bulletins telling of the truce were displayed in the Record windows. Whistles blew, church bells rang and thousands poured from their homes to the streets. The Pond Tool Works men threw down their tools and declared a holiday for themselves. As they filed toward town all the West and East End plants did the same and gradually business was suspended everywhere. The city gave itself over to celebrating the biggest victory the world has ever known and individual roughness was overlooked or forgiven because of the feeling that existed everywhere.

Members of Plainfield Lodge of Elks, headed by Joseph Harrigan and Fred Firstbrook, started the ball rolling yesterday afternoon. They quickly gathered up a brass band and started down Front street with what was a small parade at first but which soon grew to a procession many blocks long. Decorated automobiles and youngsters with wash-boilers, dish-pans, horns or anything that would make a noise were let in to make the demonstration bigger.

All the rest of the afternoon there was noise, more noise and still more noise. Chairman John J. Varley, of the Citizens' Committee for Soldiers and Sailors, was also alive to the situation and gathering a corps of assistants planned for a big parade starting at 8 o'clock at night. Bands and drum corps were told to be on hand regardless of expense and they were. The crowd that gathered, however, became too impatient to wait for the announced hour and started off at 7:30. All around town it went shouting, singing, hooting and yelling. Joy reigned supreme as the big crowds surged about the marchers. Conventionality was thrown aside for the time being because no one cared for trifles in that moment of mad delirium. The parade was a huge success and so was the entire celebration.

Omcial despatches from Eudope today state that General Foch and German commissioners will meet some time this afternoon to discuss the proposed armistice. Nobody doubts but what it will be signed so who cares whether or not yesterday's jamboree was a little premature.

A Sneeze Places Him In Hospital

A sneeze emitted by William Jaeger, of West Fourth street, on Wednesday co contracted his body that his intestines became knotted and as a result, he had to be hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital. He secured relief from external treatment but complications have developed that may make an operation necessary.

Mr. Jaeger is a fireman attached to headquarters and was only just recovering from an attack of influenza when injured by the sneeze.

Food Campaign to Commence December 1

Plans are being advanced rapidly by the Federal Food Administration for New Jersey, for the campaign of food saving to be launched December 1 and continuing one week.

The Food Administration already has put into effect the new order from Washington, stipulating an increased sugar allowance of three pounds per person per month for householders, and three pounds for every ninety meals for public eating houses, instead of two pounds, the regulation heretofore. Additional certificates for this 50 per cent. increase will be sent out to grocers, and hotel and restaurant keepers covering their November allotment. Although the allowance of sugar has been increased, it is set forth that it is still necessary for a purchaser to sign the grocer's pledge card with each purchase.

The hotel men's section is now in full swing, following the first meeting of the county leaders in Newark, Thursday of last week, and an itinerary of other meetings throughout the State is being prepared. The campaign to have every eating house proprietor sign a food pledge is already launched and will be continued until the fifteenth of the month.

Substantial progress is being made in the organization of a Speakers Bureau connected with the Food Administration and in charge of C. O. Johnston, as chairman. The speakers will carry the food saving propaganda into schools, theatres, moving picture houses, fraternal societies, women's clubs, labor unions, factories and church organizations. They also will have the assistance of scout masters, who will address boy scouts and school boys.

County administrators will be called to Newark for a meeting with the State Food Administrator W. S. Tyler, on November 20. Special arrangements have been made for the attendance at this meeting of John W. allowell and William A. Dupee, representing the Administration Division at Washington and who are members of Mr. Hoover's personal staff. These gentlemen will go into the food program at length, and their presence will enable the county administrators to become more clearly and personally acquainted with Washington's point of view for carrying on the food campaign.

Howard Armstrong Made a Lieutenant

Mrs. Howard J. Armstrong, of Washington avenue, received a cablegram message from her husband, Wednesday, stating that he had been commissioned a lieutenant in the infantry division of the army. The news substantiated the predictions of his friends before he went to France last May, that he would soon rise in the ranks as from the time he entered the service, he proved himself a soldier in the full sense of the word. He is a present awaiting assignment to the fighting forces at the front where he saw two months of trench life early last summer as a member of Company A, 311th Infantry.

Lieutenant Armstrong went to Camp Dix with the first contingent of Plainfield National Army men in September, 1917. He was son made a corporal and later a sergeant. He attended the Camp Dix school for special instructions in the use of hand grenades, going overseas later as a full-fledged grenadier. When the 311th entered the front line trnches, Sergeant Armstrong proved to be one of its best fighters and was given special mention on several occasions. On returning to a rest camp back of the lines later his application for membership in the infantry training school was acted upon favorably. He proved to be an apt pupil and the lieutenant's commission was awarded after he had successfully passed all examinations.

Previous to becoming a soldier, Lieutenant Armstrong was credit manager for the Vacuum Oil Company, of New York. His wife, whom he married just previous to going to Camp Dix, was formerly Miss Hazel Hameal, of East Seventh street.

United States Need Not Worry About Potash

Germans who said the United States entered the war to grab Germany's big potash deposits didn't know much about the natural resources of this country.

A new $1,000,000 unit of a potash plant on Searles Lake, in southern California, was due to start operations today. It will bring the daily production of one company operating on this one lake up to 140 tons a day. The United States before the war used only 250,000 tons of potash a year, most of which was imported. Because of cheaper foreign labor it had never been worth while to develop American potash or nitrate deposits on a large scale.

"Grabbing Germany's potash deposits" with an army and navy is costing Uncle Sam more than $50,000,000 a day. With half a day's expenditures he could develop enough potash deposits to supply the country for a century.

Engineers estimate that Searles Lake alone will supply normal American nitrate needs for nearly a century.

Miss Catharyn Connolly, of West Fourth street, who has been critically ill at Muhlenberg Hospital with pneumonia, was reported today as being slightly improved.

Zionists Plan A Big Meeting

Next Sunday evening a Zionist patriotic mass meeting, with a number of prominent speakers and a musical program, has been arranged to be held in the Y. M. H. A. hall, West Front street. The first great anniversary of the most important event in Post-exilio history of the Jewish people on the second of November, 1917. Britain, one of the greatest world powers, issued the following proclamation to the Jewish people:

"His Majesty's Government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a National Home for the Jewish people and will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object."

The Jewish people were thrilled by the great event and stirred to ready action for full materialization of an ideal long cherished but now for the first time seen as within actual reach. Never before has the Jewish world been so aglow with hope and expectancy and determination to labor, sacrifice and achieve, as it has been in this most memorable of years. The Belfour declaration has come to be known as the Magna Charta of Jewish freedom, it was a real act of emancipation for the Jew, one that embraces the Jew in his totality as a ratical and national entity, irrespective of his present abode or immediate political allegiance, it addreses itself not to the Jews of any one country but to the entire Jewish people wherever located, the principle for which the great democracy of the world today fights, demanding that justice be done to the Jews, failing in this would mean the bankruptcy of the entire platform of lofty ideals so often evoked by Allied statesmen, as a result of this declaration over ten thousand voluntary Jewish young men from America and Canada have braved the terrors of submarine infested seas to go to the Holy Land and help General Alenby and to redeem with their blood the sacred soil of their fathers for the first time sinc the year 135 C. E. has Jewish blood been shed for the deliverance of the Jewish homeland. The cornerstone of a great Hebrew university has been laid at Mt. Scopus in Jernsalem. A merical unit, consisting of 50 nurses and a staff of doctors, have been sent by the American Zionist Organization, with the assistance of other Jewish organizations, to minister to the sick. The Zionist administration commissioned under the leadership of Prof. Weitzman, with the co-operation of the British Government, is now helping to reconstruct the foundations that have been laid by pioneers in the last forty years.

A very interesting program has been arranged for the meeting Sunday night. Among the speakers will be Hon. Judge Newcorn, Dr. J. J. Price, Joseph Kaplan and a representative of the National organization, P. M. Raskin, who is the author of a collection of "Songs of a Wonderer," recently issued by the Jewish Publication Society of America, a life-long friend of Israel Zangwell. There will be no collection. Admission free. The public is cordially invited.

News of the Theatre

Griffith's Big War Spectacle Coming to Plainfield Theatre

Through special arrangements just completed, David Wark Griffith's tremendous spectacle, "Hearts of the World," with a special symphony orchestra, has been secured for a limited engagement here and will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre three nights, commencing Thursday evening, November 14, with matinees Friday and Saturday.

"Hearts of the World" is the big Griffith production on which this master genius spent more than eighteen months, and during the making of which he was on the battlefields of France working under the auspices and with the hearty co-operation of David Lloyd George, Prime Minister of England, and other British and French war officials. This, however, does not indicate that "Hearts of the World" is a war play, for Mr. Griffith has been exceptionally anxious to have it known that this latest effort is a simple love story with the world-war serving as the background. He describes it as "the story of a village; an old fashioned play with a new fashioned theme." The unfolding of the romance takes place in a French village prior to and during the German occupation, and all the experiences of the French throughout the trying times are graphically depicted as only Griffith can do it. Those who have seen his former triumph, "The Birth of a Nation," will realize just what this means, for Griffith is a producer who masterfully stops at nothing to accomplish his ends.

Some idea of the magnitude of "Hearts of the World" may be gained from the fact that more than one million fighting men figure in the story, as do twenty thousand horses, squadrons of airplanes, fleets of Zeppelines, hundreds of lumbering tanks in action and miles of artillery.

Comedy of Politics Played Up Strong In "Oh Girl" Show

Politics is the funniest thing in the world, when one gets down under the surface and penetrates the veneer of seriousness. So the author of the "Oh, Girl" production which will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, matinee and night, has not gone amiss when he makes politics a large part of his fun theme in "Friendly Rivals," the book which serves as a vehicle for the company. Johnnie Jess is cast in the amusing Irish comedy role of Michael Casey, who is a hotel proprietor and who is also an alderman with political aspirations to go still further up the political ladder. His co-worker in the comedy field is Danny Murphy, who portrays the laughable character of Anton Blitz, who is Casey's rival and who also has political ambition. Many of the situations which are developed delve into an unusual depth of comedy and an audience finds all the laughter it desires in the production. Louis Ditmar is author of the book, which has been revised by Abe Leavitt. Mr. Ditmar is also responsible for the music, which is tuneful and cheery.

Former Plainfield Fire Fighter Tells Of His Work In Canal Zone Department

A very good idea of the life of a fireman in the Panama Canal zone is contained in a letter received by Captain George Mehl, of No. 3 hose company, from Arthur Erber, a former member of the city department who received a Government appointment to the Canal Zone Brigade two months ago. He is now located at Balboa Heights, on the line of the big inter-ocean "ditch," and from the tone of his epistle is much pleased with his new environment.

Mr. Erber, who lived with his mother at 437 West Fourth street, was in the Plainfield department for two years. While stationed at headquarters on East Second street, he took the examination for the Canal Zone department and received an appointment after meeting all requirements. He left New York early last month and his trip to Panama, the city he is in and his daily duty are described in the following way:

Balboa Heights,
Canal Zone.

Dear Captain:

I left New York, Sunday, October 6, and arrived here Sunday, October 13. I woke up on Monday morning, October 7th and no land could be seen, nothing but the ocean all around me. I did not sight any land for four days and they were small islands, was too far away to find out what islands they were but one place I saw was Cuba, with Haiti in the distance. They were all green and looked like the Watchung Mountains in the summer only for the water all around. The sea was not very rough, but luck would be, some people were seasick. I felt find, had plenty to eat and drink. No smoking was allowed after dusk and no lights, only those which were where they would not show, and I suppose we looked like black clouds in the distance. The ship was well armed and I'll bet if Old Snob had poked his nose up you know what would have happened. He would be a thing of the past.

The country down here is very pretty, everything is green and it looks like summer in the States; concrete sidewalks, Amesite roads, with palm and coconut trees for shade, beautiful shrubbery around various living quarters and buildings, baseball fields, and grandstand built of concrete and steel. The living quarters here are nicer than some of our houses on West Seventh street, and thereabouts. They are of concrete, red tile roofs, all have large verandas screened in, running water and electric lights, and some of the streets are like a white way, no dark streets here to let you fall over somebody, as was the case home last winter. Trolley cars and no dinkies either, up-to-date ones; busses, big Kelley-Springfields, also Fords with right-hand drive, as they keep to the left here and not to the right as in the States. The in lizzies are built special for this country. They take you anywhere around town for 10 cents. The negroes, who are Jamaicans, hire Fords and do a sort of hacking business, similar to our taxi service in the States. These negroes talk with English accent and they do most of the laboring work, also running boats, clerical work and waiting on tables, but they act much different then our negroes.

It is warm here at times, but this is the rainy season and we have showers most every day. There is a breeze always after these showers and the nights are cool enough to use a blanket. This is a very sanitary place. Vacuum street cleaners, hooked up on motor trucks, are on the go all day long. The eating places are very neat and they serve fine eats of all descriptions, at reasonable prices, on the self-service plan. You can obtain a good meal for about on an average of 50 cents.

Now I will tell you about the fire station in which I am located. It is like No. 4 engine house at Netherwood, but much bigger. We have about 10 men, one American-La France engine similar to No. 4's. The down I am in is also headquarters for fire and police as the administration building is situated here. The days off are practically the same as they were home, also the meal hours. Things are quiet here: They have various fire stations situated throughout the Canal Zone. All have good equipment for fighting fires. One thing we don't have here is cellar fires. As regards to cellars there are none and no high buildings. They are mostly about two or three stories high, but of concrete with red tile roofs. No needs of any coal fires as an il stove will do all your cooking. You do not need any hot water here to speak of. Our quarters in the fire stations are fine, nice lounging room, observatory veranda on second floor, all screened in, where you can have your nice smoke, also read if you so desire. We do not have many fires. Mostly everything here is bought with commissary tickets, no cash money. You have to buy a book, either a $5 one or a $15 one. You can buy anything from meals to clothes with tickets, practically speaking, everything. You can take a nap in the afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock.

I would like to know the news around the old town, so if you will oblige, let me know. I hope I have given yo ua good description of this new country. I send my best regards to everybody. You you are all well, as I am feeling fine, I have not heard of influenza here yet.

Your friend,
ARTHUR ERBER.

Four Able Speakers To Address Young People's Conference

Four men in the speakers' bureau of the National Committee on the Churches and the Moral Aims of the War will be heard in the young people's conference that is to be held in the Presbyterian church at Westfield on the evenings of November 18, 19, 20 and 21. They will be Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; Rev. William T. Boult, a Bound Brook pastor who has just returned from Y. M. C. A. duty in France; Rev. Frank M. Crouch, of the Social Service Commission of the Protestant Episcopal church, and Rev. Arthur T. Guttery, of the Wesleyan church, England, who came to the United States with Bishop Gore in the summer, and who is speaking at various points.

These four addresses in connection with the conference are designed to give to the Presbyterian young people and any others who may be present a larger glimpse of world movements and show the way to an active participation in the reconstruction work after the war.

The sessions are to be held in the chapel of the Westfield Presbyterian church, a building admirably adapted to the purpose. The young people of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church, the Ladies' Aid Society and the pastor, Rev. W. I. Steans, D. D., are all co-operating to make the reception to the others Endeavorers, Westminster Guild members and Mission Band workers hearty and enjoyable. Rev. George E. Bevans as chairman of the committee on young people's work in the Presbytery of Elizabeth is in charge.

Supper arrangements are in the hands of the women of the entertaining church, and each evening a plain, wholesome menu will be served at nominal cost, the period devoted to this feature being from 6:30 to 7:20 o'clock.

No registration fee will be charged. Young people on reaching the church will register their names and the churches from which they come, Mrs. John C. Morrow being in charge of this work.

Text books for use in the mission study classes may be purchased at the literature table, which will be in charge of Miss Margaretta P. Stevenson, of Roselle, secretary of young people's missionary work in the presbytery.

Guidance in the selection of conferences will be given to such delegates as wish it. Miss Harriette R. Halloway, of Plainfield, educational secretary of the presbyterial societies for home and foreign missions, will have charge of this work.

The first study period will be from 7:20 to 8:05 o'clock. Mission study, Bible study and methods of young people's work will be the subjects. The general topic for the home and foreign mission study will be "Christianity and the World's Workers." Miss Gertrude Schultz, secretary of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in the Presbyterian church, will teach the book, "Ancient People at New Tasks," by Willard Price. The home mission text book for the year, "The Path of Labor," will be presented by Mrs. M. J. Gildersleeve, secretary of the Woman's Board of Home Missions.

While these two mission study sessions are going on there will be a third class which on Monday and Tuesday evenings will consider "The Romance of Bible History and Study," under leadership of Rev. Louis B. Crane, D. D., pastor of Westminster Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, who has specialized in Bible study. On Wednesday and Thursday evenings the class will become better informed Presbyterians, following under the leadership of William Ralph Hall, secretary of young people's work for the entire denomination, the topic, "Inside Information About Our Church Boards, and How They Work."

Mr. Hall will be present on all four evenings, and in the period from 8:10 to 8:55 he will conduct a conference on "The Best Program and Methods of Work for Young People's Societies." Simultaneously there will be a conference on the topic, "After the War—What?" Industrial, political, social and religious problems of the reconstruction period will be presented by the four men who are to speak at the general public meeting which will close the conference each night.

Jersey Central Among Roads Earning a Surplus

The railroad administration has made public a list of twenty-six railroad companies which apparently are prospering to such an extent that they are able to turn over surplus earnings to the government administration without asking for a return of part of these or additional government help. Nearly $78,000,000 has been paid in this manner.

Roads with this record include the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville & Nashville, which together turned over $14,050,000 from their surplus fund; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, $9,200,000; Central of New Jersey, $2,500,000; Pullman car lines, $2,000,000, and Los Angeles & Salt Lake, $1,050,000.

AMERICAN DEAD WILL BE BROUGHT HOME.

All the American dead in France will be taken home after the war, according to orders received by the army chaplains.

The Grave Registration Bureau has been working with this in view, but nothing definite regarding the future disposition of the dead was known in France until instructions came to the chaplains from Washington.

More Nurses Needed For Army and Navy

Thirty thousand nurses, more than half of whom are serving soldiers and sailors at home and abroad, were on Red Cross duty October 1, the War Council announced this week.

Large as this number is, 9,000 more nurses will be needed by the army alone by the first of the year, and should the war continue until July a total force of 50,000 will be needed, the report states. The Red Cross has spent $850,000 in equipping nurses assigned to overseas duty and approximately $1,500,000 in equipping hospitals.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Former Mayor and Mrs. George W. V. Moy, of Franklin place, are in receipt of a letter from their son, Lieutenant Gordon V. Moy, which refutes an notification from the authorities at Washington that Lieutenant Moy has been among the missing in action. The Washington telegram said that the young lieutenant had not been accounted for since September 26, but the letter, dated October 11, explained that he had become separated from his squadron during an attack but that he had returned back of the lines several hours later.

William Reed, of Manson place, whose wife, Ethel Harrison Reed, died three weeks ago, has entered the U. S. Naval Service as a diver in the Central Salvadge District. Mr. Reed has been a professional diver in the employ of a private concern for a number of years and is capably fitted for the duties that will devolve upon him.

One of the casualty lists this week announced that William Grobes, of 525 West Fourth street, this city, was seriously wounded in action. Grobes, who is colored, went overseas with the 15th Infantry and early last summer was slightly wounded, but returned to his company after a short stay in the hospital. Previous to enlisting in the army he was employed as a taxi-cab driver. The same casualty list stated that Eldridge A. Gorman, of 205 Rushmore avenue, this city, had been seriously wounded. Miss Ella Mackey, of 1232 Arlington avenue, received word by letter this week that her brother, Lieutenant Sydney A. Mackey, of the 313th Machine Gun Company, had been slightly wounded. The young lieutenant is at present in a base hospital but hopes to be ready for duty again in a short time.

Damage estimated at $2,500 resulted from a fire discovered at 8 o'clock, Wednesday morning, in the residence at 216 East Sixth street, occupied by F. G. Ausbourne and K. R. Hess. The flames were caused by the over-heating of beams in a poorly constructed fire-place. They made their way between rafters to the side of the house and ate through to the outside, thence worked up to the roof. This was of slate over old shingles, one of the meanest kind to contend with in fire-fighting. By the time the firemen arrived in response to an alarm, the blaze had made big headway and offered stubborn resistance. A good part of the roof had to be torn apart and indoors it was necessary to chop through flooring and walls to get at the flames. It was nearly two hours after the firemen got busy before the recall was sounded. The house, which is owned by V. M. Persell, suffered $2,000 of the damage and the remainder is placed on the furniture of the two families occupying the premises.

Released only a short time ago after spending sixty days on the County Farm, Benjamin Eddy, of East Second street, was sent back there Monday for another long visit after his arraignment before Judge DeMeza on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was sentenced to serve sixty days and pay a $100 fine, but not having the money will remain on the farm one day for each dollar unpaid. Eddy was arrested on Park avenue Sunday morning. In the city court, Tuesday, William Mohan, B. Herman and Elias Southard were arraigned on D. and D. charges. Mohan signed the pledge for a year and was given a suspended sentence. Southard and Herman were afraid to trust themselves on the pledge proposition, but promised Judge DeMeza that they would try to live better lives. The promise brought them suspended sentences.

Among the exemption claims passed upon by the Second District Board at Newark, this week, were thirty-three from Plainfield. The registrant in most of the cases claimed 2-D industrial occupation, and was allowed in about half the instances. Other claims will be passed upon during the next few days. The claim of James Fitzgerald, of Scotch Plains, who asked to be placed in III-L, was given II-D.

Miss Janet Richards was greeted by a large audience at Hartridge Auditorium, yesterday afternoon, when she began her eighth season of fortnightly talks on current topics. Her subject was "How We Are Winning the War and America's Part Therein." She will continue this subject at the next talk to be given on November 21.

Plainfield commuters are much pleased with the installation of a new morning train on the Jersey Central leaving the east bound station at 9 a. m. It takes the place of the 8:59, which was discontinued some time ago, and which left a wait from 8:34 to 9:37. It is understood that a number of other improvements in the service are to be made in the near future.

The Plainfield Draft Board, through Secretary Walter Freeman, has instructed the Board at Nassau county, New York, to induct John Stevens, of this city, in service. Stevens was arrested in Nassau county as a draft dodger but claimed that he had been in the army and was discharged after receiving a wound that stiffened one arm. Investigation showed that Stevens had registered but had failed to file his questionnaire. If, after examination, he is found to be physically fit, he will be placed in the ranks at Camp Upton.

The following Plainfielders have voluntarily offered themselves for military and naval service and are now awaiting induction: Francis R. Williams and W. B. Lane, officers' training school, Camp Lee; Michael P. Broco and Michael Velard, Motor Transport Corps, Camp Jesup, Atlanta, Ga.; Walter L. Righter, Fred L. Wilson, Karl Mathiasen and Ronald F. Riblet, officers' training school, Camp Zachary Taylor; Abe Bender, LeRoy R. Mills, Cormick Caulfield, Motor Transport Corps, Camp Holabaird, Md.; Julius E. Erickson, officers' training school, Camp Fremont, Cal.; Stephen C. Murphy, John T. Diskin, Fred R. Murphy, Coast Artillery, Fort Totten; Vincent B. Miner, F. R. Crosby, Motor Transport Corps, Camp Johnson, Jacksonville, Fla.; Joseph A. Gallagher, Signal Corps, Washington; Leo Hirsch and Robert Semer, department military aeronautics, Washington; Clarence A. Buckstein and Gustave Wagla;, Coast Artillery, Fort Hamiltonu Bernard J. Kline, Charles S. Hedden, Motor Transport Corps, Washington; Cyril Newton Poling, Marine Corps, New York city, and George W. Yanse, U. S. Navy, New York city.

Richard S. Waring, son of O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, who has been in France since last summer with the Twenty-ninth Division, was recently promoted to the rank of captain and has been assigned to the Remount Division, which provides horses and mules for the cavalry and artillery during action. Captain Waring was originally a member of Troop D and saw service on the Mexican border in 1916 before going to Camp McClellan at the beginning of the present war.

Camp Dix soldiers, who have formed a dramatic society, will present a comedy, entitled "You'll Like It," at the Plainfield Theatre on Wednesday night, November 20.

Former United States Senator James E. Martine, who has been absent from his home for several weeks, returned Tuesday in time to vote. Mr. Martine and his wife will leave soon for Washington, where they will spend the winter.

For the purpose of organization and preparation for the advent call of the women of the Episcopal Church in America, a meeting will be held in the parish house of Grace church, Tuesday afternoon, November 12.

John Loftus, Irving D. Manley, James Noonan and A. T. Dickinson, selectives from the Plainfield district of Union county, will be inducted into service at Fort Hancock next Tuesday.

Mrs. Walter J. Bennett, of East Second street, who was seriously ill with influenza when her husband died from the disease last Friday, is reported as steadily improving and with excellent chances for complete recovery. In Mr. Bennett's case the influenza developed pneumonia. His funeral was held at Runyon's undertaking parlors Monday afternoon and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Abel, of 959 West Third street, are the parents of a daughter born to them a few days ago. Mrs. Abel was formerly Miss McNeal, of West Third street.

Miss Kathlyn Hagan, of Liberty street, has fulyl recovered and returned to her position at the Wasson Piston Ring office after a ten days' illness with influenza.

The wedding of Miss Ella Stockfleth Groot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Groot, of 768 Woodland avenue, to Axel K. Jensen, of 512 New street, has been announced to take place at the home of the bride-elect's parents on Saturday night, November 23, at 7 o'clock.

William J. Moore, of 827 West Sixth street, who was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, last week, suffering from pneumonia, was reported today as improving.

Former City Clerk James T. MacMurray, now located at Winthrop Beach, Mass., was in town for a few days the forepart of the week. He stopped off while on his way to Washington on a business trip for the Meade-Morrison Company, of East Boston, with which he is now connected. Mr. MacMurray was recently very ill but has since fully recovered and to his old friends here appeared to be in his old time form.

Dr. H. V. Hubbard, of Central avenue, now a captain in the Medical Corps, who was stationed at a southern camp, left recently for overseas duty.

Dr. P. B. Cregar, of the U. S. Medical Corps, was at his home on Grant avenue the past week, on a leave of absence from his duties at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Frank Ingraham, who was recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, after undergoing three weeks' treatment for pleurisy, was able to return to work Monday. He is now located at the Pond Tool Works, although before his illness began, he was a foreman at the British-American Metals Company.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Cora Jean Gray, formerly of this city, but more recently of Jersey Cit, to Harry A. McCarthy, of Brooklyn. There ceremony was performed in New York on Saturday, October 26. The young couple will make their home in Brooklyn. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Gray, former wel-known Plainfielders.

John Oswald, of Westervelt avenue, returned Wednesday, after a visit at Nyack, N. Y., where he formerly resided.

August Schlick, of West Third street, who is taking a special Government course at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., was in town over the past week-end on a thirty-six hour furlough.

Joseph A. Lane, of East Front street, manager of Klaw & Erlanger's production of the "Riviera Girl," was in town the forepart of the week, having "run in" from Cleveland, where the show was compelled to lay off because of the influenza epidemic.

Gilbert Johnston, of 953 West Fourth street, was able to be out the forepart of the week, after a ten days' illness with influenza.

James G. Welch, of 407 Spooner avenue, is able to be about again after a long and serious illness with influenza and complications.

Rev. Father Walter Hennessey, who has been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for the past six weeks, during which he was critically ill with pneumonia, continues to improve steadily and may shortly be able to return to St. Mary's rectory.

1-A Men Eligible For Training School

All Class I men of either draft are eligible for the infantry officers' training school which starts at Camp Fremont, Cal., on December 1. Despite previous announcement of this, the impression has gone forth that Class I men of the first registration were barred and the War Department desires an emphatic correstion of this impression. Any registrant from 18 to 46 years who is able to pass the physical examination for general military service and who has a high school education or its equivalent is eligible. The only exception is that men in deferred classes on account of industrial or agricultural occupation may not be accepted.

Transportation, including meals, is furnished the successful candidates for Camp Fremont for their journey across the continent. Their pay as private begins from the date of call by their local draft board. Allotments of pay may be made, war risk insurance (maximum $10,000) taken out and other soldiers' prerogatives exercised if the candidate so desires. Graduates of the Camp Fremont school will be commissioned second lieutenants of infantry. The pay for their rank is $141.67 a month, while married men of this grade receive an additional $24 monthly for quarters.

UNION COUNTY COURT OF COMMON PLEAS

In the Matter of the application of Anthony A. Wormser to change his name to Anthony A. Ford. } ON PETITION, ETC. ORDER.

Upon reading the duly verified petition of Anthony A. Wormser, wherein it is prayed that permission be granted that said Anthony A. Wormser be allowed to assume the name of Anthony A. Ford pursuant to the provisions of an act entitled "An Act to authorize persons to change their names," Public Laws, 1874, page 21, and the several supplements and amendments thereto; it is ordered that the said petition and affidavit thereto annexed be filed with the Clerk of this Court and it further appearing to the satisfaction of the Court that notice of this application was duly published at least once a week for four weeks successively preceding the time of this application in the Plainfield Record, a newspaper published in the City of Plainfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey, and it further appearing that there is no reasonable objection why the said Anthony A. Wormser should not assume the name of Anthony A. Ford;

It is thereupon, on this first day of November, 1918, ORDERED that on and after the first day of December, 1918, the said Anthony A. Wormser, the petitioner herein, shall be permitted to assume the name of Anthony A. Ford.

CONSIDER THE BURDEN OF THE DOCTORS.

During the past year and more nearly one-third of Plainfield's doctors have given up their practice, closed their offices and entered the military service of the government. Their going has resulted in an added burden for those of their profession who remain behind and they have responded in a splendid manner. The help of everyone in the city is necessary if they are to meet the emergency successfully.

The influenza epidemic that is now disappearing had to come before we realized how serious the shortage of physicians in civilian life now is. During the past two weeks every doctor in the city has had to make hundreds of calls each day and it has not been uncommon for a single doctor to have 500 sick persons to administer to. In addition they have had to continue their work at the Muhlenberg Hospital, made doubly severe by the increased number of patients.

The war itself is now over but the demand for doctors will still be heavy, and we must prepare to let them go to care for our boys, who need them. Now, if never before, is the time to practise the simple laws of hygiene and sanitation so that much of the sickness now caused will be averted.

SEARCHING FOR THE INHUMAN MOTORISTS.

If there ever was a time when the people of this community hope their police department would run down a criminal it is right now. Young and old, horror-stricken by the act of the dastardly motorist who, last Sunday night, fled after knocking down and mortally injuring Rafael Fanare on East Front street, offer up the prayer that the perpetrators be brought to justice. There are very slight clues as to their identities but Chief Kiely and his men are working hard and may yet nab the inhuman wretches and bring them before a judge who will mete out the sentence their conduct deserves.

Automobile accidents such as this one was are apt to occur any time. Everybody knows that and expects it more or less but how any person possessing the slightest streak of manhood can rush away after becoming involved in one, leaving an innocent man to died in the road like a dog, is more than law-abiding citizens can understand. Jail sentences are almost too good for the pair that ignored Rafael Fanare after they had dropped him weltering in his blood, but even at that it would be better than allowing them to get away entirely. It will be another day of jubilation for Plainfield when the police lay an avenging hand on the merciless motorists.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLES' SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT.

When the people of this country were asked by their Government to raise the sum of six billions dollars, or the amount of sixty dollars for each individual, they look at the task as a stupendous requirement. It was freely predicted in some quarters that the amount could not be raised on such short notice and in such a short campaign period.

The returns indicate that the amount asked was oversubscribed almost a billion dollars. In exact figures the amount of the over-subscription is $866,416,300.

The campaign to raise the amount of the fourth Liberty Loan, as it turned out, was undertaken under the most unfavorable conditions. Peace talk engaged the attention of the country. It was generally discussed that the end of the war was near. Moreover, the influenza epidemic was raging at its height in many parts of the country during the campaign period.

The success of the Liberty Loan campaign indicates how fully the hearts of the whole people are in the war and how fixed is their determination to carry it through to a complete victory. The success of the fourth Liberty Loan, all things considered, is evidence of the American spirit as well as of American resources.

CELEBRATE BY HELPING THE RED CROSS SHOP.

In the midst of our thanksgiving for the good news that comes from across the ocean we must not forget that the women of Plainfield have been spending many weeks of hard work in preparing for the opening of the Red Cross shop in the Babcock building. Most people gained the impression that the Red Cross work is accomplished only while war lasts but as a matter of fact it is only one part of the great organization's undertakings. There is lots and lots to do in France and the rest of stricken Europe for years to come and the Red Cross will be a big factor in its doing.

The Red Cross shop in this city is to open about November 21. Not a single detail of the enterprise will be cast aside, now that the war itself is beginning to be over. Instead, the noble, patriotic women who have shouldered the task of bringing it about will work harder than ever and every dollar they make by its means will go toward succoring all the unfortunates who have been made homeless and penniless by the cruel conflict. The women in charge need the help of everyone of you. They want your contributions, they want your patronage, and they want your interest in what they are doing. Don't hesitate for one moment in lending a hand because the word has been sent broadcast over the world that there is to be no more fighting.

A list of the articles needed for the shop has already been published in the Record. It stands as it did before with additional emphasis on the appeal for clothing. Garments of every description can be used. Those not sold here and turned into dollars will be sent across the Atlantic to the people who so sorely need them. They are ragged, those people of Europe and your help will provide the raiment that their bodies must have. Look over every spare suit, gown or skirt you have and where you find one that you can spare, send it to the Red Cross shop. It will make you shout all the louder and sing all the more joyously every time an additional cablegram comes from the front with news of the move for complete restoration of peace.

The women of Plainfield are determined that the Red Cross shop shall be a success and the help of each and everyone of you in this day of thanksgiving will make their work lighter and the lot of the stricken Europeans that much better.

ONE CELEBRATION AND ANOTHER TO COME.

No one blames Plainfield for going almost mad with joy yesterday, when the news despatches announced that Germany had asked for a truce. The information was authentic enough to release the tension that has gripped the hearts and minds of hundreds of mothers and fathers for a year and a half, and the thought that their boys would no longer have to offer themselves for the supreme sacrifice was reason enough for going delirious with joy.

Everybody in town, no matter whether he or she had an immediate relative in the conflict, was glad. Joy ran amuck but it was the kind of running that everybody forgives and under the circumstances was considered justifiable. Unfortunately enough there will still be casualty lists to bring heart aches but the end of the world's greatest and most bitterly fought war is practically here.

Within a few months, perhaps, some of the boys who were rushed overseas to give the Hun his final pounding, will be coming back. They will be restored to the anxious mothers and relatives and within a year conditions may get back to something like normal. That means peace, the peace that everybody loves and has hoped for since the first shot was fired in Europe in 1914. When the Plainfield soldier lads come back we can have another celebration that will make yesterday's affair pale to insignificance. Keep it in mind now because your enthusiasm and help will be needed to show the brave fellows who stood the brunt of the frightful affair that we have been and will continue to be back of them.

GET RID OF THAT "HOLE IN THE WALL."

The movement started by the State Council of Defense for petitioning the government to improve the road leading from Perth Amboy to Morgan is a worthy one and should be successful. But the amount of good that would be accomplished would be doubled were efforts made to have the "hole in the wall" eliminated at the same time.

The opening of the railroad bank that acts as a valve for the great amount of traffic continuously flowing over that route is a disgrace to a State that prides itself on its system of roads, and is at the same time dangerous. Especially in summer weather, when thousands of autoists, many of them from Plainfield, go to and from the shore resorts, it is nothing uncommon to see hundreds of machines lined up at either side of the "hole" waiting to pass through.

Vehicles bound on government work are held up just the same as others and valuable time is lost. Ambulances returning with injured from the Gillespie explosion were held up for hours and were finally obliged to take the detour. The accidents, due to carelessness and those that are unavoidable, are many and more than once have been serious.

If the improvement is to be made as a government measure the entire job should be done and not half of it.

"ON WITH THE DANCE;" LET JOY BE UNCONFINED.

Of all the news that ever was news the news that came yesterday was the best we ever heard during this sweet young life of ours.

If you didn't get out yesterday afternoon and yell and holler and go plumb looney, you are a dingblistered, half-baked, good-for-nothing and ought to be made to go over to France and help fill in the trenches.

And that reminds us, we were included among the citizens who kicked work into the corner about twenty-four hours ago and have been on a holiday since. If things don't appear to be just right in the Record today, don't blame it on us. Blame it on the Germans.

We pause amid the mad world of jubilation, joyousness and rejuvenated spirits to extend our congratulations to Mr. Ackerman. May his shadow never grow less as he shows the folks down at Washington how much they missed in not having a Plainfielder in the House of Representatives long before this.

Government control also gives us that $10 telephone moving charge. Which we won't forget when permanent government ownership for the utilities comes on for discussion.

Speaking of that—wonder how long it'll take our barons to slide prices down to before-the-war levels after it's all over. Bet they'll move a lot less diligently than they did in boosting them to the skies.

We never tried a combination of Bevo and Mushrooms but inasmuch as North Plainfield township has insisted it is better than the old style we might just as well resign ourselves to the new order of things.

Applications may now be made for seats at the wake to be held at the Washington House and Pedeflous' as soon as the present licenses expire. Ginger pop, lemonade, butter scotch and hoky-poky will be distributed free of cost and deep bordered mourning cards will be passed about as souvenirs.

Absecon township, Atlantic county, is a darned old copy cat. It voted on the liquor question Tuesday, and went dry by one vote. If the recount shows twelve for the 'wets,'' Absecon township will pay us a royalty or Charlie Reed will lose his job as corporation counsel.

Chloroform was first used November 4, 1847.—Courier-News.

Quite true, quite true. And it's still being used on the news of twenty-five years ago.

We hereby nominate "Mike" Shannon for membership in the Peace Commission. He has kept in touch with inside proceedings for four years and can talk, fight or do anything else needed. Furthermore "Mike" is handy with his dukes and should anyone of the plenipotentiaries get huffy, he would put a shine on their nose that would make the "Gold Dust Twins" a drug on the market.

Thinking the matter over seriously, it appears as though that 131 majority, piled up by the North Plainfield "wets" was due to the thought that what was the use of adding $2,700 to the tax bills for no other reason than to make the saloonatics walk two or three blocks further for their suds.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When "Daddy" Layton's coal yard was on North avenue?

When "Tom Teaser," "Peter Pad" and "Sam Smiley" supplied us with our comine reading matter?

When you and another fellow clasped the top of a baseball bat alternately to decide whether his team or yours would have the first inning?

When you cracked your brain for excuses to keep your coat off so the rest of the gang could get a look at your first pair of galluses?

When "Mike" Conway, the night custodian of the North avenue station, entered the waiting room and ordered the lounge lizards to pass out into the night, all the while exclaiming: "Tinny out, boys; tinny out!"

Many Displays of Patriotism Brought Out by Epidemic

The Spanish influenza epidemic brought out many remarkable displays of patriotism on the part of the American people according to information received by the Department of Labor.

The influenza had the Central Pennsylvania coal mining regions in a strong grip for several weeks, but many former miners who had made enough money to retire went back to the mines, and in southern districts thousands gave up the Labor Day holiday to maintain production. Then they added to their already fine record by making an agreement to work Sundays, to make up as far as possible for the lost time through sickness.

In many munitions centers, and especially Bristol, Conn., the closing of the schools meant additions to the ranks of munitions workers. The teachers, unwilling to be idle when so much was at stake, volunteered as munition workers until the schools could be opened again.

The stage as well as the little red schoolhouse contributed its corps of emergency munitions workers, for in East Alton, Ill., when the theatres were closed, a number of actresses took jobs in munitions factories. Some of them like the work so much that they may not return to the stage.

And Chicago is in danger of a chorus girl famine. It is estimated that there were almost 2,000 chorus girls there when the epidemic forced all the theatres to close. However, so many of them found good jobs in munitions shops and in other kinds of war work that they may not return to their former work, theatrical managers say.

"Instances of the kind might be multiplied indefinitely," says the Department of Labor statement, "for whenever ordinary activities have been closed down through the epidemic working men and women who realize the necessity of applying every ounce of labor power to the war, have been turning to jobs that cannot be closed down. The closing of the churches has even brought a few ministers into emergency service in shipyards and the like."

RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF HERBERT B. SMITH.

At a meeting of the Business Men's Association of Plainfield held on Monday evening, November 4th, 1918, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in His all wise providence to suddenly remove from our number our universally esteemed friend, Herbert B. Smith;

RESOLVED, That by bowing submissively to the wise dispensation of Providence in taking our friend away, from his family, ourselves, and, his many other friends and associates, we desire to express our deep sorrow that one so highly and favorably regarded should thus suddenly be taken from us.

THAT we hereby bear testimony to his efficient and upright services in all the positions of trust and responsibility in which he has been called upon to serve, believing that his chief aim was that the business entrusted to his care should be honestly and impartially performed; his death was the cutting short of a life full of promise;

RESOLVED, That we hereby extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this their great loss which they are now called upon to bear;

RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolution be recorded in full on the minutes, that a copy of the same be published in the newspapers circulating in our City and that a copy of these resolutions be delivered to the family of the deceased.

Take Note of these Facts about THE UNITED WAR WORK CAMPAIGN

The Following Points brought out at the Mass Meeting Tuesday Night should be impressed upon every citizen of Plainfield:

1 THE NEED FOR THE WORK OF THE SEVEN WAR SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS WILL BE EVEN GREATER AFTER PEACE THAN DURING WAR. THE REASON IS OBVIOUS. DEMOBILIZATION WILL TAKE MONTHS TO ACCOMPLISH; MEANWHILE, WITH THE INCENTIVE OF BATTLE REMOVED, THE MEN WILL NEED MORE THAN EVER THE DIVERSION, RECREATION AND SUPPORT AFFORDED BY THESE ORGANIZATIONS.

2 THE GREAT WORK OF RECONSTRUCTION MUST BE UNDERTAKEN LARGELY BY AMERICAN MEN AND AMERICAN RESOURCES. THE UNITED WAR WORK CAMPAIGN IS THE FIRST STEP IN THIS RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM TO WHICH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE PRIVILEGED TO CONTRIBUTE.

3 NO SACRIFICE OF EFFORT OR MONEY THAT WE CAN POSSIBLY MAKE CAN COMPARE WITH THE SACRIFICE OF THOSE WHOSE LIVES HAVE BEEN GIVEN AND WHOSE BODIES HAVE BEEN MAIMED IN ORDER TO WIN THE WAR FOR US.

4 THE CO-OPERATION OF PEOPLE OF ALL FAITHS REPRESENTED BY THESE SEVEN ORGANIZATIONS IS THE GREATEST EVIDENCE OF THE SPIRITUAL UNITY WHICH IS THE OUTGROWTH OF THE WORLD WAR.

5 CRITICISM OF THE WORK OF ANY OR ALL OF THESE ORGANIZATIONS IS UNDOUBTEDLY TRUE AND WELL-FOUNDED; BUT THEIR ACCOMPLISHMENT SO FAR OUTSHADOWS THE ERRORS WHICH MUST BE MADE IN ANY ENTERPRISE OF SUCH MAGNITUDE AS TO RENDER RIDICULOUS THE POSITION OF THE FAULT-FINDER.

We believe that if these points are thoroughly appreciated, the people of Plainfield will be ready for the solicitors who wiil call at every house next week, and that their subscriptions will be liberal.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MILES S. WILSON.

The funeral of Miles Severius Wilson, son of former Councilman and Mrs. W. W. Wilson, whose death occurred Tuesday at his home at 1221 West Front street, after a brief illness with influenza and resultant pneumonia, was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan offered a high mass of requiem in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. There were numerous floral tributes, notable among them set pieces from Knights of Columbus and T. A. B. societies, of which the deceased was a member.

Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the pall-bearers being Clarence Higgins, Thomas Lappin, Martin O'Loughlin, David Doyle, William Wilson and Leo Wilson.

Mr. Wilson was born in this city twenty-nine years ago, and had always resided here. After leaving school he associated himself with his father in the grocery business, first at the latter's store at 816 West Third street, one of the oldest grocery stands in the West End; later on at Third street and Plainfield avenue, and for the past five years at Clinand for the past eight years at Clinton avenue and West Front street, where he managed a meat and grocery store owned by the senior Wilson. The latter business had been built up by the young man to extensive proportions through his managerial ability.

Mr. Wilson was a Fourth Degree member of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and was extremely popular with his fellow members. In the Clinton avenue section, where he had made his home since taking charge of the store there, he was also held in high esteem, and the hundreds of friends that he had in every part of the city never spoke of him in any but the kindliest terms.

Eight years ago Mr. Wilson married Miss Ella Lappin, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Lappin, of West Fourth street, who survives him, together with three children, two boys and a girl. They are Miles, Jr., aged 7 years; Marie, 5 years, and Reta, 11 months.

Mrs. Wilson was taken ill with influenza the same time her husband was but has since recovered, although her condition for several days was very serious. Beside his wife, children and parents, Mr. Wilson also leaves one sister, Miss Mary Wilson, and four brothers, William, Walter, John and Leo Wilson, all living at 816 West Third street. Walter and Leo are in the service, the former being in France at the present time as a member of the Aviation Corps, and the latter at Boston as a member of the Merchant Marine. The wife of the brother William, died two weeks ago from influenza and pneumonia, her home at the time being in the same building at Clinton avenue and West Front street, where Miles Wilson had been residing.

GEN. WM. MACKEY WHERRY.

William M. Wherry, Jr., of Central avenue, who has been one of Plainfield's most active workers in war activities, was this week summoned to Cincinnati, Ohio, by the death of his father, Brigadier-General William Mackey Wherry, a veteran of the Civil and Spanish Wars and prominent in American army circles for more than half a century. He was retired fro inactive service in 1899, since which time he had been making his home in Cincinnati. Beside his son, William, he leaves one other son, Harry of New York, and four daughters, three of whom live in Cincinnati, and the fourth in St. Augustine, Fla.

General Wherry was born in St. Louis and studied law after having been graduated from the University of Missouri. He responded to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers and soon was commissioned lieutenant. In July, 1861, he had attained the rank of major in the Missouri Militia and served as aid to Brigadier-General Nathaniel Lyon, who was killed at the battle of Wilson's Creek.

A medal of honor was awarded to Major Wherry for conspicuous heroism in rallying the Union troops after General Lyon was killed, and the next month he entered the regular army with the rank of lieutenant. He was assigned as aid to General Schofield and took part in several campaigns. He carried to Washington the rools and terms of surrender of General Johnston's army in April, 1865.

General Wherry accompanied General chofield to Europe in 1865 on a special mission regarding French intervention in Mexico. He was designated also to accompany the King of Hawaii on his tour of this country in 1874.

At the start of the Spanish-American War, General Wherry was a lieutenant-colonel of the Second Infantry, on duty in Montana. He went with his regiment to Siboney, and was in the march to Santiago and the fighting that preceded the surrender of that city.

ELLEN RUTH JACKSON.

Ellen Ruth Jackson, the five months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Jackson, of 216 East Fifth street, died Tuesday. The funeral was held in Hope chapel, yesterday afternoon, in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

HERBERT B. SMITH.

At the late home at 511 Division street, a private funeral service was held Wednesday afternoon over the body of Herbert B. Smith, advertising manager for the Courier-News, whose death came Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock after a ten days' illness with influenza and resultant pneumonia. Rev. B. H. McCoy, pastor of the First Methodist church, was the officiating clergyman and but for the restriction of the Board of Health, which has been asking that no large gatherings be held at funeral while the influenza epidemic continues, there would undoubtedly have been scores of friends in attendance. As it was those present were limited to relatives and near associates.

It has often been said that flowers contributed in memory of a popular citizen were "numerous and beautiful" but in this respect the words fail to justify the testimonial to the memory of Mr. Smith. The floral offerings were almost countless. In the aggregate they completely filled two rooms of the home beside enveloping the basket in a complete bower of roses, carnations and other tokens that symbolize the grief of the donors. One beautiful piece in the form of an anchor, standing many feet high, came from the Courier-News employes. Another was offered by the Business Men's Association and the third from Plainfield Lodge of Elks. The remainder were from relatives and friends and if numbers are any criterion, they showed that Mr. Smith was held in the highest esteem by hundreds of people.

Burial was in Evergreen cemetery, the following close friends acting as pall-bearers: John A. Gaffney, Chauncey F. Stout and William Morrison, representing the Courier-News office; Arthur E. Force, Harry N. Blimm and Harry G. DeMeza, representing the Business Men's Association and Plainfield Lodge of Elks.

Mr. Smith was born in this city thirty-one years ago and had resided here practically all his life. His father was the late Joseph B. Smith. After completing his education in the local schools, Mr. Smith accepted a business position in New York, where he remained until about seven years ago, at which time he went to Marshalltown, Iowa, to become advertising manager for the Times-Republican. He later left this concern to become traveling representative for the Marshalltown Oil Company and met with immediate success. He was greatly liked by the firm and in line for promotion but a yearning to return to his native heath led him to forsake the West for the East. He came back to Plainfield and joined the advertising staff of the New York Evening Post, from which publication he was drafted by the Courier-News five years ago.

In the local field, Mr. Smith was highly popular with the merchants, and other persons with whom he came in contact in a business way. With his social acquaintances the feeling was the same. At the Elks' Club, being a member of Plainfield Lodge, he was a welcome visitor as his company was of the congenial sort that is always sought. Seemingly, his disposition was always the same, quiet affable and attractive but nevertheless possessing a firm resolve of its own that demonstrated he was not lacking in red-blooded attributes.

When a young man, Mr. Smith developed natural talent for music that placed him in the front rank of the city's musicians. His favorite instrument was the 'cello and he frequently appeared at local entertainments as a soloist. These appearances included inertainments at the Y. M. C. A., the Hope Chapel minstrels and other annual affairs. He was one of the organizers of the Colonial Instrumental Quartet, the other members beside himself being Senator William N. Runyon, piano; B. A. Paroubek, violin, and Ernest Wilcox, flute. The quartet donated its services scores of times to strengthen entertainments given for fraternal or charitable purposes.

It might be said in passing that Mr. Smith was of a type of young citizen that Plainfield can ill afford to lose. He was destined for greater things and his departure leaves an aching void that passes from the family circle to the extreme confines of the community.

Beside his membership in Plainfield Lodge of Elks, the deceased was a member of the local Federation of Musicians and the First Methodist church. His near surviving relatives are his wife, who was Miss Gertrude Geier; a little daughter, Doris, living at the family home on Division street, and his mother, Mrs. Charlotte Haberle Smith, of 435 West Fifth street.

STANLEY STROKE.

Stanley Stroke, one of the best known Polish residents and prominent in Polish activities locally, died Monday in Muhlenberg Hospital, after a week's illness with influenza and pneumonia. He and his wife were both stricken by the malady and Mr. Stroke lived only a day after being removed to the institution. Mrs. Stroke is still there and in a serious condition.

The funeral of the husband was held in St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning, when Rev. Father Holsters offered a mass of requiem. The service was largely attended and the Polish Band, of which the deceased was a member, led the funeral procession from the church to St. Mary's cemetery, where burial was made.

Mr. Stroke, who was thirty years old, was a native of Poland but had lived in Plainfield the greater part of his life. He was a cleaner and presser by trade and for a number of years was in business for himself, although lately he had been in the employ of the Keller company. As a member of the John III Sobieski Society he represented this organization in all local fraternal conferences and took an active part in Plainfield's war and relief work. His loss will be greatly felt by the Polish people of the city.

Beside his wife and child, Mr. Stroke is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. oseph Stroke; one brother, Carl, and a sister, Miss Nellie Stroke, all living on Richmond street. The deceased's home was on Netherwood avenue.

MRS. ROBERT DORMAN.

Following an illness of about ten days with influenza and resultant pneumonia, death came at Muhlenberg Hospital at 6 o'clock Tuesday night, to Mrs. Mary Dorman, wife of Robert Dorman, of 611 Clinton avenue. She was removed to the institution directy after the disease first became apparent but despite every possible precaution, she continued to grow worse from the start.

Mrs. Dorman came to Plainfield from Worcester, Mass., twenty-three years ago. Her husband was employed for a long time at the Scott Press Works, but recently was appointed superintendent of the foundry department at the Pond Tool Works, succeeding the late Andrew McCardell. The family has always resided in the West End but Mrs. Dorman's acquaintanceship extends to every part of the city and borough. She was a member of the Monroe Avenue church, where she took an active part in the various women's organizations. She was greatly liked by all with whom she came in contact because of an attractive personality and a kindly, sympathetic disposition.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Dorman is survived by one daughter, Miss Carrie Dorman, and two sons, Samuel Dorman, now at San Antonio, Texas, as a member of the dental division of the Medical Corps, and Robert Dorman, Jr., all three making their home at the Clinton avenue address.

The funeral will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon and will be in charge of Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First M. E. church. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MISS BUCKLEY'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Miss Florence E. Buckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Buckley, of 431 Orchard place, whose death occurred last Friday, after a brief illess with influenza and pneumonia, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Rev. Father Holsters offered the requiem mass in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, as the young woman was extremely popular. The floral tributes included a beautiful set piece from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, of which Mr. Buckley, the father, is a member, while others came from near associates, neighbors and friends of the family.

Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall-bearers: Arthur Botsford, John Brown, Ted O'Connell, John Yose, Albert Jaeger and William Hickey.

MRS. JOHN KARSHITSKA.

Mrs. Nellie Korshitska, wife of John Karssitswa, of South Plainfield, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday. She was a victim of influenza and her husband is at the institution at the present time suffering from the same trouble. Three children are left by the mother, who was only twenty-four years old.

Th efuneral was held in Sacred Heart church, South Plainfield, Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

MRS. SADIE NESTOR.

Mrs. Sadie Nestor, widow of William Nestor, died Wednesday at her home on Tim place after a brief illness with influenza and complications. The funeral will be held at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins on West Fourth street, this afternoon, and will be in charge of Rev. E. I. Case, of the Temple Baptist church. Burial will be in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Mrs. Nestor was the doughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Ryno and was thirty-three years old. Her husband died a little more than a year ago and there are five small children surviving. She also leaves her parents, and several sisters and brothers.

MRS. LEONARD DAVIS.

Mrs. Mary Davis, wife of Leonard Davis, of Maple avenue, North Plainfield, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night. She had been at the institution only a few days under treatment for pneumonia following an attack of influenza. The funeral and interment took place at East Millstone, yesterday.

Mrs. Davis was born at East Millstone, forty-five years ago, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. John V. M. Van Cleef. She was graduated from the Trenton Normal School, where she took a special course in music and for many years was widely known as an organist and music teacher. She served as organist of the Reformed church at Millstone for a number of years. She was married to Mr. Davis ten years ago and removed to North Plainfield in 1916. Mr. Davis was formerly the manager of the Somerset Garage, but recently entered the Scott Press Works as a Government employe.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Davis is survived by her father and one brother, Ferdinand Van Cleef, living at East Millstone.

MRS. PRUDENCE LYMAN.

Mrs. Prudence Lyman, aged seventy-nine years, died Tuesday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Wheeler, of 1731 West Front street. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the chapel of Cole & High, of West Second street, and burial was in the family plot in Hillside cemetery. Beside her daughter, Mrs. Lyman leaves five grandchildren.

PERCY M. SCHENKEL.

Percy M. Schenkel, son of Mrs. Josephine and the late Joseph Schenkel, of Martine avenue, Fanwood, died in Muhlenberg Hospital early Tuesday morning, after a brief illness. The funeral will be held at the late home this afternoon in charge of Rev. A. B. Strickland, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Schenkel was born in Brooklyn thirty years ago and had lived in Fanwood since 1903. Previous to the begining of his fatal illness he was employed in New York. He had a wide circle of friends in Plainfield as well as in Fanwood to whom his death came as a distinct shock.

Charles L. Treat, aged sixty-nine years, died Wednesday morning, at his home at 411 East Third street. He had been ill only a short time. The funeral will be held at the late residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. E. I. Case, of the Temple Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Treat was a painter by trade and had lived in Plainfield a long time. He was very well known, especially among the members of the house trades. He is survived by his wife and several children.

MISS ROXIE SPRINGER.

Miss Roxie Springer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Springer, of Farley avenue, Fanwood, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday night. She had been ill only a short time with influenza and complications. The funeral will be held at the chapel of Cole & High this afternoon, in charge of Rev. H. St. George Burrill, of Holy Cross church, and burial will be at Winchester, Ohio.

Miss Springer was twenty-seven years old and leaves beside her parents, three sisters and two brothers. They are Mrs. Llewellyn Sexaner, of Fanwood; Mrs. George Simon, of Grovesport, O.; Mrs. Roy Bitter, of Winchester, O.; Dr. D. H. Cramer, of Westchester, Pa.; C. L. Cramer, of Pratt, Kansas.

JOHN N. JEWETT, JR.

Word was received in Plainfield this week of the death at Cherryfield, Me., of John N. Jewett, Jr., a former local resident. He was a nephew of Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church. Mr. Jewett was born in Chicago thirty-two years ago but had lived in Plainfield from the time that he was a young boy. He attended Leal's School and after his graduation engaged in business in New York. No details of his death have been received here.

Mr. Jewett is survived by his wife, who was Miss Helen Cruikshank, daughter of Simeon A. Cruikshank, for many years a resident of Belvidere avenue, but now livin g at 316 East Seventh street.

A DOUBLE FUNERAL.

In St. Mary's church, Monday morning, a double funeral was held for Angelo Suozzo and his wife, Carmello Suozzo, who died within a few hours of each other at their home at 1442 McCrea place, last Friday night. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan offered the requiem mass, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Suozzo was thirty-one years old and leaves his parents and a sister residing on McCrea place, and a brother in New York. Mrs. Suozzo was twenty-nine years old and had no near relatives. Husband and wife were victims of influenza.

Staving Off Old Age

You can keep your starter from getting rheumatic in its youth—your lamps from getting dim and your spark from losing its kick—by just a little care.

If you're in doubt about just what care is needed, you ought to drive around and ask us. It's our business to know.

There's another thing you ought to ask about—Threaded Rubber Insulation. It's the most important storage battery improvement in years.

Hand him another —Quick!

IT'S life or death in the trench—there must be no delay in supplying every man in France with EVERYTHING that he may need or want in his job of licking the Hun. Many a man's life will hang on there being another rifle ready to his hands, a new, keen-edged bayonet, a plentiful supply of grenades. Back of every man who goes over the top and into the Hun's trenches there must be a steady, unending flow of supplies.

Our job over here is to MAKE SURE the supplies are there and at hand. That means working every minute of every working day. It means, too, STICKING to the job. And there is one of our gravest dangers. America is losing more through thoughtless changing of jobs, thoughtless hiring of men than through almost any other one thing. It costs on the average $20 to $200 every time a man changes his job. The man loses time. A machine stands idle that ought to be working top speed on those war supplies.

Changes, of course, must be made, for the war industries need more and more men. But don't let's make changes from one essential war work to another unless there's a mighty good reason.

For this purpose the Government has established the United States Employment Service with 500 branch offices and 20,000 U. S. Public Service Reserve agents to help men find war work and to help manufacturers find more men without interfering with other war work. Use this Service—it is free—prompt. It covers the country. It is one sure way of knowing that you are HELPING to win the war.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

ndustry plays as essential and honorable a role in this great struggle as do our military armaments."

* * *

"Therefore, I solemnly urge all employers engaged in war work to refrain after August 1st, 1918, from recruiting unskilled labor in any manner except through this central agency [U. S. Employment Service.]

"I urge labor to respond as loyally as heretofore to any calls issued by this agency for voluntary enlistment in essential industry. And I ask them both alike to remember that no sacrifice will have been in vain, if we are able to prove beyond all question that the highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people."

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on

Tuesday, December 3rd, 1918

at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seventeen remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts or parcels of land to be sold which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest from the twentieth day of December, 1917, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said Act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling, twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

December 20, 1917, is the date from which interest will be added to date of sale

$71,554.75 Today's Total of Contributions to War Work Fund

At an enthusiastic meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. building, last night, it was announced that the total contribution to the War Work Campaign Fund had reached $71,554.75.

It was shown by reports from the various team captains that yesterday's donations had been the best of any since the drive started. The total collected from Wednesday to Thursday was $37,156.10.

Chairman J. Herbert Case, who was in charge last night, felt greatly encouraged at the results shown and feels that the full quota of $150,000 allotted to Plainfield will be secured. He urges, however, that those who have not been interviewed by campaign workers to take it upon themselves to make their contribution voluntarily and thus save themselves reproaches of conscience later.

Another big mass-meeting in the interests of the War Work Campaign will be held in the Plainfield High School tonight. The principal speaker will be G. Sherwood Eddy, a war worker from France, who has a national reputation. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested to attend.

Plainfield Boys Stormed Citadel Above Grand Pre

When news of the capture of Grand Pre was flashed to America and Plainfield residents read of the Yanks wrestling the place from the Germans, there was only the usual interest in the feat, such as there is in any other achievement of the Americans. Word has now reached here of the part that the Seventy-eighth division, and especially the 311th and 312th Infantry, played.

Grand Pre is dominated by a citadel that tops a hill just outside the town, and it was that ancient fortress that threatened at least for a time to hold up the American advance. The capture of the town was a part of the series of events that took place in the battle of Verdun, which many people say was the turning point of the war. To the Seventy-eighth division was assigned the direct task of clearing Grand Pre of Germans.

The 311th and 312th were picked for the difficult plan of storming the citadel. That fight in which Plainfield boys were the victors was something like the conflicts of medieval times with modern weaps in use. All along the crest of the hill were German machine guns, the pits heaped with empty shells. That alone showed how desperately the Germans had withstood the attempts of the advancing troops. Large dugouts were found in back of the pits, but shells had crashed through at least two and blown the occupants to atoms. The others were cleared by scientific "mopping-up."

After the citadel had changed hands, Hill 240 remained to be stormed. The 311th and 312th, tired from the part they played in the opening of the battle, swarmed past the fort and aided the 309th and 310th in capturing the hill.

The boys from Plainfield who were in the fight went into action under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Butler. He was at their head when he took the citadel. The path over which they went was covered with dead Germans, helmets and rifles and guns. The citadel itself is probably hundreds of years old and about the size of an armory in the United States. At the angles of the thick walls of masonry the structure is flanked by blunt towers, built upon the crest of a steep bluff and looking directly down on the streets of Grand Pre.

As the Jerseymen advanced through the town they were at first met by a withering machine gun fire from the towers, but kept on and finally dislodged the enemy. In the town the German dead lay thick behind hastily erected barricades, and huge military stores were strewn about in confusion.

In capturing the town the Jersey boys freed it from a yoke that had hung heavily since the Franco-Prussian war. When they had entered the shattered place the most conspicuous object was a post protruding grotesquely from the ground at the junction of three roads, the town's center. It was topped by a sign that read, "Hier wohnte, August, 1870," and underneath the names of Bismarck, Von Moltke and von Roon.

Past that sign the boys, Plainfield boys, many of them, plodded in pursuit of the fleeing foe they had sent running from Grand Pre. They were dirty, muddy and burdened with packs, but all were whistling gaily at one another.

They finally reached Sedan and according to cable reports were located there when the armistice was signed.

INJURED MAN IMPROVING

Albert Gawron, of 119 Liberty street, who was knocked from his bicycle and run over by a Ransome Concrete company auto truck on South Second street, Tuesday night, was reported from Muhlenberg hospital today as improving. Cawron was unconscious for twelve hours after the accident and it was feared at first that he would die.

Westfield Police Case Up For Trial Again Next Week

The now famous Westfield police case in which George Manner is the plaintiff and Chief John Rosecrans and Patrolman Martin L. Howarth, the defendants, will be re-tried in the Plainfield District Court next Wednesday, November 20. There will be no jury as at the previous trail, the final disposition to be left entirely to Judge J. Henry Crane. The plaintiff will be represented by Robert Newton Crane of this city, while Rosecrans and Howarth will be defended by former Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein, of Elizabeth.

The coming trial is the outcome of the trouble at Westfield last winter, when Manner was arrested on suspicion of having been the man who held up and robbed the ticket agent at the Jersey Central station in Westfield. He alleged in his original complaint that Rosecrans and Howarth had repeatedly slapped and otherwise assaulted him while they were conducting a "third degree" examination. They also took his fingerprints and subjected him to additional indignities to the great distress of his mind and body.

It was afterward established that Manner was innocent of participation in the crime. Westfield citizens preferred charges before the Town Council against the two police officers but they were exonerated. The matter was then transferred to the Plainfield District Court in a claim for $500 civil damages against each officer. When this case was heard last April by Judge Crane and a jury of twelve men, the later returned a verdict of "no cause for action."

Robert Newton Crane, counsel for Manner, took an appeal from this decision to the Supreme Court and several weeks ago an opinion was handed down setting aside the verdict. The court also ordered a new trial, declaring that the one held previously was "a travesty on justice," and that under no circumstances did the plaintiff receive the treatmeh to which he was entitled.

The decision was considered a great victory for Mr. Crane, who handled the case in the face of strong opposition. His facts were presented at the original trial in a masterly manner, and the jury's verdict was a great surprise. By the order of the Supreme Court, the decision must now be in the plaintiff's favor, the only question being as to the amount of damages. It is generally rumored that the coming proceedings in the Plainfield court will be followed by a demand from Westfield citizens for the removal of Rosecrans and Howarth from their positions. When they were exonerated by the Westfield Council last spring, six members of the police force tendered their resignations, asserting that they were not in accord with the Council's action.

Federal Employment Office Here Ready For Applications

The Federal Service Employment Bureau, recently established in this city in connection with the Government's plan of centralizing calls fofr help and applications for employment, is now fully established and becoming a factor in the local employment situation.

The office is located in Room 4 of the City Building at 149 North avenue, and a Government representative is in charge. Any man wishing a situation or any employer needing help are requested to make their wants known at the office and efforts will be made to supply the need in each instance. There is absoluteyl no charge for anything done, this matter being taken care of by the Federal authorities entirely.

It is possible that in the very near future the local office will be quite busy as the curtailment of big war contracts are causing a shift of skilled mechanics and laborers. So far nothing of this kind has happened in Plainfield but it is possible that a change will come about in the near future.

The Employment Bureau Service has been in operation in other parts of the State for the past six months and has been the means of solving many industrial employment problems. Plainfield is fortunate in securing a branch and the citizens are urged to make good use of it.

Elks Plan Two Social Affairs

Forced to suspend all social activities because of the recent influenza epidemic, Plainfield Lodge of Elks is now busily at work on plans to make up for "lost time."

At its meeting Wednesday night, it was announced that one of the first formal gatherings after the "interruption" would be a big Thanksgiving eve affair for members only. On that occasion, which is a regular meeting night, the lodge will observe Past Exalted Rulers' night and also hold a service roll call. The secretary will read off the names of Plainfield Elks who helped Uncle Sam win his big victory and personal stories about each one will be told by associates. At the close of the business session there will be a banner up entertainment full of surprises and in conclusion, Thanksgiving refreshments will be served. The committee at work on the affair asserts it will be one of the best events of the season.

On Thanksgiving night, November 28, the lodge will hold a barn dance in the clubhouse under the auspices of the dance committee. It will be for members and their friends and similar to the successful one held last Thanksgiving only on a more elaborate scale. The decorations will be in keeping with the holiday and the peace celebration. There will be no formal dress, anything in the way of a costume outside of what is supposed to be "farm attire," is not to be encouraged, Frank R. Emmons, chairman of the dance committee.

Plainfield Lodge has other entertainment features in view that will be announced in the near future.

Peace Celebrators Enjoy Big Evening At "Victory" Party

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of East Second street, were among the first Plainfielders to hold a "victory" party at their home, Monday. In common with everyone else in America, they were so delighted at the declaration of peace that they felt as though they wanted to entertain the whole world but as this was impossible they did the next best thing. They hastily gathered together all the friends they could coax away from the street demonstrations and gave them the time of their lives in their home. After a delightful evening indoors, all hands took part in a peace parade of their own at midnight that attracted almost as much attention as the "whale" of a celebration by the entire city in the afternoon.

At the Clark home during the evening there was an informal program that kept up the good spirits induced by the splendid news from Europe. Piano selections were given by Miss Helen Schnable, of Jersey City; violin selections by Mrs. John Harrigan, of North Plainfield; novelty dances by the Misses Beatrice Schnable and Gertrude Pasch, of Jersey City, and vocal solos by all who could or thought they could sing. Special hits were made by a quartet composed of Miss Helen Clark, Miss Beatrice Schnable, Charles Lally and James Dunovan. Frank Lally, of Jersey City, was encored repeatedly after his rendition of "Hearts of the World," "Till We Meet Again," and "We'll Hang Kaiser William to a Sour Apple Tree." James McDonough, the popular tenor, also made good by his rendition of "Your Lips Are No Man's Land But Mine," "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," and other popular war ballads.

Despite the short time Mr. and Mrs. Clark had to prepare for the party they came across strong with refreshments. There was all kinds of eats from "Victory Bread" down to "Peace" pie, and if anybody went hungry it was because his or her indigestion interferred. Toasts to the boys who made the world safe for democracy and wishes that they be brought home in safety were expressed at the closing hour. All in all, the party was a great success and Mr. and Mrs. Clark and their daughter, Miss Helen Clark, were warmly thanked for their hospitality.

Those present included, beside the host and hostess, the Misses Beatrice Schnable, Helen Schnable and Gertrude Pasch, of Jersey City; Margaret Ryan, Alice Ryan, Annie Ryan, Catherine Sprigg, May Burke, Lillian Burke, Dorothy McDonough, Mabel Wierenga and Dorothy Wierenga; Mr. and Mrs. John Harrigan, Mrs. C. Hoard, Mrs. Generale, all of Plainfield; Messrs. Charles Lally, Frank Lally, of Jersey City; Harry Prusing, Charles Sprigg, James Dunovan, Robert Goldstein, Jack Garholt, Jack Hopewell, John Provost, James McDonough, George Bowers, Harry Wierenga, John Sullivan, G. Laird and Nicholas Schrier.

FRED GREEN OVERSEAS.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Green, of East Seventh street, have received word of the safe arrival of their son, Fred W., overseas. Private Green was assigned to a detachment of court reporters in the Judge Advocate's Division.

HELP MAKE THE HONOR ROLL COMPLETE.

The Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter of the Red Cross has been compiling an official honor roll of the Plainfield young men and women enlisted in the army, navy or nursing divisions of Government service during the conflict just ended. This list has now reached a total of 1,456 names but many are missing because of no centralized place of enlistment.

It is the desire of the Red Cross to make the honor roll complete for posterity's sake and to that end urges that every citizen does his or her share in making it authentic. If you know of any young man or woman who has been serving in any capacity either military or naval service since April 6, 1917, whose home is in Plainfield, and whose name is not in the newly corrected list printed on other pages of today's Record, communicate at once with Albert F. LaRock, chairman of the Red Cross Honor Roll Committee, 193 North avenue, telephone 3030. Keep in mind that North Plainfield names or those of residents in Dunellen, Scotch Plains, South Plainfield or nearby towns are not used. This particular list is for Plainfield only and by taking an interest in the plans your help might be the means of honoring some young man or woman who might otherwise be overlooked in a public mention of the world's greatest war. Scan the list and send in your names or corrections.

Mayor Extends Merited Praise to S. B. Joost

Mayor Leighton Calkins has sent the following letter of thanks to Sherman B. Joost, for the splendid work as chairman of the executive committee in Plainfield's recent highly successful Fourth Liberty Loan drive:

"Mr. Sherman B. Joost,
Chairman Fourth Liberty Loan Committee,
Plainfield, N. J.

"Dear Mr. Joost:

"Circumstances have prevented earlier recognition of the service rendered by you and the general committee, and by many other workers of all classes who were associated with you in the great task of making the Fourth Liberty loan a success in Plainfield. Our highest expectations were exceeded, due to good organization and to unselfish devotion of time and energy. Thus public interest and enthusiasm for the campaign were aroused and maintained through the untiring zeal of many devoted men and women.

"As it would be impossible to thank all individually, I hope that I may be permitted, through this acknowledgment to you as chairman of the committee which it was my privilege to appoint, to express, in some measure the obligation of the community to those who undertook the management of so great a campaign. While I know that you would say that the credit lies with the people who loaned so willingly to the government, they on their part will insist that the campaign workers are in no small degree deserving of the reward of which the magnificent over-subscription was our proud measure.

"Yours faithfully,
"LEIGHTON CALKINS."

"Star" Witnesses Give Testimony in Property Dispute

Plainfield's city engineer, its city clerk and tax collector, together with a group of old women, mostly grandmothers, who played tag on the premises when they were children were much in evidence at the Court House in Elizabeth, yesterday, when Vice Chancellor Backes, sitting in Chancery Chambers, took testimony in the suit brought by Elizabeth B. Mason against the Home Real Estate Company to secure title to a four-foot strip of ground between her property and that of the real estate concern at Watchung avenue and Second street.

In addition to the large group of "star witnesses" there was also a vast quantity of Plainfield city maps and tax data to substantiate the plaintiff's claim that the piece of ground belonged to her. The original transfer was made forty-three years ago for a consideration of $10 and in subsequent transactions it was omitted from deeds. It has now come to be worth many thousands of dollars as it seriously hampers building plans of the Real Estate Company and interfers with Mrs. Mason selling her place to William A. Woodruff. The hearing required all of yesterday and in conclusion Vice Chancellor Backes fixed December 11 as a date on which to hear argument. Mrs. Mason was represented by Swackhamer and Bird and Winfield Angleman, while Francis J. Blatz, of Codington & Blatz, appeared for the Home Real Estate Company.

DR. CAMPUS BUYS RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY.

Dr. Ellis Campus, of 423 West Front street, yesterday purchased from a realty concern, of which A. J. Brunson, president of the First National Bank, is the head, the handsome residential property at West Front street and Giraud avenue. It is understood the consideration was about $11,000.

The dwelling on the property, which is across the way from the Washington headquarters, was built seven years ago by Jacob Sachar. It is one of the most attractive among the modern homes built in that section of the city in the development of the old Harberger tract on the north side of West Front street from Geraud avenue to Postmaster A. E. Hoagland's property.

The house is admirably suited to the needs of a physician and Dr. Campus will occupy it in the near future. The present tenants are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bradt.

JENKINSON A VISITOR

State Fuel Commissioner R. C. Jenkinson and Deputy Commissioner William B. Hoffman, of Newark, called on local Fuel Commissioner Roger in this city yesterday to check upon the Plainfield coal situation.

Large Gathering Attends Funeral of R. A. Claybrook

New York and Plainfield business men, city officials and scores of other friends were included in the gathering at Grace Episcopal church, yesterday afternoon, when the funeral of Richard A. Claybrook, who died at his home, 304 Grant avenue, early Wednesday morning, after a brief illness, was held.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson conducted the simple service. The attendants included Mayor Leighton Calkins and other Plainfield officials, a delegation from the New York Produce Exchange, of which Mr. Claybrook was president until a few months ago, New York business men with whom he had been in contact for years and a representation of the Masonic fraternity. All extended beautiful floral tributes as did scores of friends.

Mr. Claybrook had been a resident of Plainfield but eight years but in that time he had been active in political and civic affairs and in consequence had gained a wide acquaintanceship. He was a native of Kinsales, Va., where he was born November 27, 1867, his father being a well-to-do farmer. After completing his education, he first located at Cumberland, Md., in the produce business. There he interested himself in municipal matters and served as member of the Common Council.

In 1906 he removed to Elizabeth, and four years later to Plainfield. He continued in the produce business with headquarters in New York. His knowledge in this field became recognized by the Metropolitan dealers with the result that he was elected president of the Produce Exchange. This position he held until last spring, at which time he resigned because of impaired health.

Mr. Claybrook aided in the formation of the Plainfield Democratic Club, which had an active career during several campaigns but which has not been in any great evidence the past year or two. He acted as the president and assisted in picking candidates for city, county, state and National office. In 1913 Mr. Claybrook was elected a member of the Common Council and though urged to accept re-nomination declined to do so. He was a member of the committee which selected the site of the City Hall and continued to serve as a member of the City Planning Commission, on appointment from Mayor Calkins, up to the time of his death.

Had it not been for a critical illness three years ago, during which Mr. Claybrook submitted to a severe operation and from which he never fully recovered, it is possible that he might have been the Democratic candidate for Congress in 1916. He was the choice of the leaders in the Fifth district, but declined when he realized that his condition did not warrant assuming such a responsibility. He did, however, aid in Plainfield's war work activities and gave valuable service to the Government in mapping out the distribution of grain through Europe during the critical period in 1917.

Mr. Claybrook's only fraternal affiliation was with a Masonic order, while his church membership was in Grace Protestant Episcopal parish. His near surviving relatives are his wife and three daughters: The Misses Lillian Christine and Judith Claybrook, who live at the parental home on Grant avenue. He also leaves three sisters and three brothers as follows: Mrs. Edgar Pole, of Hot Springs, Va.; Mrs. Hunter McGuire, and Mrs. Edward M. Offley, of Winchester, Va.; the Rev. W. N. Claybrook, of Birmingham, Ala.; Dr. E. B. Claybrook, Cumberland, Md., and John N. Claybrook, of East Sixth street.

Shows Up Bad Condition of City Fire Department

Vincent W. Nash, After Personal Investigation, Finds Present Force Insufficient to Man Apparatus--Urges Common Council to Take Immediate Action As Safe-Guard Against Possible Conflagration

The lack of proper fire protection which has come about in Plainfield through wholesale resignations in the department principally because of insufficient pay has induced Vincent W. Nash, of Prospect avenue, one of the city's best known residents, to sound a note of warning to the Common Council.

In a letter received by the Record today, Mr. Nash, himself an old fireman and a large tax-payer, asks that something be done to bring the fire department back to the numerical strength of two years ago. He shows how at times at present No. 2 Engine at Headquarters is unable to go out because of no men being available to drive it when an alarm sounds. He has gone to the trouble to find out conditions in every house and it has proven a great surprise to himself and others. This is Mr. Nash's comment on the situation:

Editor, the Record:

Sir: There is a growing tendency at the present time of many of the younger generation to put off until tomorrow what should be done today. This same spirits appears to have worked itself into the very hearts of many of our City Fathers, for they seem to be passing from day to day unnoticed the deplorable condition of the Plainfield Fire Department.

I have been patiently sitting by, since the election of 1917, watching the department being reduced in size until the time has arrived when I believe my neighbor's as well as my own property is now in jeopardy. As president of the local Exempt Firemen's Association for the past fourteen years, as vice president of the Firemen's Relief Association of Plainfield, an organization composed largely of men of the Paid Fire Department, and as a fire fighter for many years under Chief Doane, I believe it now becomes my duty to bring to the attention of the people of our city the seriousness that confronts them.

Plainfield has four fire houses containing six apparatuses and two chiefs' cars, of which there is stationed in the heart of the city two houses, nominally called "Headquarters" and "No. 1 Hose," while the East End is protected by "No. 4 Engine" and the West part of our city is looked after by "No. 3 Hose."

"Headquarters" has a hose company, an engine, a hook and ladder company and two chiefs' cars; "No. 1" hose company, composed of a captain and three privates; the hook and ladder of three privates and the engine company of three privates and two drivers for the chiefs' cars. Hose Company, No. 1 located on West Second street, has a hose cart with a captain and one private. No. 3 Hose has a captain and two privates, while No. 4 Engine has a captain and four privates. A careful perusal of the above will show that the business section of the city is protected by a chief and his driver, an assistant chief and his driver, two captains and 10 privates, with the East End being looked after by five people and the West End by three men.

It must not be thought that the entire department of twenty-four men are always on duty and ready for action for such is not the case for every day we see firemen, by reason of illness, day's off or well earned vacations, not on duty. More than once it has been necessary to transfer men from one house to another to man an apparatus because of shortage of men in the different houses. There have been times when Engine Company No. 2 at Headquarters has been without a man to drive the same because the privates were sent to help other companies. It is but a few weeks ago when there were but six men at the Headquarters to man four motor cars and it is at all times necessary to have two men on the hook and ladder as well as in the chief's car. During the recent fire in the Cory building three of our men were disabled from work by being overcome by smoke while on duty, while at the same time many of their associates were ill at home from the influenza.

The question might be asked, "What is the cause of this trouble that our department is reduced to twenty-four men?" Investigation shows that during the past year fifteen of our best men have left the department, four to enter military service, one to work on a farm, and ten to seek employment in other lines of work where they could obtain better wages and shorter hours. Many of those leaving claim that they could not support their families on the wages that they were receiving and that it was necessary for their wives to leave their children and go out and seek work in order to make ends meet.

Surely we cannot sit by and see this condition continue, knowing that in case of a fire that our department has not men enough to fight the same, and that serious loss of property is bound to come and perhaps loss of life.

Is it not time that our Common Council took immediate action to get men to insure us that our property is protected? If it means more wages and shorter hours for those whom we employ, let us face the issue squarely like any business man would do. If it means an increase in the tax rate to protect our own let us have it, rather than wake up some morning and find part of our business section in ruins and to hear that some intimate friend has been burned to death. If it is necessary to bring about the action by protest meetings the time is now at hand when we should take action and not wait until tomorrow and then lay the blame on the "Boys of the Red Shirt."

I ask in all fairness if we who own property are receiving the protection that we should have.

Thanking you for bringing this matter to the attention of the public, I am,

Sincerely yours,
VINCENT W. NASH.

Mayor Issues Statement on Building Work

The following statement regarding the local building situation was issued by Mayor Calkins this morning:

"Referring to the public notice which I issued on October 8th regarding Federal Permits or Licenses for non-war construction projects, I hereby give supplementary notice that the former restrictions of the War Industries Board relating to construction projects of all kinds, including repairs, alterations and extensions of existing buildings, have been substantially modified in an order just received by the State Council of Defense.

"Under the modified regulations it will no longer be necessary to apply to me for a permit to complete any building begun prior to September 3d, 1918, if a substantial portion of the building has been constructed, which means that the work must have been advanced at least substantially beyond its early stage. Neither will it longer be necessary to apply for a permit to begin the construction of any new building, or for repairs, alterations and extensions of existing buildings, where in either case the aggregate cost will not exceed $10,000. Permits will not be required for farm buildings and structures or improvements.

"Application must be made heretofore for permission to complete buildings and structures only just begun; and for new projects, or repairs, alterations or extensions to existing buildings, where in either case the amount involved exceeds $10,000. The State Council of Defense will pass finally on all cases where the cost exceeds $10,000, but does not exceed $25,000; and where the latter amount is exceeded the matter will be referred to the War Industries Board as heretofore.

"Owners required under the above modifications to file applications should apply as heretofore to Building Inspector T. O. Doane, who is acting as secretary for the Mayor's Advisory Committee."

THOMAS J. TANSEY.

Thomas J. Tansey, son of Charles and the late Ellen Langon Tansey, died Monday at his home in Newark. The funeral was held at the home of Mrs. Annie Rittner, 15 Reade street, Newark, Wednesday morning, and later in St. Aloysius church. Burial was in Cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre. Mr. Tansey is survived by five brothers and six sisters, two of the latter living in this city. They are the Misses Elena and Catherine Tansel.

CARD OF THANKS.

The Spicer Manufacturing Corporation, through this medium, wishes to express its thanks to Rev. Dr. H. V. Stevenson and his workers, to the Young Men's Christian Association, the Mercy Committee, Muhlenberg Hospital, Visiting Nurses' Association, Spicer Mutual Aid Association and all the men and women volunteers who so unselfishly gave their time and energy to the alleviation of suffering among its employes in the recent influenza epidemic.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The yearly meeting of the New York City, Berlin, N. Y., and New Jersey Seventh-Day Baptist churches will be held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, this city, on Friday and Saturday, November 29 and 30.

Two public schools in Fanwood township, No. 2 at Alton and No. 3 in the Mountainside section, were closed Tuesday for lack of fuel. The Fanwood company that has been supplying the schools has been without coal for some time and no assurances have been given as to when it will get any.

Because the Union County Board of Elections has declined to recognize the election of any nominee until the soldier vote has been counted, Registrar Edward Bauer has postponed the date on which he will take the oath of office. Bauer expected to be sworn in Tuesday. The official vote in the county gave Bauer 12,535; James J. McCann, Democrat, 7,643; and Harry Kopp, Socialist, 1,602.

The Supreme Court has rendered a decision in the case of William Newcorn against Bertha Weinberger Livingston and Leon Livingston, her husband, to recover $940.92 from the former and $137.72 from the latter for professional services. Mr. Newcorn secured a verdict in the county court against the defeandtns in October last year, but an appeal was taken on the ground that the verdict was not in accordance with the evidence. The case was argued at the June term of the Supreme Court this year and the decision was rendered on November 11. The Supreme Court found nothing in the evidence requiring a new trial and discharged the rule to show cause why a new trial should not be granted. The defendants must pay the cost. Mrs. Livingston and her husband set up the contention at the trial in Elizabeth last October that Mr. Newcorn was indebted to them for certain articles of attire furnished him from the Livingston store.

Rev. E. S. Ralston, who is engaged in Y. M. C. A. war work at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, was re-elected president of the East End Civic Association at a meeting, Tuesday night. Mrs. G. L. Morrison was elected secretary. The association took up the matter of an addition to the Emerson School, its present capacity having been reached; a betterment of the Union Line trolley service and other neighborhood needs.

Miss Lucile Lawrence, the charming primo donna who has been delighting thousands of soldiers by her solo contributions to the entertainments at camps and cantonments, will appear at the concert to be given by the Musical Club at the Hartridge Auditorium next Monday night. Her program for this occasion will be of unusual interest and beauty.

Joseph Johnson, a fifteen-year-old colored boy, whose home is at 664 South Second street, was held for the juvenile court by Judge DeMeza, Wednesday morning, after he had been found guilty of stealing tools from an automobile left standing on West Second street, near Park avenue, Tuesday night, and also tampering with the machine. It was Johnson's second appearance before the local magistrate as only last week he was nabbed in the act of stealing flour. As this was the first time he had appeared in court, he received a suspended sentence but when he returned Wednesday, Judge DeMeza decided that Joseph's criminal tendencies needed curbing.

The following Plainfielders are serving as petit jurors during the present term of the Union county courts: Charles A. Haring, Fred W. Reed, Thomas MacDonald, Edward Strappe, William B. Shafer, Fred A. Thomas, Albert Redfern, Solomon B. Meyers, Julius G. Williams and James J. McCann. Walter Fischer was drawn as juror from Scotch Plains.

Paul Pope, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Pope, of Park avenue, who has been at the Syracuse Training Camp since his entrance to the service last July, was recently promoted to the rank of corporal.

Lawrence French, of Washington avenue, the borough, was recently appointed assistant director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve in this State, according to an announcement made by Assistant Commissioner of Education Wesley A. O'Leary, the Federal State director of the reserve. He has been appointed by the Federal Department of Labor to fill this position. Mr. French was graduated from Rutgers College in 1917, after pursuing the course in agriculture. He managed the farming project of Essex county at Springfield in 1917. He informed a Record reporter yesterday that he would endeavor to push the work of the reserve so that the farmers of the State may be able to obtain boy labor next spring and summer.

J. Cortlandt Fleming, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fleming, of Woodbine avenue, who has been located for the past two months at Camp Humphreys, Va., as a member of the 7th Engineers Training regiment, has been transferred to the Officers' Training School for Engineers at Camp Grant, Ill.

The total of about $150 was realized for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Smoke Fund as a result of the masquerade dance given in Columbus Hall last Friday night by "Eddie" Marks. The big auditorium held a capacity crowd all evening and beside providing amusement for hundreds of young people, "penned up" for four weeks by the influenza, the dance will bring delight to many a boy in the service when the proceeds have been converted into tobacco and cigarettes. Mr. Marks had charge of all arrangements and deserves great credit for the manner in which he conducted the affair.

In the midst of the revelry on Park avenue late Monday night, John F. Payne, of Kenyon avenue, became so enthusiastic over Germany's defeat, that he began a bombardment of bricks against anything that would make a noise. One of the "Irish calling cards" missed its intended object and crashed through the front window of William Feiring's barber shop at 140 Park avenue. Beside demolishing the big plate glass, valued at fifty dollars, it bounced around inside the tonsorial parlor until it had placed several bottles of hair tonic and customers' cups on the casualty list. Mr. Payne promised to pay for the damage and the police took no action.

Donald Rutledge, a small boy whose home is on Franklin avenue, the borough, was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday, after undergoing treatment for a week following an accident in the borough, when he and another boy were run over by an automobile owned and driven by Charles H. Frost. It was thought at first that the Rutledge boy's leg was broken but this did not prove to be true. He sustained a severe shock and numerous cuts and bruises but will soon be able to be about again. Mr. Frost took both youngsters to the hospital in his machine, and also notified the parents that he would bear the expense of treatment.

At the annual meeting of the Central Auxiliary to the Red Cross, this week, the following officers were elected: Chairman, Mrs. Orra Rogers; vice chairman, Mrs. William C. Hibbard; treasurer, Miss Alice Van Horn; secretary, Mrs. Clarence W. Spicer; auditor, Mrs. John F. Hammann; chairmen of sections: Knitting, Mrs. Harry M. Maxson; sewing, Mrs. Alex W. Vars; surgical dressings, Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis. The reports showed the following articles prepared for the Red Cross during the past eleven months: Knitting section, 545 sweaters, socks and mufflers; eighty-five wash cloths; sewing section, 742 garments, surgical dressings, 54,514. The Central Auxiliary meets at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Wednesday afternoons, and invites workers to attend.

The Junior C. E. Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church recently elected these officers: President, John Reed Spicer; vice president, Constance Shaw; secretary, Donald Lewis; treasurer, Leonard Hunting; chairmen of committees: Entertainment committee, Ruth Hunting; prayer meeting, Evelyn Skaggs; flower, Elizabeth Davis; missionary, Evelyn Skaggs; music, Ruth Hunting; war work, Constance Shaw.

The annual Christmas entertainment for children will be given Saturday afternoon, December 14, at the Plainfield High School auditorium under the auspices of and for the benefit of the Charity Organization Society.

LeRoy Coffey, the sixteen-year-old boy who had a leg fractured in the peace celebration excitement of Monday morning, is doing well at Muhlenberg Hospital but will be at the institution for possibly a week or two longer. The boy was sitting on the back end of Boyd Fullerton's truck as it backed suddenly into a truck belonging to John Haskard, and being unable to raise his limbs in time was caught in between. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Coffey, of West Front street.

Superintendent George Luhr and Inspector Hugh Higgins, of the local trolley system, have been warmly congratulated by city officials and citizens for the very able manner in which they kept street car traffic going during the demonstrations of last Thursday and Monday. Despite the fact that all down town thoroughfares were packed for hours with an almost solid mass of humanity, the two trolley men kept cars running at almost a normal schedule and without any accident. During the two celebration days all lines carried many times their normal number of passengers but the big rush was handled through emergency methods adopted by Mr. Luhr and Mr. Higgins. One was stationed at Front and Somerset streets and the other at Watchung avenue and Fourth street to make sure that motormen had a clear way ahead of them before swinging the curves at these two congested points.

News of the Theatre

Dix Soldier-Actors Will Present Play At the Plainfield

Next Wednesday, afternoon and evening, at the Plainfield Theatre, the Camp Dix boys will present a big musical soldier show entitled, "You'll Like It."

Such well known professionals as William Sully, who left Mitzi's "Head Over Heels" show at the Cohan Theatre, New York city, to join the army; Bert Normal, Dick Buttnern, Jack Graff, Hector Marinoff, of the Povlona Russian ballet; Howard Ferris, Joseph Dornstein, Cornelli and Roy Burke, will be seen in the production which is being put on under the supervision of the well known dramatic star, Norman Hackett, at present dramatic director at Camp Dix. The performance will consist of two parts, showing the parade grounds at Dix and the Hostess House. There will be over a dozen popular songs and dance numbers, a crack drill squad and some very classy vaudeville. A group of sly good looking soldier boys will impersonate the female roles, and they are said to be hot contestants for Julian Alting's specialty. "You'll Like It" is being given at Camp Dix the first half of the week and its presentation here will be for the benefit of the boys' own barracks entertainment fund. Theatre-goers of Plainfield will undoubtedly give the boys a royal welcome as the performance will take on the nature of a victory celebration in the face of the probable peace. But it does not mean a cessation of army life for the men just yet and they need further encouragement in face of the end being apparently achieved.

A large delegation of student soldiers from Princeton are expected to attend the performance.

Six Diving Belles Again Coming With Hip! Hip! Hooray Girls

It is not an extravagant statement to say that "The Hip! Hip! Hooray Girls," who will appear at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, afternoon and night, is head and shoulders above the organizations which ordinarily float the flag of burlesque and it is not stretching the truth to speak of it as the very best burlesque as ever offered. As proof of this statement may be taken the box-office records at the theatres where the company has already played this season—records which few companies have even been able to approach. And a still further proof is found in the laudatory criticisms appearing in the newspapers which are accustomed to dismiss burlesque with faint praise. In fact, this year's edition of this famous organization may be termed the supreme effort of George F. Belfrage, the producer. Scenic artists have invested their best talents in order to give the production a pretentious scenic display, the various settings being elaborate and introducing the audiences to the following scenes which are of more than ordinary diversity in locale: Hotel Restwell in the Adirondacks; the Matterhorn in Switzerland; a cafe in Paris; Melody Lane; The Fountain of Youth; a street scene; on board S. S. Adventure; amongst the Hawaiian Volcanoes. The beauty is further intensified by a lavish display of costumes which make the production a veritable fashion show, with class, harmony and uniqueness of designs the predominating notes. The girls of the chorus are bewitchingly pretty, thus adding the last desired element to the show from a beauty standpoint. That famous comedian, Ben Pierce, is the star of the company, with a supporting cast which includes Harry P. Kelly, Helen McClain, Edward C. Jordan, Thelma Seavelle, Tillie Storke, Perrin C. Somers and Henry Jines. There is an olio of high class features, which includes the third annual appearance of The Six Diving Belles, who never fail to prove a sensation in their offering of swimming and diving feats. The music is tuneful and the comedy refreshing in every line and scene.

Helen McClain, with Hip! Hip! Hooray Girls at the Plainfield Theatre, Next Tuesday, Mat. and Night.

Miss Alice Morán, of Hampton, spent the past week-end with her cousin, Miss Cecilia Lee, of Spruce street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gould removed recently from 429 Orchard place to 118 Lafayette place. Mr. Gould is employed at the Pond Tool Works.

DUFFY WARNS AGAINST PSEUDO COLLECTOR.

Collector Charles V. Duffy is in receipt of information to the effect that a man signing his name as "T. C. Blake, Department Special Agent," is collecting Internal Revenue Taxes without proper authority, from transportation companies.

Blake is described as being about thirty-five years of age, five feet six inches in height, dark complexion and well dressed.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. MARY MOTTLEY.

Mrs. Mary Mottley, widow of James Mottley, and one of the oldest residents in the East End, died at her home, 223 Richmond street, Tuesday night. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church at 9:45 this morning, Rev. Father Bogan celebrating the requiem mass. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Mottley was born in Ireland eighty years ago but had lived in this country more than half a century. The greater part of this period has been spent in Plainfield. She was very well known in the East End of the city. Her only near surviving relative is one son, John Mottley, with whom she lived.

JOHN DEVINE, JR.

John Devine, Jr., aged fourteen years, whose home was at 1216 Arlington avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday night, after a brief illness with influenza and pneumonia. The boy's mother died last winter. Beside his father, he is survived by a brother and sister.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, this morning at 9 o'clock, Rev. Father Holster officiating. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

CHARLES W. GRIFFIN.

Charles W. Griffin, a well-known resident of Plainfield, whose home was at 734 East Second street, died in the Newark City Hospital, Monday morning, within two hours after he was stricken with heart trouble while on a train bound for his work at the Prudential Insurance Company's main office. He was apparently in his customary health when he left home shortly after 7 o'clock but was stricken as the train was nearing the Newark station. He was hurried to the hospital in the hope that prompt medical attention might avert the apparent fatal termination of the attack but without success.

The funeral was held at the late home yesterday afternoon and was in charge of Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong. Many relatives and friends were in attendance. The floral tributes were very numerous, one of the set pieces being from the executive staff of the Prudential Company. Mr. Griffin held a responsible position with this concern for many years and enjoyed a wide popularity among his associates. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Griffin had resided in Plainfield the greater part of his life and had a wide acquaintance in the city and borough. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters and attended service at the First Baptist church. He was devoted to his family and it is believed that his desire to aid his wife and son and daughter while they were critically ill with influenza several weeks ago had something to do with his fatal attack. It was during the period when it was almost impossible to secure nurses or doctors, and Mr. Griffin personally attended the victims at his home. He had long been a sufferer from asthma, which seemed to be aggravated by the many hours of day and night vigil at the bedside of his loved ones. It is possible that this induced the heart trouble which brought about his end.

Beside his wife, son and daughter, Mr. Griffin is survived by a nephew, Bertram Pope and a niece, Mrs. Ethel Dooley, residing in New York State.

MRS. W. WILDER ROWLEY.

Mrs. Mara Elizabeth Rowley, wife of W. Wilder Rowley, of 78 Linden avenue, the borough, died at her home, Tuesday morning, following an illness of several weeks with complications. The funeral was held at the late residence last night at 8 o'clock and was conducted by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which the deceased was a member for many years. Burial will be made today at Rosehill cemetery, Linden.

Mrs. Rowley was born at Lamington, November 10, 1870, and had therefore just passed her forty-eighth birthday. Her parents were Harvey B. Eick and Eliza A. Yawger. Nineteen years ago her marriage to Mr. Rowley took place and she had lived in her home in North Plainfield since that time. Outside of her home, her chief interests was the work at the First Presbyterian church, where she was very active for a long time as a leading spirit in the Home Missionary and the Pastor's Aid Societies. She possessed an unfailing Christian spirit that was always an aid to her own life and those about her and it served to make her a factor in her own little community.

Mr. Rowley is the only surviving relative. Frank Rowley, of Grove street, is a brother-in-law.

HOWARD S. HOMPSON.

A delegation of members from Franklin Council and another from the local Masons' Union, together with a number of friends, were in atendance at the funeral of Howard S. Thompson, a former well-known Plainfielder, which took place Tuesday night at his home at 37 West Thirty-fifth street, Bayonne. The service was conducted by Rev. J. B. Dunmore and was extremely simple. Burial was made in the family plot at Somerville.

Mr. Thompson was born at Somerville in 1869 but had lived in Plainfield thirty years. He was a mason by trade and followed it until last summer, when he took a position of another kind at Bayonne. His death was the result of stomach trouble which attacked him in an acute form several weeks ago. It produced complications which brought about his end.

Mr. Thompson was the son of the late William and Hannah Thompson, whose home for many years was on Liberty street, between Orchard place and West Second street. His only near surviving relatives are his wife and two sisters, Mrs. William Leland and Miss Ada Thompson, of West Fifth street.

WILLIAM LINDSAY.

The funeral of William Lindsay, who died at his home on Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, Saturday morning, was held at the residence Tuesday afternoon. Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, officiated and as the service was private, only relatives and a few intimate friends were present. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Lindsay was born in Scotland in 1859, but came to this country when only a boy. He had lived in Plainfield for the past fifty years, most of the time at the premises on Mountain avenue. He operated a dairy farm, which was one of the best known in this vicinity.

Beside his wife, Mr. Lindsay is survived by five daughter and three sons. They are Mrs. Walter J. Bennett, whose husband died at his home on East Second street two weeks ago; Mrs. A. B. Headley, of Union; Mrs. A. L. Smith, of Burlington, Vt.; Mrs. C. H. Marsh, of Siler City, N. C.; Miss Jean Lindsey, and James Lindsay, living at the parental home; Thomas Lindsay, of Mountain avenue, and William Lindsay, of Trenton.

MRS. JOHN A. WILSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, wife of John A. Wilson, whose death occurred at her home at 816 West Third street, Saturday morning, after an illness with influenza and pneumonia, was held in St. Mary's cemetery, Monday morning, Rev. Father Holster offered the requiem mass in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. There were numerous floral offerings as the profound sympathy of the community had been aroused for the family through the fact that Mrs. Wilson's death was the third bereavement undergone by her husband and parents-in-law, former Councilman and Mrs. William W. Wilson, within three weeks. The first was that of Mrs. Bertha Colvin Wilson, wife of William F. Wilson, on October 22, and the second of Miles S. Wilson, on November 5. Pneumonia was the cause in each case.

Burial of Mrs. Wilson was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall-bearers: William F. Wilson, Leo Wilson, John Coffey, Harry Coffey, Vincent Colvin and Leo Colvin.

Mrs. Wilson was twenty-seven years old and came to Plainfield from New Brunswicck after her marriage several years ago. She was a devoted wife and mother and enjoyed the highest respect from neighbors and friends. Beside her husband, she leaves one daughter, Elizabeth, aged two years; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Griffen, of New Brunswick, and three sisters, the Misses Mary, Catherine and Helen Griffen, all living at New Brunswick.

PETER JOENSEN.

Peter Joensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Joensen, of 1035 West Fourth street, died Sunday in Muhlenberg Hospital, after an illness with pneumonia. He was twenty-nine years old and leaves a wife. He was employed at one of the local shops as machinist.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at Runyon & Son's undertaking parlors at 402 Park avenue, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring officiating. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

HENRY HAGAR.

Henry Hagar, of East Front street, who had been employed as foreman of the laundry departmen at Muhlenberg Hospital, died at the institution Sunday morning, after a brief illness with influenza and pneumonia. The funeral was held at the chapel of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, Tuesday afternoon, Rv. John Y. Brock officiating. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. Hagar is survived by his wife, one son, thirteen years old, living here, and his mother and a brother, living in Easton, Pa.

HENRY FRANKE.

Henry Franke, aged twenty-nine years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Saturday night, after an illness with pneumonia following influenza. He was a grocery salesman and resided on Terrill road. He leaves his wife, three children and two brothers.

The funeral was held at the undertaking parlors of Casey & Son at Park and North avenues. Tuesday afternoon, and burial was at Union Hill.

ANGELO TRIBUNA.

Angelo Tribuna, whose home was on West Second street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday, after a brief illness with pneumonia. He was thirty-seven years old and had been employed at the plant of the International Fuse and Arms Company at Bloomfield. He is survived by his wife and two children.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning. Rev. Father Holster offered the requiem mass. Burial was in Holy Sepulchre cemetery, Newark.

MRS. AMANDA T. TOMLINSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Amanda Tilsworth Tomlinson, whose death occurred Monday morning, at her home on Madison avenue, was held at the late residence, Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. L. Skaggs, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, of which she was a member, officiated, and burial was in the family plot at Westerly, R. I.

Mrs. Tomlinson was born at New Market in 1834 and had lived in Plainfield for the past twenty-five years. She was the widow of Rev. George E. Tomlinson, who was pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at Westerly, R. I., at the time of his death forty years ago. Mrs. Tomlinson is survived by two sons, Rev. Everett Tomlinson, of Elizabeth, and George Tomlinson of California.

CHARLES MATTISON.

The funeral of Charles Mattison, one of North Plainfield's best known residents, who died at his home on Summit avenue, last Friday night, was held at the late residence, Monday morning. Rev. John Y. Brock officiated in the presence of many relatives and friends and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Mattison was born at Flemington sixty-four years ago but had lived in Plainfield the greater part of his life. He was a carriage painter by trade. His last place of employment was with the Allan Lafar Company, where he had charge of all automobile painting, but previous to going with this concern had been associated with James P. Horgan for many years.

Mr. Mattison devoted most of his spare time to checker playing and in this game he was considered one of the experts in Plainfield and North Plainfield. With John Moynihan, of Dunellen; Jacob Wagner and Andrew Muir, of this city, he formed a quartet which took place in the State tournament many years ago, and registered one of the highest scores made. Mr. Mattison frequently played games with nation experts and generally held his own.

The deceased was twice married, his first wife being Miss Anna Apgar, of Flemington, who has been dead many years. His second wife was Miss Amanda Mundy, of this city, who survives him. He also leaves a son, Joseph Mattison, now in the service, and a daughter, Mrs. Mae La Tourette, of 199 North avenue, whose husband was accidentally drowned at Watchung last summer.

CLEMENT J. TEXIER.

Clement J. Texier, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Hippolyte Texier, of Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, died at his parents' home Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. He had been ill about two weeks with influenza and resultant pneumonia. The funeral was held in St. Joseph's church Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, when Rev. Father Campbell offered a requiem mass. The floral tributes were numerous as the young man was extremely popular and had hosts of friends in Plainfield and North Plainfield as well as at Watchung. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Texier, who was eighteen years old, was born at Watchung and always lived there. He had been a pupil at the North Plainfield High School, following his graduation from the Watchung school, but war activities demanded workers, he stopped school and went with the Standard Aero plant. He had continued a faithful worker until several weeks ago, when he enlisted in the Merchant Marine. His call to report at Boston came just a short time before his death.

The young man was president of the Watchung Athletic Club, a member of Watchung Chemical and Hose Company, and of the North Plainfield Township Improvement Society. He was also a communicant of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield.

Beside his parents, Clement is survived by three sisters and three brothers. They are Mrs. Jack O'Connor, of New York; Miss Marie Texier, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Leontine Texier and Hippolyte Texier, of Watchung; Edmund Texier, of North Plainfield, and Leonce Texier, of New York.

PERSONAL

Arthur Ross, who is visiting his mother, Mrs. Jennie Ross, of 107 East Seventh street, after a two years' stay at Havana in the interest of an American concern, will return to Cuba in about two weeks.

William Hand, of Westervelt avenue, the borough, who recently came home after a stay at Paris Island, South Carolina, as a member of a submarine chaser crew, has been transferred by the army authorities to the aeroplane plant at Keyport for inspection work.

Fireman William Jaeger, of West Fourth street, who injured his knees by sneezing violently, has been discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital and may be able to return to duty at headquarters the forepart of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Morse and daughter, of Watchung avenue, and Mr. Morse's father, Joseph E. Morse, of East Seventh street, have removed to Caldwell, where they will make their home in the future. Charles B. Morse was for several years editor of the Daily Press but is at present engaged in business in New York.

Miss Laura Dent, of Park avenue, and Miss Blanche Derry, of East Front street, were among the Plainfielders who spent Monday at Newark. They report the peace celebration as being a "howling" success.

Mrs. Marcus L. Clawson, wife of Dr. Clawson, of Park avenue, has recovered after a serious illness.

Miss Carteryn Connolly, of West Fourth street, who has been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for the past two weeks suffering from pneumonia, was reported today as improving gradually, and with excellent chances for complete recovery.

Fred Westerfield, who went to Camp Dix as a Plainfield selective, was recently promoted to the rank of top sergeant in the vulcanizing department at the big cantonment.

Miss Mae Regan, of West Third street, was able to be out Monday after a week's detention at home with an attack of tonsilitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Van Deusen, who were married at Branchville last Friday night, returned from their wedding trip Tuesday and are residing at 828 First place. Mrs. Van Deusen was formerly Miss Ruth Johnson, of Morristown. Mr. Van Deusen is a member of the faculty at the Plainfield High School.

Mrs. Mary Waits, of Keyport, is visiting at the home of her brother, Captain William C. Smith, of Fairview avenue, the borough. Mrs. Waits is eighty-seven years old, but enjoys splendid health and thinks the trip between North Plainfield and Keyport "a mere trifle" for one of her age.

Gerard Harris, of West Front street, who has been at Charlotte, N. C., several months, was recently transferred to Edgewood, Md.

John O'Brien, of 740 West Fourth street, was rembved recently to Muhlenberg Hospital to be treated for pneumonia. His condition at the last report was favorable.

Dr. and Mrs. D. Russell Miller, of Park avenue, are the parents of a daughter, who arrived at their home a few days ago.

Mrs. William Wallace Corriell, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. James F. Buckle, was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday, after undergoing treatment for pneumonia following an attack of influenza. She contracted the disease at Washington, where her husband, Captain Corriell, of the Quartermaster Corps, is stationed.

Corporal Ernest D. Peck, of this city, who was local Recruiting Officer during the spring and summer, is now attending the Officers' Training School at Camp Gorden, Atlanta, Ga. Corporal Peck was in the regular army for six years as a member of the Coast Artillery and re-enlisted after war was declared on Germany. In letters received by Plainfield friends this week, he states that the men are sleeping out of doors because of the influenza epidemic and frequently wake up in the morning to find a heavy frost on their blankets.

Hugh B. Sweeney, of East Seventh street, who recently tendered his resignation as clerk to the Board of Education, has secured an excellent position in the executive office of the Wasson Piston Ring Company.

Miss Margaret McCutchen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, the borough, has returned to France to serve as a worker in Y. M. C. A. canteens.

Charles McVicker, of Duer street, recently purchased from Andrew Lukins the property situated at 26 Park place, the borough, and will remove there in the near future.

Mrs. John Byrnes and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Byrnes, of West New York, have returned home after a visit with Mrs. Byrnes' brother, John Donnelly, of West Fourth street.

Mrs. George Luhr, of West Front street, who recently underwent a serious operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, is reported to be improving.

James W. Hart, of Gresham road, exalted ruler of Plainfield Lodge of Elks, is able to be about again after an illness of several weeks with influenza.

John A. McIntyre, of 140 North avenue, continues to improve after a severe operation performed upon him at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, by one of the country's most famous intestinal surgeons. It was the third operation that Mr. McIntyre has undergone during the past four years and it is believed he will eventually be almost completely restored at health. He will, however, be a patient at the Presbyterian Hospital for many weeks to come.

John Jess, principal comedian of the "Oh Girl" show at the Plainfield Theatre Tuesday night, was entertained during his stay in Plainfield by Thomas M. Muir, of Grant avenue. Mr. Jess, or "Johnne" as he is better known, is mayor of the Espanong section of Lake Hopatcong, where he has a fine summer home, and he and Mr. Muir have been close friends for the past ten years. Mr. Jess has also had an acquaintance for years with former Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, of Westervelt avenue.

A DANGEROUS STATE OF AFFAIRS.

It remained for Vincent W. Nash, a wide-awake citizen and property owner, to come to a full realization of the deplorable condition of affairs existing in the Plainfield Fire Department and voice a protest to the Common Council and officials. In today's issue of the Record, Mr. Nash, himself an old fire fighter, and consequently in a position to know what a danger the community faces, tells how the fire fighting force has dwindled from thirty-nine to twenty-four officers and men and how at times, because of absences due to sickness and days off, there are not sufficient privates to take apparatus out of the houses. He showed, after a careful gathering of facts, that the department was never so incapable of fighting a big conflagration as it is now and urges that something be done at once to bring about a betterment of fire protection.

It should not have remained for Mr. Nash to bring this matter before the public. In fact, it is not the place of any citizen to give up his time to bettering a city department presided over by the Common Council. There is a fire committee entrusted with the supervision of the fire department and it has either been guilty of "sleeping at the switch" or deliberate disregard of property owners' rights. Members of this committee know better than anyone else that should a big fire occur it is apt to get far beyond control because what was once a splendid department has gone backward for the sake of a few more dollars in pay or better regulation of working hours. The Record has pointed out time and again that the present force is inadequate. It has told how the men have repeatedly resigned to work elsewhere for better money and have a few hours at home with their families each day. It has endeavored to bring about official action but without avail and now Mr. Nash has been forced to take up the fight in behalf of himself and his threatened neighbors. He knows that the Council has not done right by the department and he does not hesitate to ask it to take action before it is too late.

The way to give the citizens the fire protection needed is to make the fireman's job worth while. The officials in other cities are doing it and keeping the trained forces that were in existence before the war began. Elizabeth, Jersey City, Newark, the Oranges, New Brunswick and Paterson have not only raised the pay of the privates from $100 to $300 additional per year but have also in nearly every instance given them the two-platoon system. Plainfield was the only city to vote down the two-platoon plan last year and from then on the department began to deteriorate. It is still going backward and will continue to do so until the officials who ought to know better "get busy" and do what is right by the men who are putting in twenty-four hours, six days a week, for a wage barely sufficient to support their families.

It has gotten to the point now where on many occasions No. 2 Engine at Fire Headquarters stands idle on the floor in the face of an alarm because there is no driver to take it out. It has gotten to the point where, at the West End house, only one man is on duty five hours each day, three days a week, all because Headquarters can spare no one to help out during meal hours.

The only reason why all the people have not come to a full realization of conditions the same as Mr. Nash is because Plainfield has been fortunate enough not to have had a bad fire. It had one several years ago at the home of John I. Lyle on West Seventh street and no one appreciated why it was not handled properly until Councilman Thomas F. Hylan conducted an investigation. It produced the evidence that the city's fire fighting force was too small and it lacked the necessary apparatus and appliances to meet emergencies such as this was. When the investigation was over the Fire Board ordered more men added to the department, bought smoke helmets and did other things that should have been done before the Lyle blaze occurred. Mr. Hylan is still a member of the Fire Board. He knows, or ought to know, that the force is far smaller than it was when he argued for more men and he also knows that it can be bettered now if the salaries were made proportionate with the work. Charles E. Graves, chairman of the Fire Board, also knows all about conditions in the department. He was in it himself for twenty-five years and is a business man. Why shouldn't Mr. Graves and Mr. Hylan take the lead in seeking adequate fire protection instead of compelling Vincent W. Nash to sound the alarm? Must we wait for another Lyle fire to start things going?

A TRIBUTE TO RICHARD A. CLAYBROOK.

Richard A. Claybrook is dead—deep as the voice of each fellow-citizen, as he told the news, there sounded a note of personal grief—a note as true and honest and sincere as was the character of that kindly man. The heart that is stilled was a generous heart, as warm and as genial as the sunny skies of his Virginia birthplace. Once in a while, on our journey from the cradle to the grave, our steps keep pace with men of the type of Richard A. Claybrook. Friendly men, whose company seems to lighten the burden of the cares of life, that each in his own way and measure are faced to bear as they travel on towards the sunset's hour. Richard A. Claybrook greeted the world with a smile, and the world smiled back upon him with eyes that held within them the light of love, and lips that were true. Richard A. Claybrook lived like a gentleman and died like one, and in so doing he was able to meet unashamed, and unafraid the prolet of the mystic river that flows through the valley of silence.

Mrs. Claybrook, we who have shared with you for a lesser time, the friendly warmth of your splendid husband's heart, now share equally with you, in all sincerity and truth the grey that is yours today.

J. WATSON.

EMANATIONS FROM AN ADELPATED NINNY-HAMMER.

Some people keep on arguing that the first peace celebration was a mistake. They are sadly mistaken. It was only a dress rehearsal for the real affair of Monday.

—o—

You will find other people who keep telling you that "over in New York everybody went mad." Why the distinction? If the Gothamites went any crazier with joy than did the patriots of Oak Tree, Watchung or Bull Frog City, they have entered that stage known as "Innocuous" desuetude.

—o—

Talk about hard luck! Just as the North Plainfield Home Defense Band got so it could play "Over There" without the bass drum getting out of tune, the war ends and the selection loses its punch. It has been placed in discard and the musicians are now working on "Home Sweet Home" and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home."

—o—

The Kaiser must understand that his idea of a hereditary republic or a red-headitary republic will not be accepted until after his funeral, and the removal of all the "springs of Hohenzollernity to St. Helena or some other quiet spot adapted to unbroken reflection.

—o—

The biggest hit in Monday's celebration parade was made by the Elks' contribution of a citizen of St. Mary's avenue, bearing the placard "The Kaiser's Goat." It went big all along the line but there were periods when the spectators couldn't figure out which was the Goat, the animate at the off end of the chain or the three perspiring brothers, Shannon, LaRock and Oswald, who had to lug the lover of tin can diet over four miles of street.

—o—

A CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to Mayor Leighton Calkins for his wisdom and forethought in closing up the thirst palaces Monday. For the first time in our lives we celebrated without waking up the next day with a TNT headache and a taste in the mouth like an Eskimo banquet.

Signed,
THE BOOZE CLUB, L. D.
PHILLUP McCANN, Secretary.

UNEXCELLED BANKING AND TRUST SERVICE

Better System Now For Paying Soldiers

One of the unromantic but very essential and intimate problems that the War Department has had to struggle with is that relating to the pay of soldiers on home and foreign service. There have been complaints galore about the failure of the government to get the monthly stipend to many of the doughboys, particularly those who have been wounded and necessarily taken out of their units.

Until recently there were in the hospitals and evacuation camps in France and in the hospitals in the United States hundreds of soldiers who had not been paid for months. Many of these men, through lack of funds and through lack of means to obtain funds, had suffered physical hardships and aggravating inconveniences. They were the victims of a system and a situation which were lamentable but which required time to overcome.

The quartermaster corps, which has the responsibility for getting the pay to the men in the field, has now devised a system similar to the English and French, whereby a man is provided with a pay card that will permit him to draw his pay as military necessities and his own movements thereunder require. The system is not a perfect one. Some soldiers will still continue to miss their pay now and then, but it is the most effective system that can be put up to meet the situation, in all its manifold variations.

The subject has been before members of Congress in the shape of numerous letters of complaint. Chairman Sherley, of the appropriations committee of the House, was abroad recently and he returned with a good many stories and instances of the failure to keep the men properly financed.

"There have been instances in France," said Mr. Sherley, at a recent hearing on the subject, "in which enlisted men have found themselves without funds of any kind while in service away from their own commands, either being sent back to the depots for reclassification or reassignment, or being wounded and sent back to base hospitals. These men have been without funds of any kind, although the government owed them money, but they had no method whereby they could collect the money or get advance on what was due. Very severe hardship would have resulted in many cases were it not for the relief activities of the Red Cross and other organizations."

Brigadier General H. M. Lord, financial expert of the quartermaster corps, and a former clerk of the appropriations committee of the House, admitted the accuracy of the statement made by Mr. Sherley, added to it and explained what the army had been up against.

"The trouble is not confined to France; it has been just as bad here," said General Lord. "Under the regulations each man, on his entry into the service, is taken up on a service record which gives his military history, the date of his entry into service, the record of allotments and allowances, his clothing, the dates of payment—in fact, his military and his financial history. The regulations had provided, from time immemorial, that when this man was transferred—for example, if he was stationed at Fort Myer today, and he was transferred to Fort Sheridan, at Chicago—he would be given his transportation and his commutation of subsistence in order to enable him to travel, but his service record, which is the only record giving his financial standing and all the data affecting his service, is mailed. The organization commander is prohibited from giving that man his service record.

"With the extraordinary increase in the army and its personnal we have brought in not only enlisted men unfamiliar with army work, but inexperienced officers, so that if the service record itself did not always go astray there were many cases where the officers who were responsible for the preparation of the papers and the men responsible for their mailing did not compyl with the regulations. We found that trouble here early in the war.

"We also began to hear from France and we proceeded at once to remedy that situation by providing each soldier here with a pay card. When he was transferred he was given his pay card and with that pay card, if he left his post in the middle of the month or any intermediate period of the month, he could go to the quartermaster at his post and get his money up to and including the date of his departure, so that he would have something with which to travel.

"If he did not reach his station at the end of the month and needed money he could present that card to any quartermaster—and they are scattered all over the country—and get money on that pay card as well as he could on the pay roll if he were at his post. Provided with that card, it made no difference to him when his service record arrived or whether or not it ever arrived. That was put in effect here, I think, in June. We succeeded in getting the cards printed and put out and they were sent to France, so that the men now coming back from France or who are beginning to come back, are provided with these pay cards.

"In France it necessarily follows that with the constant and unexpected movement of troops under secret orders from one portion of the front to another and from one place to another there were many cases where whole organizations were not paid for a month or more, but the question of pay over there was a secondary matter under those conditions—the men had to be moved and the quartermaster might catch up to them to pay them or he might not, because they might be here today and there tomorrow."

At the present time the quartermaster is paying off several hundred men who have been brought from France to American hospitals. Some of them have not been paid since last winter, and there was one case at the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington where the soldier had not been paid since last November. All these men are being paid on their own statements of what is due. Red tape and documentary evidence has been waived and substantial justice done.

From now on every man will carry with him a pay book, so no matter what happens he may obtain funds upon presentation of this book to a quartermaster's office.

Jersey Export Depot Favored By Commission

Plans for a central export station located in New Jersey are contemplated by the New York-New Jersey Port and Harbor Commission in connection with its recommendation for a belt line railroad linking up transportation systems having Jersey terminals. It is considered that national economy will be greatly promoted by such a station, and that many after-war problems relating to exports will be solved when such an export center comes in operation.

The location of this export station will naturally be determined by the port selected for the tidewater terminal of the belt line railroad. The commission still is considering where in its opinion, this terminal may best be located. It may be in Bayonne, or on the Arthur Kill or at some point on Raritan Bay. Possibly some point on Staten Island may be recommended when the commission reports to the States of New Jersey and New York.

There still is uncertainty as to whether a short route for the belt line will be favored or a longer route. The short route would be from Piermont, on the Hudson, through territory near Paterson and Summit to a destination at or near Bayonne. The longer route would be to the north of Paterson and the west of Summit, passing through the Big Piece meadows, and, so, to a point in the Raritan Bay area.

It has been practically settled that the northern terminal of the belt line shall be at Piermoont, and the commission, it is understood, will suggest that terminals for the boats moving through the New York State barge canal and then down the Hudson shall be located at Piermont. Oother barge canal terminals would serve New York City directly.

It is thought by the commission that a great amount of overlapping, to say nothing of expense, would be done away with by the creation of a central export terminal. Consolidation of export facilities appeals strongly to the board.

At present, houses interested in exporting, on receiving notification from a shipping concern that a vessel is ready for loading, notify to this effect the railroad on which goods for export are brought to port. Each railroad then has to secure a lighter for the goods conveyed. Half a dozen railroads may so be notified, and as many lighters and tugs then come to service. These lighters and tugs must proceed to the dock where the department steamship is situated. Goods for the furthest points have to be picked out to be first put in the vessel's hold, and there always are chances for delay here. Added complications result is the weather is unfavorable for the transfer from lighter to the steamship.

According to the plan contemplated by the commission, all goods for export cominb over Jersey railroads would automatically be delivered at the central station whereby necessary priorities could be observed. There would then be but the placing of goods on lighters for transfer to ships. Under the proposed arrangement there would be less need for railroad piers on the New Jersey and New York sides of the river and, therefore, it is figured there would be more piers available for docking vessels.

With warehouses at or near the central export station enlarged facilities would be available for the storage of goods. Commodities destined for New York would be taken in the proposed vehicular tunnel under the Hudson.

What the American Red Cross Has Done Since War Began

The American people have either paid in or pledged to the American Red Cross for its work of relief throughout the world, in money or material values, a net total of at least $325,000,000. It has a total membership of 20,643,103, and in addition 8,000,000 members in the Junior Red Cross; a total enrolment of more than one-fourth of the population of the United States. American Red Cross workers produced up to July 1 last a total of 221,282,838 articles of an estimated value of $44,000,00. About 8,000,000 women are engaged in canteen work and the production of relief supplies.

The American Red Cross is distributing aid in ten countries—the United States, England, France, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Palestine, Greece, Russia and Siberia. Besides, it has sent representatives to Servia, Denmark and Madeira. More than 5,000 Americans will be working under the Red Cross in France by January 1 next.

These facts were laid before the 3,854 chapters of the Red Cross in the annual message of the War Council of the Red Cross when the chapters throughout the country recently held their annual meetings to elect officers. Announcement was made in the message that every man, woman and child in the United States would be asked at Christmas to enroll in the American Red Cross. The message signed by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the War Council, said in part:

"Since the beginning of the war you of the chapters have co-operated with the War Council in conducting two war fund drives and one membership drive, in addition to the campaign on behalf of the Junior Red Cross. The total actual collections to date from the first war fund have amounted to more than $115,000,000. The subscriptions to the second war fund amounted to upward of $176,000,000. From membership dues the collections have amounted to approximately $24,000,000.

"To the foregoing must be added that very large contributions of materials and time given by the millions of women throughout the country. For the period 1 to July 1, 1918, American Red Cross chapters, through their workrooms had produced 490,120 refugees garments, 7,123,621 hospital supplies, 10,786,489 hospital garments, 10,134,501 knitted articles, 192,7 8,107 surgical dressings; a total of 221,282,838 articles—of an estimated aggregate value of at least $44,000,000.

"In this country, at this moment, the workers of the Red Cross through its chapters, are helping to add to the comfort and health of the millions of soldiers in the camps and cantonments, as well as of those traveling on railroad trains or embarking on ships for duty overseas. The Home Service of the Red Cross, with its now more than 40,000 workers, is extending its ministrations of sympathy and counsel each month to upward of 100,000 families left behind by soldiers at the front—a number ever growing with the increase of our men under arms.

"But of course, the heart of the Red Cross and its money and attention always move toward and focus themselves in Europe. Nothing is withheld that can be given over there to supplement the efforts of our army and navy caring for our own boys. Our satisfaction is in the result, which, we are assured by Secretary Baker, General Pershing, General Ireland and all our leaders, is of inestimable value and of indispensable importance.

"By the first of January, your Red Cross will have workers in France upward of 5,000 Americans—a vivid contrast to the little group of eighteen men and women, which, as the first Red Cross Commission to France, sailed about June 1, 1917, to initiate our efforts in Europe. Your Red Cross now has active, operating commissions in France, in England, in Italy, in Belgium, in Switzerland, in Palestine and in Greece. You have sent a ship load of relief supplies and a group of devoted workers to northern Russia; you have dispatched a commission to work behind our armies in eastern Siberia; you have sent special representatives to Denmark, to Servia and to the Island of Madeira.

"At Christmas time we shall ask the whole American people to answer the Red Cross Christmas roll call. It will constitute an unique appeal to every man, woman and child in this great land of ours to become enrollee in our army of mercy. It is the hope of the War Council that this Christmas membership roll call shall constitute a reconsecration of the whole American people, an inspiring reassertion to mankind that in this hour of world tragedy, not to conquer but to serve is America's supreme aim."

Soldier Life Insurance Now Totals Billions

It has cost the government only $1,500,000 to write $36,350,000,000 of insurance on the lives of soldiers and sailors within the last year, said Thomas B. Love, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in an address at Chicago before the Association of Life Agency Officers. By its accomplishments in the short period of twelve months the Treasury's Bureau of War Risk Insurance "has wrought the insurance miracle of doubling the volume of ordinary life insurance outstanding in the world," Mr. Love added.

Describing the growth of the largest life insurance organization in the world, the largest disbursing institution and the biggest government bureau, with 14,000 employes, Secretary Love said the result had contributed strongly to the morale of American troops abroad by giving them material assurance that their dependents were cared for during their absence and would continue to receive assistance from the government in case of their death or injury.

Secretary Love said that in the last two months more than 18,000 soldiers or sailors have died of influenza in this country alone, and insurance which the government will pay to their beneficiaries will amount eventually to $170,000,00. Premium income collected from insured soldiers is estimated at $143,000,000, and up to November 1 disbursements on account of deaths amounted to $4,102,000. These payments are distributed over a period of years, and the aggregate or commuted value of claims is $122,098,00. New insurance has been written at the rate of $2,7500,000,000 a month, or $92,000,000 a day, and it is estimated that ninety-five per cent. of men in the army and navy are insured.

"During the first year of its existence," said Mr. Love, "the Bureau of War Risk Insurance handled more than 8,000,000 individual applications for insurance and allotments, and allowances together, besides many thousand compensation cases. It has been necessary to maintain more than 30,000,000 individual card records and the work all told has involved literally hundreds of millions of separate clerical and administrative transactions."

Errors had now been reduced to a minimum, he said, and there are comparatively few complaints from persons failing to receive proper allotment and allowance remittances.

Dunellen's "Man About Town" Says Nice Things About Former Local Newspaperman

Included among the many interesting features in the Call, Dunellen's breezy newspaper, is a column devoted to the observations of "The Man About Town." It always contains something new and interesting for the folks of Plainfield's neighboring borough and in yesterday's issue, it gave a reminiscence of a former Plainfield newspaperman, G. Archibald Brakeley, now night editor of the New York Sun, which brings back a flood of memories to scores of people in this city. This is the way "The Man About Town" tells it:

It was hard to swallow the doubts that were cast on the report that the war was over. I am writing now of Thursday night. It is so easy to believe what one wants to believe. We were at Tailor's news-stand, a party of us, and the discussion was waxing warm, for the parade was over.

At last Bill Farrell spoke up, "I know a man who can tell us," said he. "I'm going into the drug store and 'phone him." In ten minutes he was back and said, "The armistice has not been signed but will be, and news is hourly expected of it."

Bill had telephone to Archie Brakeley, night city editor of the New York Sun, and that settled it. For no better authority can be found. Archie is a Dunellen boy who learned the newspaper game on the old Plainfield Press under Tom Muir and other good teachers.

Archie has arrived at the summit of every newspaper-man's ambitions. Just as every French soldier's knapsack is supposed to contain a marshal's baton, so every newspaperman in the country has dreams of getting to New York and the great prize there is the city editorship of the New York Sun. For the Sun is emphatically the newspaper-man's paper and has been so since Charles Anderson Dunn obtained control of it in 1867. And this means that the Sun is the ideal newspaper, and the model for all others.

In New York it is primus inter pares (chief among equals). Outside of New York it is held in reverence by the newspaper paternity second only to that given the Bible by the devout. And so I am glad that it has been given to a Dunellen boy to go over the top in the newspaper game and be called to sit in the seat of the mighty.

Titanic Struggle Just Ended Cost Total of 249 Billions in Treasure And Casualties of 27,875,000 Men

The war so gloriously ended Monday by the surrender of Germany endured four years, three months and fifteen (1,567) days of carnage, cruelty, sacrifice, suffering, heroism and high purpose such as the world had never known.

It began July 28, 1914, when the military masters of Austria-Hungary, spurred on by the military masters of the German Empire, coldly and contemptuously rejected all peace overtures and declared war against Serbia. It ended November 10, 1918, hereafter to be civilization's great holiday, when the last prop of organized evil collapsed and the emissaries of the German Government accepted from civilization's Captain-General, Ferdinand Foch, the deliberate terms which disarm militarism.

U. S. Strength Turned Tide.

A swift survey of the whole tremendous period, a period so tremendous indeed that persons now living will probably never be able to realize and comprehend all of its movements and phases, discloses the Teutonic allies—Germany, Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria—victorious as the military map was painted until the middle of the summer of 1918. Until that hour of reckoning, when the strength of the United States began solidly to be felt, the Teutonic alliance had triumphed from the military standpoint. Germany had held a wide strip of northern France and all save 100 square miles of Belgium; had over-run all Poland and northwestern Russia; had conquered Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro, and had made good, as far as the war map revealed, the Pan-German dream of Mitteleuropa.

Austria held Galicia and had inflicted a frightful defeat upon the Italians. Turkey, though worsted in the Palestine and Mesopotamian campaigns, nevertheless displayed, superficially, a strong front. Bulgaria, having seized immense territorial loot, seemed to interpose a solid wall against the allied forces based upon Salonica.

And then, almost overnight, the whole immense structure of Teuton military strength tottered, swayed and fell into ruins. A great German offensive on the western front in the middle of July, 1918, was converted by the genius of Marshal Foch into an irresistible allied sweep.

On July 18, 1918, the entire allied line began to move forward. The Germans were driven from lines they had held for more than four years. They lost the Hindenburg line and were hammered out of the great bases of Lens, Lille, Laon, Quentin and Cambrai. British, French, Americans and Italians striking incessantly from the North Sea to Switzerland, humbled the boasted strength of the German military machine. The day Germany bowed to the inevitable her armies were everywhere in rout, her autocrats were fleeing, her borders and riot and revolution were battering down political and social bulwarks sacred for centuries.

Austria Smashed by Italians.

In this same period Austria had been smashed by the Italians and in a short, swift campaign lost 500,000 men, an incalculable amount of war material and the very territorial possessions. Trent and Trieste, that she had been defending successfully for four years. Her collapse on November 1 preceded Germany's, even as Bulgaria's and Turkey's had gone before her own. Bulgaria was the first of the Central Powers to surrender, having been smashed by the British-French-Greek drive from Salonica, and almost before the Hapsburgs realized that Serbia was lost to them and that the door was open to Hungary, Bulgarian emissaries on September 30 were humbly accepting from General Franchet d'Esperey, the allied commander in the Balkans, the armistice terms which utterly disarmed the Bulgars. Turkey, crushed in Palestine and Mesopotamia, quit the war on October 31 when Aleppo fell and permitted an allied fleet to pass through the Dardanelles and to garrison Constantinople.

Nothing could have been more astounding than the piled up events of the past three months, allied victory following allied victory; the whole monument of Teutonic strength falling like a house of cards; revolutions impending or actually in progress in all of the defeated nations; the sacrosanct Hohenzollerns abdicating and in furtive flight; Ferdinand, Czar of Bulgaria, abdicating; Charles, Emperor of Austria-Hungary, helplessly witnessing the disintegration of his ancient empire; German kingdoms turning swiftly into republics; Hungary proclaiming a republic; Turkey kicking out Enver Pasha and Talaat Pasha, the Young Turks' leaders that had been her evil geniuses; and finally, in Germany herself, red revolution, mutiny, threats to the Kaiser and abject surrender.

These events are too recent and in many respects too unexplained to warrant detailed review in this brief summary of the Great War, but the most rapid inspection of them furnishes the most dramatic picture the world ever saw. Already statesmen and philosophers have assigned definite reasons for the amazing overturn of Teutonic power and the sudden tremendous triumph of the Allies.

Why Teutonism Crumbled.

These causes, briefly, have been mentioned as follows:

FIRST—Internal weakness in the four Central Powers, weakness in the matter of war weariness and exhaustion, starvation, famine in metals and raw materials, loss of morale, utter discouragement and loss of confidence in the Kaiser and the junkers, the growth through trial and suffering of a spirit of real democracy—all of which made the apparent military power of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey a mere shell. This shell, pierced by the savage strokes of Foch, collapsed, leaving nothing.

SECOND—The unified military command of the allied armies, a command resolved upon, though late in the war, by the wisdom of Georges Clemenceau, Premier of France; David Lloyd George, Premier of Great Britain, and Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States. This unified command, "one boss," permitted an absolutely intensive, scientific and economic use of the vast military forces at the disposal of the Entente Allies and rectified the blunders and errors of the past.

THIRD—The development of the war strength of America, a development which, carefully handled by Marshal Foch, came to the rescue of the French and the British at precisely the crucial moment, giving Foch 2,000,000 of the finest troops in the world and an absolutely unlimited supply of the essential war materials.

FOURTH—The genius of Ferdinand Foch, a General who is already recognized to be one of the very greatest military geniuses of all time. If it is too soon perhaps to compare the great Marshal with the gigantic military figures of history it may be said, nevertheless, that the most competent French and British military authorities have ranked Foch with Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon.

Allies' Heroism Saved World.

These causes are advanced as direc causes and do not take into account the four years of heroic endurance and brilliant valor displayed by the French, the British and the Italians. Without this endurance and sacrifice and without the sea power secured by the British navy the war, it is recognized by most persons, would have been ended with a German victory before America could have had time to arm and strike.

The surprising military skill shown by new American troops thrust forward in the Verdun sector, at Cantigny, at Chateau Thierry, with the British in the north and at other pasts of the western front, a skill which made their expected dash and courage count for the most possible, is admittedly a factor in the German debacle.

$200,000,000,000 War Cost Estimate

Now that it is over humanity will be years reckoning the cost in money and human resources. All figures now are unreliable because there has not been and could not be exact ways of computing the expenditure in cash and in lives. It is generally accepted, however, that the four years and three months of war produced casualties of 27,875,000, at the lowest possible estimate; and that the money burden saddled upon the warring nations will rise to two hundred billion dollars. It is estimated that the Entente Allies in all fields suffered casualties of about 15,525,000, while the total casualties of the Central Powers may amount, roughly, to 12,345,000. These figures take in all casualties, but the death toll is probably 10,000,000 for all combatants.

Until the statisticians of the coming peace conference reckon up the destruction of property and other damage caused by the German invasions of Belgium, France, Serbia, Rumania, Montenegro, Italy and Russia there can be no way of supplying an estimate except to say that French authorities state that Germany's bill for damage will certainly not be less than $50,000,000,000 for compensation alone.

Britain's Cost $52,000,000,000.

To date the war has cost Great Britain about $52,000,000,000, France about $32,000,000,000, Italy about $12,000,000,000, and the United States about $20,000,000,000. The debt of the Central Powers will include Germany's $45,000,000,000, Austria-Hungary's $25,000,000,000, and at least $7,000,000,000 on Bulgaria and Turkey.

The fulminating episode of the war was the assassination of the Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo, June 28, 1914, but the actual cause was the Austro-Hungarian note to Serbia of July 28, 1914, a note which virtually demanded that the little nation surrender to Austria its freedom of nationality.

Back of this ultimatum was the determination of the German Kaiser and the German militarist party to subjugate all Europe and to establish a new empire which would reach from Berlin to Bagdad. This dream had been maturing for nearly half a century. Serbia was a pretext for the attempt to convert it into a reality.

Humbly as Serbian asked for mercy, earnestly as the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, appealed for peace or even delay, despite the protestation of the Czar of Russia, Germany forced Austria to declare war against Serbia July 28, 1914, and then, on August 1, 1918, herself declared war against Russia on a specious pretext that Russia was mobilizing and that Germany could not afford to wait.

England, sensing her own peril and bound in honor to guarantee Belgium's integrity, already violated by German armies, announced August 4 a state of war against Germany. Simultaneously the German hordes struck at the Belgian forts and for weeks the world was thrilled at the news of the heroic defence being made by that small, brave nation against overwhelming odds of men and great guns. Liege fell on August 16 after the Germans had paid a terrible price for their victory.

60,000 British Join French.

In the meantime French armies, which had scrupulously respected Belgian territory and which could not be mobilized with the savage swiftness characteristic of the German military machine, thrust forward into Belgium and soon were joined by Britain's "contemptible little army" of 60,000 regular troops. Belgian, British and French, outnumbered, outgunned, stunned by the swift triumphs of German faithfulness, fought desperately, but were driven relentlessly backward through Belgium and beyond the French frontier. The British reatre from Mons stands in military history as one of the heroic achievements of the war as having supplied the delay which may have saved Paris.

Japan demanded August 15 the withdrawal of German warships in Japanese and Chinese waters and ordered the surrender of the German port of Kiaochow. Germany's refusal brought Japan into the war. August 23 and a short campaign resulted in the capture of the whole German colony in China. Except for sporadic naval raids, such as that of the famous Emden, that ended Germany's power in the Pacific.

With the fall of Liege and Namur and the withdrawal of the allied forces from Belgium the occupation of Brussels by German troops followed as a matter of course, the occupation taking place August 19. On in the east at this time was the promise of German defeat. The Russians had pushed forward into East Prussia and seemed about to advance their steam roller to Berlin itself. But on August 29 General von Hindenburg, resurrected from retirement and obscurity as the great authority on the military possibilities of the East Prussian and Polish marshlands, met the Russians under the luckless Rennenkampft in the marasses at Tannenburg and crushed them with awful slaughter. This was to show that treachery at St. Petersburg brought about this fearful disaster. In the south the Russians were victorious, pressing on to Lemburg, capital of Galicia, and beginning an ominous march toward Cracow and Silesia. Austria, as ever, was no match in herself for any vigorous enemy.

Foe Is Turned Back at Marne.

On the western front the Germans were rolling toward Paris, murdering civilians, burning cities, outraging women and robbing churches and home. The destruction of Louvain stands out in this terrible period when the world first realized what black depths lay in the German character. The menace to Paris was so great that September 3 the French Government moved to Bordeaux, but by September 7 the retreat of the Allies ended at the River Marne, where Marshal Joffre and his subordinate, Ferdinand Foch, smashed General von Kluck's centre and compelled the hasty retirement of the whole German line from the North Sea to Switzerland. The Germans fell back to previously established positions, the southernmost point of which was at Soissons, scarcely 60 miles from Paris. They began the long period of trench warfare, with its succession of futile pushes by each side and the most terrible sacrifice of life in the annals of humanity.

The Kaiser's troops took Antwerp October 9, battering down with 42 centimeter cannon the resistance offered by Belgian soldiers and British marines. The Allies narrowly escaped the trap and retired to Ostend, carrying with them hundreds of thousands of hungry, homeless civilians. On the same day the Russians again invaded East Prussia, a venture which was to have no success whatever. The Belgian Government established its capital at Havre, France, October 13, and there remained unconquered and unterrified until the great drive came which brought the war to an end. One king in the war goes down in history as a great general as well as a great patriot—Albert of the Belgians.

$10.77 per Ton Top Coal Price In Plainfield

The advance of ninety-five cents makes the extreme price for household grades of coal in Plainfield $10.77 a ton. This applies only to consignments received at the yard since November 1. Where there are any yards having October coal they must continue to sell it at the October rate of $9.82 for the top rate. There is, of course, a lower figure for the grades of coal not in common use by householders.

It is understood that a number of Plainfield dealers have a considerable quantity of October coal and their customers are accordingly receiving the benefit of the old scale.

County and district fuel administrators of New Jersey were asked yesterday by State Fuel Administrator Jenkinson to advise all retail dealers in their districts that the advance in retail prices on broken, egg, stove, nut and pea coal will be ninety-five cents a ton on all coal of these sizes shipped after 7 a. m. on November 1.

The increase of $1.05 a ton announced last week, Mr. Jenkinson said, applied to gross tons of 2,240 pounds, the net ton advance being over ninety-five cents. Buckwheat, rice, barley and boiler size coal remain unchanged in price, the recent advance not covering these sizes.

C. O. S. Closes Busiest Year of Its Career

The busiest year ever experienced by the Charity Organization Society closed September 30 last and at the annual meeting of the Society, held in its rooms in the Babcock building, Tuesday night, it was shown by reports that a wonderful work had been accomplished in meeting the abnormal demands brought about by the prosecution of the war. Still greater work is ahead of the organization in the very near future and plans to bring about its successful completion were discussed during the evening. The election of a board of trustees also took place at the meeting and later this board elected officers.

The record for the year shows that the calls on the Society have been the heaviest in its history, and to meet these demands it was necessary to expend $15,44[illegible]. Had it not been for the generous response and splendid co-operation of the people of Plainfield, and the effective work done by the finance committee, of which William T. Kaufman is chairman, the Society would have found it impossible to carry on the work of relief. A resolution was passed expressing the appreciation of the Society of Mr. Kaufman's untiring and successful work during the year.

The president spoke of the work of the past yearn and emphasized the fact that October, the first month of the fiscal year, has been one in which there have been heavy demands on the Society, owing to the influenza epidemic which has hit the people of Plainfield, particularly the industrial population, very hard. There is grave fear that the victims of this disease, owing to their weakened condition will fall an easy prey to tuberculosis, and great care must be taken to guard against this.

In her report as executive secretary, Miss Wheelan spoke of the effect of the war for a full year's period. In this connection she said: "Obviously there has been no lack of employment, and perhaps on first thought, this might seem to indicate that our activities have been lessened. As a matter of fact in 1918 there were only 18 fewer families who asked the ociety for help in one way or another, than in 1917. For every problem that the war temporarily solved, such as unemployment, it has created a new one, and many of the old ones have been augmented by war conditions. It has been hard for instance to find a place for applicants for the State institutions. They are, for the most part crowded to the limit, and while war prosperity has in no way diminished the number of epileptics, insane and feebleminded, war conditions have made it impracticable to build additions to the institutions that the ever-growing number of eligibles demands."

In line with this are the bad housing conditions in Plainfield which can hardly be exaggerated. With many war work factories in the neighborhood, people from the outlying districts have poured into town, and houses really unfit to live in are tenanted, not by one, but by many families. A plea was made in the report for the upbuilding and strengthening of the foreign population, which must be done through education and not through relief. The need for a visiting housekeeper, some one trained in social economics, was particularly emphasized, and the necessity for follow-up work was referred to. This necessity "is growing with each succeeding minute" and the all-important need of community interest and volunteers is very great. In the rehabilitation work in South Amboy following the explosion at the Gillespie plant, the Charity Organization Society had a share, working under the direction of the Red Cross, which was in charge of the relief work.

The printing and publicity committee in their report expressed their appreciation of the interest, co-operation and courtesy of the Plainfield newspapers, without which their work could not have been done.

The trustees elected for the coming year were as follows: Mrs. George L. Babcock, Samuel R. Carter, Jr., Mrs. James M. Charles, Henry L. de Forest, Mrs. Daniel S. Ginna, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, J. Albert Lane, Arthur B. Jones, H. C. Munger, William H. Murray, M. D., Miss Mabel E. Pierson, William R. Townsend, Cornelius B. Tyler, William M. Wherry, Howard H. Williams.

Upon adjournment of the annual meeting, the board of trustees met and elected the following officers: William M. Wherry, president; Henry L. de Forest, first vice president; Mrs. James M. Charles, second vice president; H. C. Munger, secretary; Cornelius B. Tyler, treasurer.

At this time it is difficult to tell what demands the winter will bring to the doors of the Charity Organization Society. A period of readjustment and reconstruction is always difficult; this can be met if the effort is united and concentrated. Will you join us?

USE OF HOME PRODUCTS URGED FOR THANKSGIVING.

Home products only on the Thanksgiving dinner table this year is the program of the food administration. Hotels, restaurants and other eating places have been asked to save transportation by using only food produced locally, and the administration has issued an appeal to households to observe the same rule.

Republicans Secure Assembly Control

The next New Jersey Assembly will consist of thirty-one Republicans and twenty-nine Democrats.

Official returns from the recent election given out this week show that two Democratic and one Republican Assemblymen were elected from Middlesex county. Up to the time of the official count it was believed that the three Democratic candidates had been elected, which would have produced a tie in the Assembly, thirty from each party.

The official returns from Middlesex county follow:

Andrew Kirkpatrick, Democrat, 8,085; Andrew J. White, Democrat, 7,830; Fred W. De Voe, Democrat, 7,946; Albert K. Appleby, Republican, 7,846; Lloss J. Johnson, Republican, 7,013; Charles E. Tindell, Republican, 7,146.

These figures show that Kirkpatrick, De Voe and Appleby have been elected. Appleby has a plurality of only sixteen votes over White, and Democratic leaders believe that the soldiers' vote will change this result. Republican leaders, on the other hand, say that the soldiers will increase Appleby's plurality.

FROM HER "LITTLEST BOY."

Dear Mother, when the shouting dies,
And hushed are the songs of victory;
My spirit lips from your dear eyes,
Shall brush the mists of memory.

"In Flanders' Fields, where poppies grow—
Amidst the crosses, row on row,"
Your "Littlest Boy" has won a grave
And the cross that God to your soldier gave.

Some day! I know, Oh, Mother mine,
I'll see your winsome face again,
And then by God's sweet grace divine
We'll know no parting grief or pain.

"In Flanders' Fields where poppies grow
Amidst the crosses row on row,"
Your "Littlest Boy," in peace tonight,
Rests where crosses glow in the soft moonlight.

So, Sweetheart Mother, please don't cry.

J. WATSON.

NO NEW INFLUENZA CASES REPORTED TODAY.

For the first time since the influenza epidemic was first noted, on September 18, the Plainfield Board of Health today failed to receive a report of any new cases. It is taken as an indication that the disease has practically run its course.

The total number of influenza cases reported from September 18 to November, 14 inclusive, was 2,239. The pneumonia cases in the same period were 312 and the deaths 121.

Thank You!

During the past three weeks, when SPANISH INFLUENZA so seriously depleted our operating force, you were asked to make only necessary telephone calls.

Your response helped to relieve the situation and helped us to continue to furnish necessary service.

This company realizes that oftentimes, no doubt, you voluntarily restricted your telephoning at your personal inconvenience and discomfort, and IT APPRECIATES YOUR CO-OPERATION.

This company also takes this opportunity to express publicly its appreciation of the services rendered by its operators who were not affected by the epidemic.

Their loyal work in the emergency made it possible for us to continue to render service to the sick, to the Government and to those needing telephone service for essential purposes.

While our operating forces are not yet on a normal basis, we look for a gradual return to duty of those employees who have been afflicted.

It is desirable that for several days you confine your calls as far as possible to necessary calls until the epidemic is safely passed and all calls can be handled on a normal basis.

CITY NATIONAL BANK

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

What Is a National Bank?

A National bank, such as this institution, differs from other banks in that it is organized and conducted under the careful supervision of the United States Government.

National Bank Examiners under the direction of the Comptroller of the Currency keep in touch with the details of this bank's workings and, moreover, strict rules and regulations to assure complete safety have been laid down by the Government and must be followed.

This is one feature of the unquestioned security we offer you in inviting your account.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on

Tuesday, December 3rd, 1918

at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seventeen remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts or parcels of land to be sold which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest from the twentieth day of December, 1917, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said Act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling, twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

December 20, 1917, is the date from which interest will be added to date of sale

SPICERS LOSE THREE GAMES

Local Shop Men Fail to Win in Bound Brook Bowling

In a Central New Jersey Bowling League game at Bound Brook the other evening the Spicer team of South Plainfield lost all three matches to the Bound Brook representatives. The second game went to Bound Brook by the narrow margin of two points, but the other two contests were taken with ease by the alley boys of the old Raritan.

Bednar of the winners had the high individual score of the evening. Efinger and Carl of the winning team topped the 200 mark. Britt Martin and Ernie Luthman were the mainstays of the Spicer outfit.

The scores:

BOUND BROOK
Zimmerman	170	157	171
Agans	165	145	154
Bednar	181	205	162

LIVE TURKEYS AMONG PRIZES

Westfield Golf Club and Climax Gun Club to Hold Shoots

The Westfield Golf Club will hold an open shoot on Thanksgiving Day morning. The event will be a 50 clay bird tourney, the prizes to be awarded consisting of live turkeys, ducks and chickens. Those in charge of the event have requested the announcement that the shoot is an open one, and a general invitation is extended to all trapshooters who would like to win a poultry dinner.

An added feature of the event will be a 50-bird competition between Richard Randolph and E. B. Woodruff. Mr. Randolph, a resident of this city, has challenged Mr. Woodruff, the present Union county champion. F. S. Slater is chairman of the committee in charge of the shoot.

On Saturday of this week the Climax Gun Club will hold its annual Thanksgiving shoot. Live birds will make up the prizes in this event, and the competition will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The program will consist of one 20 and two 15-bird events.

REDUCED RATE FOR MEN IN UNIFORM

The football committee of the United War Work campaign yesterday took an important step to popularize the football double-header at the Polo Grounds on Saturday afternoon. Harvard Radio and Princeton Aviation will meet in one contest and the Newport Naval Training Station and the Granite State in another.

In order that Uncle Sam's fighters and the city's youngsters might have an opportunity to witness this football carnival the price of bleacher seats was cut from the regular scale of $1 to 50 cents for men in uniform and schoolboys. Reports had reached the committee from various quarters that the soldiers and sailors were eager to turn out in large numbers, but that the dollar admission was just a little beyond their limited income. There will be a separate ticket booth where these specially-priced tickets will be sold to the soldiers, sailors and boys.

SOME SESSION!

Saturday is going to be one of the biggest days football has seen in years. With Pittsburg meeting Georgia Tech., the Navy taking on Great Lakes, Dartmouth tackling Brown and the war fund double-headers at the Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field as the feature contests, there will be no lack of interest.

The Pitt-Tech. game will develop probably the greatest splurge of football seen in many years. Glenn Warner and John Heisman like the spectacular and the unexpected, and they run to the intricate. Pitt says Tech's great plays are only old Warner stunts revamped. Joe Guyon, who played under Warner at Carlisle, says, "Nay, nay." Guyon, by the way, is the dean of intercollegate football actives.

COURT STARS GET STARTED

Four Independent Basketball Fives Get Under Way Here

The local basketball season is getting started. Independent fives are already booking games and the North Plainfield High School candidates for court honors have been practicing for the past few weeks. The proposed demobilization of soldiers in camps in this country will release many athletes with basketball experience—in fact, everything points to an active season on the local courts.

Of the independent teams that are ready to start the Recreation Five looms up as the most formidable. This team is arranging a series of games with the Knights of St. Peter of New Brunswick and has booked the Parlin team for a series. Morris Kline is directing the five and games can be arranged through him. Sam Davidson, "Soddy" Porter, T. Snyder, Pries, M. Snyder and Morris Kline are members of the team.

The Plainfield Five is rated highly as an independent contender. This team is run by Jack Conners and will probably use the Tabs' court on West Fourth street. It is not considered likely that the Tabs will put on a team this year. Bob Muir, Joe Angerbauer, Joe Clark, Leo Wilson and Leo Keating play with the Plainfield Five. The Plainfield Cubs are active, and the manager is Jack Faucett. The Ki-U of Hope Chapel performed victoriously last Saturday evening. Jack Rimmer is leader of the chapel five, and Jack is looking for games. It is not thought probable that a representative city team will be run here this season.

FRAZEE STILL REFUSES TO QUIT BASEBALL

President Frazee of the Red Sox has started baseball enthusiasm for 1919 in fine shape. He says: "Several weeks ago I was thinking seriously of selling the Boston American League franchise, but the armistice, which is equivalent to peace, has come since that time and now I intend to hang on to the club.

"I would sell, of course, if I got the price, but the price today is considerably bigger than it was a few weeks ago. The game will come back. We are already planning our spring Southern training trip and are on the look-out for new material.

"I am positively in favor of a one-man National Commission, and there is no question but that one man ought to be a big man, a man capable of taking care of baseball problems and disputes.

"It is my belief, and I know it is shared by many big league owners, that neither league president should sit on the National Commission. It should be removed from politics."

ED TAUBER WILL ASSIST WITH SHOW

The gymnastic and musical entertainment which the boys and girls of the North Plainfield High School intend to put on in Debele's Auditorium tomorrow evening should draw well. Under the capable direction of E. E. Unger, who is now the physical director of the borough schools, an elaborate, as well as interesting, program has been arranged.

Mr. Unger, his wife and Ed Tauber, one of the local wrestlers, will be the only outside talent used in the show. Tauber, who until recently lived in Passaic, is only a youngster, but in addition to being a fairly capable mat artist, he is particularly adept with the Indian and electric clubs. Both Mr. and Mrs. Unger are well up in this art, and they, assisted by Tauber, will be one of the features of the show. Dancing will follow the athletic program.

TRAP COMMITTEE

T. Hayes Keller, of New York, president of the Interstate Trapshooting Association, yesterday announced the appointment of the following executive committee: J. Leonard Clark, New York, chairman; E. R. Calvin, Wilmington; Frank C. Drew, New Haven; F. E. D. Kepplinger, Cincinnati, and Elmer E. Shaner, Pittsburg.

Keller was empowered to make the appointments at the recent meeting of the association. The task of the committee will be to revise the constitution and by-laws of the association.

HONOR JUSTICE WEEKS

Frederick W. Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., yesterday was notified that Justice Bartow S. Weeks, secretary of the American Olympic Committee, had been elected a member of the International Olympic Committee.

Justice Weeks succeeds the late Evert Jansen Wendell. The other American members of this committee are Prof. William M. Sloan and Allison V. Armour. Mr. Wendell died while doing war work in Paris.

SOUTH SIDE LINE DID NOT HOLD

Red and Blue Football Players Smashed Up Newark Defense

Although the Plainfield High School football team did not succeed in winning over the South Side team at Newark Tuesday, the locals threw an awful scare into the Newark camp, and, according to the following article, which appeared in the Newark Evening News yesterday, the South Side defense was smashed up time and again:

"South Side High's eleven yesterday afternoon put up a game fight against Plainfield High's boys at City Field and managed to play a 7 to 7 tie with the visiting outfit, despite the early start Plainfield got by pushing over a touchdown in the first quarter.

"Plainfield seemed to have things its own way from the start to almost the finish of the game, and the manner in which Plainfield's line smashed up South Side time and again made the locals fearful about the outcome. Even in the last few moments of play, after South Side tallied its touchdown, Plainfield came back and invaded South Side territory once more as the result of a couple of end runs and a forward pass.

"A forward that netted a gain of about twenty yards, worked by Haines and Ambs, placed South Side within hailing distance of Plainfield's goal in the fourth period. Here the Johnson avenue lads bucked the Plainfield line on several consecutive plays and Rabbit Kohn plunged over the goal for the local school's first score. Rabbit also booted the ball over the bar for the extra point.

"Haines, who worked the team from quarterback, pleased South Side's coaches, and he is likely to remain at that post for the remainder of the season. Kurtz showed up well at end."

RECREATION FIVE NOT "SEMI-PRO"

Local Five Will Receive Nothing More Than Expenses

The Recreation Five of this city has arranged to meet Company D of Somerville on the basketball court at that place November 30. The Recreation manager states that he also has a game pending with the Du Pont five. It was incorrectly stated in this paper last evening that the Recreation Five is a semi-pro basketball team. This announcement was made on the strength of a statement from Morris Kline, who evidently misinterpreted the meaning of semi-pro. The boys merely get a guarantee of actual expenses, and not one cent above the bare expenses is received. Were the team a semi-pro organization it would not be possible for any of the local high school stars to play either with the team or against it.

In justice to the local high school boys who may perform either with or against the Recreation Five, we want to state that Kline's team is not a semi-pro outfit and that Kline unintentionally made the statement that it is.

REPRESENT NAVY

The navy will be represented in the six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden the week of December 1-7 by Clarence Carman, of Jamaica. Carman, who enlisted in the navy at the close of last year's grind, in which he finished fifth with Wiley, sent in his entry yesterday from the United States naval station at Gulfport, Miss.

Michael De Baets, the Belgian, also sent in his entry yesterday and will be teamed with Carman. Another combination made yesetrday is that of Vincenzo Verri, of Italy, and Pete Drobach, of Boston. This is considered one of the best teams in the race.

DYNAMITE STORE HIDDEN

New York, Nov. 21.—While residents of Lexington avenue and 60th street were impatiently awaiting completion of the Lexington avenue subway, in July last year, a dynamite magazine was at or near that crossing in a sub-excavation below the level intended for future operation of trains.

That fact was revealed in the Supreme Court yesterday when Charles Jacobs testified in a suit against the Deenon Contracting Company in which he was awarded $17,500.

MORE ABOUT THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Editor Courier-News:

In response to my letter protesting against the United States going into a league of European nations, Mr. J. Watson says I sit dreamily stirring the "cold ashes of dead issues." Yes! and with the "dead ashes" I find living embers, still aglow with vital interest of today. I insist that I have neither misquoted George Washington, nor have I misinterpreted him, if I understand the meaning of the English language. Let us see! I quote, now, in part, verbatim from Washington's farewell address: "The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop."

There can be no misinterpretation of these words, Mr. Editor. It will be noted that Washington made no mention of Kings and Princes, as Mr. Watson says, but deals with European nations.

As to Kings and Princes, regretfully there are many of these still extant. They are just as arrogant as in Washington's day. They have the same jealousies and hates, and must be reckoned with. There is King George of England, the King of Belgium, King of Spain, Emperor of Austria, the Sultan of Turkey and a host of others, all in position and place. They are still representatives of power, more or less despotic. These rulers and their people are all jealous of America's progress and position. Their bitterness and vigilance for their respective countries, for their trade relations, make them rivals and competitors in trade and commerce, as in the early days of our republic.

"Dead issues!" says Mr. Watson. Well, among the "dead issues" I find the Monroe Doctrine. Is that a "dead issue?" Every American who is worthy of the name believes in that and every administration since that doctrine was first enunciated has stoutly defended it; at the same time every European power has denied its soundness and has opposed it.

Let us suppose a question should come before the proposed league of nations concerning the position of the United States respecting the Panama Canal. I ask what chance would the United States have before such a tribunal in the determination of whether or not we have the right to defend our own canal? I am sure we would not have the proverbial Chinaman's chance.

Mr. Watson says the United States is a league of nations. As between the United States and the proposed league of nations there is no analogy. The United States is a confederation of States greatly limited in powers. We are a nation of one tongue, one aim, one hope and one ambition. This is not the case in Europe with divers tongues and rivalries. To my mind the comparison of our union with Europe is ridiculous.

Who wants the league of nations, anyway? It is true that Mr. Lloyd George has proclaimed for it, and recent events seem to demonstrate that England has need for such an organization but not America.

Let European states league to their hearts' content, but let America be free from entangling alliances.

I assert, without hesitation, that outside of a few dreamers, doctrinnaires and idealists, there is no sentiment in the United States for such a league. If this proposal were submitted to the people it would be buried out of sight.

ELIZABETH MAN KILLED IN ACTION

Elizabeth, Nov. 21—Private Julius Loderhose, Jr., was killed in action October 10, according to a War Department message received by Mr. and Mrs. Julius Loderhose, Sr., of 942 Monroe avenue, his parents. Loderhose was drafted in September, 1917, and went to France in May. He was a member of a machine gun Battalion. He was born in Hoboken, twenty-nine years ago and was a member of the Y. M. C. A., Sunday School Athletic League, and Winfield Scott Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. Two sisters also survive.

WANTS INFORMATION RELATIVE TO SHIPPING BOARD

(Central News Cable)

Washington, Nov. 21.—Senator Harding today introduced a resolution calling for information as to all existing contracts made by the Shipping Board. Senator Harding said the proposed employment of 200,000 additional men would cost $600,000,000 above the existing appropriations set aside for the Shipping Board.

KAISER NEVER WAS HUNGRY

Copenhagen, Nov. 21.—According to Berlin advices enormous stores of food-stuffs were found in the castle of the former German Emperor in Berlin. A member of the Soldiers and Workmen's Council is authority for the statement that there was a great variety of food found, the value of which normally would be several hundred housand marks.

BELIEVE RICHARDSON IS OUT OF THE FIGHT

Special to the Courier-News:

Trenton, Nov. 21.—There seems to be a growing feeling that Captain Emerson L. Richards, of Atlantic county, is constitutionally out of the fight among the Republican State Senators for a presiding officer for the upper branch of the Legislature. This feeling seems to be predicated upon the belief that when the opinions are given by former Supreme Court Judge Gilbert Collins and former Attorney General Edmund T. Wilson, they will be adverse to Mr. Richards' ambition to be Senate President. The Senate majority has decided to ask these eminent legal authorities of the State to give their views on the question as to whether the Richards' acceptance of an army commission comes within the purview of that clause in the State Constitution which says a legislator who accepts a Federal office or appointment forfeits his seat in the lawmaking body.

BULGARIANS TREATED SERBIANS AS SLAVES

London, Nov. 21.—The Times correspondent in Sofia says that there is no shadow of a doubt that slavery of the worst type known in history, ancient or modern, has been practised on a large scale in Bulgaria during the war. The whip was freely applied to stimulate the flagging strength of prisoners, and when any sickened there was no medical aid to restore them. A thousand thus perished miserably. Out of 100,000 Serbs interned in Bulgaria only 53,000 survive.

NOT ALONE HIS CANNON, HIS WORDS STIR FRANCE

Paris, Nov. 21.—An interesting sidelight on the proposal to erect a monument at the mouth of the Gironde River to commemorate the help given to France in the war by the United States, became known today. It was the words of General Pershing during his visit to Picpus Cemetery—"Lafayette, we are here"—that inspired the plan to raise such a monument.

SCHLESWIG FLIES DANISH FLAG NOW

Copenhagen, Nov. 21.—The Danish colors are now flying throughout the Province of Schleswig after fifty-two years.

The German authorities at Kiel have sent messages that it is now permissible to hoist the flag of Denmark, which was hauled down in 1866, when Prussia acuired sovereignty.

TEXTURES IN FOOD

In planning a menu, or in serving a meal there is one very important point to be kept in mind in addition to "food values" and the "five food groups." It is termed, for lack of a better word, "food textures."

Foods may be hard or soft, crisp, brittle or oily, smooth or granular, coarse or fine grained. An attractive meal avoids too many foods of the same texture. Milk toast and custard make a combination too soft, crisp rolls and nuts make a combination too hard. Dumplings on the other hand go well with meat stews, hard cookies with soft desserts such as custards and ice creams, crisp crackers with soup, nuts with raisins or figs.

Bread and butter combines the oily with the more or less granular, lettuce or other marinated vegetables with mayonnaise puts the smooth with the crisp. Granular brown bread is excellent with baked apples; mealy baked beans taste better with a little pork; smooth mashed potatoes are good with the crust of cooked meat; in potato salad, celery and cucumber add a pleasing crispness.

In so far as our meals conform to the recognized ideals of food combinations, they will the more nearly satisfy us who eat them. Scientists agree that satisfaction of mind results in better assimilation of food. The United States Food Administration believes that this is worth striving for, since we must endeavor to get the highest possible good out of all that we eat.

ANTI-RED CROSS PASTOR GETS 10 YEARS IN PRISON

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 21—The Rev. David Gerdes, pastor of the Whiteside County Church of the Brethren, who preached opposition to the Liberty Loan and Red Cross, was sentenced to ten years in Leavenworth prison by Judge Landis yesterday. A week ago Gerdes told Judge Landis that even if a German were to attack his own daughter he would not slay the ruffian.

"These men hold their measly little shriveled souls of more importance than they do the honor of their mother, wife or daughter," said the court.

DANGER FOLLOWS GRIP

REBUILDING HEALTH AFTER ANY ILLNESS

Getting Well Means Gaining Strength – A Wholesome Tonic

The getting-well stage of grip, pneumonia or other illness is the most dangerous of all because the body, weakened by the disease, is wide open to attacks of other lurking germs.

That is why all the organs of the body must be kept in their best working order, not only to drive out the poison left by the disease, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system.

As a means toward good health after any illness Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure, wholesome nourishment and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs or alcohol. Father John's Medicine has had 60 years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.

Proof:--

One of the best known professional men in New York (his name will be given on request) says:—"After an acute attack of typhoid pneumonia, I had a racking cough and lost twenty pounds in eleven days. I never was so completely run down in my life. I was about to go to a hospital when I began to take Father John's Medicine, which after I had taken it faithfully, restored me to sound health. I regained flesh that I had lost and have since been as well as ever in my life. I have since learned that my physician has been in the habit of prescribing Father John's Medicine in such cases."

MORRISTOWN SOLDIER KILLED BY TROLLEY.

Morristown, Nov. 21—Word has been received by his sister, Mrs. John J. Caufield, from the War Department of the death of her brother, Sergeant Jeremiah Linderman, of this place, in a trolley car accident somewhere near Camp Lee, Virginia, where he was stationed. No details of the accident are contained in the telegram.

Linderman, who was forty-one years old, never married. For some years he was employed at the State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains. His mother, three brothers and his sister survive him.

GREAT SHOW BY CAMP DIX BOYS

"You'll Like It" Was Presented in This City Before Two Big Audiences

THEY MADE A GREAT HIT

It Was a Glimpse of Life Among the Boys at Camp Dix, With the Various Camp Features

Many who saw the production "You'll Like It" as presented in the Plainfield Theatre yesterday afternoon and last night by the soldier boys from Camp Dix probably went with the query in mind as to what can be funny enough for a show that comes out of an army camp where the whole practice and thought seem to be trained in the grim horrors of war. Their query was fully satisfied, however, and two thousand people at the two performances were fully convinced that the title of the production was very appropriate.

The whole show was original and the title is the assuring salutation to the rookie who comes to camp, homesick, a stranger and downcast in a crowd of thousands. He soon agrees with the fellows who hail him with the salutation, "You'll like it," and he soon becomes one of them in spirit, like the freshman in college, and he likes it. Like college men, the soldier boys have a great variety of talent in every direction that makes for the artistic and entertaining features of life, as well as the courage, intelligence and determination that makes good soldiers. In their leisure hours they have the time and inclination to develop such talent that combined makes the kind of show that was produced here last night.

The production is being shown in several cities for the purpose of raising a fund to provide for entertainment in Camp Dix during the winter as a diversion for the boys, for they cannot be dismissed right away to go home, even if the war is over. They will need even more diversion now since in their hopes of going across to take part in making the world safe to live in they have been disappointed.

The show was a glimpse of camp life, with brief features of routine, drills, etc, the amusements of hours off duty, some burlesque, and, altogether, a continuous round of fun for the audience. It was staged under the direction of Private William Sully and Director Norman Hackett, both well-known actors, and with the approval of Major General Hugh L. Scott, commanding Camp Dix.

About forty of the boys were here, all taking some part in the program. Between the acts Mr. Hackett made a little speech, extending the heartiest thanks, not only to the audience, which supported the play in such large numbers, but to the citizens who graciously opened their homes to the boys while here. He said the boys remarked gleefully: "Plainfield is a regular town," with accent on the "regular." He added that, judging from the way the boys were treated, Mr. Hoover overlooked Plainfield. Just then came a procession of young men toward the stage, each bearing a huge cake to present to the soldiers, and Mr. Hackett exclaimed: "Now I know Mr. Hoover has not been here."

The second act was a view and scenes in a hostess house during an evening social. There was the stone fireplace and a fire crackling on the andirons, the soldiers and a group of girls with their chaperon and an evening program of songs, dances and social chat. The women's parts were taken by the young men, and in their gowns and wigs could easily have kept most of the audience guessing until one took off his wig amid the applause and amusement.

All who had the speaking parts and motion parts did splendidly, and to mention them would be to mention nearly the whole ensemble. The chaperon, Private Roy Burk, by reason of robust stature and bright repartee, caused much amusement. Private Julius Shadlin was the accordion virtuoso; Private Ferris, barrel jumper; Sergeant Robert Grisal and Private Karl Palliant, 'cello and piano duo, the latter also playing his own arrangement of "The Rosary." Corporal Marcel Kasner was the man "who grows." He extended his height six inches and his arms about as much. He is the tallest and biggest man in camp and, says the Government has difficulty getting shoes and clothing big enough for him. Private Hector Malinoff was the Cossack dancer.

The whole program was full of human interest because it is a reproduction of real life, original, spontaneous and bright, and is done by the boys of whom we are all proud because they are our soldier boys and in the uniform of the defenders of the nation. They are happy over their reception in Plainfield, and we are glad they came.

PLENTY OF PLATINUM READY FOR JEWELRY NOW

Washington, Nov. 21.—Ladies of means and fashion, of New York and elsewhere, will be interested in an announcement of the War Trade Board yesterday that platinum, dental platinum, tridium, palladium and rhodium have been removed from the export conservation list. At one time owners of platinum jewelry were expected to surrender it for war uses, and jewelers were not permitted to mount stones in platinum.

OFFICERS ADOPT WAITING POLICY REGARDING GUNS

The Second New Jersey Field Artillery, the "Big Guns" outfit, which strove, but failed, to get into active service during the war, will remain intact until the State and Federal governments decide on its future. Officers of the regiment met Tuesday night in the Essex Troop Armory, Newark, when the effect of the war's end on the future of the regiment was discussed. As the demobilization of New Jersey troops now in France might be followed by numerous reorganizations affecting the artillery unit, officers decided on a policy of watchful waiting.

Capt. Paul J. Lambert, of Elizabeth, was named regimental adjutant to succeed Captain Bertram, of Montclair, recently commissioned a first lieutenant in the Motor Transport Corps. It was announced also that two other officers of the "Big Guns" had commissions in branches of the active service. Major Mahlon Ivans, of Camden, has been commissioned a captain in the Ordnance Department, and Second Lieutenant Singer, of Jersey City, has been appointed to the same rank in the Motor Transport Corps.

... and with Navy Officers, it's a little over 80%

A fact:

Sales reports show that throughout the U. S. Navy—on battleships, cruisers, destroyers and all other types of naval vessels—over 80% of all the cigarettes sold in Officers' Mess are Fatimas. Among the men too, of course, Fatimas are a big favorite.

FATIMA

A Sensible Cigarette

This preference for Fatima in the Navy is due not alone to the pleasing taste, but also to the fact that Fatimas never "talk back," even if a man should smoke more than usual.

MRS. STEENGRAFE DIES AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

Mrs. Johanna J. Steengrafe, wife of Adolph Steengrafe, died yesterday morning at her home in South Plainfield after a long and trying illness in the seventy-sixth year of her age. The funeral will be held at the family residence tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, the Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, of this city, officiating. A second service will be held in Brooklyn Saturday morning, and interment will be made in that city.

Mrs. Steengrafe was born in Germany, but had lived in this country for the past fifty years, twenty-three of which she had spent in South Plainfield. Besides her husband, she leaves the following children—Adolph, of Plainfield; Oscar, of Newark; Bernhardt and George, of New York, and the Misses Lilly and Elsa, at home.

Mrs. Steengrafe was widely known in South Plainfield and this city, as well as in New York and Brooklyn, and she was greatly respected by all who knew her.

GONDORF FREED FROM JAIL

New York, Nov. 21.—Three of Sing Sing's celebrities were paroled at a meeting of the State Board of Parole held at the prison yesterday. William A. Orr, the new superintendent of prisons, presided. It was Mr. Orr's first official visit to Sing Sing since he was appointed.

Charles Gondorf, alias Macdonald, "king of wire-tappers," was ordered paroled. Gondorf, considered the leader of the prison's "idle rich," made a fortune in wire-tapping swindles in New York City.

Former Village Clerk Talbot, of Cornwall-on-Hudson, who stole several thousand dollars, presented a letter in his behalf from Dr. Lyman Abbott, who has a summer place in Cornwall.

George Chevalier, who stole public funds from the White Plains police department, also was paroled. A score of other less important offenders were before Mr. Orr.

GIFT TO LIBRARY SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of West Eight street, seventeen years ago today presented to the Art Department of the Plainfield Public Library the valuable collection of lepidoptera (moths and butterflies), collected by Mrs. Gilbert, and valued by some connoisseurs at $10,000. This exhibit is still at the library and is a beautiful collection.

Millions Use It For Colds

Because "Pape's Cold Compound" relieves cold or grippe misery in a few hours—Really wonderful!

Don't stay stuffed-up!

Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a severe cold either in the head, chest, body or limbs.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages; stops nasty discharge or nose running; relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Don't accept a substitute. Insist on "Pape's"—nothing else.

Frank I. Donnelly, a Soldier of the U. S. A., Makes Supreme Sacrifice Somewhere in France

Corporal Frank I. Donnelly

"Somewhere in France, where gray crosses mark the last resting-place of the gallant crusaders of liberty, who shall never return; somewhere in the silent ranks of America's warrior dead; serene of face and stilled of heart, our young citizen-soldier, Frank I. Donnelly, his duty well and nobly done, lies in peace beneath the golden moss that clothes the slopes of the Blue Alsatian Mountains.

"Dear as life was to that young man, as he, in company with other loyal hearts, set out from our city to join their regiment on its way to the battle front of freedom, there were things infinitely more precious, and these things were in grave peril.

"It was for the preserving of these things that our country resolved upon war, and throughout the land the call of the Nation to its loyal sons to arise in their defense was heard. To that call Frank Donnelly answered, 'I am ready!' and clear and steady of eye, and proud of heart he stepped out on the pathway of immortality,—a pathway that is for men and nations, a pathway that leads to the high altar of sacrifice superb.

"The Almighty God has placed upon the cold brows of the heroic dead the diadem of victory—'A Tribute' that in itself transcends in majestic beauty and glory, the fairest flowers of language that bloom in the poet's heart.

"Nothing that human tongue can utter, or pen can trace, can decorate with a brighter gleam, the radiance of a soul that goes forth in the service of our Lord and Master Jesus Christ.

"It is one of the pathetic tragedies of life that it was not given to the mother of our young citizen-soldier the solace of seeing her boy wearing the uniform of a defender of Faith, Liberty and Humanity, for the lusterous light of vision had faded from her beautiful eyes before that day. So let your voice of sympathy, as it reaches her ears be low and soft and sweet, and let your hand be tenderly lovingly warm in its clasp as you guide her steps, for she is the brave mother of a gallant American soldier, 'Killed in Action' 'Somewhere in France.'

"Dear Mother, when the shouting dies,
And hushed are the songs of victory
My spirit lips from your dear eyes,
Shall brush the mists of memory.

"'In Flanders' Fields, where poppies grow—
Amidst the crosses, row on row,'
Your 'Littlest Boy' has won a grave
And the cross that God to your soldier gave."

J. WATSON.

Perhaps no soldier lad from Plainfield who has met death on the battlefield had a larger acquaintance throughout this community than Corporal Frank Ignatius Donnelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Donnelly, of 460 West Fourth street, who died in defense of his country on October 17, according to an official telegram received by the parents, Monday night.

The sad news came as a deep shock to the young man's hundreds of friends and the sympathy of all has been extended to the bereaved family. Corporal Donnelly was extremely popular and a personal loss is felt by all who knew him. The formal message from Washington, as is customary, bore no details but it is hoped that subsequent information may bring further facts.

Corporal Donnelly was born in this city on April 5, 1892, his home from the time of his birth until the day of his death being at the West Fourth street address. After graduating from St. Mary's School, he entered the shop of the Spicer Universal Joint Corporation, and learned the trade of die-sinker. He was engaged in this occupation at the South Plainfield plant of the concern when he was called into service on February 25th last. Within three months, or May 18th, to be exact, he went overseas as a member of Company G, 311th Infantry. His promotion to corporal came two months after he had commenced training at Camp Dix and was in recognition for his ready acceptability of military routine. On more than one occasion, he was highly complimented by his commanding officer and would undoubtedly have risen to an advanced position if his life had been spared.

As soon as he was old enough, Corporal Donnelly, or "Bus," as he was known to everyone, joined St. Mary's T. A. B. Society. When this organization decided to have a fife and drum corps, he was one of the strongest supporters of the plan and lent every energy to bringing about its accomplishment. Sometime after the corps was an established fact he succeeded William Sullivan as drum major and held the position up to the time of his going to Camp Dix. There are but few Plainfielders who do not recall him as he marched ahead of the musical organization when it was at its full strength. Always immaculate and natty in his appearance he was even more so when attired in his uniform and he never failed to excite comment from masculine specators as well as feminine. Being an expert at twirling the baton also added to his attractiveness as he led his fellow musicians through the streets of the city on many a parade. When the "Tabs" gave their splendid minstrel shows a few years ago, "Bus" was one of the shining lights. His versatility earned him a place as end man and his songs and jokes were the hit of all the performances.

In addition to his membership in the T. A. B. Society and the Fife

Irving Dea Kyne Killed in Action

Sergeant Irving H. Dea Kyne, a member of the 309th Machine Gun Company, and a former Plainfield resident, was killed in action in France on October 31. Word to this effect came last night to his two sisters, Mrs. William Jaeger, of 740 West Fourth street, and Mrs. Charles Keiderling, Jr., of 262 East Front street.

At the time of entering the service nearly a year ago, Sergeant Dea Kyne was living with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dea Kyne, of Franklin Park. He was twenty-three years old and leaves beside Mrs. Jaeger and Mrs. Keidrling, one other sister, Mrs. Charles Sells, of Philadelphia, and two brothers.

During the summer of 1912, Sergeant Dea Kyne was employed by Thomas M. Muir at Camp Ram's Horn, Lake Hopatcong, as boat man. He was in charge of Mr. Muir's motor moats, "Marie M." and "Ethel H.," and will be remembered by many Plainvelders who enjoyed trips about the lake in these craft under his guidance. When in Plainfield, Sergeant Dea Kyne lived with his sister, Mrs. Jaeger.

Stebbins' Sale Brings $20,000 For Muhlenberg

The Albert C. Stebbins property at 835 West Seventh street, bequeathed by Mr. Stebbins to Muhlenberg Hospital, was sold during the past week netting a total of about $20,000 for the institution. The property consists of a fine modern house and spacious grounds and the sale included the magnificent furnishings of the residence. These comprised imported rugs, bed-room suits, parlor and dining room furniture, bric-a-brac and tapestries. They were disposed of at a private sale lasting three days and under the supervision of a committee from the Women's Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital, of which Mrs. J. P. Stevens, of Hillside avenue, was chairman.

The house and grounds were purchased by William H. Armstrong, of Carlton avenue, through the agency of J. T. Vail. It is understood that the consideration was about $11,000. Mr. Armstrong will occupy the premises himself.

By the will of Mr. Stebbins, who was for many years vice president and general manager of the Pond Machine Tool Company, Muhlenberg Hospital received previously in all about $100,000. A portion of this amount was in cash and the remainder in property or gilt-edged securities. The Board of Governors placed about $80,000 of the bequest in Liberty Bonds, believing this would be the best method of securing a net annual income.

ESCAPED ARMY TRUCK BUT SPRAINED HIS ANKLE.

James P. Mottley, of 37 Lincoln place, the borough, had an narrow escape Tuesday from being run down by a heavy army truck as he was crossing Broadway, New York. By rare presence of mind he threw himself forward just in time to avoid getting hit by the big machine but fell to the roadway with a badly sprained ankle. He was forced to return to Plainfield later and with much difficulty managed to get from the train to a cab.

Dr. Gray, who is attending him, believes it will be several weeks before Mr. Mottley will be able to return to work. He is employed in the cable department of the Guaranty Trust Company.

Another Big Cut on Way At Aero Plant

Employes at the Elizabeth plant of the Standard Aero Corporation are looking forward to another big lay-off of hands tomorrow. Seven hundred were dismissed last Monday, and it is believed an equal number will be laid off tomorrow noon.

The Elizabeth plant is under Government control and it is rumored that Washington has ordered the working force cut in half. At one time there were 3,000 persons, many of them from Plainfield, employed at the shop, but the number was reduced several weeks ago to about 2,200. With Monday's lay-off and the one to come tomorrow, it is believed that only 800 to 1,000 hands will remain. Work on the $400,000 worth of new buildings is still going on but it is believed this will be stopped in a few days.

The Plainfield plant of the corporation is not under Government control and at present not in line for a reduction of its force.

Big Time Ahead For Local Elks

Plainfield Lodge of Elks is preparing for a gala Thanksgiving eve celebration next Wednesday night. Following the regular business meeting, which will be Exalted Rulers' Night, there is to be an entertainment arranged by a committee of which M. L. Shannon is the chairman. At its conclusion the attendants will be served with an old time Thanksgiving "feed." The details of the entertainment are being kept a secret but rumor has it that it is going to be something great.

During the business session, Past Exalted Rulers will occupy the stations. Senator William N. Runyon will be exalted ruler and assisting officers may possibly be George O. Stevens, John H. Cose, Joseph Noonan, L. A. Bellis, Francis J. Blatz and Walter Marder. A service roll call for the fifty Plainfield Elks wearing the uniform will be called and letters will be read from several of the men in France.

Robert Schreiner's Injuries Quite Bad

Robert Schreiner, of the firm of Schreiner Brothers, druggists, is likely to be confined to his home on Central avenue for many weeks, through his being run down by an automobile driven by Mrs. A. Cathcart, of Grant avenue, at Central avenue and Seventh street, late Saturday afternoon.

A summing up of Mr. Schreiner's injuries showed that he received two fractured ribs, a cut on one foot requiring ten stitches to cose up, another had cut over one eye and a badly cut nose in addition to severe body bruises. He was riding a bicycle when the accident happened and after being knockedw from his machine fell beneath the automobile and was dragged for many feet. From the manner in which he was hurt it is considered remarkable that he escaped with his life. The injured man is being attended by Dr. Raphael Yood.

The blame for the accident has been placed upon Mrs. Cathcart, who, it is alleged, made a sudden turn at the corner without noticing Mr. Schreiner in her path. The car she was driving belongs to her uncle, Andrew R. Stevens, of 943 Grant avenue.

Mayor Asks For Discussion on War Chest Plan

Mayor Leighton Calkins has called for a public gathering on December 3 to discuss the plan of organizing a community method of raising and distributing funds. In connection with the call the Mayor issued the following statement this morning:

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of citizens will be held in the Council Chamber, 149 North avenue, Tuesday evening, December 3, 1918, for the purpose of considering the advisability of organizing a Community Chest as a permanent institution in Plainfield. Such an organization would undertake to raise in a single campaign each year all funds required in aid of local philanthropies dependent on public subscription. This meeting supersedes the one which was to have been held to consider the War Chest plan, postponed because of the epidemic and now indefinitely deferred in view of the United War Work campaign and the termination of the war, which undoubtedly will result in modified programs for war relief work of all kinds. A War Chest would have included war relief and local charitable activities. The Community Chest will be limited to the latter.

Our local charities require immediate relief. Either they must at once conduct separate campaigns, drives, and tag-days as heretofore or unite in a Community Chest, on the budget system, the organization of which is now being urged.

In a matter of such importance a public hearing is the best means of obtaining a thorough exchange of views, and a necessary means of giving full opportunity for those who oppose the proposition to make their objections known in advance. I urge upon them the duty of doing so, as it is imperative that a definite policy be adopted, one which will have the whole-hearted support of the community.

Unless there is substantial opposition to the proposition to justify further consideration of the matter, a committee will be named to undertake immediately the organization of a Community Chest.

The several philanthropies and charitable institutions of the city are requested to accept this public notice as a request to be represented by delegates, authorized to speak for their organizations either in support of or in opposition to the plan. Without their approval and participation the chief object of a Community Chest, which is the elimination of separate appeals for funds, would fail of accomplishment.

LEIGHTON CALKINS.
Plainfield, Nov. 22, 1918.

Sergeant Frank Lee Writes From Florida

Mr. and Mrs. William Lee, of Scotch Plains, are in receipt of a letter from their son, Sergeant Frank Lee, stationed at Camp Johnston, Jacksonville, Fla., in which he states that the declaration of peace came just as his division of the remount service was preparing to start North for embarkation overseas. While the news was good, Sergeant Lee writes the boys are all deeply disappointed at not getting a crack at the Kaiser. To give vent to their feelings, they organized a peace celebration that took Jacksonville by storm and continued for nearly three days.

Sergeant Lee has now been in the service about ten months. He was first stationed at Camp Dix, but was transferred from there to Camp Johnston early in October. His promotion from corporal to sergeant came at the same time and later he was selected to attend the Officers' Training School for commission in the quartermasters' department. He was hard at his studies, in addition to performing his regular duties, when the welcome message came from overseas that Germany had surrendered.

Sergeant Lee adds in his letter that he thoroughly enjoys his military life and if Uncle Sam cares to keep him down South he will be perfectly contented. He is in the best of health and asks to be remembered to all his friends. Sergeant Lee is twenty-two years old and previous to entering the service was employed as a carpenter.

MRS. ZWEIFEL AGAIN ATTACKED BY INFLUENZA.

Mrs. Fred Sweifel, of Grant avenue, who was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital several weeks ago, after recovering from influenza and pneumonia, was taken to the institution again on Tuesday, suffering from the same complaint.

This is one of the first instances on record where influenza and pneumonia patients has been attacked a second time within such a short period. The popular belief exists that the person once recovering from influenza is immune for practically all time.

It was said today that Mrs. Zweifel's condition is quite serious, and the outcome of the second attack is in doubt.

Red Cross Shop Clears $1,400 on Opening Day

Big Salesroom in Babcock Building Thronged for Hours and Success of Enterprise Is Assured --- Entertainment Tomorrow Afternoon and "Get Together" of Workers Next Tuesday Night

More than $1,400 was cleared yesterday on the first day of the Red Cross shop in the Babcock building planned and being conducted by the women of the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter with Mrs. J. M. Charles as chairman.

From 9:30 in the morning, when patrons were first admitted until 6 o'clock last night, the place was thronged with eager buyers. Hundreds of articles were sold and in addition 130 persons were served with lunch at noon. One of the visitors of note was Mrs. J. M. Danziger, of Los Angeles, Cal., who originated and conducted the Red Cross shop in that city, now regarded as one of the best ventures of a local Red Cross chapter. She extended congratulations on the splendid arrangement of the Plainfield shop and the patronage accorded on the opening day.

The shop is to be open on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week from 9:30 until 5:30. It will be closed next Thursday on account of the holiday. Its various departments contain practically everything needed in the household or for wearing apparel and many excellent bargains are to be had. Tomorrow afternoon an entertainment will be a special feature. Mrs. Charles will be in charge and Senator William N. Runyon will preside at the piano. A delegation of wounded soldiers from Colonia Hospital will render war songs and other ballads. In addition an address will be given by Mrs. Baldwin, of New York, on "The War's Great Demands and the Work of the Red Cross." Mrs. Baldwin was formerly with the Ben Greet players and is a very talented woman.

Next Tuesday night there will be a "get together" of all the persons who helped make the shop a success. It will be in the nature of a supper and entertainment. The attendants will include the women in charge of the shop and all its departments and the craftsmen of the city, who generously donated their services in putting the old postoffice quarters into shape to establish the Red Cross enterprise.

It is a custom of Red Cross workers to remain silent a minute each noon and this will be observed at the Red Cross shop each day. Patrons are asked to keep this in mind.

Freed of Criminal Charge But Must Answer Civil Suit

Although a jury in the Union County Court on Tuesday decided that Fritz Nowack, of 634 East Sixth street, this city, was innocent of a charge of involuntary manslaughter, brought against him by Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, for the accidental killing of fifteen-year-old Victor Brancatti, at South avenue and Terrill road on August 18 last, the defendant has been served with papers in a $25,000 civil suit for damages. The proceedings have been brought by the boy's father, Earl Brancatti, of Terrill road, and will be heard at the January term of court. Robert Newton Crane will represent the plaintiff and Vincent W. Nash, Jr., the defendant.

Nowack was driving his automobile west on South avenue on the day of the accident and encountered a group of boys walking in the roadway near Terrill road. One of them was Victor Brancatti, and according to the defendant's testimony Tuesday, the youth stepped further toward the centre of the street after a warning signal had been given twice. The fender of the car struck him, causing injuries from which he died in Muhlenberg Hospital later.

In the car with Mr. Nowack were his wife and two children. They substantiated the defendant's claim that he was not proceeding about seventeen miles an hour and that after the victim was hit the machine was stopped within ten feet. Helen Miller, a sixteen-year-old girl employed in an ice cream parlor on South avenue, also testified that the Nowack car was moving slowly, that the Klaxon had been sounded twice and that the group of boys had been skylarking in the road just previous to the accident.

Attorney V. W. Nash, Jr., who defended Mr. Nowack, had covered every detail in preparing his case to clear his client and he presented the facts in a masterly manner. Prosecutor Hetfield's main contention was that Nowack had been driving his car at an excessive rate of speed and he produced several Italian residents of Terrill road who asserted that this was so. When it came to a question, however, as to just what the speed of the Nowack car was at the time of the accident, the witnesses were unable to give any satisfactory reason as to why they had said the machine was overstepping the limits. None of them qualified as experts on rates of speed and no two held to the same opinion as to the rate when cross-examined by Mr. Nash. Frank J. Hubbard, of this city, was produced by the State to show maps and give a technical description of the roadway where the accident took place.

The case went to the jury at 3:15 in the afternoon after an all-day trial and the verdict of "not guilty" was returned within half an hour. Attorney Nash was warmly congratulated by Prosecutor Hetfield and numerous lawyers who had witnessed the proceedings for the complete defense he had set up for what appeared to be a sure conviction. Mr. Nowack, the defendant, is employed at the Scott Press Works as a toolmaker.

No Further Details Regarding Death of Private Lundstrom

Telegrams sent to Washington by Bror H. Lundstrom, of 628 East Seventh street, have failed to produce any further information regarding the death of his son, Private Carl A. Lundstrom, officially reported in General Pershing's casualty list as having been killed in France on September 26. Only the formal announcement was contained in the message as received by the father on Monday, but the promise was made that any additional word that could be secured would be sent on.

Private Lundstrom was born in Sweden and his death came on his twenty-third birthday. He was brought to America by his father after his mother's death and had lived in Plainfield practically all his life. After completing his course at school, he was employed in various ways about the city until early last year, when he secured an excellent position at the local plant of the Standard Aero Company. He was holding this in September, 1917, when called into service through the selective draft.

After remaining at Camp Dix all last winter, Private Lundstrom went overseas in May as a member of Company A, 311th Infantry. It was this unit that saw active service at St. Mihiel, Grand Pre and Sedan, and his sacrifice for his country's honor is believed to have been made in the St. Mihiel drive. At Dix, he showed himself to be a soldier in every sense of the word and those who knew him are certain that he died like a true hero.

Private Lundstrom's associates all live or did live in the vicinity of South avenue and Berckman street. In that neighborhood and the one nearer his home, he is spoken of in the highest of terms. As one friend expressed it, "He had the faculty of minding his own business" and if he had been permitted to live he would have proved a credit to himself and his people. The blow comes all the harder to Mr. Lundstrom from the fact that the soldier-hero was his only son. The lad was also the pride of his stepmother, who had been entrusted with his rearing from the time that he was a child, and to her the sympathy of the community has been extended.

Reception in Honor of Rev. Father P. J. Clune

The Sisters and Students of Mt. St. Mary's College tendered a reception at the college, Wednesday night, to Rev. Father P. J. Clune, the newly appointed rector of St. Joseph's church, the borough. The gathering present included priests from nearby parishes.

The program given was as follows: Triumphal March, orchestra; "Great Is Thy Love," chorus; March of the Phantoms, Duo Concerto; recitation, Miss Blake; vocal solo duo, "Rondeau a la Pallacca;" welcome, Miss E. Brown; introduction, Rev. J. F. Baldwin; response, Rev. P. J. Clune; installation march; recitation, "Defend America."

Beside Father Clune, the priests present included Rev. Father Baldwin, of Mt. St. Mary's College; Rev. Father Zimmer, of Raritan; Rev. Father Waldron, of Stony Hill; Rev. Father Rudden, of Rahway, and Rev. Father Campbell, of St. Joseph's church.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The Pond Machine Tool Company, of this city, has entered suit in the Supreme Court to recover $52,348.92 from Neiderosterrierichsche Escompto-Gesellschaft, a corporation of Austria-Hungary. The concern alleges that it sold a gun turning lathe to Donauwerk Ernst Krause and Company in 1913 and the bank was to make payment, but after accepting liability failed to do so. A. Mitchell Palmer, United States Custodian of Alien Funds, and John Burke, United States Treasurer of Custodian Funds, have been made co-defendants in the suit as they have one million dollars belonging to the banking corporation, this amount having been derived from the sale of property which it owned in the United States.

Lieutenant Nathaniel R. Hort, of Westfield, who was a member of old Company K for many years, and employed in Plainfield for a long time, is reported from Washington to have been killed in action in France on October 20. He was attached to the 318th Infantry. Lieutenant Hort was thirty-eight years old. At one time he worked at the Plainfield postoffice and shortly before going into the service was connected with Herr's Business College. He is survived by his father, a sister and a brother, all living at Oswego, N. Y.

Articles of incorporation were filed at the office of the County Clerk this week by the Jersey Sales Corporation of this city. The incorporators named are: William R. Codington, who is specified as the agent of record; Colin Dascombe and Albert J. Codington. The capital stock is placed at $100,000, divided into 1,000 shares of $100 each. William R. Codington holds on share, Mr. Dascombe, four shares, and Albert Codington, six shares, all paid in. The company's office will be located at 152 Park avenue.

Adjutant General Gilkyson this week notified all draft boards in the State to discontinue physical examinations of men in the new draft. However, they were instructed to continue classifying men from 19 to 36 years and also the 18-year-old group.

Rev. D. W. Skellenger, who is thoroughly familiar with the Wyoming valley and other coal regions in Pennsylvania, will give an illustrated lecture on "A Tour Through the Anthracite Region," at Hope chapel on Tuesday night, December 3. The pictures to be used were all taken by Mr. Skellenger himself and are considered exceptionally fine. The proceeds from the affair will be added to the Boys' Club pledge for the new Hope chapel building fund.

The street department has just completed an excellent job in putting Monroe avenue, between Fourth and Seventh streets, in excellent shape. The macadam has been re-surfaced and given a coat of tar, much to the satisfaction of the residents and persons using vehicles. Thomas Fay, engineer of the steam roller belonging to the city, is given much credit for the satisfactory completion of the work.

Alfred Luery, an accountant, living at 809 Clinton avenue, and his sister-in-la, Miss Jane Marsh, of the same address, were badly shaken up Sunday afternoon and also had an narrow escape from serious injury when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by an Arlington avenue trolley car at Seventh street and Arlington avenue. The automobile was hurled twenty feet away and would have turned over but for striking a tree. The machine was badly damaged but the occupants were practically unhurt after the first shock was over. George Laible was motorman of the trolley and John Matthews conductor. Both claim Mr. Luery was to blame for the accident but Mr. Luery entertains a different opinion.

Boarding house robberies of the sneak-thief variety have been quite frequent in town of late and when Francisco Ries was arraigned in the city court, Monday morning, on a charge of appropriating numerous articles belonging to fellow boarders at 208 Watchung avenue, Judge DeMeza decided to make an example of the prisoner. He was accordingly given his choice of paying the fifty-dollar fine or spending ninety days in jail. After sojourning at the Sycamore street "cooler" until Tuesday, Ries finally secured the necessary money to get him out(of(durance vile. Another boarding house robbery was reported to the police this week by Miss Lamarah Adams, of 255 East Second street, who stated that a roomer who had only been at her place two days, had suddenly disappeared but before he went he looked over the effects of the other roomers and took whatever lokoed good to him. One of the articles stolen was a $40 overcoat, and the police are trying hard to get it back for the owner who might otherwise put in a rather cold winter.

Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard, of West Fifth street, was recently elected president of the Alumnae Association of the Plainfield Seminary.

Indications point to a large attendance at the barn dance to be given by Plainfield Lodge of Elks in the Watchung avenue clubhouse next Thursday night. Professor Wetton's orchestra will furnish music and appropriate Thanksgiving decorations will be in evidence. The committee, of which Frank Emmons is chairman, asks that only rural costume be worn by the young men and women responding to the invitations.

In awarding financial aid under the Widows' Pension Act, Judge Carlton B. Pierce recently inaugurated a new policy of first having the merits of the case before he takes action. Other changes that he has adopted in the giving of monthly allowances are expected to result in the saving of a large sum annually to the county. After a pension has once been granted it is no longer allowed to run for an indefinite period. Each case is brought up for consideration from time to time, and if it is found that and is no longer needed the remittances are discontinued. Among the new applications recently granted by Judge Pierce was one of $30 a month to Catherine Pierson, of Plainfield, who has four small children. The application of Mamie Hardaway, of Plainfield, will be taken up at a hearing in the near future and the pension of Catherine Crowley, who died recently, was ordered discontinued and the petition of Rebecca LeVine, also of Plainfield, for a pension was refused.

The annual Donation Tea at the Open Air School on Muhlenberg place will take place at the school this afternoon from 3 until 6 o'clock. On this occasion residents of the city and borough are asked to make donations toward the up-keep of the work, such as money, provisions or dry goods. An invitation is extended all interested to visit the school and see what is being done for the children, whose health does not permit them attending the public schools.

According to his statement as filed with Secretary of State Martin, Congressman-elect Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, spent $2,206.94 in his Congressional campaign. Of this amount $1,765.21 was expended for printing and advertisement. Mr. Ackerman was his own campaign manager and contributed the entire amount spent in conducting his fight for the Congressional seat.

The Plainfield Business Men's Association has joined in the movement urging Congress to take the necessary steps to secure competent labor for the proper carrying out of important enterprises in which business men are concerned. In brief, it means that the boys in the service are wanted at home as soon as possible to return to civil pursuits. A committee composed of J. D. Loizeaux, M. C. Van Arsdale and W. R. Codington drafted suitable resolutions to this effect and sent copies to Senator Frelinghuysen, Provost Marshall General Crowder and Congressman-elect E. R. Ackerman.

Tyler Appeals to Stop Waste

Even though the war has been ended diners at public eating houses are impressed with the necessity for conservation in the selection of their daily menu by William S. Tyler, of this city, Federal Food Administrator for the State, in a statement, in which he points out that at least 9,000,000 Americans are daily served at restaurants and hotels. "Upon just that number," says Mr. Tyler, "is placed a responsibility of a special work.

"This special work, calling for the 1918-1919 class of 9,000,000 recruits, is the voluntary exercising of individual ingenuity, initiative and co-operative spirit to put a stop to the notorious waste in restaurants, hotel dining-rooms, dining cars, steamships, clubs and wherever the miscellaneous appetite of the public must be catered to.

"This work includes going a jump beyond the waste stopping. It includes conservation—the saving of the slice of bread, the lump of sugar, the cut of meat, the spreading of butter, the coveted dish of pineapple, the second cup of coqe, the sprinkling of sugar on cereal, perhaps part of the cereal itself; indeed the cutting down or out of everything extra' that will help feed the rest of the world lined up against free and decent mankind's menace.

"There are no wheatless or meatless days by decree or ultimatum in this year's campaign for food conservation. You have to make them for yourself—out of your own patriotism and innate squareness.

"We have to feed our army and navy and Allies out of our pantry, from our own table, from our own plate, and we have to do it voluntarily.

"If everyone of us make it a point to get along definitely, regularly, faithfully on half a pound less meat and fats, half a pound less bread a week, the task may be accomplished, all the hungry fed, the starving saved.

"But that means, literally and explicitly, everyone of us; and some of us, we must remember, living close to the magrin, keeping soul and body together by a slender, sometimes straining thread, can't cut out even so much without affecting health, strength, growth or efficiency. So others of us, the more fortunate, the heretofore freer living, must make up for them."

State Organization of Nurses to Meet Here Next Tuesday

The fall meeting of the New Jersey State Organization of Public Health Nursing will be held at the Park Club, North Plainfield, on Tuesday, November 26. Afternoon and evening sessions are scheduled, and many members from all parts of the State will be in attendance.

Miss N. F. Cummings, R. N., the president, will be in charge of the meeting, and the speakers will include Honorable Burdette G. Lewis, Commissioner of Charities of New Jersey; D. C. Bowen, Chief of Bureau of Local Health Administration of New Jersey, and Dr. Lee Frankel and Mrs. Bessie Ammerman Haasis, the latter speaking on "Public Health Work."

The officers of the organization are: Miss N. F. Cummings, R. N., president; Mrs. L. J. Gemmell, vice president; Mrs. U. C. Ryerson, R. N., treasurer; Miss Grace Colvin, R. N., secretary, and Mrs. S. B. Barton, chairman membership committee.

The program in full for the meeting will be as follows: Morning session 10 to 11:30, registration members and visitors; president's greeting, Miss N. F. Cummings, R. N.; roll call; minutes last meeting; secretary's report, Miss Grace Colvin, R. N.; treasurer report, Mrs. U. C. Ryerson, R. N.; standing committees' reports: Membership, Mrs. S. B. Barton; legislative, Miss V. Chetwood, R. N.; social service, Miss Margaret Clancy, R. N.; tuberculosis, Miss Emma I. Allen, R. N.; infant welfare, Miss Elizabeth Aiken, R. N.; industrial nursing, Miss Elizabeth Burns, R. N.; printing, Mrs. d'Arcy Stephen, R. N.; report of delegate to State Federation of Women's Clubs, Miss Grace Colvin, R. N.; letters and new business; committee on resolutions.

Afternoon session, 2 o'clock, jointly with New Jersey State Nurses' Association; address by chairman, Miss N. F. Cummings, R. N.; address on "Public Health Work," Mrs. B. A. aasis, R. N.; address, discussion, led by Miss Elizabeth Burns, R. N.; Miss Virginia Chetwood, R. N.; report of the committee on resolutions; announcement of next meeting place.

Former Senator Colby Stationed at Camp Dix

Everett Colby, who has been mentioned frequently of late as a possible Republican candidate for Governor, is back in New Jersey. He is now stationed at Camp Dix.

The Tank Corps training school at Gettysburg, where he has been stationed for some time, broke up last Friday and all of the members left Sunday morning for Dix. Mr. Colby was one of the twenty out of a class of 250 who had received a certificate stating that had war continued he would have been commissioned. He also received a personal note from the major at the camp containing a special recommendation.

As orders have been received for the rapid demobilization of men in camps in Essex county, it is probable that Mr. Colby will receive an honorable discharge from service before long.

Mrs. Clara Dent, of Park avenue, has gone to Easton, Pa., to visit relatives until after Thanksgiving.

Frank Finney Here Next Week With "Bits of Hits" Show

While burlesque shows containue to please despite their striking similarity, once in awhile a show comes along which is sa amazingly different that its success becomes a matter of gossip. Such a show will be seen next Tuesday at the Plainfield Theatre. It is the production by Charles H. Waldron's famous organization, "The Bostonian Burlesquers." Frank Finney, the comedian star, is the author of the book, and he has devised something which is strictly original. He calls the vehicle "Bits of Hits." The two comedians of the piece have their fortunes told by a Hindoo fortune teller, and after the fortune has been told, they refuse to pay his bill. The Hindoo promptly retaliates by placing a curse upon them, telling them that they may wander the whole world over in search of work, that they may tackle all sorts of jobs, but they will never be able to hold a position for any great length of time. The most unusual situations arise and it is excruciatingly funny to see the comedians striving to hold a job down, satisfy their employers, and dispell the curse. But the curse sticks and the more it sticks the funnier the comedy becomes. Finney and Phil Ott play the two comedy roles, being cast at the beginning of the piece as two teamsters for a laundry. They are supported by Birnie Clark, Jack Witts, Nettie Nelson, Gladys Parker and Hazel Alger. The arrangement of scenes indicates the unusual element which runs through the entire production. The opening scene is the interior of a laundry workshop. The following scene is a one-armed lunch room. Scene three gives the full stage to a burlesque on Carmen. The fourth scene is characterized by an atmosphere of butterfly effect and, in this scene the chorus girls assume entire monopoly of the show. The fifth and closing scene of the first act shows a trench in No-Man's Land and offers a serious touch to the production. Act two has a poorhouse scene, a special drop for a specialty and a scene in which an exceptional burlesque on "Tiger Rose" is given.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. SAMUEL ROYCE TAVERNER.

The funeral of Mrs. Marion Taverner, wife of Samuel Royce Taverner, whose death occurred late Tuesday night at her home on Madison avenue, following an attack of pneumonia, was held privately last evening at the residence of her sister, Mrs. George L. Bird, on Monroe avenue. Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of Grace M. E. church, of which the deceased was a member for many years, officiated. Burial was made in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Taverner was twenty-eight years old and had been married less than three months, the ceremony taking place in New York on September 3. Beside this latter fact, her death comes under particularly sad circumstances as she contracted the disease from her husband, who is still in a critical condition, and uninformed of his devoted wife's demise. Mr. Taverner is employed in the engineering department of the State Highway Commission, and was supervising road construction work at Rockaway, Morris county, when first taken ill on November 10. The trouble started with a chill but pneumonia developed two days later.

Mr. and Mrs. Taverner had been stopping at a hotel and as nurses and help were not procurable, the latter took it upon herself to nurse her husband. When she realized that a long seize was ahead, she decided to bring the patient to Plainfield in order to be among her own family and friends and where better accommodations could be had. This was done last Friday, the young couple going to their former home at 514 Madison avenue. Mrs. Taverner was ill at the time but did not take to bed herself until assured that her husband was as comfortable as he could have possibly been made. The pneumonia took a firm grip upon her because of her run down condition brought about by constant vigil of three days and nights. By Monday she was desperately ill and Tuesday night at 11:20 she succumbed. Mr. Taverner passed the crisis in his illness yesterday and it is now believed that he will recover.

Mrs. Taverner was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Thom, of Terrill road, who lived in North Plainfield for many years. Beside her parents and sister, Mrs. Bird, she is survived by two other sisters, Mrs. Charles Rollberg, of Inwood, L. I., and Mrs. Edward Eriksen, of Port Washington, L. I.

MISS ANTOINETTE CARRAR.

Miss Antoinette Carrar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Carrar, of Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, died at her parents' home, Wednesday morning, after an illness of only four days. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, tomorrow morning, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

Miss Carrar was born in Italy in 1899, but had lived in this country since she was seven years old. She had been employed recently at the Watchung Silk Mill on Chatham street. She was a communicant of St. Joseph's church, and was well known in Plainfield and North Plainfield as well as at Watchung.

Beside her parents, she is survived by two sisters, the Misses Sophie and Josephine Carrar, and four brothers, Lawrence, Emil, Francis and Leon Carrar. Two of the brothers are in service.

Charles L. Dana, Jr., until four years ago a resident of Plainfield, died in France on October 12, having been a member of the U. S. Marine Corps. An attack of pneumonia caused his demise.

Mr. Dana was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana, whose home for a long time was on Evergreen avenue. Before entering the service the young man was employed by a New York house as bond salesman.

MRS. ADOLPH STEENGRAFE.

Mrs. Johanna J. Steengrafe, wife of Adolph Steengrafe, died Wednesday night, at her home on lower Plainfield avenue, South Plainfield. She had been ailing for nearly three years from complications, following paralysis.

Mrs. Steenegrafe was seventy-six years old and leaves beside her husband two daughters and four sons. They are the Mises Lily and Elsie Steengrafe, living at the parental home; Adolph, of Plainfield; Oscar, of Newark, and Bernard and George Steengrafe, of New York.

CORRA OLIVE MOORE.

Corra Olive Moore, aged thirteen years, died Friday night, at the home of her parents, Oscar A. and Florence Moore, of 17 Madison avenue. The funeral was held at the late residence Tuesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong, and a gathering of relatives and friends. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

WILLIAM W. BUSH.

William Wallace Bush, aged twenty-nine years, died Tuesday morning, at his home at 310 Filmore avenue. He had been ill about two weeks with pneumonia. The body was sent on Wednesday to his former home at Waterbury, Conn., where the funeral and interment took place yesterday.

Mr. Bush is survived by his wife and one son, living here, also his mother and a sister, living at Waterbury, and a brother, whose home is in Stockbridge, Mass.

MISS IDA L. WHITEHEAD.

Miss Ida L. Whitehead, aged sixty-three years, died Wednesday morning, at her home, 3 Union avenue, Scotch Plains. The funeral will be held at the residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock and Rev. A. B. Strickland, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, Elizabeth.

Miss Whitehead was the daughter of the late Marcus F. and Amanda Whitehead and had lived at Scotch Plains a long time. She made her home with a sister, Miss Alice Whitehead.

Dix to Muster Out 7,000 Soon

About 7,000 men will be affected at Dix when the orders for the demobilization of the development battalions in the various parts of the country go into effect. So far the Dix officers have received only instructions as to the manner in which the men are to be mustered out and everything is in readiness to begin when the word is received to start the weeding-out process. One of the Dix development battalions, numbering several thousand men, was sent South only a few weeks ago and the men in that organization will be mustered out at their present location.

The work of demobilization will naturally be slow until the kinks are smoothed out, but once the plan is in full working order the men will be discharged very quickly. In the meantime, work is going on as usual and the camp is being put in the best possible shape so that, if needed, it can be used by troops returning from abroad.

The order from Secretary Baker expressing the appreciation of the War Department for the patriotic zeal and service shown by the officers and men was read at retreat to the men of the Depot Brigades to whom the order is expressly directed as it was not their privilege to participate in the historic struggle in France, yet they are none the less a part of the army and entitled to the thanks of the Nation for their readiness to serve.

Official word that no new classes would be started at the Central Officers' Training Schools has been received from the War Department and caused great disappointment to the candidates for quartermaster and artillery commissions, who were ready to start when the telegram came holding up all transfers until the future policy of the War Department is decided upon. The telegram follows:

"If you have not already sent to Officers' Training Schools men reported eligible in your last report and who have been called for by school commanders, you will disregard instructions to send them to schools, as orders have been issued that no more candidates be admitted to officers' training schools.

Camp Dix has a series of chain stores which bids fair to rival systems of a similar nature in cities as a profitable investment. Under the management of Captain L. F. Sineath, of New York city, the stores have done such a business that approximately $500,000 in profits have been declared during the year the stores have been in exeistence. Captain Sineath was formerly connected with the United Cigar Stores Company.

When the camp was opened and the Seventy-eighth Division was in process of formation each regiment had its own exchange, with a regimental officer as the exchange officer and the colonel as supervisor. The profits went back to the company funds and were used at the discretion of the company commanders.

Then when the camp became an auxiliary to the embarkation port and units moved in and out very quickly, this plan was not found feasible, and the present system was devised. The buying for all the seventeen exchanges now in operation is done by one man, the exchange officer; and the business is conducted the same as any big concern. An Exchange Council, appointed by Major-General Hugh L. Scott, the camp commander, acts the same as a board of directors in a big concern and has direction over the whole business, acting through the exchange officer.

The business is run on a co-operative basis. That is, the men who do the buying also share in the profits. Once a month the council goes over accounts, and if it deems business satisfactory declares a dividend, and this is divided among the companies in the Depot Brigade and may be used to buy such equipment for recreation purposes or little luxuries, as the captain may decide.

Everything needed by a soldier is carried in stock and at times the goods, held at the warehouses, have amounted to as high as $300,000. The monthly business averages about $250,000 and in all the exchanges and also at exchange headquarters there have been placed competent men who have had experience in the business world before they accepted service with Uncle Sam.

One job that is going begging at Camp Dix is that of orderly at an officers' quarters where the duties include the care of steam boilers. Particularly is this so among the men of the Sixty-third Pioneers, for nearly all the orderlies offered to quit after an explosion the other day that nearly caused the death of one of their number.

How the accident happened may never be known, for the negro orderly was not found until hours afterward and he was then too frightened to explain. The general opinion is that he failed to watch the steam gage and the result was that shortly after he had left the small boiler room of the quarters the boiler blew up with report that was heard all around. The boiler was destroyed, as was the small room, the entire top being blown skyward.

The following promotions have been announced in the quartermaster corps detachment: To be sergeants, Edward L. Dilatush, of Freehold; Samuel Leopold, of Newark, and Alfred Zimmer, of Paterson; to be corporals, Robert A. Young, Jr., of Orange; Joseph F. Gilmore and Percy B. Minnasian, of Jersey City.

Leniency has been exercised by Major General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, in the cases of two soldiers sentenced to long prison terms. Both were charged with desertion and sentenced to thirty years at the disciplinary barracks at Fort Jay, Governor's Island. In the case of Private Samuel T. Kilmon, of Wilmington, Del., the penalty was reduced to fifteen years, while Private Charles Steininger, of Buffalo, escaped with five years, as General Scott decided that he should only be charged with being absent without leave.

Week-end passes were granted last Saturday to eleven per cent. of the officers and enlisted personnel of each command in all cases where train service was necessary in reaching and returning from destination.

First Lieutenant Stanley Palmateer, of Belmar, has been assigned to Camp Dental Infirmary No. 2.

Although a truce has been signed and peace is in sight there is every indication that Dix will be maintained for many months to come, and Major General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, is continuing plans for beautifying the camp grounds. Frank Wandle, director of Knights of Columbus activities, is chairman of a committee that will plant flowers, and he has received from the National Fruit, Plant and Flower Guild ten boxes of bulbs which will be set out along the Wrightstown-Lewistown road, between the fire house and K. of C. building No. 4.

Dix soldiers are in demand for peace demonstrations in various towns throughout the State, and each day requests are received for soldiers and bands, particularly the lataer, whose services are generally desired by Red Cross and other War Work committees.

PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. George Gage, of Jackson avenue, the borough, are the parents of a daughter born to them a few days ago. Mrs. Gage was formerly Miss Marion Doughty. Mr. Gage is in the service and at present is stationed at Fort Slocum as a member of the Quartermasters' Corps.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Sarah Mercer Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Smith, of Washington, to Henry M. Zook, son of Morris A. Zook, formerly of this city, but now of Washington. No date has been set for the wedding.

Chester Wagner, of John street, who is stationed at Princeton as a member of the Aviation School, was a visitor at his home over the past week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gennerich, of Fairview avenue, the borough, are the parents of a daughter, who arrived at their home a few days ago. Mrs. Gennerich was formerly Miss Bertha Mantz, of Jackson avenue.

Rev. Father Walter A. Hennessey, of St. Mary's church, who was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital on October 4, and who was in a critical condition for several weeks, because of pneumonia setting in after an attack of influenza, was discharged from the institution Monday. It will be several weeks, however, before he is able to resume his duties as curate in St. Mary's parish.

Miss Helen Joy, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James R. Joy, of Myrtle avenue, the borough, is now stationed at Bose Hospital No. 9, Chateauroux, France, as directoress of the Nurses' Recreation Hut of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Joy went overseas in September.

Mr. and Mrs. James Statten, of Liberty street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a son at their home.

Leonard Young, of Somerset place, and Arthur Walls, of Essex street, are among the Plainfielders who arrived overseas just before the Government stopped the movement of troops to France. Both young men are privates in the Naval Reserves.

Mr. and Mrs. James Scott, formerly of South avenue, are now located in Detroit, where Mr. Scott holds an excellent position with a large manufacturing firm. He was formerly a foreman at the local plant of the Standard Aero Corporation. Harry Mattis, of Park avenue, is also employed at the Detriot plant where Mr. Scott is located and Mrs. Mattis went West recently to join her husband there.

Mrs. Paul B. Welles, of Hillside avenue, has been entertaining her mother, Mrs. Laurance Grahame, of New York.

Fireman William Jaeger, of West Fourth street, returned to duty at headquarters, Wednesday, after nearly three weeks' illness, part of which time was spent at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Ada Woodward, of Westervelt avenue, to William M. Walsh, Jr., of Westervelt avenue. The ceremony will take place on Saturday, November 30, at the home of the bride-elect's aunt, Mrs. Georgiana R. Allen, of Westervelt avenue. Mr. Walsh is proprietor of the pharmacy at North and Watchung avenues.

Private John J. Curran, of Arlington avenue, writes friends from Camp Jackson, South Carolina, that his unit, the 60th Field Artillery, has been moved from tents to permanent barracks but he and the other boys are confident that they will be discharged from service before Christmas.

Mrs. August Bandle, of 972 West Third street, is in receipt of information that her son, First Sergeant Elmore George Kane, who was wounded last September, is still in a base hospital in France as his injury is of a serious nature.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Elsworth Schenck, of Rock avenue, has been brightened by the arrival of a baby boy. The little fellow was born Sunday and weighed ten and one-half pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. John Linbarger, of Brooklyn, were recent guests at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Percy A. McVoy, of 1010 Prospect avenue.

August Meyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, of West Third street, who has been in the engineers' corps for several months, is now located at Camp Travis, Texas. Letters received from his this week state that he is in good health and enjoying the rigorous work that is still going on despite the declaration of peace.

Mr. and Mrs. John McGarry, of Stebbins place, gave an informal reception at their home Saturday night, at which formal announcement was made of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lillian McGarry, to Bernard J. Fee, of Spruce street.

First Class Private John C. Motley, of West Fourth street, who was recently transferred from the Syracuse Recruit Camp to the South, is now stationed at Camp Sheridan, Alabama, as a member of the Salvage Division of the Quartermasters' Corps. Although Private Motley was in the Barracks Hospital at Syracuse for eight weeks, dangerously ill with pneumonia, he writes that the beautiful weather in "Old Alma" has put him in fine fettle and he feels beter now than he ever did in his life. He also writes that he expects to be home soon after Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Martin J. McMahon, of West Front street, who has been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for the past four weeks, underging treatment for influenza and pneumonia, is now much improved and will shortly be able to return home. Mrs. McMahon was formerly Miss Margaret Marky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Marky, of West Front street.

Mrs. Thomas Fay, of 173 North avenue, spent the forepart of the week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Pugh, of Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis O. Thorne, of 316 Evona avenue, are the parents of a son, born to them a few days ago. Mrs. Thorne was formerly Miss Grace Ludgate, of Clinton avenue.

Herbert Hand, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hand, of Watchung avenue, has practically recovered after a long illness with influenza and resultant pneumonia, during which he was in a critical condition for nearly a week.

Joseph Watson, of Watchung avenue, whose writings over the signature of "J. Watson" are much appreciated by Plainfielders, has recovered from illness, which detained him to his room for several weeks. He is now back at his position at the Scott Press Works.

Miss Clara A. Brown, daughter of Mrs. Cartherine C. Brown, of 1139 South Second street, was married Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 to Sergeant H. Russell Phillips, son of Mrs. Henry R. Phillips, of College place. The ceremony took place in St. Stephen's Episcopal church, and was performed by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace Episcopal church. Miss Agnes I. Brown, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Corporal Sydney Rockwell, of this city, was best man. After a short honeymoon, Sergeant Phillips will return to Camp Dix, where he has been stationed for several months.

Private Edward Dacey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dacey, of Wallace place, has been at his home this week enjoying a furlough from his duties at Fort Totten.

Frank M. Wagner, the former local stationer and news-dealer, who now has a traveling position with the Union News Company, working out at Harrisburg, Pa., as far as Cape May, this State, was in town the forepart of this week.

CO-OPERATION AND THE RED CROSS SHOP.

A brief visit to the newly opened Red Cross Shop, in the Babcock building yesterday, was sufficient to convince the most skeptical that it is already an unqualified success. From early in the morning until last night the big display room was thronged with eager buyers who gladly purchased of the wares because they knew every dollar of profit was just that much more for the boys in the army and navy. The noble women of Plainfield who assumed the task of starting the store were there to direct and the splendid corps of saleswomen extended uniform courtesy to all who sought their wares. It is probable that the shop will be crowded on other days and as long as it is continued it will make money for the organization that is doing such wonderful work in war stricken Europe.

It was a tremendous task, this undertaking. When Plainfield's warm-hearted women first began it, obstacles were met that threatened failure. Mrs. J. M. Charles, the chairman of the committee, is not easily daunted but at critical junctures it seemed as if she would have to put aside her cherished ideas. It was at one of these times that William Lunger, business agent for the Plainfield Trades' Council, offered the services of himself and the mechanics of Plainfield. From then on there was no doubt as to the ultimate establishment of the Red Cross shop and a big boost in finances for the local chapter.

Mrs. Charles is entitled to all the credit that can be given for what has resulted but she generously puts herself to one side in favor of the mechanics who transformed the old postoffice quarters into the splendid salesroom that they are. They came from every trade, carpenters, plumbers, painters, electricians and masons. The contractors, the employers of the men, hurried up their own work that the mechanics might put in a few hours each night and Sunday at the Red Cross shop and also gave freely of material. They helped in no small measure to make the venture successful, and Mrs. Charles is anxious that they should know.

In numbers, the persons who helped make the shop what it is today, runs into the many hundreds. It has been a co-operation of willing hands, a unanimity of purpose that asks no other reward than that it will benefit the boys who are resting in France after the terrible ordeal just past. Mrs. Charles, Mr. Lunger, the mechanics of Plainfield, the men and women of Plainfield, the shop committee and everyone else are entitled to credit and the boys who will be aided later on will see that they get it.

PLAINFIELD ONCE AGAIN GOES "OVER THE TOP."

Once again Plainfield has given of its means and given nobly. It was asked to contribute $150,000 to the War Work campaign fund and responded to the extent of several thousands more. It only shows that this community is alive to the needs of stricken Europe and our men in the field who must be kept clean in mind and body while they are waiting for transportation back home. Every dollar will be put to good use and that is all that Plainfield asks when making its splendid donation.

The War Work campaign committee, of which J. Herbert Case was executive chairman, is deserving of commendation for the manner in which it planned the collection of the large sum of money. Every person in the city, the borough and suburbs was given a chance to help out and the individual number of subscribers runs into the thousands. The idea of collecting for seven War Work organizations at one time, as suggested by President Wilson, worked out splendidly. Plainfield went "over the top" once again and stands ready to help out at any time in the future.

MUSTERING OUT THE PRETTY NEARLY WUZZERS.

Well, anyway, "Bill" Hohenzollern didn't have to slam the door when he went out.

While Clerk Freeman and the Exemption Board are closing up shop, it might discharge with a vote of thanks the selectives who almost broke into Camp Dix last Friday. It might ease off their disappointment and make them eligible for Constibule George York's Army and Navy Union.

We intend giving thanks all right but for the nonce we have placed it in cold storage pending the arrival of some generous guy with a turkey. At fifty cents a pound, we don't believe in buying anything that might rob the boys "over there" of a little joy stuff next Thursday.

We have an anymous letter saying, "I can produce a turkey feast on Thanksgiving if you will produce a genuine mince pie with the requisite amount of devilment in it." Of course, we are powerless to produce the kind of mince pie he requires but suppose we could, who is this fellow and where his old turkey?

We don't have to hark back to the days of Admiral Dewey and his gift house to be reminded that the American public is fickle. Up to November 11, when a troop train shot over Plainfield's thirteen bridges it was "Hooray, Hooray, Yip, Yip, Yip, Wow, Whop-ee" from the spectators. Now when one noses along, the Plainfielders take a half glance at the carloads of boys who left homes and everything to do their bit and remark "wonder where those guys think they're goin'."

The first peace celebration was on November 7. The second one came on November 11. When you stop to consider that "seven or eleven" is the luckiest combination for any American taking a chance is it any woner that the peace jubilee was a grand success? Carrying the gambling simile a little further, it comes to mind that the big poker game in Europe ended with five kings in the discard and every Yankee boy wearing a "royal flush" of excitement over the failure of William Hohenzollern to help his hand when he coaxed the United States to "Decorate the Mahogany."

We ended the war work drive with a few odd thousands over the quota but there will be other campaigns to tackle yet before peace settles down for keeps. And in addition the war's wakened up Plainfield so thoroughly that we'll have big projects of a civic nature which'll call for campaigning in after-the-war-days.

Collier says that human nature is more or less incomprehensible because people will pay generously to hear music that will make them weep. It costs something to drain our own tear tanks, but we can take a nickel and start an automatic graphophone that will agitate the lachrymals of the angels.

It was on the eleventh page of last Saturdays' Curious-Snooze and it stared up at us from below a syndicate cut of a ruined chateau. We rubbed our eyes and cautiously peered at it again, thinking that perhaps we had made a mistake the first time and accidentally gotten into the 1893 editor's territory but no, there it was again in all its Rip Van Winkle serenity. There was nothing else for us to do but cull these few paragraphic gems and here they are:

"Germany can be defeated and must be defeated, if American puts all its available strength into the struggle. The battle will be fought in France, but some of the work of preparation must be done here.

"Everybody can have at least a little share in the effort, for everybody can buy a bond in the Third Liberty Loan which will aid the American army in the task of making the world safe from the rage of the Kaiser and his sons."

It might have gone on and ruffled the consciences of some of the slackers who ducked the Third Liberty Loan last April but the "Printer's devil" or some other eagle-eyed employe smelled the mustiness of the article and notified his superiors. Thereupon the picture of the ruined chateau and the appeal for the loan that ended last April gave way to a page of fiction entitled, "Harrington Gale, Lawyer Detective." Thus was another chance lost to stir up the patriotic enthusiasm in the city's rhubarbs.

Splendid Work of Plainfield-North Plainfield Red Cross Chapter Shown in Reports at Yearly Meeting

A gathering which filled the Plainfield High School auditorium to its capacity listened to the addresses and reports at the annual meeting of the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter of the Red Cross, Wednesday night.

It was intended that Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Whittlesey, of North Adams, Mass., hero of the fight in the Argonne forest when his little band held out against a superior forde for four days without food or water, should be the speaker of the evening, but at the last moment he wired that he was unable to attend. President Charles W. McCutchen presided and after briefly summing up the chapter's work since its organization, a little more than a year ago, introduced Albert W. Staub, assistant chairman of the Atlantic division of the Red Cross. After he had spoken on the importance of keeping up the present Red Cross activities, Lieutenant James Ackerman, of this city, recounted some of his hair-breadth adventures on the French front during which he told of the fight high in the air when he received wounds that caused him to be invalided home. Other speakers were Arthur M. Harris, who was in France as a Y. M. C. A. worker, and Dr. Charles A. Eaton.

In the course of regular business an executive committee of fifty was elected. Mayor Leighton Calkins, Senator William N. Runyon and Mayor William L. Smalley were named as a nominating committee to select five officers and six others from the executive committee to act as an administrative committee. The executive committee will meet four times each year and in the interim the administrative committee will have full power. The executive committee is as follows:

Dr. F. C. Ard, E. R. Ackerman, Mrs. C. R. Banks, Mrs. H. E. Butler, George L. Babcock, Mrs. Juan Babcock, Mrs. J. M. Charles, J. Henry Crane, H. L. DeForest, Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Miss Emelyn Hartridge, A. M. Harris, William C. Hubbard, R. F. R. Huntsman, Rev. W. L. Imes, James R. Joy, Andrew Kenney, Mrs. C. B. Lawrence, Jr., W. L. Lakewood, Mrs. C. E. Lipscombe, Charles McCutchen, Mrs. Harry L. McGee, Mrs. Alex Milne, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, William Newcorn, Michel A. Peticchio, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. W. L. Righter, Kalman Rothberg, Wilbur H. Rogers, Fred E. Smith, John P. Stevens, Miss Annie Slevin, Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Albert A. Tilney, Miss Ethel L. Titsworth, Max Tepper, Mrs. William O. Taylor, Mrs. E. P. Thomas, John J. Varley, Morris C. Van Arsdale, Thomas C. Vail, Mrs. Frank D. Warren, William M. Wherry, Howard H. Williams, Mrs. F. W. Wallace, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., and Dr. Peter J. Zeglio.

The report of the chapter's work since its organization was distributed in printed form and was as follows:

The greatest undertaking in the service of humanity that the world has ever known is embraced in the activities of the American Red Cross. Its work of relief is as broad as the sum of human suffering and distress the world over; and for the performance of this world-wide accomplishment, the Red Cross plan of organization reposes responsibility upon the individual woman everywhere, in the biggest cities—and in the most remote villages. The measurement of Red Cross achievement, therefore, is not complete in the camps, on the battle-field, in the hospitals and on the sea. The history of this greatest undertaking in human service begins where all Red Cross work begins—at the work rooms of Red Cross chapters, in the home communities of America.

The ultimate accomplishment of Red Cross service is dependent first of all upon the willingness with which thousands of women have accepted individual responsibility of a service devoid of glory, romance or adventure.

Individual devotion to a duty by no means spectacular has resulted in the building of an organization, the achievements of which will endure as long as the pages of history. To acknowledge these achievements will be the task of those who chronicle the events of the World War.

Here we must record merely the labor of those who, through the Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter have served the American Red Cross.

The system by which a miraculous collective power is attained, through the concentrated energy of countless individual units, may be appreciated by the scope of the work of this chapter. The committees, which beside the work of organization, administration, publicity and office detail, constitute the program of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter are: Sewing and cutting committees, surgical dressings, wool canteen, and educational committees; Junior Red Cross, civilian, Belgian, Armenian and Syrian relief committees.

In these various branches hundreds of Plainfield women have worked with tireless energy. Moreover, the city at large has, in two successful campaigns, demonstrated its generous support of the chapter. The membership campaign produced an enrollment of 11,000, 5,000 more than Plainfield's allotment. Again, in the second Red Cross War Fund, when the quota set was $70,000, the response from our citizens resulted in a figure nearly double—$138,648. Without such support from the community, the efforts of those in charge of the actual work would have been fruitless, and the first year's record would have been far from the creditable showing which it now claims.

Steady and substantial growth has marked the progress of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter since its formal organization on June 20, 1917. On the ninth of the following month, Chapter Headquarters was opened for work on surgical dressings, sewing and knitting. Since that time the chapter has grown to include twenty-one auxiliaries and one branch transferred from another chapter. The development in the work of the extension committee, started in September under Mrs. E. Yarde Breese, and later under Mrs. H. E. Butler, the first auxiliary of the chapter was organized in September at New Market. Later the demands of convenience and growing interest throughout the community occasioned the necessity of other auxiliaries and they were established in the following order:

1, New Market; 2, South Plainfield; 3, Watchung; 4, North Plainfield; 5, St. Mary's; 6, West End; 7, Washington Park; 8, East End; 9, Fanwood; 10, Scotch Plains; 11, Booker T. Washington; 12, Central; 13, Loyal Daughters; 14, St. Joseph's; 15, West Front Street; 16, Benevolent Circle; 17, Washington Parent-Teachers; 18, Belvidere; 19, Hope Chapel; 20, New Dover; 21, Jewish, and Dunellen Branch.

An interesting indication of growth is found in comparative figures. In the first three weeks after the work rooms were opened, 1,232 people worked in the sewing and surgical dressings departments, making 360 garments and hospital supplies, and 8,829 dressings. In June, 1918, the records show an increase in number of workers of four hundred per cent., with an output of 1,916 garments, and 225,701 surgical dressings.

The local chapter receives its allotments for garments, surgical dressings, knitted articles, etc., from the Divisional Headquarters in New York, and the purchasing and supply committee, of which Mrs. Charles R. Banks is chairman, purchases the materials necessary to fill these requisitions. The work is then prepared, assembled and apportioned out to the various work rooms in the auxiliaries to be returned when finished to Chapter Headquarters for inspection, packing and shipping.

Sewing and Cutting.

These two committees are closely allied, and really are a part of each other. Until recently, when it has been possible to purchase cut garments at the Red Cross Supply Service in New York, all garments to be made in the work rooms have been cut and assembled by the cutting committee, of which Mrs. A. L. Otterson is chairman. The cutting rooms are equipped with long tables, and practically all the work is done with an electric cutter.

In the sewing rooms, with Mrs. F. W. Yates as supervisor, the work has been varied, hospital shirts, pajamas, sheets and pillow cases are among the articles made for use in our hospitals, as well as those abroad. One line of work, for which there is an ever-increasing demand, is the refugee garments, to be sent abroad to the unfortunate population in the actual war-zone. The comfort bags, with which every draftee or enlisted man, when known, has been supplied before leaving Plainfield, are also made in the sewing rooms.

Surgical Dressings.

When the chapter was organized, Mrs. Howard McWilliams was appointed supervisor of surgical dressings, and later was succeeded by Miss Edna Brown. During the year, 1,333,202 dressings were made by 36,822 workers. The requisitions have included all kinds of dressings, those intended for front-line, evacuation and base hospitals. The cutting of the gauze for these dressings has been done by a committee of which Mrs. W. L. Righter was chairman. Under the direction of this department classes were formed for instruction in the preparation of surgical dressings, which were attended by 137 women, 47 of whom took the course in special dressings, which qualified them to become instructors or assistants in work rooms.

Wool.

The work done by this committee under the direction of Mrs. J. B. Patton at first, and later cared rfor by Mrs. Raymond Everest and Seymore Barr, has been very successful, and the 14,893 articles, sweaters, mufflers, socks, helmets, etc., are an indication of the army of women who have been busy knitting during the twelve months. While all the drafted and enlisted men have been furnished with these warm woolen comforts before leaving Plainfield the major share of the output has been sent to the Divisional Headquarters to be shipped to camps and cantonments in this country and abroad.

Canteen.

Owing to the fact that Plainfield is not a junction or point of departure for troops, there has been no opportunity for the canteen committee to do the work which is naturally cared for by such a committee. Under Miss Jessie Munger, followed by Mrs. E. T. Barrows, this committee took charge of the filling of 1,500 Christmas packets, and later they filled the comfort bags. They have also co-operated with the citizens' committee in furnishing and serving farewell suppers for the drafted and enlisted men prior to their departure from town.

Educational.

This committee, of which Mrs. C. B. Tyler is chairman, has had charge of the organization of classes for the purpose of teaching the subjects particularly recommended at this time by the American Red Cross. There have been seven First Aid classes with 120 students, the same number in Elementary Hygiene and Home Care of the Sick, with 108 students, one class in Home Service and one in Dietetics.

Civilian Relief.

The work of the civilian relief committee commenced in January, 1918, under the direction of William M. Wherry. At that time there were seven families in the care of the Home Service Section under the chairmanship of Mrs. Laurens H. Van Buren, and most of the assistance was with respect to allotments and allowances. The report for July 1st shows the number of families under care increased to 69, of which 21 were added during the single month. Nine cases were closed and the scope of the work has increased so that it requires twenty-four headings to properly state it, and it ranges from assistance in respect to budgets for families, to reports to the Adjutant-General, and includes legal and medical help.

Belgian Relief.

This committee, which has had a particularly active year, is under the able leadership of Mrs. Frederick W. Wallace. Nine thousand garments have been collected, packed and shipped, and 38,160 cans of milk, and 5,019 cans of cocoa have been sent to Belgium and France. In addition, $475.00 has been given to aid the children of East Hainault. In March a campaign for the collection of second hand clothing for the refugees of France and Belgium was cared for by this committee. Six tons of clothing were collected and packed for shipment.

Armenian and Syrian

The interests of the Armenian and Syrian relief committee have been cared for by a committee of which Howard H. Williams is chairman. Through their efforts the sum of $5,914.60 has been raised to carry on their work.

Junior Aed Cross.

Under the direction of Miss Emelyn B. Hartridge most excellent work has been done by the Junior Red Cross. Plainfield has the distinction of being a pioneer in this branch of Red Cross endeavor, being one of the first to recognize the latent possibilities of great achievement among the school children. There are thirty-six city and rural schools enrolled, including 7,074 pupils. The money raised by the Juniors is $10,492.41. The pupils have made 2,899 knitted garments, 808 refugee garments, 102 afghans, 4,743 wash cloths, 140,545 surgical dressings, 799 pillows, beside Christmas bags, comfort-kits, scrap books, picture puzzles, Red Cross booths, bulletins and boxes and Y. M. C. A. tables. Out of their funds the schools have made gifts of money amounting to $2,525.07, including $1,216.24 to the second war fund. They have given 2,325 books and magazines to the soldiers and toys, candy and fruit to the hospitals. The children of 18 schools sold Liberty Bonds amounting to $149,200, and Thrift Stamps and War Saving Certificates to the value of $23,294.06.

Publicity.

Mrs. E. Yarde Breese was the original chairman of this committee, and after her resignation the work was carried on by Mrs. Sherman B. Joost. It has been the aim of the committee to keep the work of the Red Cross in all its many branches as much as possible before the public, and the newspaper articles dealing with the achievements of the local chapter as well as the American Red Cross in general have appeared regularly in the local press. Appeals for assistance have been made from time to time, always with a generous response no matter what the nature of the call, and the committee feels that whatever success has attended their efforts has been largely due to the unfailing courtesy and co-operation of the Plainfield newspapers, who have given lavishly of their space to further the work of the Home Chapter.

McADOO URGES BOND RETENTION.

Employes who have subscribed for Liberty Bonds through the institution for which they work are urged by Secretary McAdoo to complete their instalment payments according to agreement or to arrange for a bank to take over the subscription in case they leave the employ of the institution through which they bought originally.

If employes do not complete their payments, the Secretary said, both they and the Government suffer, as the bonds for which they have contracted and for which they do not pay must usually be sold in the open market.

BOND PURCHASERS MUST PAY BROKERAGE.

Charles V. Duffy, Collector Internal Revenue, announces the fact that it has been called to his attention that several individuals are now engaged in a business of buying and selling Liberty Bonds for themselves and for others.

Title 4, Act September 8, 1918, provides that every person, firm or company, whose business it is to negotiate purchases or sale of stocks, bonds, (including Liberty Bonds) exchange, bullion, coined moneys bank notes, promissory notes, or other securities, for others, shall be regarded as a broker, subject to a tax of $30.00 per year, payable in advance.

Frank I. Donnelly Dies in France

and Drum Corps, he was a Fourth Degree member of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Drop Forge Local, formed of Spicer plant employes. In each organization he was a great favorite and the T. A. B.'s will not be the only ones to miss his fellowship and activities. Everywhere in town it was the same with "Bus" Donnelly. Everybody liked him, everybody was pleased with his persistency in seeking entrance to the army and everybody was pleased at the progress he had made as a soldier up to the immediate time of his supreme sacrifice. Before being called to the colors as a selective, he had sought enlistment three different times but on each occasion was rejected because of his height. It was a very small trifle below the military requirement, a fact that was overlooked by the national army physicians, much to the satisfaction of the young hero.

After reaching France, "Bus" never forget the anxious parents and other relatives at home when he had the chance to write. Although the 113th was on the march from the time it landed at a French port until it reached the front line trenches, letters came from the young corporal at regular intervals. One of these reached his mother on October 14, just three days before his death took place. In it he stated that he had been "Over the Top" three times but had escaped without a scratch, although comrades all about him were never to charge again. He expressed the belief that the prayers of his mother, his father, sister and brother had brought him back unscathed. From inferences it is believed that he alluded to action at St. Mihiel and Grand Pre and the idea prevails that his end came as he was taking part in the big drive at Sedan.

In other letters Corporal Donnelly mentioned that his special bunkie all the way from Camp Dix was Corporal Thomas Heron, of West Fifth street, this city. He referred to the latter on numerous occasions. There is a possibility that the "bunkie" was near at hand when Corporal Donnelly succumbed to a Hun missile. If so, the full details of his death may be secured when the other young Plainfielder returns home.

Beside his parents, Corporal Donnelly is survived by one sister, Miss Mary Donnelly, cashier at the local office of the American Express Company, and one brother, Private John Donnelly, Jr., now in France as a locomotive engineer. The latter was employed on the New Jersey Central as fireman and apprentice engineer when he was called into service. Mr. Donnelly, the father, was for more than twenty-five years employed by H. G. Runkle, of West Eighth street, but for several months past has held a position as night guard at the Pond Tool Works.

More Deaths Due to Influenza Than Resulted From War

Approximately 78,000 deaths were caused by the influenza epidemic in forty-six principal cities of the United States in the period from September 8 to November 9, according to an estimate announced by the Bureau of Public Health. The announcement says the deaths resulting from the epidemic greatly outnumbered the deaths among American troops abroad, while the deaths caused by influenza and pneumonia in the camps and cantonments in this country were nearly equal to the number of Americans called in action in France.

The general trend of the epidemic in the United States was from east to west, the announcement adds. Philadelphia suffered the greatest mortality resulting from the epidemic, with Baltimore second, the respective death rates of the two cities being 7.4 and 6.7 per thousand.

Dr. Louis Henn Buys McCardell Property

The Andrew McCardell property at 318 West Front street has been purchased from Mrs. McCardell by Dr. Louis D. Henn, until recently a practicing physician at Unadilla Forks, Otsego county, New York. The residence is now undergoing certain alterations and will be occupied by Dr. Henn and his family the forepart of next week, the former maintaining an office in one part of the house for practice as an allopathic physician.

Dr. Henn was graduated from New York University and for nearly ten years followed his profession at Starkville, N. Y. From there he went to Unadilla Corners, where he has been for eight years. He had built up a splendid practice at the latter place but has been forced to leave it on account of the rigors of New York State winters which exact tollage in health from physicians forced to weather every storm.

Dr. Henn is a life-long friend of Ernest C. Waitford, of 314 East Sixth street, and the physician and his wife and son are now stopping at Mr. Whitford's home pending the completion of work at the residence on West Front street.

Restrictions May Soon Be Removed on All Building Work

Governmental restrictions on building work may shortly be removed, according to the following statement made yesterday by Mayor Leighton Calkins after his attendance at a meeting of the New Jersey State Council of Defense at Newark, Wednesday:

"At a meeting of the New Jersey State Council of Defense, which I attended yesterday in Newark, a telegram from the Non-War Construction Section of the War Industries Board was submitted, inquiring whether our State Council was of opinion that labor, transportation, and supply conditions would warrant the removal now of all restrictions on building projects.

"It was our judgment that the annulment of the existing regulations would have the effect of enabling private business to return to normal conditions as rapidly as circumstances would permit in the various branches of industry, and that as this return to natural conditions is bound to be gradual in any event, all labor, supply and transportation factors would readily adjust themselves to the new order of things.

"Accordingly our State Council immediately wired our approval and the repeal of the war restrictions may shortly be expected."

Plainfielders Attending School at Camp Raritan

Privates John J. Greene, of East Seventh street, and George V. Gulick, of West Third street, who have been doing detached inspection duty in this city and Elizabeth for nearly a year, were recently transferred to Camp Raritan, where they are now attending the Ordnance Motor and Maintenance Instruction School.

The two Plainfielders enlisted at Washington, D. C., December, 1917, and were assigned to the Walter Scott & Company's shop in this city as inspectors on 4.7 gun carriage work. Later they were transferred to the Singer Manufacturing Company's plant at Elizabeth to assist in supervising the complete of French 75 millimeter gun carriages and inspection of stores for the administration division of the Ordnance Department. Because of the experience they had acquired in this way, they were selected from a large group of eligibles for the school instruction at Camp Raritan.

Although hostilities have ceased, Messrs. Greene and Gulick will profit by their new work and should the Government require their services in the future they will be in line for a commission. Their success since entering the service has been a source of pleasure for their relatives and friends.

THE NEW REVELATION.

(Written especially on the first anniversary of the British Declaration for a Jewish homeland in Palestine for Jews.)

Thunder and flame and a mountain
And a wandering horde of men
Ages ago in a desert.
Slaves that were driven:—And then
The voice of God on the mountain,
The word of God in the flame,
The hand of God on that horde of men
From which our nation came:
God spoke to us on the mountain,
He called to us from the flame,
His hand was laid on our nation then
That the world might hear His name.

Thunder and flame and destruction,
A world in the grip of death,
And a little people broken
That is true till its dying breath;
The voice of God in the burning,
The word of God in the crash,
The hand of God on the hearts of men
To drive them like a lash:
God calls aloud to the peoples,
Speaking his meaning plain
When now the nations bid us live
That the world may live again.

A few brave men on a mountain,
Zion, the hill of our hope,
To kindle the flame of the spirit
Toward which the nations grope,
To found a nation in wisdom
While madness rages and foams,
To lay the corner-stone of a school
As pledge for our shattered homes:
God speaks to us on the mountain,
He calls to us from the height.
That the stricken groveling world again
May find in Him its light.

Is the word of God among us,
We of the common horde,
When we speak the laws of justice
For the nation of the Lord:
The land of God for the widow
And the bread of God for her son,
And the sign of God for the judge's brow
By whom our will is done?
Gather before His mountain,
Tremble and hear and be still,
For the hand of God is upon you now
That you should do His will.

Many Good Jobs to Be Given Out in Near Future

Governor Edge will have some important appointments to make at the coming session of the Legislature to fill vacancies in State offices which expire during 1919. Heading the list is the position of Attorney-General of the State for a term of five years at a salary of $7,500 a year. This position is now held by John W. Wescott, of Camden. It seems to be a foregone conclusion that Thomas F. McCran, of Paterson, who, in the last session of the Legislature, was Senate president, will be selected for this office. The term of Chancellor E. R. Walker, head of the Chancery Court, also expires during the coming session. Like Mr. Wescott, Chancellor Walker is a Democrat in politics, but it is anticipated that the Executive will adhere to the practices of former New Jersey Governors to keep the judiciary of the State evenly balanced politically and rename the present Chancellor.

The term of Robert McAdams, Democrat, of Elizabeth, expires also during the coming legislative session, and it is expected that he will lose his political head. He is clerk in chancery, and his salary is $6,000 a year for a term of five years. It is quite probable that Melvin A. Rice, of Red Bank, a Democrat, will be reappointed as a member of the State Board of Education, of which he is now president.

The term of George T. Bouton, of Jersey City, as a member of the State Board of Taxes and Assessment also expires. His salary is $3,000 a year for a term of three years. The term of John D. Prince, president of the Civil Service Commission, which pays $2,500, and is for a ter mof five years, expires also. Mr. Prince is, however, a Republican, and may be reappointed.

Another office to become vacant and which the Executive will have to fill is that of State Commissioner of Public Reports, of which Benjamin B. Bobbits, of Long Branch, is now the incumbent. He was appointed as a Democrat, but "flopped" a year ago to the support of the Governor, and it remains to be seen what disposition will be made of this office. The salary is $2,000 a year and is for a term of five years.

There are also a number of appointments to be made to county boards of taxation as follows:

Atlantic county, Thomas B. Williams; Bergen, Herbert M. Ballyel; Burlington, Joseph L. Thomas; Camden, Francis D. Wezver; Cape May, Samuel F. Eldridge; Cumberland, Edward H. Corson; Essex, Jerome T. Congelton; Gloucester, Eli Heritage; Hudson, Clarence T. Van Deren; Hunterdon, Chester Tomson; Mercer, Edward B. Morris; Middlesex, George J. Haney; Morris, Horace L. Dunham; Monmouth, Albert L. Ivins; Ocean, James D. Holman; Passaic, Frederick Wolfhegel; Salem, Charles L. Richmond; Somerset, Edward E. Cooper; Sussex, Martin W. Bowman; Union, Lloyd Thompson; Warren, Arthur G. Taylor.

The terms of other officials expire as follows:

Public Library Commissioner, Everett T. Tomlinson; Board of Conservation and Development, George A. Steele and Nelson B. Gaskill; Board of Commerce and Navigation, John M. Ward and W. Parker Runyon; Board of Health, J. Oliver McDonald and Henry Spence; Board of Medical Examiners, James J. McGuire, D. Webb Cranberry, William P. Watson and Charles A. Groves; Fish and Game Commission, William A. Faunce; Palisades Inter-State Park, J. DuPratt White, Mornay Williams.

Baird Extends Thanks to Anti-Suffragettes

Senator David Baird, elected to the Senate from New Jersey in the face of a bitterly concentrated attack from the woman suffrage forces, gives much of the credit for his success in the late election to the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. In a letter to Mrs. Carroll P. Bassett, president of that organization, made public this week, he says, in part:

"The suffragettes sent their orators and agitators from many States into New Jersey and boasted that with President Wilson's aid they would defeat me. I appealed to the New Jersey voters on my record in the Senate. The verdict speaks for itself, refuting the statement made by Mr. Wilson, in a letter to Mr. Hennessey, that I had 'certainly not represented the true feeling of the people of New Jersey.'

"I have nothing against the suffragettes in general. The women who want the franchise have the right to use all proper methods to gain their end, just as the women who oppose it have, but the methods of the suffragette leaders, who, after insulting the President by burning his words in front of the White House, posed in New Jersey as supporters of the President in order to gain votes for my opponent, was nauseating."

DIED IN FRANCE.

Irving Wahl, a member of old Company K, died in France, October 16, after an illness with pneumonia. Word to this effect was sent this week to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Nellie A. Wahl, of 1257 East Second street. Previous to entering the service, Private Wahl was employed as a clerk at the Scott Press Works.

Standard Will Build Planes for Postal Service

With the return of peace and the release from active service of thousands of aviators that is to follow as a result, plans are being formulated by the Postoffice Department for the extensive expansion of the air mail service. In this the Standard Aircraft Corporation, with plants in this city and Elizabeth, is taking an active part and will probably construct many of the airplanes that will be used.

Engineers from the Postoffice Department and employed by the Standard, are now working on the details for establishing the air stations. Every large city in the country will have one, including Elizabeth. It is likely that the large flying field that is now being completed on property adjoining the Standard factory at Elizabeth will be utilized in that city.

The six planes that are now being used over the routes between New York, Philadelphia and Washington were specially constructed at the Standard plant. It was said by an official of the concern yesterday that many of the craft that will be used in expanding the service will be those which were turned out during the war and which will be adaptable for their new purpose with but slight changes. Those that have to be built will be modeled after the Standard machines.

Endorsements of the plan for distributing mail throughout the country by airplane are being made by numerous State and government officials. The latest one to approve it is Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who, in a communication to the Standard officials, has promised to give his support in the furtherance of it.

Colonia Hospital Work to Continue

The government base hospital at Colonia will be in existence for a year and possibly much longer. Until every soldier who has been injured in the war has been restored to health as nearly as possible and is taught to make his own living, the work will be continued.

There are at the present time over 1,300 soldiers convalescing at the hospital, which is one of the largest reconstruction camps in the country. Within a very short time the War Department will start to bring all the wounded men in France and England to this country, and after they arrive here they will be distributed among the various hospitals. Colonia will receive many more than it now has and they will not be discharged until they have entirely recovered.

It may be that the hospital will be enlarged to accommodate a larger number of men than can now be taken care of. Units from the Medical Corps will be stationed there to care for the wounded and as the soldiers recover sufficiently to be about they will be taught trades.

Auto Tag Distribution Will Start December 1

Little delay is expected this year in the distribution of automobile tags for 1919, which will begin December 1 under the direction of the New Jersey State Department of Motor Vehicles. "The only delay we anticipate," declares Commissioner Dill, "is that which the owners themselves will cause." The machinery of the department has been put in readiness for attending to applications with the best possible dispatch."

A circular letter will be sent out this week by Commissioner Dill to all of his fifty agencies in the State, and to other automobile officials instructing them to urge owners to procure their 1919 tags at once, and not wait until the last minute to comply with this feature of the automobile law.

All the tags will be ready and every agency in the State will have a full supply of them before the opening date of distribution. They are of better quality than in several years and tests have shown that they will stand a greater amount of rough usage than any previously issued New Jersey tag.

"All that is needed to absolutely avoid anything even approaching delays or inconveniences this year," said Commissioner Dill, "is for the automobilists themselves to give early heed and action to the matter of obtaining their 1919 registration tags. The department will be ready in all its branches. We can do nothing more; the rest of it is distinctly up to the automobile owners and operators."

Local License Agent James J. McCann, whose office is on East Fourth street, is in readiness for applications and urges autoists to call early and "avoid the rush."

CITY NATIONAL BANK

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

A Checking Account

The man who works along definite, systematic lines knows just how he stands financially and what he wants to accomplish.

This is why every man should have a Checking Account. In no other way can he conduct his every-day financial affairs systematically and satisfactorily.

The City National Bank cordially welcomes new relations, and pays 2% interest on accounts of $1,000 to $5,000. 3% on accounts of $5,000 and upwards.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on

Tuesday, December 3rd, 1918

at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 131 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose, on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seventeen remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts or parcels of land to be sold which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest from the twentieth day of December, 1917, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said Act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling, twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

December 20, 1917, is the date from which interest will be added to date of sale

Defying Death Two Miles in Air, Plainfielder in Crippled Plane Boldly Attacks Enemy Machines

Dodging shells and bullets fired by German destroyers and sea planes, while flying ten thousand feet in the air with a defective oil feed pipe was a part of a thrilling experience which befell Walter Wilson, of 816 West Third street, as flying engineer in the aviation section of the navy.

It all happened in the middle of October over the North Sea as the Plainfielder has been stationed at a naval port in France since early last summer. Fortunately he and his comrade, the pilot of the sea plane, escaped harm and Mr. Wilson was able to describe his perilous trip in the following letter received Tuesday by his brother, William F. Wilson, of West Front street and Clinton avenue:

Somewhere in France,
October 23, 1918.

Dear Brother:

I don't know just how to start this letter as I have had an awful experience since I last wrote you and the worst I have had since I am a flying engineer, but I will do my best to tell you of my last fight which led me into a trap of 10 thousand feet and over ——. To get to the beginning of things, we were sent out on patrol duty. The course was so-and-so and when we got out about forty miles from land we sighted a "Zep," about 10 miles on our starboard bow. We immediately changed our course and started after the gas bag. He seemed to catch on to our game and changed his course to the direction of ——. To the best of my calculation he was having trouble with his motors or was out of ammunition or did not want to put up fight. We gave chase clear into —— and we were getting up to within firing range when I felt oil spatter into my face and saw oil running off the end of my gun. Looking up at my motors, I found oil running out of the pipe next to the pump which is the main feed to the motors. To land was impossible for we were right over four of their destroyers and at the same time the oil leak happened they started to fire with their three-inch guns but their shots were going wild, so I told the pilot to climb as high as possible and when he got as high as I thought he could get, we shut off the motors and then we could volplane down. At the same time I would climb out on the wings and make the necessary repairs to the other.

Well it took us about three seconds to hold this little conversation as you know the pilot has to obey the engineer in a case like this. Well he started to climb and when I thought he was high enough I shut the motors off and climbed out on the wing. The feeling you have out on the wing of a seaplane at ten thousand feet up with a lot of shells whistling all around you, well you know what kind of a feeling you would have.

Luck was with us though and some one must have been praying for me as all that I needed was a piece of tape as the oil pipe had only split.

When I got into the fuselage and out again with the tape we struck the water quite a distance from the destroyers. Up to now their shots were still going wild, but now that we were lying on the water made a better target for them, so I threw on the switches and crawled out on the wings and started the motors again and we took to the air as fast as the motors would carry us. The only thing that worried me now was how much oil was left in the motors, for if it went low the motors would get hot, burn, stick fast and nothing in hell would turn her over again.

This would spell doom for us as old Fritz was right below us waiting patiently for us to come down, so we tried the same thing over again, but old Fritz slipped one over on us this time. While I was starting up the motors again he put a three-inch shell into the tail of the plane which did little damage, but we got out of there before he could repeat and before the biggest part of the water could get in we took to the air and got over those ships, and I let one of our bombs go at it. I must have been quite nervous as my shot went way off from its intended mark. I tried two more with the same result, falling too far to do any damage. My pilot at this moment took a vertical bend which threw me in among the gasoline tanks and butting my head against the fuselage.

With three German sea-planes bearing down on us—I had no time, however, to think about myself—I opened fire with my machine gun which kept them at their distance till we beat it out to sea as fast as we could. They followed us for about twenty miles and then turned back as we sighted two English destroyers. Our little stay over —— lasted about fifteen minutes and as we ran out of gas on our way back and we alighted in the —— and laid there for about two hours before we were picked up by the crew of a trawler which happened by and supplied us with enough gasoline to take us to the station again.

Well, I guess I am giving a good account of myself over here and I hope to be back in the States before long, as I am put up for a commissioned office and might be sent back to do inspection work on gas motors over there, but it may be two months before that comes to a head.

I am ordered up again tonight to take a convoy into port. Well, Bill, don't forget to let me know all the news from Plainfield and tell all the fellows that I send them my best regards.

I will close, hoping that this letter gets to you this time, as I had to alter it twice before the censor would let it go.

Trusting that this letter reaches you and all are well at home.

Your loving brother,
WALT.

The Wilson family received a cablegram from Walter this morning, announcing that he would soon sail for America and expected to be in Plainfield on December 15.

Annual Entertainment For C. O. S. Benefit

A Christmas entertainment for children will be given for the benefit of the Charity Organization Society in the High School Auditorium on Saturday afternoon, December 14th, at 2:30 o'clock. The doors will open at 2:00, when Santa Claus will have some grab-bags ready for all who want to give 10 cents toward helping other children have a happy Christmas.

Then will come some wonderful movies, just what boys and girls like best, after that a marvelous magician will do tricks and make you hear someone beside you, who isn't there at all! Then the toys will come to life, when Santa Claus comes down the chimney. And the pop-corn, nuts and dates! Everything the kiddies enjoy. Tickets 25 cents, on sale at Miller's drug store. If you have no children to send, mail a check to the Charity Organization in the Babcock building, and Miss Holly will send some little ones who could not otherwise enjoy this treat.

More Plans Underway For War on Skeeters

The State Board of Charities and Corrections has recommended to the State Budget Commission the appropriation of $100,000 to the Department of Conservation and Development to provide for the employment of inmates of correctional institutions in the extermination of salt marsh mosquitoes from New Jersey.

Inasmuch as this work is of great importance as to demand that it be completed as soon as possible and not dragged out through a series of years, Commissioner Lewis was authorized to urge the matter upon the Budget Commission immediately. This was done also in view of the availability of New Jersey for agricultural development as its part of the agricultural reconstruction program now under way in the United States.

A LETTER OF THANKS FROM MRS. CHARLES.

My dear Mr. LaRock:

Will you be kind enough to publish this letter in your paper, as I would like to publicly thank you and your staff, both for the Red Cross Shop and for myself, for your most generous donation of space to our venture. I know our success is in a large part due to the very prominent places you have given the news of the Shop and we greatly appreciate your interest and generosity and your kindness makes us sure of a continued liberality that is bound to keep up our prosperity.

It is my desire to thanks, by note or by card, everyone who has helped us, but we have had so many kind friends that someone may be overloodked and I would like, if you will allow me, to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has contributed to the Shop in any way.

Very sincerely,
MARY DE P. CHARLES.

PRIVATE THOMAS MENDELL IN FRENCH HOSPITAL.

Private Thomas Mendell, of Company F, 113th Regiment, U. S. Infantry, formerly Company K, writes from France, saying he is in a hospital recovering from being gassed. He enlisted before war was declared and went to Camp McClellan, Ala., in September, 1917. He sailed for France in June.

When he enlisted he was not quite eighteen. Private Mendell worked for George Simon and in the Plainfield postoffice before enlistment. He also mentions Harry Vogel, a West End boy, and Oliver Pierson, Jr., formerly a Plainfield fireman, as both being in a hospital. Private Mendell was in training for a bicycle racer when he joined the colors.

Bridgeport Man To Address Elks' Yearly Service

D. J. Clifford, past exalted ruler, of Bridgeport, Conn., Lodge, No. 36, and regarded as one of New England's best orators, will make the address at the annual memorable service of Plainfield Lodge of Elks in the Plainfield Theatre next Sunday night.

Exalted Ruler James W. Hart, of Plainfield Lodge, will be in charge of the ceremonies, the program being similar to those of previous years. The Elks' quartet will sing and a stringed orchestra of five pieces, under the direction of Harry Wetton, will render the instrumental numbers. Friends of the Elks are invited to attend.

During the past year Plainfield Lodge has lost ten members by death. Two of them occurring recently removed John V. Todd and Herbert B. Smith, numbered among the most popular men in the organization. Todd's death, which occurred last Friday, at Camp Polk, Raleigh N. C., was the first of Plainfield Lodge's men in service to pass away. It has a total of sixty members in uniform, many of them having been in action in France. Since its organization in December, 1903, the lodge has lost a total of fifty-five members by death.

Those who have died during the past year were: Henry J. Nischwitz, January 10; Charles D. Clark, March 6; Archibald M. Lowden, April 12; Peter J. Englesbe, May 15; Otto Moor, May 20; Corra Ryno, May 4; Andrew McCardell, July 30; John J. Given, October 12; Herbert B. Smith, November 3, and John V. Todd, November 22.

In addition to the above ten, the forty-five members who have passed away since the lodge was organized were as follows:

Daniel Detweiler, April 8, 1906; Herbert S. Taylor, April 16, 1906; Robert T. Thomae, July 21, 1906; Olin L. Jenkins, November 13, 1906; Herbert B. Brooks, January 8, 1907; Charles C. Burnet, February 23, 1907; Maze Edwards, July 4, 1909; Joseph W. Reinhart, January 27, 1911; William W. Winn, December 29, 1911; Alexander H. Small, January 9, 1912; oJhn A. Yawrence, January 11, 1912; Herbert L. Overbaugh, May 17, 1912; Elmer E. Runyon, October 16, 1912; James H. Daly, January 21, 1914; David J. Carney, March 17, 1914; John H. Kitchen, April 4, 1914; Clarence T. Brokaw, April 27, 1914; Frederick Sandford, May 11, 1914; James Stewart, January 15, 1915; John W. Dent, January 23, 1915; Clarence E. Teel, P. E. Standard's Engineer Favors Landing Fields

Charles H. Day, chief engineer of the Standard Aircraft Corporation, yesterday declared himself in favor of the establishing of municipal landing fields for airplanes. He declared that it was the first step necessary to the introduction of an air mail service for the country. He is the inventor of the tractor type of plane.

Mr. Day points out that the United States government has more than 10,000 airplanes, and that production is now going on at the rate of about 40,000 airplanes per year. The nnmber of landing fields that are available is, however, practically negligible, as most of the existing planes are now located at training fields in this country, or have been shipped to France, so that it has not been necessary to establish regular landing places in many cities.

Mr. Day urges municipalities throughout the country not only to take immediate action regarding the securing of landing fields, but to promote the speedy establishment of air-mail and parcel-post routes connecting with other cities throughout the nation.

THOUGHT STEAM WAS SMOKE.

An overheated boiler in the Woodhull-Martin building caused clouds of steam to pour out of the openings, early yesterday afternoon, and a trolley conductor mistook the vapor for smoke. He turned in an alarm from box 12 and all the downtown fire apparatus responded. The firement quickly found out what was wrong and the steam soon ceased to flow.

Willard Groff Gives Up Life on Battle Field

Official word from Washington brings the sad news to Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Groff, of Prospect avenue, that their twenty-nine-year-old son, Private Willard Groff, had been killed on a French battlefield. Beyond stating that his death had occurred on October 29, the message gave the grief-stricken parents no further information.

Private Groff had made his home in Plainfield about twelve years, coming here from New York. At the time war was declared on Germany, he was in Pittsburg on business for the Meserau Metal Bed Company, of Jersey City, of which his father is the head. He enlisted in the 61st Field Artillery, was assigned to Camp Lee for training and went overseas last April.

In the last letter received by his parents, he stated that he had been in action for several months but was then enjoying good health. He added that he was looking forward to an early return to Plainfield and expressed great pleasure at having learned that the Meserau Company has promoted him to a responsible position in the Jersey City plant for occupation as soon as the war was over.

Beside his parents, Private Goff is survived by three sisters. They are Mrs. Carl Wilson, of South and Belvidere avenues; Mrs. Walter Knowlton and Mrs. William Wood, of Englewood, formerly of Plainfield.

Previous to yesterday three other local soldier boys were reported by Washington to have died in battle. They were Privates Joseph E. Kirch and Edward Powers, of North Plainfield and Harold Storr, of West Front street.

Joseph E. Kirch was the son of Freeholder and Mrs. George Kirch, of 116 Somerset street, the borough. He was twenty-four years old. Having been a member of the former Company K, absorbed by the Twenty-ninth Division, he went into camp at Anniston, Ala., with that unit in June, 1917. After remaining in training for nine months, he went overseas with the Twenty-ninth Division last June, sailing from Newport News, Va. He was then a member of Company F, 113th Infantry, and was still with it at the time he met death on the battlefield.

Corporal Kirch was a member of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and was widely known in the city and borough. News of his death resulted in deep sympathy being expressed to the family. Besides his parents, the young soldier is survived by three sisters and three brothers. They are Mrs. Lafayette Rosenstiehl and Mrs. Laura Kirch, of the borough; Mrs. Annie Smith, of Newark; Robert Kirch, of Westfield; Augustus Kirch, of Stirling, and Harry Kirch, a member of the U. S. Navy stationed at Newport, R. I.

Harold Storr was twenty-four years old and was the son of Frank Storr, of 708 West Front street. He joined the old Company K in June, 1917, just before it left for Camp McClellan and was in training at that post all last winter. When the New Jersey units were merged with the Twenty-ninth Division, he was placed in Compahy F, 113th Infantry. He went overseas last June and the last his father heard from him previous to the official message announcing his death last Friday night, was contained in a letter written on October 5. At that time he was enjoying good health but spoke of having had plenty of action.

Private Storr was an accomplished musician, performing both on the piano and the trombone. Previous to entering the service he was in the employ of the Jersey Central as a trainman. He was extremely popular with al who knew him. Beside his father, his only near surviving relative is one sister, Miss Marjorie Storr, a pupil nurse at Muhlenberg Hospital. He was a gandson of Winfield S. Schomp, of 712 West Front street, and a nephew of Fred and Albert Schomp, of this city.

Another local young man to give up his life for his country recently was Sergeant Edward C. Powers brother of Mrs. Raymond Stevens, of 47 Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

The official telegram announced that he had died in a base hospital from wounds received in action. Sergeant Powers was twenty-two years old and was attached to Battery C, 107th Heavy Field Artillery. His mother, Mrs. Charles C. Powers, lives at Phoenixville, Pa.

ARTHUR HOFFMAN WOUNDED.

Arthur Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hoffman, of 688 West Front street, is reported in a French hospital recovering from wounds. He was shot through both shoulders during the Argonne drive. He is a member of the 311th Infantry.

MISS BRESSAN ARRIVES.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Bressan, of Chatham place, the borough, are the parents of a baby girl born to them at Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday. The little one has been named Ethel.

Craftsmen Have Big Time at the "Get-Together"

Seventy-five house trade craftsmen who donated a total of 800 hours of their labor and time to convert the old postoffice quarters into the present attractive show room of the Red Cross shop are still talking of the wonderful time they had at the "get-together" in the shop Tuesday night.

The affair was arranged by the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter of the Red Cross in recognition of the generous spirit exhibited by the men and a glance at their smiling faces Tuesday night, was sufficient to show that they received it in the manner in which it was given. There were about 109 who did work at the shop but quite a number were unable to respond to the invitation.

When the men first assembled they were grouped for a flash-light photograph by Paul Collier. It was intended by the Red Cross to make it a "man's picture" alone but the men themselves refused to pse unless Mrs. J. M. Charles, manager of the shop, appeared in the picture. As one of them remarked, "It would not be complete if she were left out." Mrs. Charles eventually complied but not without protest, although the pictures themselves, delivered before the affair was over, showed that the speaker was right about its not being "complete."

The supper was prepared under the direct supervision of Mrs. F. D. Warren and Mrs. Frank Chandler. It was served by a corps of young women volunteer waitresses, assisted by Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mrs. W. C. O'Donnell, Mrs. M. O'M. Knott and Miss Lillie Moore. The menu was complete in every detail. After the last course Senator William N. Runyon assumed the position of toastmaster and gave a splendid address of thanks to the craftsmen in behalf of the Red Cross. Response was made by William H. Lunger, business agent of the Trades Council, who co-operated with Mrs. Charles in laying out the plan of the shop quarters. Henry Parson sang several selections and the address of the evening was made by Lieutenant James Ackerman, who told in his modest way of the thrilling experiences he had while a member of the Aviation Corps in France.

The work contributed by the craftsmen would have cost about $1,500, but after Tuesday night's affair all insisted that they had gotten "double time" for every moment they worked. Those who were invited to attend the get-together were the following:

JAMES J. BURKE BURIED HERE TODAY.

The body of James J. Burke, a former well known Plainfielder, who died Tuesday at Buena, near Atlantic City, was brought here today for burial in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery. The funeral service was held at Buena.

Mr. Burke was born forty-four years ago in the old Burke homestead on South Second street, near Grant avenue. He was engaged here as a contractor. Since going to Buena in 1914 he had been in the hotel business.

Beside his widow and step-daughter, Mr. Burke is survived by four brothers, Frank P. and Joseph F., of this city; Michael, of Dunellen, and John, of Roosevelt.

Mayor Warns Against Hasty Memorial Action

Will Appoint an Advisory Committee to Carefully Consider Plans for a Fitting and Lasting Tribute to Plainfield's Heroes Who Offered Their Lives in the Country's Defense

Although firmly believing that Plainfield should honor its war heroe with some sort of memorial, Mayor Leighton Calkins today, in an interview, sounded a note of warning against hasty action in such an important matter. For this reason, he has decided upon the appointment of a War Memorial Advisory Committee, to consider the question with calm deliberation and offer suggestions after it has covered every possible detail of suitable plans. The members of this committee will be announced within a few days.

Mayor Calkins has devoted much of his time recently to studying the memorial question and finds that many cities have made mistakes through sporatic enthusiasm. He also learned that mere monuments of bronze or stone are not as much in favor as in previous years, the preference being directed toward municipay parks or memorial buildings that can be used and appreciated by the people at all times. The Mayor leans toward the latter in his views and entertains the belief that a War Memorial Advisory Committee would work out a proper plan. As a member of the Mayors' League of the State and the State Council of Defense, Mayor Calkins intends suggesting the committee plan to both organizations.

In the interview with a Record reporter this morning, the Mayor said:

"Communities everywhere are considering the erection of appropriate memorials to commemorate the patriotism and valor of those who have gone into active service in the war and especially in memory of those who have given their lives in the great cause. It is an opportunity which may not occur again, at least which we all hope will never occur again from a similar cause, to enrich the country with works of art and usefulness for the common welfare, whether such memorials take the form of arches and monuments, or projects of more practical usefulness such as community center buildings, beautiful parks for the constant use and enjoyment of the people, etc.

"Needless to say there will be no difficulty for us to raise by popular subscription whatever amount we want for a beautiful memorial. But it would indeed be unfortunate if we should permit ourselves to be hurried by our present enthusiasm over the collapse of the war, to act hastily in a matter calling for deliberation, the best of judgment, and wise decisions. All about us we see monumental monstrosities, silent in their dumb protest but enduring proof of ill-directed enthusiasm and poor taste in an earlier time.

"Artists and municipal art societies will soon come forward with concrete suggestions and programs. By waiting for these disecussions and possibly until we have some decisions or recommendations elsewhere to guide us, we shall avaid the pitfall which awaits the pioneer in any undertaking.

"Therefore it seems to me, instead of now appointing a committee to undertake the immediate collection of funds for a memorial the character of which is undetermined, it would be better to appoint a preliminary or advisory committee to collect information in regard to what is being done in other cities, to receive suggestions from our own people, and, treating the matter as one of great public interest, to give it the most careful study and to formulate a definite conclusion or recommendation.

"I have now under advisement the appointment of such a committee, which would be representative but a select committee rather than a large unwieldy one. Its report of course would not be binding on the community or on anybody. But as a preliminary step in the solution of the problem it would serve as a basis for further action and would tend to prevent any premature decision which would be the greatest mistake of all.

"The recommendation of the committee might go further than to recommend a type of memorial and include a design or model. In any event it is of the utmost importance that there shall be the fullest opportunity for ascertaining public sentiment, when undoubtedly every member of the community will be a contributor to the project.

"This is not strictly a municipal project but rather in the nature of a popular movement, which it is my wish to facilitate in such manner as I am able.

"I shall be able to announce the personnel of the War Memorial Advisory Committee as soon as the consent of those who are asked to serve has been secured. The committee will have a hard task before it and it will involve self-sacrifice and interest in the welfare of the community on the part of those to whom the matter will be intrusted."

Welsh Farms Dairy Owner Killed In Crossing Accident

Jacob LaVine, owner of the Welsh Farms' dairy in this city, and who made his home a part of the time with his son, Harry LaVine, of 430 West Fifth street, was one of two men killed on Tuesday afternoon, when a automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Jersey Central engine on a grade crossing two miles east of Flemington. The other victim was Ignatz L. Rosenbaum, a real estate dealer in Flemington, who died in the Somerset Hospital after being hurried there. The bodies of both men were thrown into the Raritan River, from which they were rescued by section hands.

Mr. LaVine had a farm near New Brunswick, where he and his wife lived but he spent most of his time in Plainfield with his son Harry, the latter being an only child and manager of the Welsh Farms' dairy. The father had a wide business acquaintance in Plainfield and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. His funeral took place Wednesday afternoon and burial was at New Brunswick.

The engineer of the train which ran the machine down was William Garrity, of Somerville.

SEVERAL MEN INJURED WHEN BOILER FALLS.

While a gang of men employed by the Henry R. Kent Company was lifting a large boiler into position at the Spicer plant in South Plainfield, this noon, the boiler slipped from position and injured several men. Two of them received broken legs and were hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital. Several men standing in the way of the falling weight narrowly escaped with their lives.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Vail, who left for the South a week ago, are now located at Aiken, S. C.

Miss Traynor Bride of Joseph Bennett

Miss Mary Elizabeth Traynor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Traynor, of South Second street, was married in St. Mary's church at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, to Joseph Francis Bennett, also of South Second street.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Miss Teresa Straub, of New York, was bridesmaid, and James Traynor, brother of the bride, was best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. At the conclusion of a wedding trip to Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will make their home on South Second street.

Both young people are widely known, a fact that was evidenced by the large numbers of beautiful presents they received. The assortment included many handsome pieces of silver and cut glass. Mr. Bennett is a valued employe at the Pond Tool Works.

RECEIVES NEWSW OF BROTHER'S DEATH.

Max Weintrob, of 208 East Fifth street, today received a telegram from Washington, announcing that his brother, Morris Weintrob, twenty years old, had been killed in action in France.

The young man enlisted in New York just before war was declared and when he was only eighteen years old. He was in the field artillery and had been in two drives before the one in which he met death. The young man was a frequent visitor in Plainfield and had many local friends. Beside his brothers here, he is survived by his parents, and other sisters and brothers in New York.

MILDRED E. ALLEN.

Mildred Eleanor Allen, aged nineteen years, died yesterday at her home, 919 West Fourth street.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

A victory mass meeting will be held at the First Baptist church, December 5. Harry White, a Y. M. C. A. worker who recently returned from France, will speak.

Miss Anna Case, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing in the Plainfield High School the evening of December 16, under the auspices of the Silver Cross Circle, of the King's Daughters.

The annual community Christmas entertainment for the children of Plainfield will be given in the High Scholo, December 14, under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society. A suitable program is now in course of preparation by a committee.

The Employed Boys' Brotherhood, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., will give its annual banquet Tuesday evening, December 3, when Harry C. White, who was engaged in association work in France, will be the speaker.

The Hartridge School is included among the local organizations that gave liberally to the War Work campaign fund recently collected. The total amount subscribed by the school was $616.22.

George Perry, of 16 Haddison avenue, North Plainfield, who sustained a fractured ankle in an accident at the Calco Chemical Works in Bound Brook, Tuesday, is resting easily at Muhlenberg. It will be many weeks, however, before he is able to return to work.

On complaint of Edward Muller, a fourteen-year-old boy living in Dunellen, Officer Henry on Saturday night arrested William Custy, of North Bergen, at Park avenue and Front street. In the city court Monday morning, Muller pressed a charge of disorderly conduct against Custy and Judge DeMeza fined him $20. The amount was paid. In the city court, a few days ago, Harold Meakin, driver of the Muhlenberg Hospital ambulance, was fined $5 for recklessly driving his machine through a crowd at Park avenue and Front street, thereby jeopardizing the safety of several persons.

Augustus H. Rose, of 1122 West Front street, is a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital following a fall downstairs at his home, Sunday afternoon. He sustained a fracetured leg and several contused wounds about the body. Rose conducts a bakery route through the city and suburbs.

The local Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, whose membership includes policemen attached to the Plainfield, North Plainfield and Westfield forces, will hold its annual ball in Columbus Hall next Monday night. Nichol's Band, of this city, will furnish music. There will be no entertainment this year but police officials from the city, borough and Westfield will be special guests of the association. Thomas Flatley, of the Plainfield force, is chairman of the committee and Tobias Nolan is treasurer. Their assistants are John Hermann, Harry Deter, Walter Dennis, John Wirth, Harry Henry, Arthur McGinley and Ferdinand Bader.

Letters and telegrams received during the past week announce the wounding of the following Plainfield and North Plainfield soldiers in France: Donald Sminck, son of Councilman and Mrs. Charles S. Sminck, of East Front street, shot through the arm; Leslie Sharpe, son of Assistant Postmaster and Mrs. William Sharpe, wounded by shrapnel; Corporal Herbert Pond, son of Frank H. Pond, of 139 East Front street, degree not stated; Lieutenant Albert E. Crane, 31 Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, wounded in leg but since receiving it has been able to return to duty, and Corporal Oliver Pearson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver R. Pearson, of 340 Manson place, leg fractured by shrapnel.

Leslie Randolph, of Grant avenue; Sergeant Robert McGoldrick, of 409 East Fifth street, and George W. Mundy, son of Daniel Mundy, of 1118 Woodland avenue, are all reported as being missing in action. Arthur Kienzle, of Netherwood avenue, previously reported as missing in action, has since been located as a prisoner in Germany. He was wounded before being captured.

Interesting incidents marking the growth of the First Baptist church were presented by L. V. F. Randolph, Sunday morning at the first of the two-day services in observance of the centennial of the organization. A program of anthems was given by a large chorus under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist. Charles W. McCutchen, musical director of the church for forty years, sang with the choir. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor, in charge of the service, stated that the Bible used in the pulpit was presented to the church by William J. Leonard, November 25, 1869, and had been in use continuously since that time.

The historical review showed that thirty-six persons from Samptown and Piscataway comprised the constituent members of the church. The present membership is 800. The original house of worship, a frame structure, was built in New street, and was used until 1859 when the present stone edifice at West Front and Grove streets was completed and ready for occupancy. The first pastor was Rev. Jacob Fitz Randolph, who served until 1828. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, the present pastor, began his service in 1912.

Among the oldest members of the church now living are Sarah Gaunt, Henry Woodland, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. Clara Y. Smith, Josephine Cadmus, L. V. F. Randolph, Mary Augusta Runyon, Mrs. Emeline Barkalew and Mrs. Catherine Randolph, all of whom joined during the '50s and '60s.

Dr. Strong preached on the topic, "Our Debt to the Past and Our Obligation to the Future." Monday afternoon a women's meeting was held when "The Story of the Century" was reviewed by Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. Francis K. Anderson. Dr. Rush Rhees, president of Rochester University and for many years a member of the church, made the address.

29th Division Man Gets D. S. C. for Bravery in Alsace

Plainfield people who have been following the program pursued by the Twenty-ninth Division "over there" will be interested to learn that one commissioned officer of the military unit, in which is merged the old New Jersey National Guard, has been awerded the Distinguished Service Corps for "extraordinary heroism in action near Balschwiller, Alsace." The honored one is Captain Chandler Sprague, a former Baltimore newspaperman who served as assistant divisional intelligence officer while the Blue and Gray was in training at Camp McClellan, and who has many friends in this city. He was assigned by Major General Charles G. Morton to supervise the activities of newspaper correspondents at Camp McClellan and was responsible for many of the new stories which appeared in Plainfield papers while the division was following the intensive training schedule.

Sprague recently returned from France with a number of othe officers from the Blue and Gray division to serve as an instructor in this country. He received his promotion from first lieutenant to captain shortly after arriving back on American soil and is now stationed at Camp Kearney, California, with the 82nd division.

"I have read with much pride the report of the commanding general, 58th Infantry Brigade, regarding your display of coolness and good judgment in reconnoissance preliminary to a raid on the German trenches, 30-31, August, 1918, and your display of fine qualities of leadership during the raid itself and your conduct in bringing back wounded under fire. I have ordered your name and deed inscribed upon the record book kept at these headquarters for that purpose."

The citation submitted by Adjutant General Ralph Harrison, Great Headquarters, American Expeditionary Force, describes in more detail the act of heroism. Aujutant General Harrison sent the following to the commanding general at Camp Kearney this week:

"This office has been advised by the commanding general, American Expeditionary Forces, that he has awarded the distinguished service cross to First Lieutenant Chandler Sprague, Company K, 115th Infantry, for extraordinary heroism in action near Balschwiller, Alsace, August 31st, 1918. Upon returning from a raid which he led against German trenches, Lieutenant Sprague found one of his men was missing. Accompanied by one man he promptly and voluntarily returned through artillery, machine gun and rifle fire, found the missing man, who had been wounded, and carried him back to the American lines.' Lieutenant Sprague has been ordered to report to you for duty as acting intelligence officer of the infantry replacement regiment, and the Secretary of War directs that upon the receipt of Sprague's distinguished service cross from the Quartermaster General, you cause the same to be presented to the officer with appropriate ceremonies."

The Jersey troops, according to information that has found ts way back here, saw some of their hardest fighting near Balschwiller. Upon his return to this country Sprague declared the "war business" to be the "most worth while game he had ever played."

Fare Rate Case Now Rests With Court of Errors

The Court of Errors and Appeals heard argument Monday in the fight against the seven-cent fare and the one-cent transfer allowed by the State Public Utility Commission to the Public Service Railway Company and the six-cent fare granted to the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Corporation as a war amergency

The Supreme Court recently upheld the action of the utility board and the two cases were taken to the higher court. Marshal Van Winkle and George L. Record, counsel for the New Jersey League of Municipalities, appeared for City Commissioner Charles F. X. O'Brien, of Jersey City, who launched the attack in the Public Service Railroad case. L. Edward Herrmann, counsel for the Public Utility Commission, represented that board both in the Public Service and the Trenton cases. In the latter case City Counsel Charles E. Bird and George L. Record, as special counsel, looked after the interests of the city of Trenton. Frank Bergen and Richard C. Lindabury were counsel for the Public Service Railway Company.

Mr. Record made this comment prior to the opening of the argument:

"In the Public Service case the corporation tried its case upon the theory of a so-called emergency application and made no attempt to establish a valuation of its property. It proceeded on the assumption that the existing rate was a fair rate in 1916, prior to the time when the increased cost of labor and materials began to be a factor and that they were entitled to an increased fare sufficient to even the increased cost of labor and materials since the year 1916. The Public Utility Commission tried and decided the case upon this theory, and flatly refused to require or consider any proof of valuation, either on the part of the compony or on the part of the prosecutor. * * *

"The board made the orders to prevent 'a default in the payment of rentals and interest on securities.' It viewed such a default as bad public policy, and wrong from the standpoint of economics. It made the orders to protect 'the solvency of the company.' Even if we admit that the board acted wisely from the standpoint of public policy and economics, are we not clearly entitled to say that only the legislature itself could make an order on such a footing? The basing of rates upon which is economically desirable has never been the test of the Federal courts in reviewinf the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission in relation to rates.

"The board has no power to make an order merely because the board determines that such an order is advisable. The board cannot exercise a judgment and discretion of equal latitude with the power of the legislature itself."

The brief of Messrs. Beregen and Lindabury for the Public Service Railway Company outlined the litigation and recited the increases in operating and maintenance expenses made necessary by the war.

The brief stated in part, "Since it is clear that to prescribe a rate it is a legislative act, courts cannot set aside an order fixing a rate except for one of three reasons: (1) Because it is discriminatory. There is no such contention in this case. (2) Because the rate is higher than the service is worth. There is no evidence here that the service is not worth the rates fixed, and (3) Because a rate is so low that it does not yield a reasonable return on the fair value of the property properly employed in serving the public. There is no point of that kind presented in these cases."

Red Cross Produced Many Millions of Necessary Articles

During the last seventeen months the women of the American Red Cross have produced a total of 291,004,000 necessary articles, according to a report just made public by the War Council at national headquarters in Washington. They were: Surgical dressings, 253,196,000;0 knitted articles 14,089,000; refugee garments, 1,464,000; hospital garments and supplies, 22,255,000.

Working with raw materials valued at $40,00,000, these women produced finished articles valued at $59,000,000—during the last year alone.

The American Red Cross has become one of the world's greatest manufacturing concerns, having more tran 8,000,000 active workers, many of whom have now become expert. Practically every one of America's soldiers who has crossed the Atlantic has carried with him some of the knitted articles furnished by the Red Cross, such as socks, mufflers, helmets and wristlets.

All the men on this side in need of knitted goods who are in camps or cantonments will be similarly supplied this winter, as will also many of our allied troops and thousands of impoverished refugees in the war-stricken districts.

That the American Red Cross has not forgotten our allies is shown by the fact that France, Britain, Servia, Italy, Palestine and Russia have received a gross total of 227,236,548 garments during the last year.

Hundreds of millions of yards of gauze, a hundred million yards of fabric and millions of pounds of yarn have been purchased since the entry of American into the war, and made into useful garments of varied sorts for the use of our soldiers, sailors and allies.

Plans Reinsuring Lives of Soldiers on Returning Home

Preparations by the government for reinsuring the lives of soldiers and sailors on their return have been hastened by the signing of the armistice. Although regulations have not yet been fully drafted, it is certain that each of the 4,250,000 men in the military or naval service now holding voluntary government insurance will be permitted within five years after peace is declared to convert it without further medical examination into ordinary life, twenty-pay endowment maturing at the age of sixty-two, or other prescribed forms of insurance.

This insurance will be arranged by the government, not by private companies, and the cost is expected to be at least one-fourth less than similar forms offered by private agencies. The low cost will result from the fact that the government will pay all overhead administration expenses, which for private companies amounts to about seventeen per cent. of premium receipts; will save the usual solicitation fees, and, in addition, bear the risk resulting from the wounding or weakening of men while in the service. Private companies would not write insurance on many wounded men, or their rates would be unusually high.

The government will arrange to collect premiums monthly, if men wish to pay this way, or for longer periods in advance. This may be done through postoffices. The minimum amount of issurance to be issued probably will be $1,000, and the maximum $10,000, with any amount between those sums in multiples of $500. There will be provision for payments in case of disability as well as death, according to the tentative plan.

The insurance may be purchased by any soldier, sailor or marine—officer or enlisted man—and by women members of the army or navy nurse corps, providing they already hold government voluntary life insurance. About ninety-five per cent. of the 4,500,000 men in the service are covered by this insurance which expires after they go back to civilian life and cease paying premiums. This is the system devised to replace the old pension plan of providing for ex-soldiers and sailors.

Thus will be created out of the government's emergency war insurance bureau the greatest life insurance institution in the world for peace erms, with more policy holders and greater aggregate risks than a half dozen of the world's biggest private companies combined. Out of the experience gained may eventually develop expansion of government insurance to old age, to industrial and other forms of insurance in the opinion of officials who have studied the subject.

Regulations for reinsuring returning soldiers and sailors are being framed by an advisory board to the military and naval section of the war risk bureau consisting of Arthur Hunter, actuary of the New York Life Insurance Company; W. A. Fraser, Omaha, of the Woodmen of the World, and F. Robertson Jones, of the workmen's compensation publicity bureau, New York.

Plans also are under consideration for allowing beneficiaries of men who have died or have been killed in the service to choose between taking monthly payments over a period of twenty years or to commute these payments in a lump sum.

American Soldiers Strong on Writing

Emerging from battle, the first duty of seven out of ten soldiers is to write home. Every one who has received letters from the fron will admit to having at least one written on the stationery with the familiar Y. M. C. A. Red Triangle letter-head, sheets of which are given away by the millions.

Anticipating a great demand, the Y. M. C. A. overseas has ordered for the use of American troops in the war zone alone 152,000,000 sheets and 111,000,000 envelopes for the five months beginning this November. How the purchasing department estimated that 41,000,000 extra sheets would be in addition to the 111,000,000 one-sheet letters is not divulged.

This order is exclusively for soldiers overseas, the men in training camps at home using millions of sheets and envelopes provided by the same organization. It's 1919 budget calls for the expenditure of $2,097,456 for stationery in France.

Albert J. Coffey, of West Front street, a member of the Merchant Marine, has returned to the barracks at Boston, after a stay at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Donohue, of Donnybrook Farm, Tompkins avenue, left by automobile Monday for Lakewood, where they will remain for the benefit of Mr. O'Donohue's health. He is now convalescing after a severe attack of pneumonia.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

JAMES D. JOHNSON.

Privates James D. Johnson, of this city, who went overseas in September as a member of the Depot Brigade from Camp Upton, died in France on October 7. Word to this effect was received by his brother, Tucker Johnson, messenger at the City National Bank, this week.

Private Johnson was twenty-five years old and beside the brother mentioned, leaves three other brothers and two sisters. They are the Misses Eliza and Mary Johnson, of Proffit, Va.; Eugene and George Johnson, of this city, and Richard Johnson, of Wyckoff.

MRS. MARY FRANCES PLATT.

Mrs. Mary Frances Platt, widow of Benjamin G. Platt, died Saturday, at her home on Hillcrest road, Watchung. She was sixty-eight years old. The funeral was held at the late residence Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Charles H. Fountain, of this city, officiating. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. ROMAN JAREMA.

Mrs. Christine Jarema, wife of Roman Jarema, died on November 22 at her home on Raritan road, Fanwood township. She had been ill with influenza during the recent epidemic but seemingly had recovered, although continuing to be in a weakened condition. Last week she became ill again and died within a few days. Mrs. Jarema was twenty-five years old and besides her husband leaves two children.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church Monday morning at 9 o'clock, when Rev. Father Bogan offered a requiem mass in the presence of relatives and friends. Burial was in Sa. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. TERESA MULDOWNEY.

Mrs. Teresa Muldowney, widow of James Muldowney, died suddenly Sunday at 79 Wilson avenue, the borough, where she had been making her home. Acute indigestion was the cause. Mrs. Muldowney was born in the north of Ireland and had lived in Plainfield for the past twenty years. Seventeen years ago she was married to the late James Muldowney, whose home for a long time was on West Third street, near Liberty street. Beyond step-sons and step-daughters she had no near relatives in this county. She had been employed recently as cook at the Children's Home in North Plainfield.

The funeral was held at Casey's mortuary chapel, TuTesday morning at 8 o'clock and in St. Mary's church at 8:30. The requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father Holsters. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The pall-bearers were John and Owen Sheehan, Charles Pagliucca and James Muldowney.

JOHN V. TODD.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Todd, of 20 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, was filled with relatives and friends, Tuesday night, in attendance at the funeral of their son, Private John V. Todd, who died last Friday morning at Camp Polk, Raleigh, N. C., following an illness with pneumonia. Included among those presents was a large delegation from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, of which the young man was one of the leading members for the past nine years.

Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. church, conducted the service and in addition the Elks held the ritualistic ceremony of the order. Exalted Ruler James W. Hart was in charge and Vincent W. Nash, Jr., acted as chaplain. As a part of this service the Elks' quartet, composed of Bertram and William F. Tallamy, Joseph C. Martin and Elmer D. Cutting, chanted the Lord's Prayer and sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "The Vacant Chair."

The floral tributes were unusually numerous as Private Todd had a wide acquaintanceship throughout the community and the extremely sad circumstances surrounding his death elicited profound sympathy. One of the striking pieces was a beautiful remembrance from the Elks.

Burial was made Wednesday morning in the family plot in the cemetery at Whitehouse. The pall-bearers were six friends with whom the deceased had been closely associated in fraternal, business and social affairs for fifteen years. They were Joseph C. Martin, Harry N. Blimm, Edwin B. Bennett, Elmer D. Cutting.

Private Todd was undoubtedly one of the best known young men in Plainfield although not a native of the city. He was born at Whitehouse, November 21, 1882, his birthday occuring the day before he died. His younger days were spent at Whitehouse and Westfield, coming from the latter town with his parents to this city about eighteen years ago. He was employed by the New York Telephone Company for several years, later for Harry W. Marshall as manager of the latter's laundry on Watchung avenue, and still more recently as salesman in the South Brooklyn and Coney Island district for B. Fischer & Company, the New York coffee concern.

In February, 1917, Private Todd, or "Jack," as everybody knew him, joined the McAllister Land Company's traveling agents who went from city to city in an exhibition car, showing the products of Oklahoma and furnishing information relative to the State's advantages for western home seekers. The McAllister concern had an arrangement with the Government whereby it disposed of farm lands and the traveling forces interested citizens in all parts of the country in Oklahoma farming, the company and the Government profiting when sections were taken up. As a member of the crew which came to Plainfield, Private Todd traveled through New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, West Virginia and Virginia, in addition to visiting Montreal, Quebec and Toronto, Ont. The car was then sent directly west to Colorado and the Plainfielder resigned his position in Denver to associate himself with the mining concern as stock salesman. He became very successful in this field and last spring was made manager of the company's branch office at Greely, Col. He was located in that city last October when he decided to enter the service, being an unmarried man, and enlisted in the tank corps. He was assigned to Company A, 343rd Battalion and ordered to Camp Polk for training purposes. He had a slight cold when he left Greely, which evidently became worse as the journey across the continent progressed. He was so ill when he alighted from the train at the camp that he was immediately put to bed in the army hospital. Pneumonia developed and he died almost before word could be sent to his relatives.

The last local friends heard from "Jack" was by means of postal cards dropped off the train as he was speeding toward Raleigh. The message in each instance was practically the same: "I am on my way South." In letters before he left Greely, he informed several of his closest friends that he had decided to become a soldier because Uncle Sam needed him. He mentioned then that he had selected the Tank Corps for his work as the boys of that division were the ones that were "seeing real action." These words have been a source of comment from his friends since his death as it enabled them to say that "Jack" Todd had the "makings" of a soldier in him would be of the most help, even though it incurred the extreme of hazardous duty.

"Jack" was possessed of a clear tenor voice and made his first appearance as an amateur performer at a minstrel show given in the Casino, now the Hartridge Auditorium, in 1904. The show was produced under the direction of the late Ben LaVere and was for the benefit of the free band concert fund. "Jac's" song number was such a big hit that he was constantly sought after by other Plainfielders. He joined forces with the well remembered Gold Medal minstrel troupe, which was composed of local amateur talent and which gave annual performances in Plainfield and nearby towns for five years.

In October, 1909, "Jack" joined Plainfield Lodge of Elks and from then on he was one of the leading spirits in all of its entertainments. He assisted the organization in its big minstrel shows of 1906 and 1908 and after becoming a member served on the committees of shows as well as appearing as end man in the annual minstrel performances. In the several musical comedies which the loge put on, he also very ably handled difficult singing and comedy roles. In other ways he was a big help to the local Elks and his death has been a heavy blow to the antlered hosts. Plainfield Lodge, however, is only one unit that sorrows for the popular young man as his fellowship extended to numerous other organizations and individuals who will always remember him for his happy disposition and readiness to entertain others.

Beside his parents, the deceased is survived by two sisters and three brothers. They are the Misses Hazel E. and Lavina D. Todd, living at the parental home; William Todd, formerly connected with the United States and American Express Companies, but now living in New Brunswick, because of being employed at the Wright-Martin shop; Merle Todd, now in France as a member of a Machine Gun Company, and Leland Todd, stationed at a naval barracks in Boston.

JOHN O'BRIEN.

The funeral of John O'Brien, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital, Sunday, after several weeks' illness with pneumonia, was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. Father Holsters offered the requiem mass in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. O'Brien was sixty-three years old and had lived in Plainfield for a long time. He was employed for a number of years by former Councilman John H. Cose when the latter was in the roofing business, but his last position was with the Wasson Piston Ring Company. He made his home at 740 West Fourth street.

Mr. O'Brien is survived by two sons, John and William, both living in New York, and three sisters, Mrs. Maurice Culhane, of Orchard place; Mrs. Mary Bray, of Plainfield avenue, and Mrs. Patrick Kelley, of New York.

Household Sugar Standards Will Increase Dec. 1

Announcement was made this week by the State Food Administration that householders will be allowed to purchase sugar after December 1 on the basis of four pounds per person per month, the same ration to apply to public eating places, which will be allowed to serve four pounds of sugar to every ninety meals. It was further intimated that all sugar restrictions would be removed after January 1.

Officials of the New Jersey administration have been in conference with officials of the Pennsylvania and New York administration, discussing the advisability of allowing jobbers to purchase at once on the four-pound basis without waiting until December 1. This extra sugar will allow jobbers, it is thought, to build up a substantial reserve supply for the winter which will meet any contingency that may arise because of unfavorable weather or transportation conditions.

New Jersey bakers were advised this week that they need no longer submit weekly reports to the food administration because of the lifting of the wheat flour ban and the abandonment of the substitute requirements.

A recent request on the part of union bakers that master bakers increase the wage scale by $3 a week, bringing the scale up to $30 a week for day bakers and $33 a week for night bakers, was referred to the food administration for settlement. Masters bakers declared they could not meet the increases without increasing their selling prices.

After considering the matter the union men were told the administration would not countenance any increase in wholesale or retail prices and that they must settle their differences with the master bakers. A representative of the employers will confer with the union men in the near future, it was said, and endeavor to bring about an amicable adjustment.

All restrictions on the manufacture of tin cans for food containers have been removed, it was said this week.

Era of Prosperity Seems Assured For All Building Lines

Building interests throughout the country may plan with full assurance of Federal and financial support for the greatest peace time Government and private construction era the country has ever known, according to official information given to Ford H. Dow, of the Dow Service Daily Building Reports, by heads of the various construction divisions of the Government at Washington when the war-time restrictions on building construction were raised by the War Industries Board last week.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, said that it was the intention of the Federal authorities to encourage private construction to the utmost without further delay and he took occasion to thank every owner and contractor, architect or engineers throughout the United States for the patriotic co-operation given to his department during the period when it was necessary to curtail their endeavors. The present policy applies to the manufacture of building materials, systems of distribution by rail or water, financing of building projects and actual construction. Labor in any quantity desired will be made immediately available to any contractor who wants it and there will be full co-operation by the fuel and railroad administrations. The same consideration and encouragement will be given to road construction, sewer work and street paving as in all other forms of municipal construction or improvement in the domestic market.

State Levies $175,867 On Union Corporations

Assessments by the State Board of Taxes and Assessments, based upon returns made under the provisions of the law of 1900 levy the sum of $175,867.49 upon corporations and public utility concerns in Union county. The total for the state is $2,288,925.91.

Miss Rhoda Willis, daughter of Roy Willis, formerly of Carlton avenue, will leave tomorrow for Buffalo, N. Y., where she will spend the winter with relatives. She will be accompanied by her father, and the latter will continue on from Buffalo to Chicago for a two weeks' business trip. Since the death of her mother, several weeks ago, Miss Willis has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Brisbane, of Martine avenue.

William Lawrence, of 107 West Seventh street, who underwent the amputation of a leg at Muhlenberg Hospital, following an accident at the North avenue station, several weeks ago, continues to improve steadily despite the fact that his age of 83 years was at first considered a serious drawback. It is possible that he may be able to leave the hospital in about two weeks.

Sergeant Arthur Robinson, who is stationed at Camp Dix, was at the home of his father, Samuel Robinson, of West Third street, over the past week-end. He expresses the belief that he will not be mustered out before next spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Canfield and daughter, Frederica, of Church street, have gone to Ormond Beach, Fla., to remain until May.

F. Roland Williams, of 811 West Fourth street, who entered the officers' training school at Camp Lee, Va., just previous to the signing of the armistice, returned home this week. He is now back at his desk in New York as editor of "Hardware," a trade publication.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Anna Hilda Quern, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Quern, of West Front street, to Walter E. Ocmacht, of Ardmore, Ill., who is stationed at Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland.

James Coleman, of the Elks' Club, left Wednesday for Washington, D. C., to spend Thanksgiving at the home of his mother. He will return to Plainfield, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett A. Gowdy, of Linden avenue, the borough, are the parents of a baby boy who arrived at their home a few days ago. The little fellow has been named George Ball Gowdy, in honor of his mother's brother, Private George Ball, who was killed in action in France last month.

Hugh Fynn, of 645 East Second street, proprietor of the Van Dyk store on East Front street, has recovered after an attack of influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Leek, of Westervelt avenue, have received word that their son, Howard Leek, who is stationed at Camp Knox, Ky., as a member of the Sixty-eighth Artillery Radio Corps, has been promoted to the rank of corporal.

Leo Wilson, a member of the Merchant Marine, who has been on an extended leave of absence from the Merchant Marine barracks at Boston, will return to duty in New York on Monday. New York will hereafter be his station as he has been given a transfer from Boston.

Private James J. McNamee, of this city, who has been serving in the casualty department office at Washington for several months, is visiting in town today. Mrs. McNamee came up from Washington with him and is now with relatives at Elizabeth. She recently recovered after a severe attack of pneumonia. While in Washington, Mr. McNamee, who was formerly editor of the Record, is serving under Lieutenant Leslie R. Fort, the latter having a large part to do in receiving General Pershing's casualty reports and relaying messages to families of soldiers.

Former Judge and Mrs. William Newcorn have decided to give up their home at 920 West Front street, and board during the coming winter, at least. Their residence has been leased by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bradt, now living at Front street and Geraud avenue, who will take possession December 1.

Miss Amy E. Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes, of Mercer avenue, the borough, was married Sunday afternoon to Elmer D. Conover, son of Mrs. Mary Conover, of 215 Netherwood avenue. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, and was performed by Rev. John Y. Broek. Miss Madeline Hughes and James Pollison were the attendants. The young couple have taken up their residence at 60 Summit avenue, the borough. Mr. Conover is employed at the Spicer plant.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brokaw Smith, formerly of this city, are the parents of an eight-pound baby girl, born to them at their home in New York, Monday morning. The "little lady" has been named Olive Willet Smith. Mrs. Smith was formerly Miss Olive Willett, of daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Willett, of Willetts' Landing, Canada. The proud father is the son of Captain and Mrs. William C. Smith, of Fairview avenue, the borough.

Mrs. John Winzenried, of Lee place, has received word that her cousin, Daniel Graham, of Brooklyn, had been killed in action in France last month. He was attached to the 105th Light Artillery.

Fred J. Dixon, of West Fourth street, returned a few days ago after an extended business trip to Albany, Newburgh, Poughkeepsie and other Hudson River towns.

Miss Catherine Connolly, 666 West Fourth street, who was a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for four weeks, undergoing treatment for pneumonia, was discharged from the institution Sunday. She is still very weak but her complete recovery is assured.

Walter Marder, of Belvidere avenue, has returned home from Chicago, having gone to that city with the body of his father, John Marder, who died at his home in Palisades, Rockland county, N. Y., last Friday. The funeral was held at Palisades, Sunday, and burial was in Rosehill cemetery, Chicago. Beside his son, Walter, Mr. Marder leaves a widow, two other sons and two daughters.

Samuel R. Taverner, of 514 Madison avenue, who has been critically ill with pneumonia for the past two weeks, was reported today as being considerably improved. Mr. Taverner's wife died from the disease on November 19.

War Workers Begin Leaving Jobs at Capital

Evacuation of Washington has started. The big guns and the little ones which filled up that city since the outbreak of the war are beginning to cut loose for their home towns to get on a peace basis once again.

Like everything else that marks the shifting from war to peace, the evacuation of Washington by the army of war workers, male and female, will be a gradual process. The main thing and indeed, the most cheerful thing for all hands, is that it has set in. Congestion will not get any worse and the intolerably crowded and hectic conditions under which the capital worked, played, ate and slept will soon ease off.

The war had the effect of transforming Washington from a quiet, restful, clean and spacious, if expensive community, into a howling, clashing and unhappy war boom town, which did not help anybody much except the boarding house magnates and the hotel and other profiteers. Some of the conditions under which the normal population and the war workers worked were a crying disgrace and a commentary on the impotence of the government. The story is too long to go into details, and besides, there is enough to worry about without digging into the past.

The armistice brought an end to hostilities just at a time when government activities for housing relief were bearing fruit. Three distinct housing projects for war workers were set under motion last summer, after aggravating delays. One of them will be ready for use in a week or two; the second one is farther behind, while the third was abandoned after the foundations only had been started.

The one soon to be occupied is a series of three-story, fire-brick and stucco dormitories and central community house on what was to have been and what eventually will be the plaza stretching from Union station southward to the capitol grounds. This group will have accommodations for 2,000 workers who will be housed and fed by the government housing bureau for $45 per month. The experiment will be novel and worth watching.

The utilization of these dormitories, along with the exodus of the war workers at an increasing rate each week, will bring relief that will be felt by the entire community before the year is out. Another factor operating for an easing of conditions is the releasing of apartment dwellings and private houses that had been taken over by the War Department and other governmental activities for war work. Three or four such buildings have already been turned back to their owners for normal use.

All the estimates for appropriations for clerk hire and the like which are now before committees of the House are being subjected to searching examination. Congress is determined upon retrenchment in clerk hire, as in other matters. Secretary of War Baker has also promulgated an order against the hiring of any new clerical help in the War Department, which is the biggest user of labor in Washington. War bureaus, such as the adjustment general's office, which has had its work vastly increased by the problem of demobilization, will take over employes of other bureaus which are losing their usefulness now the war is ended.

The problem of easing off the war workers is really two-sided. There is, on the one hand, the eagerness to eliminate waste and to cut down the pay roll, and, on the other hand, the necessity of guarding against a wholesale exodus of clerks and stenographers who want to exchange uncertainty as to their jobs for certainty. Many of the war workers have become alarmed as to rumors about wholesale discharges in the civilian personnel, and it has been necessary for the Civil Service Commission to issue assurances that no hasty or inhuman policy would be pursued in reducing the war forces.

Even withp eace assured at this date it is impossible for the government to make reductions on a wholesale and indiscriminate scale. Such reductions as will be necessary must necessarily be gradual and attuned to the changing needs of the war branches. And the process of demobilizing the civilian army will be by voluntary separations rather than discharges.

A BUSINESS SUGGESTION FROM A BUSINESS MAN.

If Vincent W. Nash's letter, as recently published in the Record, did nothing else it at least opened the eyes of our citizens to the real condition of affairs in the local fire department. His frank criticism of lack of men and suggestions as to what could be done to secure others to take the places of those resigning because of long hours and poor pay met with approval from hundreds of people but that seems to be about as far as it has gone. If the councilmanic fire board has decided to take the hint and do something before it is late, the public has been given no intimation.

Primarily, the reason why the department has only twelve men on duty at times when it should have thirty or more, is the insufficient pay. In this city, the salary scale is one of the lowest in the State. The second reason for the unpopularity of the job is the continuous duty, the men serving even during the hours when they go home for a meal in addition to being at the various houses at night. Elizabeth, Newark, Hoboken, Passaic and many other places have the two-platoon system. Plainfield is the only city that has voted down the two-platoon in recent years and it is the only city that has not advanced the pay of its employes sufficiently to meet the abnormal cost of living.

Members of the Council themselves have admitted that the firemen and policemen should have more money and that the firemen should have two shifts but they do nothing to back up their belief. The main argument advanced by these same officials is that there is no money at hand to better conditions and too much objection to higher taxes that would result if pay increases were granted. Neither argument holds water when put to the test.

Plainfield is no different than any other city. What the controlling body of officials want they invariably manage to get. There were many objectors to the building of the City Hall and the installation of the joint sewer system but they had to take both and pay their share of the cost. Scores of property owners have not taken kindly to certain street improvements but the work was done and those who objected are paying the same as those who favored. The same idea applies to the pay increases for the police and firemen and it is safe to say that there are mighty few taxpayers who would object to a half way decent betterment of salaries.

Charles H. Hand, who has probably done as much as any other man to build up Plainfield, and who even today is one of its biggest property owners, declares that there are several ways in which the Council could save money and apply it to increases for the police and firemen. Mr. Hand is a business man from A to Z. There are some who scoff and even snicker at his suggestion, but if Mr. Hand didn't know a thing or two he wouldn't be the owner of that long three-story building at Watchung avenue and Second street or the individual who turned the Rink Building into a financial gain after its erector had given it up as a hopeless failure. Furthermore, if Mr. Hand couldn't see things from a business point of view, he would never have built 450 houses in Plainfield from the time that he left off working for a day's pay and rose to the importance of the city's largest taxpayer.

Mr. Hand declares that if the city engaged a competent man to act as purchaser of supplies and supervise the city building, it would more than make up his pay and save the dollars that certain officials now say are not available for the police or fire departments. This man, for instance, could buy all the city's coal at wholesale and get splendid results. He could look after all repairs on the schools, fire city lots now used as storage grounds into taxable houses, city hall and other property. He could turn real estate and bring about other changes that mean money saved for the taxpayers.

The man who occupied such a position as this would, of course, have to be under bond to insure his faithful performance of duty. If it was made five times as much as his salary it is dollars to doughnuts there would be no slip-up. Futhermore, if he did not prove in the first year that he was worthy of his hire he could offer no objection to his removal in favor of someone else. The suggestion of Mr. Hand might at least be acted upon and should it prove successful, as it cannot help but do, the city as a whole, will benefit, whether or not the money saved goes to the deserving municipal employes.

"THE MESSAGE OF THE LISTS."

Late in 1914 when we here in Plainfield, thousands of miles away from the scene of action, read of Verdun, Argonne, Grand Pre, St. Mihiel, Sedan, Metz, Pons, the Meuse, the Marne and all the other names of France now familiar the world over, how many of us entertained a thought that our own boys would be fighting the big fight in or about those places? Who for a moment imagines that Dan Runkle would be a captain, leading his command against a Hun force; that Major Cox would be turning the tide of Prussian autocracy; that "Jack" Caulfield would be a lieutenant in the greatest army Europe ever saw and hundreds of our town boys would be demonstrating in a foreign land what America could do when thoroughly aroused?

Practically none of us thought for one moment that such things would be and yet they have occurred. More than that, Plainfield's own noble sons, the flower of her youth, have been dying and bleeding for France and Liberty. It was a tremendous step for the boys of this peaceful community to take but they took it in common with every other American city or hamlet and the result has been achieved, freeing all Europe from the terrible calamity that ran amuck for more than four years.

Now comes the hardest part of all—the casualty lists. Before our own gallant lads entered the struggle, the resume of killed and wounded elicited from us hardly more than a formal expression of sympathy unless it happened to be that kin folks were in France or England's armies. Now it is a different thing. The names staring up at us from the newspapers are those of our own families, our closest associates and those whom we were accustomed to see every day. These names, now appearing with more frequent regularity, have placed us in the final stage of the conflict that was an old story with allied countries before this nation made it a strictly personal matter.

The name of the loved one listed among the killed or wounded brings grief and sorrowing but Plainfield mothers and fathers are no different than those of any other community. They regret that their sons have had to give up their lives before they lived them but they realize that the casualty lists bring them a message. It is a glorious message and Collier's tells of it in convincing words under the caption of the "Message of the Lists." Read it all you who read of war in 1914 and commented that the European countries were engaged "in another argument:"

"Most of us now turn first of all to the daily roll of sorrow and of honor which every paper in our land is proud to carry. You can see elderly men hanging around the front yard an hour ahead of breakfast time waiting for the newsboy. They will not budge from the gate until those fateful names have all been scanned. Every list is a brief review of our United States from Montesano, Wash., to Adairsville, Ga., and of all names from Adams to Zimmedie. The dullest can feel that what was only a newspaper has now become a herald of eternal things. A casualty list is not news, but the final proof of the heroism of our country's sons. Nor, in spite of grief, does it relate only to the past. Those who have fallen fell fighting for a better future, and thus, departing, leave it to us to make or mar that coming world for which they cared so much."

True, it is that those who have sons and loved ones in the war may look first as they scan the roll of dead, wounded or missing, for a familiar name or for familiar names. All the while, however, they look upon the list entire with affection and pride.

Those who study them are conscious of the fact that the men who bear the names contained in the lenghtening lists are closely related to them. Those who fight and those who wait at home all have their hearts in the same great and sacred cause. A new relationship, because of the contact of heart with heart, has been established between them.

The casualty lists have, indeed, become the "herald of eternal things." It is the clear hall-mark of the intrinsic spirit of devotion and of heroism of this generation of Americans.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When the great middle class had eggs for breakfast?

When we were taken to see a performance of "Pinafore" and afterward tried hard to sing the songs that "Dick" Deadeye sang?

When the boys waited at No. 2 Engine House for the "eel pot" to let out and when it did, went across the street to offer their services as escorts for the young ladies?

When the "Electric Liver Pad" man set up his wagon alongside Laing's Hotel and sold his famous invention like hot cakes until somebody discovered the great cure-all contained nothing but saw dust seasoned with vinegar?

When the youngsters observed Thanksgiving as "Raga-muffiin's day" and went about the city, garbed in grotesque costume, asking for pennies, that were generally throw to them red hot off a fire shovel?

When Professor Wyman, "The World's Greatest Magician," drew capacity crowds to Laing's Hall, not so much because of his ability as a prestidigitateur but for the reason that he gave away barrels of flour, tons of coal and valuable lots near Cape May and when "Tommie" Timbo spent good carfare to look over the "real estate" he had won found a man fishing on it?

TURKEY BONES AND PIE CRUMBS.

Maybe Mr. Hoover would be angry if he knew but just the same every time we thought of that first shipload coming back we just naturally had to smile and ask for more.

Among those who gave sincere thanks yesterday were some of the limited service men. There is no longer any need of their wearing glasses.

There is one West End man we know who said he felt sure his family was really thankful, but speaking personally he felt more like giving a cus every time he thought how much that measily little turkey was going to set him back. If it hadn't been for the folks insisting that the day could not be observed properly without a well-cooked gobbler gracing the centre of the table, he might have cleared the mortgage off the house before the first of the year.

It was a mighty good thing that mother put essence of joy in the mince pie because next year there may be no essence of joy left.

And, by jingoes, it's time to remind you only 213 days before July 1, 1919. Do your shopping early.

Everybody's trying to talk at once in Germany these days. Which shows what happens when you remove the gag from a gagged people. But a new order will result and Pershing's troops will help a lot in the reorganization.

Probably soon, maybe, "An Atlantic Port" and "Somewhere in France" may go to the museum of phrases formerly great.

Now that flour substitutes and adulterations in the making of bread have been discontinued, we trust we may say without offense that the Front street man who told us months ago that the stuff we mixed with the flour improved the bread was an awful liar.

We have a boy in France. We don't know his name. We don't know whether he is white, red or black. But he's going to get a carton full of truck and a word of encouragement and greeting when Christmas comes if the Red Cross does its part and the ship doesn't sink.

The dispatches say the Hohenzollerns in Holland are "Free to come and go." But you observe they are not coming anywhere or going very far, don't you?

Our 'steemed neighbor is petulantly asking what Plainfield is going to do about the erection of a monument for the city's brave sons who have given up their lives "over there." The grizzled veterans of the Civil War have been asking the same thing for fifty years and are still awaiting their answer. Maybe 'steemed neighbor could stir up somehting beside moral support of the plan by chucking a couple of hundred bucks in the hat for a starter.

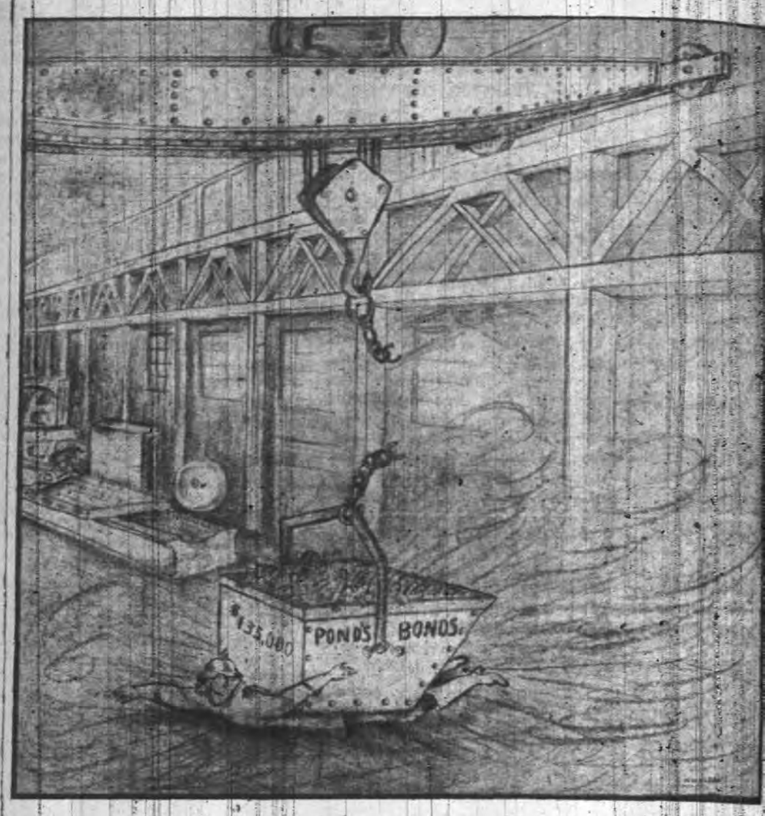
It seems to us as if Uncle Sam will treat us rough to make us meet our victory bond quota. Maybe he will hold each community's soldiers until the money is up.

County Fuel Commissioner John K. English gives notice that from now on, the store windows may be lighted up. The $36,000 deal for the Darling farm, however, is to remain in the dark indefinitely.

PERSONAL NOITE.

Mr. I Am Nott, of Fire Headquarters, is convalescent after a severe attack of influenza and general cussedness. For that reason Mr. A La France, of Netherwood, officiated at the annual hose test last week. It was said that morning that after Mr. Nott had secured a permanent vacation of six months, twice a year, from now on, he might be in condition to return at least enough work to pay for his keep.

Cartoon from Pen of Clarence Walden Big Hit of Pond's New Shop Publication



GLAD WE HELPED!!

By C. H. WALDEN, of Mr. Lynn's Office.

In the first issue of "Feeds and Speeds," the new shop publication being put out by the employes of the Pond Tool Company, there are many interesting features but none of them have made a bigger hit than the above cartoon. It is from the pen of Clarence Walden, of West Third street, a member of the painting department, who has demonstrated on many occasions that he possesses much talent for cartoon and caricature work. He has been warmly commended for this latest effort as it not only gave a superior tone to the initial number of the paper but showed in a convincing way how the Pond men gave liberally of their earnings to help down the Kaiser.

"Feeds and Speeds" is being edited by Emmett O'Brien, a valued member of the big West End plant's office staff. The general make-up of the paper, the introduction of numerous features not seen in other shop journals and the excellence of all its articles shows that Mr. O'Brien is the right man for the all-important position.

Works Manager Cleaver prepared the salutatory editorial and in it urged the men of the plant to make "Feeds and Speeds" their paper, as individual effort meant everything in making it successful.

The employes of every department has been responding to his request and the entire shop is looking forward to some great effusions in the second number ready for distribution about December 15.

ARTILLERY BAND FEATURE OF RED CROSS CONCERT.

The 15th Coast Artillery Band, under the leadership of Rocca Resta, the celebrated young Italian director, will be the feature of the concert to be held at the High School, Saturday night, December 7, for the benefit of the local Red Cross. Aurelia Giorgni, a young pianist, rated in the class with the greatest artists, will be the soloist of the evening.

Tickets for the concert may be had at Red Cross headquarters or at Miller's, Randolph's, Hall's or Walsh's pharmacies.

Colonia Hospital Patients Now Have a Newspaper All Their Own

Government Hospital No. 3, at Colonia, just south of Plainfield, is such a big institution that the 2,500 officers, nurses, non-commissioned men attendants and patients have difficulty in keeping in touch with each other. As a result, Lieutenant-Colonel A. P. Upshur, the commanding officer, sanctioned the publication of a newspaper devoted entirely to the interests of the hospital and its people and the initial number was distributed yesterday. The title, "Over Here," was selected from hundreds of suggestions. The columns are filled with live news of a military nature, articles by the superior officers, prose and poetry efforts from literary inclined attendants and patients and snappy editorials. There are also many columns of advertisements for business houses in Rahway, Perth Amboy, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Plainfield and Newark.

Private William E. Conway, a former Sioux City, Iowa, newspaperman, who was connected with the Associated Press headquarters in Washington at the time of his enlistment, is the editor-in-chief. The general tone of "Over Here's" get-up indicates that he knows his business. He has a supporting staff of editors and reporters who are determined to make the paper the peer of all military camp, cantonment or hospital publication. The composition and press work is being done in the plant of the Record.

Yesterday's issue contained a splendid cut of Lieutenant-Colonel Upshur and the following salutatory article from his pen, under the caption, "Each to his own task, diligently, and speed the return of all to civil life:"

LT.-COL. A. P. UPSHUR

"With the future of humanity hanging in the balance, our country has just participated in the greatest struggle which the world has ever seen; the result of this struggle, for which we are largely responsible, insures for us and our children a life of honor, peace, and happiness, and an opportunity to pursue unmolested our varied occupations.

"During the past two years more than four million young men from every section of this great land, have given up their homes, their families, and their friends, and garbed in the uniform of their country have served, and served well, in every place to which it has been necessary to send them. Some have been 'OVER THERE,' and after suffering personal discomforts too numerous and varied to mention, and finally passing through their baptism of fire,—have returned to us here, many of them with wounds and injuries which will to the end of their lives, be a reminder to themselves and their loved ones of the gallant part they have played. Others have not been offered this opportunity, but giving their all nevertheless, have obeyed the call of duty.

"Today, 'OVER HERE,' we find them both, and both have the same object in view,—namely, to have restored as completely and quickly as possible the physical condition of those who have come back to us; at the same time they must be fitted for the task of providing for themselves and their families, and for this reason our government has provided facilities which, while giving our wounded soldiers valuable vocational training, also is a decided factor in the completeness and rapidity of their convalescence.

"Let all of us then, OVER HERE,—officers, nurses, aides, enlisted men, and patients,—putting aside everything else, work with only this end in view. Let nothing hinder or halt us in the work which is ahead; the war is over but a great task is still before us,—the task of reconstruction. Let therefore all put their shoulders to the wheel, and apply themselves diligently, each to his own task. If this is done thoroughly, how much more speedily will pass the time, until each one of us returns to his allotted place in civil life."

A. P. UPSHUR.

Early Return Home Hope of Secretary

Baker Issues Letter of Appreciation and Assures Men of "Sympathy and Activity"

Demobilization—the great subject of the day—is discussed in a letter written by the Secretary of War and forwarded by the Adjutant General of the Army. Officers and men are assured that they may "rely upon the sympathy and activity of the Department in their early return home." Those who hoped for an immediate discharge are liable to disappointment, however, for a large force must be kept in the service until the military needs are determined and some time must be devoted to the restoration of normal business conditions.

The letter follows:

"General Orders No. 106 issued November 14th, reads: The signing of the military armistice enables us to suspend the intensive military preparation in which the country was engaged. It does not, however, signify the formal end of the war and will, therefore, be necessary for us to keep under arms a substantial army until we are certain just what the military needs of the country will be. The men in service in the United States will be demobilized as rapidly as is consistent with the needs of the Government and the War Department is working with the other agencies of the Government toward a rapid re-establishment of normal business conditions and the restoration of the soldiers to their homes and occupations. In the meantime, I desire to express to the officers and soldiers under arms in the United States the appreciation of the Department for their patriotic zeal and service. That they were not called upon to go abroad and not permitted to participate in the historic struggle in France leaves them not the less a part of the great army of our nation and entitled to the thanks of the nation for their readiness to serve. All officers and men can rely upon the sympathy and activity of the Department in their early return home. Both officers and men will realize that it is their duty to continue with the training and work, and to maintain in the highest degree the discipline and soldierly bearing which is the great glory of the Army, of which they are a part."

Lieut. Freeman Relates Some of His Experiences

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Freeman, of South and Woodland avenues, who have three sons in the service, are in receipt of a highly interesting and unusually descriptive letter from their son, Lieutenant Edgar Freeman, attached to the 91st Division's Artillery Corps. This division was engaged in the heaviest of the recent fighting and was only recentely located at Dunquerque, after having been officially "lost" for several weeks.

The two other Freeman boys, Howard and Stewart, are both captains, the former in the Marine Corps and the latter in the artillery. Both are in this country at the present time. Edgar has been abroad since August, 1917, and has had a wonderful experience, part of which he tells in the following letter:

Dear Ones:

Once again living in mud and wet and discomfort, but happy in spite of it all by reason of the consistent rumors of the Boche break-down and the incidental hope of being home within a year or so.

My bedding roll finally arrived the day after I wrote you in Paris. I left the next day travelling east. Reached my intermediate destination at 5 p. m., reported to the regulation officer for instruction as to how to reach the 59th Brigade, and was told by him that a troop train was leaving at 5:30 which would take me fairly near my unit. So I rushed round to get my baggage transferred and hurried over to the train. But it was a purely military train—in military matters it never pays to hurry. The train eventually left at 10:00 or so, and in the interim I met some friends and drank some coffee in a British cantine for French soldiers. Here we chatted with the Canadian girls who were pouring and listened to a poilu from the opera comique sing impromptu songs to his comrades. But when the place closed at 7:00, I was obliged to sit round in the cold on piles of baggage, an incident which reminded me strongly of my first trip to Saumur last fall, except that then it was generally cotton bales that we slept on. A long night followed. Six of us were lucky to get a first class compartment but it was very cold and we never knew when we had arrived at our various stations, so we didn't sleep much. I finally arrived at 10:00 a. m., and then discovered I must wait till p. m. for a ration truck which would take me within five kilometers of where I should go. So I managed a shave and wash-up in a French barrack and then promoted myself some lunch at an officers' mess. Some time later I got my bedding roll and self into a truck and it dumped me and my roll out at a big ration dump. Here I was fortunate enough to get another thuck going still nearer my destination and on we went. From there I wandered around looking for some artillery and after a time found the horse line of the 123d regiment. Here I negotiated a meager supper, —no more Paris or even Saumur meals,—and was directed to brigadier headquarters, my roll being left at a 2m station. Duly reported to the General and was assigned to the 123 Regiment. It is Illinois Natural Guard, not Florida, and seems to be (a pretty fine outfit. A good many of my Saumur friends are here and I should make out O. K. They were in position about nine kilometers and due to the recent pushes in this section the Boches were nearly out of range of the 155s. They fired a bit that night but the next night the Boches were officially out of range. So we knew we would have to move. The next day I visited the batteries and saw several friends and in the p. m. went on a long tour of the recently recaptured territory. And I wish to state that it was an absorbing trip. The officers I was with visited many of the places which had been their targets a few days before and could see at first hand how effective their fire had been. And it had been terribly effective. It seems almost fiendish to say so but the sight of dead Boches and ruined Boche material was a most welcome one and I regret to add that there were some of our boys of whom one could say, "After life's fitful fever he sleeps well." The Boches were fairly subdued that afternoon, though occasionally a shell burst near and once we heard machine gun bullets singing overhead and promptly ducked. Some wandered home in the twilight, getting lost frequently, for it is a country of many rolling hills and little woods. There is a discouraging similarity between the hills.

Tired and hungry were we when we arrived and the cheering news greeted us that we were to leave that night for a 25 march to the rear. What a prospect for many men, for the horse situation was so acute that some of us would have to walk. I have been on road marches before but $ don't think I ever had such a thoroughly uncomfortable time in my life. We were all packed up ready to go at 8:00, but it was a brigade movement, so we didn't pull out till 11:00 or so. And I never appreciated before what a herculanean task it is to move heavy guns about. It's hard enough with 75s,

Man Power Shortage Reduces Hiring of Labor To A Science In Big Industrial Plants

When America first entered the war one of its most perplexing problems was the proper handling of the labor situation. It became a close study by Government officials and to a marked degree was successfully worked out. Now that peace has come there is still a great deal to be done in establishing proper relations between employer and employe if the work of reconstruction is to be accomplished without causing industrial unrest. The system, as arranged by the War Industries Board, it is believed, will be a tremendous factor in attaining the desired result.

Though employment management of one sort or another has existed in this country for ten years or more, and had in some instances, like the Ford factories, been worked to a stage of comparative perfection, nevertheless, the day on which America aligned herself with the nations at war against Germany found most of the industries in this country handling the problem in an unscientific manner. It soon became evident that "speeding up production" could not be affected if this state of affairs continued.

With the declaration of war, the Government began preparation for a great industrial offensive. Every condition which impeded or delayed war production had to be eliminated. The work of the Department of Labor was greatly expanded; the War Industries Board and the War Labor Policies Board, the United States Employment Service were created. On the heels of these, came the Employment Management Division, made a section of the War Industries Board.

It is the duty of this section to convince the big employers of the country that the co-operation and efficiency essential to maximum production can be achieved only when the proper understandings between themselves and their employes have been established, and that this can be done only through the medium of a man expressly trained for the purpose—a man who is acquainted with the needs of both workmen and administrators. Such a man is the point of contact between the office and the factory. He is the employment manager.

Under the new dispensation, the employment manager is given a place on the executive staff, and it is his first duty to organize a department as thorough and efficient as the sales department or the accounting department. Industries are still demanding workmen who are competent, intelligent, in sound health and who, with proper treatment, will form a permanent and contented force. To get and hold such a force is the duty of the employment manager.

By the creation of the employment department, the work of the foreman is changed. His duties are no longer to hire and to fire. He now has liberty to become an expert in shop process. At the same time the foreman loses his ancient privilege to sell jobs, to protect pets and to prosecute his enemies.

In 1915, if Thomas Clancy found himself out of a job, his usual procedure was to present himself at the gate of a factory and make inquiry of the gatekeeper. Unless the factory happened to be one of the then rare concerns with an employment department, the gatekeeper would reply:

"I dunno if they need hands or not. You'd better ask the foreman—that's him over there with the blue jumper."

"Well," says the foreman, looking up from a bundle of blueprints, "what can I do for you?"

"I'm hunting a job."

"What can you do?"

"Most anything."

"Do you belong to a union?"

"Yes."

"Can you turn a lathe?"

"I guess so."

At this juncture the foreman might have been called to answer a question by the general superintendent. As he turned he would set Thomas to work with a wave of the hand, or dismiss him with a similar wave.

The same Thomas Clancy, in 1918—should he again be in need of a job—presents himself, with a ticket from the employment service, in the anteroom of the employment department. He is given a card to fill out, whereon he states his age, his record and his capabilities. He is then called to the office of the manager for an interview.

"The foreman of Shop No. 3," says the employment manager, glancing over his indexes, "tells me he has need of a toolmaker who can read from blueprint specifications. Can you fill that job?"

Thomas either can or cannot. In the latter event a job suited to his skill and experience is found for him, or he is sent back to the Employment Service as "not available."

Slow at first to realize the need for expert employment management, the employers of this country are now thoroughly alive to it. Enough specialists in this line cannot be found to fill the demands. As long as employment management was a theory rather than a fact, it attracted only a few mentable to visualize its possibilities. To relieve the situation, the Government last April decided to inaugurate a course in employment at various schools and colleges throughout the country. The experiment was first tried out at the University of Rochester, where adjacent industrial conditions seemed to present most favorable material for study. From the outset the course was so successful that similar courses were immediately instituted at Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Later on they were extended to the New York Bureau of Municipal Research, the University of California and the University of Washington.

The employment management course lasts for six weeks, and the classes are limited to twenty-five members. All students must be selected or "sponsored" by employers and must be men thoroughly acquainted with shop conditions. The student should be familiar with factory tools, machinery, equipment and processes. He should know the meaning of factory discipline, and the attitude of the workman toward his job, his boss, his fellow-worker, and life in general. Men with college training are preferred—though this is not essential.

The students are housed together in a single dormitory or dwelling, and the greater part of their conversation is expected to be a discussion of employment problems. Class work and lectures occupy two-thirds of their day. They are thoroughly drilled in the technique of labor market analyses, selection of employes, discharging, paying off, labor contracts, employes' committees, shop discipline and shop psychology. The course also provides instruction in sanitation, local transportation, housing, recreation, pensions, beneficial societies and other influences that affect the morale of the workingman.

A difficulty has been found in securing instructors for the classes. The Employment Management Section has made a canvass of all factories throughout the United States where labor problems have been solved with best results. In some cases the employment managers of these plants have offered all or part of their time as instructors, and in all cases they have submitted suggestions and data for laboratory work by students.

Both organized labor and capital now manifest friendliness for the employment management scheme. Labor approves it because it affords the worker a better environment, better pay, and, if he is competent, a permanent job. Capital now favors it because it has been proved to insure a greater degree of efficiency, contentment and loyalty, and, in the long run, to be less expensive than the old, haphazard system. In some quarters fear has been felt that it may weaken trade unions; but most labor men are now of the belief that organization of unions by industries instead of by trades is inevitable anyway.

It is likely that within a few years employment management will take on the status of a profession of a grade with engineering, medicine and law. Already, unwritten rules of "professional etiquette" have been formulated among managers, and the "pride of profession" is beginning to be felt by them. Captain Boyd Fisher, director of the Employment Management Section, says that it is an exceptional opportunity for young men of proper qualifications.

"To the youth just out of college," says Captain Fisher, "who has an interest in labor problems and who feels he would make a successful employment manager, my advice is to get a job at the nearest factory and to stay there until he is able to understand and to sympathize with the men with whom he has been working. If he has learned the job of handling men without harshness and without weakness, only a little more is needed to complete his education as an employment manager."

World Market Opening Up For Jersey Farmers

Opportunities which will be presented to the farmer through the new United States merchant marine, to send American farm products direct to all parts of the world are outlined in the weekly market news service of the State Department of Agriculture.

"New Jersey farmers are bound to realize some of these benefits, and far-sighted growers will give this subject serious thought," the bulletin read. "Apples, it appears, will be wanted in South America and Europe. Pure bred dairy animals will find ready sale in Africa. Farmers everywhere should think less in terms of next town trade and more in terms of world trade," Chairman Edward B. Hurley, of the shipping board says.

Arrangements have been made by the market bureau with most of the large manufacturers of the East so that New Jersey farmers through co-operation can purchase fertilizers in car lots at basic prices.

At a recent field meeting of the State Potato Association interesting possibilities were discussed for the future of Jersey grown seed. Small, half-grown seed stock has been tried out successfully for a number of years by some growers, but has not become generally popular. With a standard scheme for insuring clean seed of pure type it was predicted that most of $500,000 which is now spent annually for seed potatoes outside the State could be kept at home.

The New Jersey Highways Transport Committee, a branch of the Council of National Defense, has been asked to advise New Jersey farmers to provide themselves with motor trucks as far as possible. Former Director General McAdoo, of the railroad corporation, has stated that the railroad corporation must eliminate more of the short hauls, which will affect New Jersey as much as any State. Thousands of one ton and ton and a half trucks are now in use on farms of this State.

Warns Influenza Victims to Avoid Any Over-exertion

Asserting that probably 500,000 persons in New Jersey have been affected by influenza in the last two months, Captain Walter Treadway, of the United States Public Health Service, this week, issued warning to convalescents, urging against all excesses, either in work or pleasure, which would tend to weaken the system.

Captain Treadway, who has been co-operating with the State Board of Health in the fight against influenza, declares that at no time has the co-operation of the people of New Jersey been needed more than at present. He points out that the persons affected by influenza have been left with more or less reduced vitality.

"This is," continued Captain Treadway, "equivalent to a great retreat, with tremendous loss of materials an dvantage ground. Now is the time for a strong offensive. This epidemic has demonstrated the need of stronger health organizations. Many scattered forces have been rallied, and much excellent work has been done, but the need of wise leadership to mobilize these forces into an effective unit is keenly felt."

In order to work out a health program and assist the local officials, the United States Public Health Service has already placed five men in communities where the epidemic has been severe. A survey of the local situation will be made as a basis for recommendations. The necessity for larger health budgets will be emphasized, as most of these are considered inadequately supported to carry out an efficient health program.

The following advice was given by Captain Treadway for the benefit of those who have been afflicted with influenza:

"With the closing order abolished and a return to normal life, there will be a tendency to make up time. Industries that have been working on a twenty-five per cent. basis must increase their output, lessons in schools must be a littlel onger, meetings and pleasure parties that have long been postponed will be more frequent. The tendency will be to overdo the already overtaxed system so that complete recovery will not follow. Tuberculosis will easily get a foothold. Cardiac lesions will be more frequent from overstrain. Infectious and contagious diseases will find suitable soils in weakened membranes.

"While no specific directions can be given to individual convalescent cases, we cannot urge too strongly the conservation of strength by getting the full allotment of sleep, by graduated systematic exercise, by proper ventilation in homes, shops and schools, by careful supervision of diets and the avoidance of all kinds of excesses. It is a part of the patriotic duty of each to get in proper physical health, so that he can be 100 per cent. efficient and do his part in licking the Hun."

Scots Take Liking To Our Jazz Music

A Port In Scotland, Oct. 25 (by mail).—According to K. J. Hollinshead, of Evanston, Ill., secretary in an American Y. M. C. A. naval hut somewhere in Scotland, the canny Highlander is succumbing to the lure of our navy"s jazz bands, and in many a "wee hoose on the heather" the bagpipe stands in the corner unused.

Along with the craze for jazz there has naturally developed a love of the trot and one-step. When Jack comes ashore he wants to dance. But in Scotland he didn't find much satisfaction in watching the lassies doing a hornpipe nor did the bagpipe seem like music to his "jazzened" ears.

At one port where our navy men come ashore in great numbers the boys couldn't find a dance hall of any sort. They went to Mr. Hollinshead of the Y. M. C. A. and asked his help. After scouring the town, he found the only available room was the upstairs of a second-hand shop. With the aid of a working party from the ship, he was able to have the junk removed after four hours' labor and the place was converted into a very usable ballroom. Mr. Hollinshead then introduced the boys to a number of the Scotch girls of the town, the ship's jazz band played American rags, and soon the lassies were swinging into steps and the first of a series of many dances was inaugurated.

Servant Stuck Candle In Sand, She Thought, But It Was Gun Powder

A story is told of a German merchant, who with his household and the guests who had assembled for the wedding of his daughter were placed in a situation even more perilous than that of Damocles with the naked sword suspended over his head, though no one but the merchant knew of the danger at the time. A point of difference that may be noted is that the agency of death, instead of being poised overhead, was hidden from sight under foot and the margin between life and death was even more slender and fragile than a hair. The story is told in The Pathfinder.

It was some sixty years ago. The hour set for the wedding was near at hand. The merchant, busy looking after important details and welcoming friends of the family, saw a strange servant, employed specially for the occasion, going into the cellar carrying in her hand a lighted candle without any holder. Ordinarily he would have rebuked such carelessness, but as she was not a regular servant and he did not want to cause confusion he said nothing.

A short time later he noted the servant coming up. She carried an armload of bottles but no candle. Bethinking him then that only on the preceding day several barrels of gunpowder had been stored in the cellar and that one of them which had been opened for a customer stood uncovered, he rushed up to the maid, a terrible fear gripping him and making him unsteady in his gait and his speech.

"What did you do with that candle?" he demanded.

"I had so many things in my hands I couldn't bring it up," the girl replied.

"Yes, yes," said the merchant, his eyes staring wildly, "but where did you put it?"

"Why, I stuck it up in that black sand in the barrel."

The master of the house gasped, turned and made his way to the cellar as well and as rapidly as his shaking legs and palpitating heart would allow. There he found the tallow candle standing upright in the open barrel of powder where the careless maid had stuck it, burning away just under the room where the guests, all unconscious of danger and talking and laughing merrily, were assembled.

A charred bit of wick stood curled over in the flame and he realized with a shudder that it might fall and ignite the powder any instant. His first impulse was to rush up and seize the glowing wick before it could fall, but then it occurred to him that the slightest bungling movement, even a rush of air produced by his walking toward the candle, might cause the spark to fall.

For some time he stood as though transfixed, living years of agony in single seconds. His eyes, fixed on the flame in a fascinated gaze like that of a bird motionless and helpless before a hungry snake, detective a slight movement of the burned-out bit of wick and simultaneously he recovered his power to move.

Thrusting out both hands slowly and cautiously toward the candle, he suddenly closed them, snuffing out the flame and squeezing the glowing end of the wick into a black smudge in his fingers. Lifting the candle from its bed in the explosive, he carried it to the opposite end of the cellar and then fell over in a faint.

Government to Aid Disabled Soldiers

Offices are now open in fourteen of the chief cities of the United States to receive the applications of disabled soldiers and sailors of the American army and navy for free education to equip them for the vocation for which they are most fitted. These offices have been established by the Federal Board for Vocations and are in the following cities: Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Dallas, Denver, Chicago, Minneapolis, San Francisco and Seattle.

At each office are stationed men to advise the disabled fighters as to what they are entitled to receive, a medical officer and a man to obtain employment for them when they are ready to go to work. It is promised by the Federal Board that applications will be sympathetically considered with the best interests of the disabled men in mind.

While receiving re-education the government will pay the disabled man $65 a month and in addition will provide him with the funds necessary to pay educational fees. Each man accepted for re-education will be sent to an institution giving special courses in the line he has chosen or he will be given instruction in any industry he wishes to learn.

During his training period allowances will be made by the government to his dependents such as wife, children and mother. These will be fixed in proportion to the amount they received while he was in active service.

When the disabled man has finished his training the Federal Board promises to have employment ready for him. After he has gone to work again his compensation from the War Risk Insurance Bureau begins and will continue unaffected by the amount of his pay.

Bread Bakers Doing A Great Work on The French Front

With the American Army in France, Oct. 24 (by mail).—"Where do you get this fine, white bread?" is the question asked hundreds of times a day of the girls in the Red Cross canteen at Dijon.

Then follows the explanation that the bread is obtained from the army bakery presided over by Capt. Ward, who has made a record famous throughout the army in France.

The plant started in October, 1917, with an output of 18,000 pounds of bread per day. It is now shipping 510,000 pounds of bread every twenty-four hours. And it doesn't tell the Boche anything to say that the army bread factory is located a few miles from Dijon because its output is shipped over a territory of 180 miles.

To get in the supplies of flour, salt, yeast and sugar needed for half a million pounds of bread is no small job, with transportation facilities what they are. Then, the 250 tons of baked bread must be made and shipped on an unfailing schedule or some of Uncle Sam's soldiers will go hungry.

As the summer progresses conditions have become easier at the army bakery in France. All through last winter and spring the bakery site was a sea of mud. French army camions, which are notoriously venturesome, refused to risk themselves in the deep much which surrounded the ovens.

All the fighting of the early months of 1918 was done in the front line trenches. The baker boys fought in trenches half full of water in front of their ovens and boilers.

How they faced the job is evident from the signs they placed on the ends of these bakery trenches. "No Fishing Allowed!" "No Bathing Permitted!" were among signs displayed by men who made a joke of the hardships incident to their part in winning the war. Some were bakers at home; most of them were not, but they all went cheerfully to work in hip boots, baking bread in a morass of mud when that was the job assigned to them.

The force employed at the army bake shop numbered more than 2,000 by the end of August. Every section has a trademark, which is baked in the loaves it turns out. Every shipment is inspected, check and dated, so that in case anything goes wrong the responsibility can be placed exactly.

The bread from Capt. Ward's bakery is sold to and served by the American Red Cros canteen because it feeds from 8,000 to 10,000 soldiers per week on their way to and from eastern sectors. Not all of them stop for bread, but the minimum ration served is coffee with milk and sugar.

Outside the canteen are five ten-gallon containers supended from a framework. Each container has four spigots at the bottom for filling cups. When a troop train of 1,200 or 1,500 men is to be served there are no minutes to be wasted, but you can imagine what has happened sometimes when you see the sign displayed above the rack:

"Fill your cups. Don't drink out of the spigot."

Remarkable Story of Fight for Life in Doomed Submarine

One of the most remarkable experiences of the war is that of a British stoked petty officer who escaped in a miraculous manner from a submarine which sank in home waters from an accidental cause.

Although the petty officer was fighting for his life, he showed a wonderful example of indomitable courage and perseverance, and of refusal to acknowledge defeat. Alone, in almost complete darkness, with the gradually rising water, receiving electric shocks, and towards the end, suffering from the effects of chlorine gas and a badly crushed hand, yet in spite of continual disappointments he worked on for nearly two hours keeping his head to the last, and at the seventh attempt at opening the hatch, succeeding in escaping.

It was about 10:30 a. m. when the mishap to the submarine occurred, and it at once became apparent that she was taking in a great deal of water. The stoker petty officer's first impulse was to close the lower conning tower hatch, but this he could not do, as some men had been ordered up the conning tower, so he went aft to see if all the men were out of the engine room. He met one man coming forward and ordered him to put on a life belt and to "keep his head" till he had a chance of getting up the conning tower hatch. Having satisfied himself there was no one left aft he made his way to the conning tower hatch with the intention of closing it, but before he reached it water was pouring in in a mighty volume, and that meant that his chances of closing the hatch were hopeless.

With the weight of water the boat began to dip forward, and his only hope of escaping drowning was to shut himself in the engine room. But before he closed the doors he shouted again to see if there was anyone who was still alive. Getting no answer he reluctantly closed the doors against the rising water.

At this time the engine room was in complete darkness, save for the glimmer from one pilot lamp. The effect of the salt water on the electric batteries was to generate chlorine gas, and the air was becoming overpowering. The water had short-circuited the electric current so that practically everything he touched gave him a shock. Moreover the room was oppressively hot.

He tried to think of a means of escape and conceived the idea of opening the hatch and floating to the surface, but on trying to open the hatch he found that the tremendous pressure of the water outside prevented his moving it. He had always accepted the theory that the pressure inside a sunken air-locked vessel could be greater than the pressure outside. So to increase the pressure inside he opened a valve and admitted more water. When he considered the pressure was sufficient to blow his out le oponed the hatch, but it instantly closed to again, as he had insufficient pressure. With his shoulder, and exerting all his strength, he lifted the hatch, but again, with the weight of the water, it clammed to, crushing his fingers. With difficulty he released them, and once more opened the valve and admitted water until the engine room was flooded right up to the coaming of the hatch. The air in this confined space was under tremendous pressure, greater than that of the water outside, so he was able to open the hatch and rise rapidly to the surface, where he was picked up by a destroyer.

Wireless 'Phone Is Big Asset to Aviators

One of the most amazing inventions that helped win the war for the allies—the airplane wireless telephone—was achieved by an American. He is Col. C. C. Culver, now stationed in Washington.

John D. Ryan, director of aircraft production, has allowed some details of this marvelous mechanism is become known, but not all, according to information from Washington this week.

The Germans were completely baffled after the aerophone was installed on American planes, which accounted for such a marvelous series of air victories on the American front in the closing days of the war. The American aviators were directed from the ground.

The mechanism is of such a nature that the human voice, when transmitted to or from an airplane, can be plainly heard above the roar of the motor.

The first tests were made at San Diego, Cal., and the wireless telephone was employed in active service on the western battle front for some weeks before the armistice was signed.

The wireless phone can be worked over a distance of several miles, it is understood.

Mrs. Fred Zweifel, of Grant avenue, who was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital last week, following a relapse after an illness with influenza, is reported to be in a serious condition.

Hurley Predicts Vast Merchant Marine for U. S.

A vast American fleet sailing the seven seas, manned by American youths of education and ambition, who shall have as good food and care as they would receive at home, and carrying the Stars and Stripes to every port in the world—this was the vision that Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, disclosed to a group of newspaper representatives at New York recently. He also declared that with the aid of the American fleet now building, and the ships of other nations, even those of Germay and Austria, we may be able to have the last of our soldier boys back from Europe in ten months. He estimated 300,000 could be brought home each month.

Asked how an American merchant marine would be able to compete with the merchant marines of other countries which rely on cheap Oriental labor, Mr. Hurley replied that by employing relay crews to load and unload while vessels are in port, and the utilization of modern mechanical methods of handling cargoes, quick turn arounds could be effected, and many days of idleness in port be saved. This should not only greatly reduce expenses, but should give the American sailors a chance to spend some days at their homes at the end of each voyage, he continued.

"We expect 1,000,000 more tons of new ships to be delivered during this and next month," said the chairman of the Shipping Board. "We are taking 450,000 tons of ships out of the nitrate trade from South America. In sending our forces overseas we used only fifteen per cent. of our available tonnage for the transportation of men, and eighty-five per cent. for freight carrying. Of course, this freight carrying must be kept up, but the basis we are working on is that the War Department comes first, food second and trade third."

Chairman Hurley declared even the steamships of Germany and Austria, manner by Teutonic seamen, may help in the task of returning the American soldiers to their homes, these ships returning to their own ports with provisions for those who need food on the other side. He added that, if necessary, the crews of warships and auxiliary naval vessels might be cut down so that they could help in carrying the soldiers.

Mr. Hurley estimated the world's total net tonnage deficit at the end of 1920 would be about 20,000,000 tons, and it would keep the shipyards of this and other countries busy for years in catching up with the deficit.

"Our export trade has already grown by great bounds," he said. "In the four fiscal years preceding the war the total foreign trade of the United States was $15,972,000,000. In the four fiscal years since the war it has increased to $29,232,000,000. This notwithstanding the fact that our exports of cotton decreased about thirty-three per cent., because of Germany, Austria and other countries being shut out of the market. On the average, money values have risen about fifty per cent., but even with this allowance our exports have greatly increased."

Both Chairman Hurley and Herbert C. Hoover, the food administrator, sailed for Europe, Saturday, on the Olympic to study on the other side the world-wide problems in which they are respectively interested.

Synopsis of the Minutes of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

Roll call showed sixteen members present and three absent.

Communications from Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., regarding a reward for the arrest of the murderer of Robert Paton. State Highway Commision, regarding Mountain avenue, Woman's Land Army of America, County Attorney Blatz, in reference to Estate of John A. Feris, were read and ordered filed.

A communication was received from Foster M. Voorhees with copy of decision of Judge Silzer in the matter of suit against J. L. Bauer, which was ordered filed.

Reports from the following were read and ordered filed: Road Committee, regarding the appointment of Patrolmen; Rahway, Drawbridge Committee, as to repairs on Milton avenue and New Church Street Bridges; Finance Committee, as to payment for contract work; Road Committee regarding the removal of snow during the coming winter; Cranford Bridge Committee; Road Committee, requesting Public Service Railway Company to repair Westfield avenue, Rahway, between tracks; Jail Committee, County Farm Committee; Sealer of Weights and Measures, Road Supervisor and County Engineer.

County Collector reported balance on hand, $120,567.95.

Auditor reported receipted from County offices, $4,754.18.

The following resolutions were offered and adopted:

Freeholders Farren, Mullen and Honeyman appointed a Committee on culvert, Chestnut street, Roselle Park.

County Collector authorized to pay Emil Schuster $75.00; M. Byrnes Building Company $250.00.

How Cheery Smiles Work Wonders With Wounded Lads

Paris, Oct. 28 (by mail).—It was one of those days when everything had gone wrong in the convalescent wards of a certain French hospital, partly given over to wounded American soldiers.

Most of the men were getting along nicely, that was the trouble. Heroes don't work at heroics all the while; and if there is ever a time when they knock off on the job, it is while they are convalescing. Any nurse will tell you that. On this particular day men who had distinguished themselves like martyrs while they waited for stretcher bearers, were acting like kindergartners with sore thumbs.

The curtains were too high, and the beds were too low. The beds were too soft, and the beds were too hard. The oatmeal was raw, and the oatmeal was overdone. Only the mothers at home, who had nursed the husky warriors through mumps and measles could have thought them heroes just then.

"Darn that pillow!" muttered one of the American soldiers. It hurt him to hit it so hard, and you could tell from the expression on his face, but it would have hurt him more not to hit something just then.

"Monsieur should look out for the collarbone," reproved the little French Red Cross nurse.

Under his breath the American soldier said something that sounded like, "'s my collar-bone!"

"I shall read to you—no?" offered the little nurse to the half-dozen nearest American soldiers.

"No!" they agreed instantly, in as neatly vicious a way as they could speak to anyone so kind as the little French nurse.

"Just look at that, would you?" added one of the boys. "Disgusting, I call it! Simply disgusting!"

They all turned and stared with the greatest animosity at a cot nearby, where a pretty French girl was saying good-by to her "poilu" after her afternoon visit at the hospital. It was really a charming scene, but the nurse, who was gifted with imagination, understood why the American boys hated to look at it.

"The poor ones!" she said, to herself. "It is that they have le mal du pays. One can do nothing for them."

As if to contradict her, the door opened at that moment, and four women came into the ward—American women by every sign. The little French nurse would have known it, if only by the way the leader drew a big breath before plunging into her French question, after the manner of one about to take an ocean dip on a chilly day. They wore the gray uniforms of the Y. M. C. A.

But they had another insignia which made the little French nurse who knew of Benjamin Franklin only sketchily, look at them again. Under their arms each carried plump, crusty loaves of bread, partly concealed by thin paper wrappings.

"They told us there were American boys here," the leader said. "Could we see them?"

Could they? The boys answered the question themselves with a wild whoop. Callers from home? Someone to see them?

"Hello, boys!" smiled the Y. M. C. A. women, coming up to the cots. "See what we've brought you! White bread!"

There was another whoop at that.

"We knew you' like it," beamed the motherly woman who led the party. "We've been wanting some ourselves so much that we knew just how you felt about it. So we looked all over Paris for white bread for you, and then at last we found something at the American Commissary. See, there's jam and some butter, too! Let's have a party."

The boys fell upon the white bread with the gusto of famished men. They ate one piece and asked for another. They finished that and begged for a third. Meanwhile they asked all sorts of eager questions. Had any of the Y. M. C. A. women ever been in Paris, Illinois? Gee, but it had it on anything in France! Was the new subway in New York really as bad as it was painted? What were they singing now, back in the United States? One of the women, who had come to France in Y. M. C. A. entertainment work, started a vocal class at once, and you would have said that those wounded American soldiers never had been guilty of a grouch in all their lives if you could have heard them singing:

"K-k-k-Katie, beautiful Katie,
You're the only girl that I adore."

They were still grinning happily, their good nature utterly restored, when the last crumb of white bread had been eaten, and the Y. M. C. A. women had to say good-by. The little French nurse felt that her life had been made so much easier by the call that she followed the visitors to the door, and said so.

"Oh, I guess they weren't so glad to see us as they were to get some white bread," modestly disclaimed one of the Y. M. C. A. women.

"Le pain!" said the nurse. "But they have that everyday, both at the front and here. The hospital is furnished white bread for les Americans."

The Y. M. C. A. women looked at each other for a moment, then they daughed.

"And they have it all the time," said one of them, when she could speak. "You'll never know how near we came to eating that bread on the way here. Why, we ehought white bread would please them more than anything. We thought we were giving them a treat."

"I do not know that word 'treat,'" said the little French nurse, pronouncing it cautiously. "But I think, Mesdames, you have brought them something better than bread."

State School Head Says Conservation Must Be Continued

State Commissioner of Education Calvin N. Kendall, in a letter sent this week to Dr. Henry M. Maxson and other school officials and teachers throughout the State, asserted that the school kitchens and the teachers of domestic science or cooking must continue their food conservative program, although the armistice has been signed. He pointed out that America must help to feed that starying people of Europe, and said that this saving of food must continue through the winter and spring, and probably for a year to come.

He suggested that the older children distribute to their homes the material which Mr. Hoover's organization will prepare from time to time, and proposed three- or four-minute speeches about food conservation, giving the reasons why it will be necessary to continne to save food, to be held on Friday, December 6. He said this is a most excellent way of vitalizing English, geography and arithmetic.

"It would be an excellent idea to have a corner or other portion of the blackboard in each school devoted to the food conservation campaign throughout the winter and spring," declared the commissioner, who concluded that "we must also begin to plan for an increase in both number and the product of school gardens for next season."

Express Officials Urge Early Sending of Christmas Gifts

Vice President D. S. Elliott, in charge of traffic for the American Railway Express Company, has informed all operating officials and agents of the express organization throughout the United States, that it is the purpose of the company to uphold in every way the request of the Council of Defense that Christmas express shipments be started on teir way by December 5th.

A concerted effort will be made in every city and town of the country by the 125,000 express employes, to emphasize the importance of preventing any possible congestion of transportation facilities during these critical times. Although the express facilities are very elastic, so much of the equipment is now used for strictly war purposes, that all gift shipments for long distance travel should be delivered the express company not later than December 5th, and for short hauls not later than December 10th. This will allow ample time for sorting and delivering before Christmas day.

"We wish to emphasize strongly," said Mr. Elliott, "the point raised by the Council of National Defense, that nothing should be forwarded, which will interfere with essential war business. Just now the movement of equipment and supplies for the Overseas Forces is heavy and exacting, and there should be no domestic burden placed upon transportation, which would tend to lessen the delivery of war shipments.

"Also during the winter months there is a tremendous movement of foodstuffs to all of the larger cities. These foodstuffs are perishable and next to war shipments must be given first consideration.

"We are asking our men everywhere to bring these points before our patrons, and to emphasize more strongly than ever the vital importance of packing and legible marking. We are asking them to refuse all shipments which are not packed strongly enough to reach their destination with ordinary handling, and to insist that the address of the sender and of the consignee be placed on a card and enclosed inside the package."

Eminent Specialist Defines Shell Shock

A soldier suffers from shellshock when great, overmastering fear crashes against his sense of duty. He tries with all his moral fiber to conquer that fear and it is when he fails that shellshock comes, shattering his nerves and sometimes leaving him with a blank mind.

This is the definition of shellshock given by Major Sir Robert Armstrong Jones, an eminent mental specialist of London, in a recent lecture on the strange affliction that comes to hundreds of unwounded men, including many of high mental qualifications and model physique.

Though real sufferers from shellshock receive the most sympathetic treatment, since they arrive in the quiet hospitals where specialists are restoring disordered minds, the authorities of all armies have become skeptical in dealing with many cases. This is because cowards have faked shellshock symptoms in the hope of being sent out of the line for a time or even of being discharged as mentally unfit.

Minor degrees of shellshock sometimes are hard to distinguish from worst degrees of plain yellowness. Maybe the doctors have made some mistakes in diagnosis because the difference is so subtle, but most of their decisions probably were right, for specialists learn human nature as they learn psychology. The faker usually over-acts his part.

There was an infantry captain with a brave record in the trenches who went to London to recover from shellshock and would never ride in the subway because the sound of the train with its trailing vacuum reminded him of the sound of big shells coming through the air. On his first subway ride after coming back he trembled like a frightened child in a dark closet. His nerves had given way.

Big, brawny soldiers are inmates of a shellshock hospital near London. Some are obviously of unsound mind as a result of their fierce inner conflict of emotions. Others appear to be absolutely normal. Yet some of the "normal" men whimper like children and crawl under the beds when an air raid is on.

These are real shellshock cases.

Psychologists distinguish between a coward and the shellshocked man whose condition comes from that interior battle of character. Only a brave man can suffer real shellshock—if he weren't brave his sense of duty wouldn't have resisted to the breaking point.

Camp Dix May Be Used to Muster Out The Seventy-Eighth

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

The Seventy-eighth Division, made up of New York, New Jersey and Delaware troops, will in all probability be mustered out of the service from Camp Dix, is recommendations that are coming to the military authorities there are carried out. The Seventy-eighth, the original Camp Dix Division, contains the first of New Jersey's selectives sent into the service, the majority of the Plainfield and Union county National Army men being members of the unit.

It has been hinted by military authorities that Dix will be one of the principal demobilization centres, Philadelphians are urging that the 28th Division, National Guard troops, be mustered out there, while it is strongly desired by many that the 29th and 87th Division, containing large numbers of Jerysemen, also be brought to the camp to be disbanded. It is thought that the 78th Division, the first unit sent overseas from Camp Dix, will be given preference in demobilization there, over the other divisions, none of which, with the exception of the 87th, heceived complete training at Dix. The 34th Division was there for a short time.

From many parts of New Jersey come suggestions that the 78th be station at Dix during the mustering out period, and unless the military authorities fear confusion would be caused by relatives of the men in the fighting unit besieging the camp, it is highly probable that the division will be located there if Dix is finally selected as one of the chief demobilization sites.

The Eighty-seventh Division, which trained there, but did not see action on the other side, will precede the Seventy-eighth back from the battlefront, and its men will undoubtedly be mustered out there.

With the discharge of men at Dix at the rate of about 1,000 a day the aspect of the camp is gradually changing, and the various welfare organizations are adjusting themselves to the new order. With only six battalions to draw from, several of the huts in the various parts of the camp, it is believed, will be closed temporarily, but all the secretaries will be kept within call, so that if any division is brought to the camp for mustering out the entire service can again be given.

The Y. M. huts at the Remount Station and base hospital will be retained, for the men stationed at these places are believed to be among the last to go, and such buildings will be kept open as the needs of the men demand. It is likely that the four huts along New Jersey avenue will remain open, and one or two along Delaware avenue for the benefit of the colored men. The K. of C. building will remain open, as will the Jewish welfare building.

The prospects of an early return home has had a tendency to keep down the number of men reported as absent without leave, for a black mark against a soldier's record will make it all the harder for him to get an immediate discharge. The camp authorities are taking greater steps to keep down the number than ever before. Each Wednesday and Saturday unit commanders furnish a list of those absent and these names are sent to the various Councils of National Defense, which are assisting in the returning of absent men to camp.

To aid further in this work recommendations have been made to unit commanders that they send letters to the nearest of kin of the absent soldiers requesting that if the men get in touch with them, as is natural, that they use their influence to have them return voluntarily to the camp. More men, it is felt, will react to home influences than by the use of any other method and in this way the number of delinquents will be reduced.

With minor details smoothed over the work of discharging men at Dix has begun in earnest and as fast as the papers can be filled out and the examinations completed the men will be sent home. Those men who were not slated for discharge or assisting in the discharge work were given passes from Wednesday morning until reveille tomorrow night in order to be home over Thanksgiving.

For absenting himself without leave from August 17 to about September 22, Recruit Samuel S. Armstrong, who was inducted into service by one of the Philadelphia boards and sent to Dix from Frankford Arsenal, has been sentenced by a court-martial to spend the next six months in the Dix guard house and to forfeit $15 a month out of his pay. He will have for company for a like period Private John De Lucia, of Paterson, who was A. W. O. L. the last time remaining away from Company 32 from September 22 to October 6. He will also forfeit $2 a month of his pay.

The following promotions in the enlisted personnel, camp headquarters, have been announced: To be corporals, Wesley Johnson, of Vincentown; Henry J. Kruse, of West Hoboken; Charles A. Malloy, of Lambertville; Joseph Schinis, of Jersey City, and William R. Flynn, of Bordentown.

Captain Milton A. Shangle, of Elizabeth, has been relieved of duty at the base hospital and assigned to Camp Crane, Allentown, Pa., for temporary duty.

Frank Wandle, secretary of the Knights of Columbus, who is directing the work of beautifying the camp, has received 1,185 plants from Mrs. Charles Biddle, of Anadulia, Pa.

Country's Largest Hospital Commences Care of Wounded

Rebarkation Hospital No. 3—the largest institution of its kind in the United States—is today taking care of its first contingent of wounded American doughboys.

The hospital, in which some of the Nation's greatest medical and surgical talent has been mobilized, is located in a six-story business block at Eighteenth street and Sixth avenue, New York.

Thousands of persons today literally serenaded the institution, gathering in the streets below. The soldiers were enthusiastic and joyful over the ovation and waved their hands to the crowds below.

Every comfort and convenience is provided for the wounded. There are accommodations for 4,000 beds. Already 426 of those are occupied. Within ten days it is expected the hospital will be filled to its capacity. Its constitutions boasts of a few amusements not common in other hospitals.

There is a roof garden and an observatory. The Red Cross has provided a recreation auditorium for movies and plays.

In connection with these all the latest and most improved surgical appliances and apparatus are provided. Captain R. B. McClelland, of Cleveland, who is in charge of this department, has a large suff of surgeons.

The efficiency of the hospital's equipment is indicated by the fact that 2,000 persons may be served a meal within ten minutes. One hundred men are employed in the kitchen. Major W. J.J Monaghan, of the medical corps, is in command of the hospital.

It was announced at the hospital today that arrangements were being made for receiving relatives and friends of the wounded soldiers. The Red Cross is planning to furnish accommodations for the visitors.

Friends and relatives will be allowed to visit the wounded at all times, it is stated.

AUGUSTUS C. NASH PROMOTED TO SERGEANT.

Augustus C. Nash, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Nash, of Prospect avenue, who has been in France since the forepart of December, 1917, was recently promoted to the rank of sergeant. He is at present stationed at Bordeaux as a member of the quartermasters' corps and where for nearly the entire period of his foreign service he has been in charge of the distribution of gasoline and oils for army use. Bordeaux is one of the main bases for this work and the young Plainfielder is in charge of a big staff distributing and keeping account of the supplies.

Word of Sergeant Nash's promotion came to his parents, by letter this week. In it he states that he recently made a trip inland and accidentally met Captain Charles Lolzeaux, George Fisher and many other Plainfield young men. Speaking of himself personally, the sergeant said that he was enjoying excellent health and looking forward to an early return to the United States.

Previous to entering the service, Sergeant Nash practiced law in Westfield. He is a brother to Attorney Vincent W. Nash, Jr.

Democrats Have Money Left From Last Campaign

The feature of the expense statement of the Democratic State Committee, filed a few days ago, was the showing of a balance of $5,822.64 from the recent campaign. The total receipts amounted to $11,843, and the expenses were $6,020.36.

The biggest contribution came from the Democratic National Committee and was $7,500. George M. LaMonte, long-term Senatorial candidate, donated $1,000; Attorney-General Wescott, $300; Secretary of State Martin, $182; Motor Vehicle Commissioner Dill, H. Otto Wittpenn, Thomas F. Durning, of Newark, $200; Prosecutor Dunn, of Passaic, and W. C. Cabell, of Passaic, $150 each.

Contributions of $100 each were made by T. A. Adams, of Newark; E. F. Burke, of Morristown; Mat C. Ely, of Jersey City; Edward I. Edwards, of Jersey City; Frank M. Taylor & Company, of Hackensack; Leon Hirsch, of Trenton; Richard Stockton, of Trenton; Minister Thomas Birch, of Portugal; Bernard Tighe, of Phillipsburg; J. Thompson Baker, of Wildwood; Joseph L. Smith, of Newark; Alonzo Herrick, of Hackettstown, and Joseph P. Tumulty.

The largest expenditures were made for advertising, printing, publicity and maintenance of State Democratic headquarters at Trenton.

Mail Information From Postmaster Hoagland

Postmaster A. E. Hoagland has given out the following information regarding mail for Belgium, Italy and for American soldiers who were prisoners of war:

Mail will now be accepted for Belgoum, except parcel post, which may not be sent. Letter postage five cents per ounce.

It is strictly forbidden by the postal laws of Italy to send paper money or coin in letters to Italy. Those wishing to send money to Italy are advised to obtain money orders or bank drafts payable in Italy.

All military prisoners of war have been released from Germany, and it is admissible to send them Christmas boxes same as other soldiers. Boxes may be obtained at the Red Cross Headquarters, Watchung avenue, and should be addressed to the soldier in care of the company and regiment he was attached to when captured. In addition former prisoners of war in Germany must be placed at bottom of letter, also American Expeditionary Forces in Europe. Such mail cannot be sent free, but must be prepaid at domestic rates.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

COLLECTOR'S OFFICE, CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on

Tuesday, December 3rd, 1918

at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and seventeen remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts or parcels of land to be sold which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest from the twentieth day of December, 1917, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said Act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling, twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements; which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

December 20, 1917, is the date from which interest will be added to date of sale.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has sent the following letter of congratulation to J. Herbert Case, chairman of the executive committee, conducting the campaign on the splendid work of the campaign organization:

J. Herbert Case, Chairman,
United War Work Campaign Committee,
Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Mr. Case:

Unexpected conditions and difficulties attended the United War Work Campaign throughout the country. The sudden collapse of the war while it should logically have been a spur for civilian support of the fighting forces, had naturally a tendency to retard all our war manifestations so long maintained at high pitch. But in spite of all hinderances the local Campaign Committee under your leadership brought Plainfield up to the line and over it as has been done so many times before. I am sure that our people who give generously to every worthy cause not only have the gladness which comes from giving but are proud of their city and of the men and women who are the leaders in these great undertakings. I myself hold it a privilege to express my appreciation of what you have done.

Yours very truly,
(Signed), LEIGHTON CALKINS.

Lieutenant Freeman Tells Experiences

but with horses in poor condition from lack of food and rest and not enough of them, it's a job that turns the hair gray. All night we marched and all the next morning without food or sleep or rest, except annoying little halts, because of traffic congestion. We reached here about noon yesterday and went through all the trouble of getting temporarily located, not knowing when we would move again. And I never saw such a mud hole in my life. We are camped on either side of a slough of dispond, supposed to be a main thoroughfare. Trucks, horses and men and beasts pass by continually, spattering mud on either side as they go.

Last night two of us slept in a little dugout up the side of one hill but during the night the rain opened up a nasty little leak and so tonight we are in a little bungalow on the other side, tin roof and wood floor and two fairly good bunks. It seems as though we may stay here several days because the horses are too fagged out to pull the carriages, and then rumor has it that we go back to a rest camp for six weeks. Apparently I'll never see any real fighting.

Many rumors round that Germany is evacuating; that Austria and Turkey have quit; that the Kaiser has abdicated; and that the war is over. But all today we could hear the distant rumbling of artillery, so I must not be too sanguine the things certainly look very rosy.

No mail since leaving Saumur, of course, and I'm not sure that I can mail this at any near date. It's now the 13th of October, see how long it takes.

Writing accommodation very limited here. I'm sitting on a low bunk writing on casual paper with a cigar box for support and straining my eyes in the light of a feeble candle. Hence I wont read it over for mistakes, as I generally do. You must pardon them.

Lovingly,
EDGAR.

CITY COURT NOTES.

Frederick Angelo, sixteen years old, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, charged with reckless driving in knocking down William Schorb with his automobile at Front street and Park avenue. Mr. Schorb was unable to appear because of his injuries and the case was continued until December 2. Angelo claimed to be eighteen years old in making application for a driver's permit.

Philip Caruso, of Newark, was fined five dollars by Judge DeMeza this morning for violating the traffic laws at Park avenue and Front street.

WILLIAM D. SUTTON.

William D. Sutton, a well-known Plainfielder, died Wednesday, after a long illness. He was a brother to James Sutton, of 30 Pearl street, the borough. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 402 Park avenue, and burial will be in the Presbyterian cemetery, North Plainfield. Mr. Sutton was fifty-four years old.

Rush of Orders at Local Plants Means Busy Times for Coming Year

In the face of persistent rumor that Plainfield's big industrial plants would soon become slack because of canceled war contracts, inquiry develops the fact that practically all of them will continue on as they are now for at least six months and possibly a year.

This latter assertion applies particularly to the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, which has been running day and night shifts for two years. The full force of twelve hundred men and women is to be retained as only a few weeks ago the concern received a Government order for 2,200 army trucks. The motors and other essential parts are made here at the rate of about twenty motors a day and the vehicles are completed at Allentown. The Government order stands without any change since the armistice was signed as the trucks are needed for the reconstruction program in France. In addition to the Government work, the Saurer people have a big order from the Standard Oil Company and numerous others from commercial houses which must be filled as soon as possible. It has been stated by a member of the company that the big plant on West Front street will be run at capacity for a year at least.

At the Pond shop, where 900 men are employed, the cancellation of Government orders has made little difference. The day and night shifts are to be retained as there is a big demand for Pond lathes, planers and boring mills. Railroad and other shops throughout America and other countries allowed their equipment to run down during the rush of war work and this must now be replenished. The local factory will be a big factor in supplying machine tools for this purpose.

At the Spicer plant in South Plainfield there is also no indication of a let-up in the capacity output that has been going on for several years. The universal joint manufactured by the corporation is an essential product for automobiles and can be used on pleasure cars the same as on motor trucks equipped for army use. Orders now on hand from Government contractors and private automobile concerns insures continued activities at the South Plainfield shop.

The Walter Scott Company has reduced its working force from three eight-hour complements to two straight shifts, one working days and the other nights. This was brought about by a stoppage of work on gun carriages for the army, but all the energies of the production department must now be transferred to the Walter Scott & Company printing presses, which have no superior and which are in demand the world over. Dozens of orders from newspaper corporations were refused during the haste to speed up gun carriage output and since this is no longer necessary the printing machinery will now be supplied. It is safe to say that the day and night shifts will be maintained for a long time to come.

The Wood Newspaper Machinery Corporation, formerly Potter's, is rushed with orders and working a full force overtime. The Wasson Piston Ring Company has laid off most of its night force but the full day shift and those remaining in the night gang are to be kept on for an indefinite period. At the Standard Aero Alarm Company at Fourth and Washington streets, and the British American Metals Company in the old Maganese Safe plant there is no sign of slackening up in work. Even the North avenue plants of the Standard Aero Company are taking on help, despite the fact that lay-offs are frequent at the Elizabeth shop, and taken all in all Plainfield's period of industrial activity is to continue until well into 1919 at least.

Private Kusnetz Died in Battle As He Predicted

In almost the same manner he predicted when he left this city as a selective last February, Private Joseph Kusnetz met death on a battlefield in France, according to word received by relatives this week.

Private Kusnetz was employed at Joe Meyer's lunch wagon on East Second street, and although willing and ready to serve his country, was convinced in his own mind that he would never return after he left for overseas.

"I have a premonition," said he, to a group of friends the day he marched to the North avenue station, "that I am to be shot down on the battlefield. I don't know where I gained the idea, but I've got it just the same, and that's all there is to it."

Jack Hall, of Jackson avenue, the borough, was one of the friends to whom Kusnetz made known his premonition and the former received word from another friend about the soldier's death. He was shot down by machine gun bullets on November

Arthur F. Mundy Fourteenth Local Lad to Die on Field

An official telegram received in Plainfield yesterday, brought news that the fourteenth Plainfield to give his life for his country was Arthur F. Mundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Mundy, of 1118 Woodland avenue. He was killed in action on October 20 while fighting with Company D, 113th Infantry.

The first young man from this city to die on the battlefield was Daniel Arthur Compton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Compton, of West Third street. Word of his death came just a year ago next Monday. He was a member of the hospital corps recruited by the Friends of Philadelphia.

Private Arthur Munday was one of two brothers to go to Camp Dix with the first big contingent of selectives in September, 1917. The other was George W. Mundy, who was recently reported as having been wounded. Both were originally members of Company A, 311th Infantry, but on going overseas Arthur was transferred to Company D.

Arthur was twenty-eight years old and for thirteen years had been employed by W. W. Wilson, at his

Plainfielder Undergoing Rare Operation Will See It Reproduced in Moving Pictures

Recuperating in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, after what the world famous Doctors Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., phonounced as one of the rarest surgical operations ever performed in America, John A. McIntyre, of 140 North avenue, this city, will some day be able to see himself going through the ordeal on the operating table.

All the while the work of removing the colon from the intestinal organism was going on, a moving picture camera was trained on the physicians and patient in such a manner that every move of the former could be detected. In addition, a "close up" filmed the interior of Mr. McIntyre's abdomen and chest for the especial benefit of student doctors who might profit by the manner in which the offending intestinal canal was taken away and artificial provision made for its replacement. It was known from the outset that the undertaking was very grave, as the patient submitting to it takes a desperate chance, consequently the moving picture idea was adopted after Mr. McIntyre gave consent and in the future when the physicians performing it give lectures they may be able to show exactly how the colon was taken away.

The film, it has since been learned, has turned out splendidly and the Plainfielder has been told that he may see the whole affair on the screen in the near future.

The physician performing the operation was Dr. Hugh Auchincloss, of New York, who has no superior as a surgeon. He was assisted by Dr. Hawks, the physician who operated on President Garfield, after he had been shot by Guiteau, at Baltimore, in 1881. Several other prominent surgeons attached to the Presbyterian Hospital staff were in attendance beside a corps of special nurses. Mr. McIntyre was on the table several hours. This was on October 15 and for several weeks the outcome was in doubt. It is now quite certain, however, that the young man will recover completely. He has been gaining rapidly during the past week or more and expects to return to this city about December 15. His illness dates back nearly five years, during which time he has submitted to the knife on several occasions. He has been near death so many times that in the Presbyterian Hospital, where he has always been operated upon, he is known to the doctors and nurses as "the cat" because of the many lives he seems to have had.

The Doctors Mayo, whose private hospital at Rochester is known the world over, were in New York recently and heard of the McIntype operation. They asked to interview the patient and made a personal examination after which they were shown the moving photographs. They declared that the undertaking was equal to anything they had ever done and that the patient might consider himself "one in a million" to recover afterward. They addeded also that the removal of the colon was the only thing that could have prevented a fatal termination of the Plainfielder's illness and Dr. Auchincloss was entitled to great credit for his work.

Mr. McIntyre is the son of John F. McIntyre, the well-known local real estate operator.

Daniel Arthur Compton

Plainfield's First Hero Son

Killed in France December 3, 1917

A Tribute

"Daniel Arthur Compton sleeps tonight in the 'Bivouac Of The Dead.' France, with gentle hands, has laid, broad across his silent heart, the Wampum Belt of a brave American Gentleman, who died on her far-flung battle lines, in defense of the Doctrines of Jesus Christ.

"The choice of service was his, and in accordance with his prerogative as a man, and his Birthright as an American, he choose the highest and most noble—the service of Mercy, the Red Cross of Geneva

"He might have sold that Birthright—even as did Esau of old, and live—A sluggard's life of ease, and die—a slacker's unmourned death. But, true to every color in the Flag of his Country, he joined the ranks of the gallant young Crusaders who left our City, and it was his fate to be the first amongst them to 'Kiss the Cross,' and silently march away.

"We who 'Only Stand And Wait' but in that waiting also serve, can do no less than give to them who have won the Palm, in the red arena of war, the full tribute of our praise.

"Palmam qui meruit ferat.

Big Hearted Elks Will Play Santa For the "Kiddies"

With its usual big heartedness despite the inroads upon its resources by war activities, Plainfield Lodge of Elks has determined that it will play Santa Claus for Plainfield's "kiddies" this year, just as enthusiastically as it has done in previous Yuletide seasons. To that end, Exalted Ruler James W. Hart appointed a committee at Wednesday night's meeting to pave the way for the jolly old fellow with the reindeers who will look in on the poor of the city and borough, the latter part of the month.

This committee is composed of Walter Marder, chairman; Captain William C. Smith, Arthur E. Smith, Walter Apgar and George Hallock. They are already at work on plans for a bang-up entertainment at the Plainfield Theatre and distribution of presents to the children and also the donation of coal, flour and other necessities to impoverished homes. Manager M. L. Shannon has donated the use of his big playhouse on West Second street and will assist the committee in the presentation of a suitable program. It will include moving pictures and the kind of vaudeville acts that delight the youngsters. The exact date for the performance has not yet been fixed upon.

At a recent meeting of Plainfield Lodge, Exalted Ruler Hart also appointed a committee to purchase the memorial clock designated by the late Alexander Findlay in his bequest of $5,000 to the organization. He stipulated that $1,000 should be expended for the timepiece. It will be erected in the clubhouse on Watchung avenue and beside being of an ornate nature will remind the members by means of a set of chimes when Elkdom's sacred hour of eleven arrives, this being the occasion when the minds of those wearing the antlers must revert to departed brothers.

King's Daughters' Concert Promises Rare Musical Treat

A rare musical evening is being planned by the Silver Cross Circle of King's Daughters for December 16, when Anna Case, the beautiful lyric soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing at the Plainfield High School. Miss Case has had a remarkable career since she started out as a choir singer in Plainfield and through her own efforts has become a world famous artist.

Anna Case

When Joffre, the French marshal, was entertained by H. C. Frick in New York, she was chosen to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" for him. Miss Case at that time received an invitation to visit France as the guest of the French republic.

It is hoped that Plainfield music lovers will turn out to give Miss Case the enthusiastic welcome she justly deserves.

Tickets are on sale at Miller's drug store, the prices being $2.00, $1.50, $1.00.

Private Funeral for Charles H. Lyman

The funeral of Charles H. Lyman, whose death occurred yesterday, after a brief illness with pneumonia, will be held at his late home on Washington avenue, and will be strictly private, in accordance with the Board of Health's ruling. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, former pastor of the First M. E. church, will conduct the service and the burial will also be strictly private.

Mr. Lyman was born in Baltimore, fifty-three years ago but had lived in Plainfield since 1882. He was engaged in the real estate and insurance business for many years; he was prominent in amateur theatricals at the Park Club. Beside his wife, who was Miss Nellie Pangborn, of this city, he leaves two sons, George Ray Lyman and Charles H. Lyman, Jr., of Connecticut.

CORPORAL PHILIP PHILLIPS CABLES HE IS SAFE.

The many friends of Corporal Philip H. Phillips, Company G, 311th Infantry, will be glad to learn that his parents have received a cable from him, dated after the armistice was signed, that he was well.

The message was received last night by Mr. and Mrs. Phillips at the Hotel Albert, New York, where they are stopping for the winter. Their home address is at 921 Madison avenue, this city. Two other sons are in France, Corporal John Phillips, of the Field Artillery, and Corporal Kenneth Phillips, of the 502nd Engineers.

NEW YEAR'S EVE DANCE.

Plainfield Lodge of Elks is making arrangements for a New Year's Eve dance to be held in the club house, Tuesday night, December 31. Invitations are to be issued to the members and their friends.

Took Whole Company of Huns to Capture Apgar

Plainfield Lieutenant All By Himself Had Bagged Seven Prisoners When "Superior Force" of Germans Overpowered Him After He Was Wounded in Arm

One whole company of Germans was required to take the fight out of Lieutenant George L. Apgar, of Stone street, the borough, before he could be captured during a battle in the Meuse district on October 12, according to Thomas M. Johnson, staff correspondent for the New York Evening Sun.

In a dispatch printed in that paper last night, Mr. Johnson asserts that the young Plainfielder has previously bagged seven Hun prisoners and was escorting them to the rear line when their company surrounded him. Despite the tremendous odds, Apgar used his prisoners as a shield and fought off the attacking unit for some time. He was finally forced to desist through getting a wound in one arm.

Apgar was taken prisoner and placed in the German hospital at Treves. He was there when the victorious American army entered that district several days ago. With the Plainfielder were fifty other American wounded and from the latter Johnson learned the story about Apgar which was cabled to America. After the entrance of the Yankee soldiers, the Plainfielder and his comrades were removed to another hospital.

Mrs. Florence Apgar, wife of the lieutenant, received a cablegram Wednesday night, stating that her husband was not wounded badly and was getting along splendidly. The message came from a major in the U. S. army who had seen the gallant soldier in the hospital. The news was comforting as conflicting reports had placed the anxious wife in an apprehensive state of mind.

Lieutenant Apgar was employed as carrier at the local postoffice for fifteen years previous to entering the service in 1917. He was a charter member of Company K and trained with that outfit at Camp McClellan. He was a sergeant when the war broke out, but made his commission later. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Apgar, of 141 East Front street, and brother to Mrs. George Morton, of Mountain avenue.

Coast Band Concert Promises Rare Treat For Music Lovers

The Fifteenth Band, Coast Artillery Corps, of which Rocca Resta is the talented conductor, will give a brilliant concert at the High School on Saturday evening, December 7, at 8:15. Aurelio Giorni, hailed by many as the greatest pianist of the younger generation, will be the soloist of the evening. Both Mr. Rest and Mr. Giorni are giving their services for the benefit of the Red Cross, so that the entire proceeds of the entertainment will go towards carrying on the work of the local chapter.

There are thirty-five trained musicians in the band, all of whom respond enthusiastically to Mr. Resta's magnetic personality and musicianly leadership, and this, coupled with the fact that Mr. Giorni is an artist, possessing the combination of rare technical skill, and much musical feeling, promises an evening of unusual enjoyment to Plainfield's music lovers. Tickets may be had at headquarters, the Red Cross Shop, and at the following drug stores: Hall's, Miller's, Walsh's and Randolph's.

The program for the concert is announced as follows:

1—French National Defile Turbet; 2—Piano Concerto, B Flat, Op. 23, 1st Movement, Tsohaikowsky (arranged for Military Band by Rocco Resta), Aurelio Giorni, pianist; 3—

New Year Will See Big Change In City Council

With the entrance of the New Year, Plainfield's Common Council will undergo the greatest change in its make-up that has been recorded in two decades. In addition to changing presidents, the municipal body will lose three of its present solons and take on four new ones.

At a caucus this week, it was decided that Thomas F. Hylan, councilman from the Third ward, should succeed Francis J. Blatz as president. The former will assume his seat at the re-organization meeting in 1919. Mr. Blatz, who has served in the councilmanic body for six years, retires because of pressure of other duties. Mr. Hylan has been a most faithful and efficient officer, serving as chairman of the street committee, chairman of the sewer committee, a member of the City Hall committee and one of the most active workers in the Joint Sewer Commission. He will enter upon his third term as ward councilman January 1.

Theodore Martin, the only Democratic member of the Council, retires this month as a First ward representative and his place will be filled by Nelson Y. Hull. Charles S. Sminck is the other First ward councilman.

In the Second ward, Marion S.

Blockaded Spruce Streeters Plan Legal Drive on Harry Cohen's High Board Fence

Harry Cohen, a tinner whose home is on West Fourth street, has stirred up a merry little row in a portion of the West End by purchasing a lot that for years has served as an outlet for Spruce street into West Fourth street. According to the map of the Plainfield Real Estate Company, which developed the old Vail and Lyons tract in that section, Spruce street was to have extended from Essex street to Fourth street, but it was cut in only half the way. The residents of Spruce and Essex streets, however, have made a thoroughfare of the lot and had come to look upon it as a street.

Recently, Mr. Cohen purchased the opening plot from A. J. Codington, of Mt. Bethel, and immediately put up a six-foot board fence at the southerly end and at the terminus of Spruce street. Further than this, he built in on twelve feet of ground which, according to the Vail and Lyons map, was part of an alley-way leading from John street to the rear of properties on Spooner avenue. The property owners whose places adjoined it had always respected the map designation with one exception. This was that the supposed opening from John street, where a house was built by James Totten, now living in Yonkers, N. Y. No one ever objected to this encroachment, if such it should be proven to be, but now that Cohen has left the Spruce street people in a "pocket," there has been a rush for lawyers' offices. It is asserted by several of the blockaded property owners that not only is the sale of the lot to Cohen illegal but also that the house on John street can be ordered removed to keep clear the opening that is called for on the old property map. This will be a matter that the courts will have to decide as several interested persons will take the matter to the City Council and Board of Freeholders to call for the vacating of the ground in the usual form prescribed by law.

The Spruce streeters and their allies, the Essex streeters, insist that Cohen put up the fence merely as a part of a hold-up game. He has not commenced building operations, although cleaming that he intends putting up a greenhouse fronting on Fourth street, but in the meantime has offered to sell the disputed property to any one who wants it for $1,500. According to property valuations in the neighborhood it is worth about $600. Cohen and his six-foot board fence are now holding the fort and until the Spruce streeters get legal redress, if such can be had, they must go three block around through Essex and John streets or Essex street and Spooner avenue to get into Fourth street.

Another point being brought to issue is how Mr. Codington secured the Fourth street lot as a search of the property would show that it was designated as a continuation of Spruce street. Several years ago, Andrew Muir, of West Sixth street, who owns several lots on Spruce street, one of which adjoins the ground that Cohen has fenced in, made an attempt to purchase the Fourth street plot. After paying a deposit he discovered that the title could not be cleared and his money was refunded. Believing that the way to Fourth street in consequence would always be kept open, be paid no further attention to the matter until his tenants were made to take "the long way around." Mr. Muir is now leading the movement of Spruce street property owners toward the courts.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely To For Busy Readers.

Dr. Frank C. Herbert, of Whitewood avenue, the borough, and William Galbraith, of Stony Hill, were arraigned before Recorder Morgan at Scotch Plains, Monday night, charged with reckless driving, following a smash-up at Park and Mountain avenues, Scotch Plains, Monday morning at 8 o'clock. Both men were in Fords and the two machines were turned completely over, remaining with wheels upward. Both drivers had narrow escapes as did also Mr. Galbraith's daughter, Mary, who was seated beside him. The traffic post at the corner was broken down and Recorder Morgan dismissed the charge against the men on their promising to pay $12 for its replacement. They also settled the damages to the automobiles among themselves.

Herman Schwed, C. L. Applegate and Herbert Schuldenfrei have been named as a committee for the Business Men's Association to revise the schedule for the closing of stores on holidays. It was stated at the meeting of the association, Monday night, that the merchants would keep their business places open evenings from December 18 for the benefit of shoppers. The association has decided to affiliate with the State Chamber of Commerce in order to secure the advantage of trade regulation State laws and fro mthe united co-operation of all the State representatives.

Between four and five hundred persons attended the tenth annual ball of the Plainfield Patrolmen's Benovelent Association in Columbus Hall, Monday night. Nichols' orchestra provided a splendid musical program and the dancers enjoyed themselves to the limit under the direction of Nicholas Meyers as floor manager, and Thomas Bebout, assistant manager. The proceeds from the affair will be added to the association's sick and relief fund. Thomas Faltley was chairman of the ball committee and Tobias Nolan was secretary and treasurer. During the evening the police commissioners of Plainfield and Westfield, and other officials, together with police chiefs from nearby cities, dropped in to exchange greetings with the patrolmen.

Princess Mary Lodge, Daughters of St. George, will hold a dime social tonight at the home of Mrs. Hilda Mager, of 1258 East Second street. An interesting program has been prepared. At the meeting of the lodge last Monday night, these officers were installed by Mrs. Nellie Kenyon, of Paterson: Past president, Mrs. Matilda Reeves; president, Mrs. Hannah Bridge; vice president, Mrs. Emily Pearson; treasurer, Mrs. Beatrice Rowbotham; financial secretary, Mrs. Hilda Mager; recording secretary, Mrs. Florence Young; chaplain, Mrs. Anna McGoldrick; first conductor, Mrs. Beatrice Gilson, second conductor, Mrs. Louise Buckle; inside guard, Miss Ella Cox; outside guard, Mrs. May E. Bennett; trustees, one year, Miss Anna Cartwright; two years, Mrs. Emily Broadbent; three years, Miss Mary Hines. Yesterday was the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Kenyon and the lodge presented her with a cut glass flower vase.

Tuesday night was the twenty-seventh anniversary of Plainfield's most disastrous fire, the burning of the Boice lumber yard on Park avenue, December 3, 1891. The blaze started at about 6 o'clock from hot ashes placed in a barrel standing against Frank Huff's barn in the rear of what is now Van Name's oyster shop and spread to the big lumber sheds. The flames raged for twelve hours and burning coal piles were not extinguished until two days later. In addition to the Boice yard, several houses on Arlington avenue and a number of barns on the Fourth street side of the block were destroyed. The total damage was estimated at $250,000.

The parishes of Grace and Holy Cross Episcopal churches met Monday night and elected officers for the ensuing year. Those for Grace church are: Warden, E. F. Feickert, re-elected for two years; vestrymen, for three years, George M. Holstein F. W. Iredell and George L. Babcock, re-elected; delegates to diocesan convention, Howard Fleming, George S. Clay, George L. Babcock; alternates, L. H. Van Buren, O. G. Waring and Howard C. Tracy. Holy Cross elected these officers: Wardens, Dr. J. H. Carman, H. E. Langford; vestrymen, D. C. Anderson, F. D. Ball, C. G. Murray, C. A. Nicklas, F. L. Sill, J. A. Van Mater; delegates to convention, H. E. Langford, C. A. Nicklas, C. E. Murray; alternates, J. Q. Stevens, J. A. Van Mater and John Brower; delegates for convocation, D. C. Anderson, Neilsen Sutton; alternates, C. A. Davis, Edward Van Hoesen.

Patrolmen Nolan and Loerch raided a crap game in the basement of the building at 207 North avenue, early Sunday morning. They arrested Edward Dawridge, Edward Harvey, Lawrence Somerset and Wilbur Williams, all colored. When arraigned before Judge DeMeza, Monday, they were reprimanded and allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Fred Angelo, the sixteen-year-old East Third street youth, who ran down William Schorb with his automobile at Park avenue and Front street, was fined $25 by Judge DeMeza in the city court Monday. He was at first inclined to take the preference of sixty days in jail but after spending all day Monday behind the bars, he came across with the twenty-five. Angelo is employed by Edward A. Laing as driver of an auto newspaper delivery truck.

Harry Bartel, of East Front street, formerly of Jersey City, has been made a member of the city fire department. His appointment was confirmed by the Council, Monday night, and he has been assigned to No. 3 house on West Fourth street.

According to the report filed with Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, the Republican State Committee, in the recent campaign spent $24,971.70 out of a total contributed sum of $25,416. Of the money expended, $300 was paid for challengers in Union county.

After forty years of continuous service with the New Jersey Central, Garret Q. Dolliver, of 82 Fairview avenue, the borough, was retired on a pension this week. During recent years, Mr. Dolliver has acted as chief inspector of all ties and timber purchased by the railroad. The position is a very important one as the Central uses half a million ties per annum.

County Registrar Edward L. Bauer was sworn into office by Judge Pierce at the county courthouse in Elizabeth, today. The ceremony was witnessed by a group of officials and friends, including Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield and C. W. Runyon, of this city, and George Johnston, of Scotch Plains. The County Board of Elections canvassed the soldiers' vote yesterday and issued certificates of election. The vote from overseas did not change the status of any official-elect.

Another automobile collision was added to the long list occurring at Seventh street and Park avenue, Monday morning. A Pierce-Arrow, owned by J. P. Bird, of Evergreen avenue, and driven by John Kupicht, of 306 East Second street, "locked horns" with a Stearns-Knight belonging to William Kaufman, of West Seventh street, and driven by Mrs. Louise Cole. Both machines were badly wrecked, the Stearns-Knight, however, getting much the worst of the bargain. As Mrs. Cole had the right of way, according to law, Kupicht was arrested by Lieutenant Higgins on a charge a reckless driving. In the city court Tuesday, Judge DeMeza allowed him to go after a reprimand.

The Federal Employment Office in the City Building at 149 North avenue has been designated by the Washington authorities as a "clearing house" in this section for the employment of returning soldiers. The men who have been in the service are to be given every preference in being located in jobs suitable to their ability. The official communication from the Federal Employment Bureau asks that the mayors, local councils of defense, labor unions and draft boards lend their aid to the Employment Bureau.

Lindsey Best, of Madison avenue, who recently resigned as principal of the Plainfield High School to engage in Y. M. C. A. work in France, is at present taking a special course at Columbia University to fit him for his new field of endeavor. The date of his sailing has not been fixed as yet. Mr. Best's place as principal at the High School has been filled by Henry R. Hubbard, of West Ninth street, who has been acting as vice-principal for several years.

Despite warnings from Chief Marshal Weiss, drivers of the American Express Company persisted in making Somerset street the speed-way each night as they drove their horses to the stables each night. In consequence a few nights ago the Chief arrested aHrold Vanderhoef, William Pond, Peter Kane, Albert Halstead, William Johnson and Edmund Conger. Recorder Hand nipped each one for three dollars when they were arraigned in the borough court and warned them the ante would be raised if they came before him again on the same charge.

At its meeting Monday night, the City Council ratified the action of the street committeein purchasing from Charles H. Hand the coal yard property on South avenue, opposite Central street, formerly owned by Michael Powers. The purchase price is $8,500. The property is to be used for receiving wholesale shipments of stone, tarvia and other materials used by the city as the yard is equipped with a siding from the Jersey Central Railroad. The grounds will also be used for storage purposes. It will mean a good investment for the city and in addition to saving siding charges, the rental secured from Walter Temple, who holds a lease on the coal bunkers, will amount to about $720 a year, much more than the interest on the amount paid for the property. The city will build a new storage house on the property, using bricks taken from the old garbish incinerating plant at DeKalb avenue and Green brook.

Private George C. Noonan, of this city, who was reporter missing in action after his unit, Company K, 307th Infantry, 27th Division, had been in a big drive, is safe in Holland. A cablegram to this effect was received Monday by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Noonan, of 653 West Seventh street. Private Noonan originally belonged to the Seventh Regiment of New York, and after training at Spartansburg, S. C., went overseas last May.

State's School System May Be Greatly Altered

A big fight between those who want to make changes in the present management of the public school system of the State and those who are in favor of the retention of the system now in operation is brewing, and the storm will probably break with the opening of the Legislature next month The controversy will undoubtedly revolve around the recommendations as to changes which the House Committee on Education of the 1918 session, of which Assemblyman John E. Gill, of Mercer, is the chairman, will make.

It is understood that one of the most sweeping recommendations will be the abolition of the State Board of Education, leaving the State Commissioner of Education the sole and single supervising head of the State system of public schools. In this connection it is said a plan will also be put forward to abolish the offices of the four assistant commissioners of education—one in charge of high schools, the second in charge of elementary education, the third, who has charge of industrial and vocational training, and the fourth, who handle and supervise all the educational duties, and the other manage and direct the business end of the State Department of Public Instruction.

It has been rumored about the State House and in educational circles that already there are two candidates for these offices in the persons of Thomas D. Sensor, who is now chief of the Bureau of Credentials in the Department of Public Instruction, and Herbert N. Morse, who has charge of the business end of the department. It is understood that the plan is to make Sensor the assistant commissioner in charge of the educational end and Morse, the assistant commissioner in charge of the business activities of the department.

There have also been hints at Trenton that the State Federation of District Boards of Educational is being used as a lever to bring pressure to bear upon the Legislature to put this plan through. That these rumors are not entirely accurate seemed apparent at Saturday's annual meeting of the Federation in the State House.

During the course of the session several pointed references were made to what was termed the present dual system of school supervision in New Jersey, and emphasis was laid on the fact that the local board of education in their answers to a recent questionnaire which they recently received from the federation had gone on record as indorsing the plan to have two assistants to the State commissioner, one in charge of education and the other the business.

Mr. Morse, who is mentioned as likely to receive one of these new posts is the secretary of the Federation of District Boards. The questionnaires are being used by the House Education Committee as the basis for some of its studies and investigations of the present school system.

Edward I. Harrison, of Chesterfield, vice president of the federation and chairman of the executive committee, in presenting his report declared that all signs pointed to changes in the management of the school system at the coming session of the Legislature.

"It depends on us," he declared, "with some other people, as to what these changes will be."

Those who are opposed to disruption of the present system of school management declare that the plan is to convince the coming Legislature of the demand for changes as the result of the questionnaire recently taken by the federation.

The replies to the questionnaire are said by some to have not been truly representative of the sentiments of some local boards of education. At Saturday's meeting one of the delegates said the clerk of his board had sent in the answers without proper consultation with the board members. In other instances it is claimed that one member did the answering.

A single head for the State school system is one of the things understood to have been indorsed by the majority of replies received to date. The replies number 348 out of a total of 487 boards of education throughout the State. On the question of the retention of the present teacher's tenure of service law, there was an overwhelming sentiment expressed for its abolition. Restriction of corporal punishment of pupils was approved, it was stated in the report of the questionnaire.

The annual election of officers for the Federation of District Board resulted as follows: President, John Y. Dayter, of Ramsey; vice president, Edward I. Harrison, of Chesterfield; secretary, Herbert N. Morse, of Trenton, and treasurer, Edward E. Read, Jr., of Camden.

Engineers Fix Upon Route For New Belt Line

So far as the engineering force is concerned, the route of the projected belt line railroad to connect up the trunk lines in Northern New Jersey, serving the metropolitan district, has been determined upon. The line that will be recommended to the New York-New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission will be the so-called interior line, passing through Paterson, Summit and north of Elizabeth and terminating probably for the present in Bayonne, but with provision for extension to Staten Island.

Starting at Piermont-on-the-Hudson, just above the Jersey line, the route will be straight to Paterson, passing that city near its northern boundary, thence swinging west of Little Falls, Caldwell and Essex Fells to Summit, curving a little northeast of that city, but close up, and taking a route from that point which will bring it through Elizabeth's northern environs and following a line that will enable it to use the Lehigh Valley Railroad bridge across Newark Bay to Bayonne, where, as proposed, it will terminate at a point just below the Pennsylvania Railroad. The rest of the tentative route to Staten Island has not been determined with any definiteness. The swing through the northern environs of Elizabeth will bring the line closely in touch with Newark.

Two routes have been under consideration for the proposed belt line, the alternative one, known as the outside line, beginning alos at Piermont, but swinging west of Summit and through the Great Peace Meadows, and having a terminal at some point beyond, which has been variously placed, one project having put it as far south and east as Perth Amboy, although Arthur Kill and Raritan Bay had been considered. It was explained this week by Benjamin F. Cresson, Jr., chief engineer to the joint port board, that the decision to recommend the inside route did not preclude the use of the outer one at some future time, if the demands of the situation as it develops require such use.

The route settled upon for recommendation is in part the same route that was surveyed by Irving T. Bush in connection with plans for private development of port, transportation and terminal facilities a few years ago. The Bush route, however, began at Bergenfield, in Bergen county, whereas the Harbor Board's survey has included extension to the Hudson at Piermont. The survey from the northern end of the ruote by the state engineers has been in progress since early in September, and much progress has been made. Mr. Cresson said today, however, that in order to speed completion of the survey he expected shortly to place in the field a second surveying party, to begin work at the southern terminus and work toward the party now operating on the other end.

The route selected by the engineers for recommendation to the joint board is considerably shorter than the outside route through the Great Piece Meadows. Notwithstanding the fact that the former involves the boring of two tunnels, one at Summit and the other near Paterson, which have been estimated to cost about $1,000,000 and $500,000, respectively, the engineers figure that a considerably lower total sum will provide for the construction of the inside route than would be required for the outer one.

Entering into their calculations even more closely, and largely the determining factor in the decision, is that the shorter route will in their view serve the immediate needs of the situation and take care of those now foreseen as of early development, whereas the outer route, while probably a development of the future, can wait upon a more definite need.

Freeholders Begin Work of Preparing The County Budget

The finance committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders this week began the preparation of a budget for 1919 in order that it be approved and adopted by the board before the first of the year. Whether or not there will be any appreciable increase will be a question until after the estimated needs of the various departments have been learned.

Retrenchment will be the rule wherever possible, according to Freeholder Charles A. Smith, who is chairman of the finance committee. The increased cost of running the offices and of maintaining the various county institutions, coupled with the expense of essential improvement is expected, however, to force a boost of the budget over the present year's figures of $689,000 in round figures. The county tax rate for this year is .34 plus and there are hopes of keeping it at least to .35 plus.

Two special meetings of the Board of Freeholders will have to be held during December, one at which the budget will first be discussed and again when it will have to be approved.

At one of the meetings of the finance committee the county register, surrogate, engineer and other officials will have an opportunity to offer estimates of the cost of running their offices during 1919. After then an idea of the needed increase will be had.

In adopting a budget for 1919, it will be necessary to plan ahead for the entire year. That plan was used this year, but under the old tax laws the county was able to reconsider the 1918 budget in September and increase some of the appropriations that were found to be too small. During the coming year taxes will be payable in July and December and because of that it will be impossible to make any changes in the budget once it has been approved.

It will be useless to attempt to cut many of the items in the budget and in a number increases will be in order. It is likely that the usual appropriation of $500 for the National Guard will be eliminated for the simple reason that there no longer is any such body in existence. Now that the war is ended, it may be that it will no longer be found necessary to continue the $1,000 appropriation for war emergency. That will not be definitely decided, however, until the finance committee meets, according to Freeholder Smith. There are several appropriations this year for repairs to record books and for the installing of a new filing system that will be omitted in 1919.

Just what cuts will be made in the standard appropriations or increases either is undecided. It is not expected that the Union County Mosquito Commission will need $25,000 for its work as no new projects will have to be undertaken. The election account, which is $43,000 this year, will probably be increased. The cost of the elections just passed slightly exceeded the appropriation mentioned before. The sum set aside for the paying of county employes will probably be increased also, as higher wages have been granted on several occasions during the year and may again have to be granted in the near future.

The appropriations for Bonnie Burn maintenance and for keeping the county's roads in repair are the two largest items in the budget. It is practically certain that the first of the two appropriations will be as large as for this year, but the war has caused a change in plans for roadwork and the proposed outlay is as yet uncertain.

As the 1919 road program was first made up by the road committee from the Board of Freeholders and County Engineer Bauer six weeks ago it was planned to eliminate practically all construction work and to provide for but little repair work because of war restrictions. Now the ban on materials and labor has been raised and the county may go ahead with needed improvements that will boost the original estimate of the cost.

One entirely new appropriation that will probably have to be made in the shape of a bond issue will be to pay the expense of a new bridge over the Elizabeth River at South Front street, Elizabeth. The dangerous condition of the present structure was recently brought to the attention of the Board of Freeholders and a committee was appointed to investigate. Upon the nature of the report depends whether or not a new bridge will have to be built. Extensive repairs will be necessary anyway.

Staving Off Old Age

Battery old age can't be prevented but it can be postponed.

You can keep your starter from getting rheumatic in its youth—your lamps from getting dim and your spark from losing its kick—by just a little care.

If you're in doubt about just what care is needed, you ought to drive around and ask us. It's our business to know.

There's another thing you ought to ask about—Threaded Rubber Insulation. It's the most important storage battery improvement in years.

PERSONAL

Sergeant Edward Mundy, of the Marine Corps, has returned to Paris Island after a furlough at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Clarke Mundy, of Stone street, the borough.

J. Howard Dyke, formerly advertising manager for the Record, is at present located at Fort Worth, Texas, for the benefit of his health. He has recently suffered severely from a throat trouble and physicians believed the dry climate of Texas would prove beneficial.

Captain Lewis E. Waring, of West Seventh street, who is in the remount service, was recently transferred to Camp Sheridan, Ill., for duty. Since entering the service he has spent most of his time in the northwestern states.

Privates James J. McNamee, who has been in the casualty department at Washington since his transfer from Camp Dix, expects to be mustered out of service tomorrow, and he and Mrs. McNamee will leave Washington at once for Cranford, where they will make their home in the future. Before donning the uniform Mr. McNamee was employed in the publicity department of the National City Bank and may possibly return to that position although he has received several flattering offers from newspapers in Newark, New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, which he served while official correspondent with the Twenty-ninth Division at Camp McClellan.

Thomas Harding, who is stationed at Pelham Bay, as a member of the Naval Reserves, was at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Harding, of John street, over the past week-end.

James M. Rhodes, Jr., of Jackson avenue, the borough, who has been in France since last June with the Twenty-ninth Division, is now a second lieutenant. He was promoted recently after taking the course in an officers' training school.

Peter M. Peterson, one of the oldest motormen in point of service on the local trolley system, is ill at his home on South Second street, from a complication of troubles. He has been on the Fourth street line for many years.

Private Alexander Doig, who has been stationed at the Aberdeen Proving grounds in Maryland, as a member of the aviation corps, returned to duty this week, after a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Doig, of East Fifth street.

Miss Catherine Connolly, of West Fourth street, is slowly recovering after an illness of about four weeks with influenza and pneumonia, and it is thought she may be able to be about in a few days.

Herman L. Kling, of Sandford avenue, is once again back in private life, although still wearing Uncle Sam's uniform. He was discharged last week at Camp Humphries, Accotink, Va., where he was stationed as a member of a special sanitary detachment of the Engineers' Corps. When he first went into service last spring he was located for several months at Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laing, of Richmond street, has taken possession of the former Tenney property, at 951 Park avenue, corner of Evergreen, which Mr. Laing recently purchased.

Privates James J. McCarthy, of West Fifth street, who was stricken with appendicitis while on a furlough in Plainfield, after attending his sister's funeral in October, left for Camp Humphreys, Va., Tuesday night. He has fully recovered from the operation he underwent at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Miss Evelyn Smalley, daughter of Ambrose Smalley, of Codington avenue, was married Saturday night, to Theodore J. Higgins, of Webster place. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home by Rev. J. O. McKelvey.

Theodore Allen, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Allen, of 919 West Fourth street, is recovering after a serious illness with pneumonia. The boy's sister, Mildred Eleanor Allen, first contracted the disease and died on Thanksgiving day. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, and Mrs. Allen has since been quite ill as a result of the reaction following the shock of her daughter's death.

Max A. Maximoff, of Park avenue, this city, known professionally as "Maximus," is soon to enter the ranks of the benedicts. At an informal dinner given at the Queen City Hotter, Saturday night, announcement was made of his engagement to Miss Daisy B. Allen, daughter of Henry Gilbert Allen, of New York, the well known publisher. The wedding will take place in the near future. Mr Maximoff recently enlisted in the service as a private and is now stationed at the Colonia Hospital, helping to restore wounded soldiers to better physical conditions. Miss Allen has a wide reputation as a vocalist.

Theodore W. Hile, of 214 East Fifth street, is a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital undergoing treatment for a broken leg. The injury was received when he fell downstairs at the home of a friend at 410 East Fifth street.

Samuel R. Taverner, of 514 Madison avenue, who has been seriously ill for several weeks with pneumonia, is now well on the road to recovery. Mr. Taverner's wife died during the most critical part of his illness and the news was not broken to him until a few days ago. It was a severe shock and set him back for the time being but he afterward rallied.

Hugh McDonnell, Jr., of 938 Park avenue, recently returned to the Naval Experiment Station at New London, Conn., after a furlough at the home of his parents.

Lieutenant Monroe Long, a member of the 306th Aerial Squadron, who has been stationed in England as an aviation instructor, has written to his brother, Walter L. Long, that he expects to return to Plainfield about December 15.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Walsh, Jr., who were married last Saturday night, have returned from their wedding trip and are making their home on Westervelt avenue. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's uncle, George R. Hall, of 39 Westervelt avenue, and was performed by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring. Mrs. Walsh was formerly Miss Ada C. Woodworth. Miss Augusta Allan was made of honor, and F. Irving Walsh was best man.

C. H. Brady, of East Second street; David White, of Watchung avenue, and Fred Ivamy, of Watchung, motored to a point near Whitehouse, Monday, on a hunting trip. They secured two rabbits but missed out on a lot of other game, including pheasants.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Isabel Marian Brousse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Brousse, of 714 Dixie lane, to Daniel R. McCormick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. McCormick, of 340 East Second street. Mr. McCormick is the well-known dancing instructor and at present is engaged in Knights of Columbus secretarial work at Camp Merritt.

George Terry, of the borough, is a patient in Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering from a badly sprained ankle, received a few days ago. He will be under treatment of several weeks.

John C. Traynor, Jr., of 409 East Second street, who was sent to Fort Thomas, Ky., after his entrance to the service last summer, has been transferred to Fort Travis, twenty-seven miles from San Antonio, Texas. In a letter to his parents, received this week, he states that he is working hard and drilling every day but is looking forward to a discharge in time to be home for Christmas.

John Pedeflous, formerly manager of his father's hotel on Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, has secured a position as salesman for the Firestone Tire Company. He has been given Sussex Warren and Hunterdon counties as his territory.

Paul Pope, of Park avenue, who has been at the military training quarters at Syracuse, N. Y., since his enlistment last summer, was recently transferred to Danville, N. Y. He is a member of the ambulance section of the Medical Corps.

Robert Schreiner, of the firm of Schreiner Brothers, who is confined to his home on Central avenue, because of injuries received when he was run down by an automobile several weeks ago, is now able to sit out of bed. It will be about three weeks, however, before he is able to return to business.

Announcements has been made of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Weston, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Weston, of New York, to Frederick Allan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allan, of Sandford avenue. The ceremony was performed in New York on November 14. The bridegroom has been stationed in that city as a member of the Naval Reserves but he and his bride will make their home in Plainfield after he is discharged from the service.

William McClinton, of West Third street, who is attached to the Aviation Corps, left Tuesday night, for the Aberdeen Proving grounds, Maryland, after a three weeks' furlough at home.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth McClay, daughter of Arthur C. McClay, of West Eighth street, to Sergeant James R. Trowbridge, of Easton, Pa. Sergeant Trowbridge has been in France with the American forces and Miss McClay has also been in that country as a canteen worker. No date has been set for the wedding.

County Board Exempts Soldiers From Taxes

President Lloyd Thompson, of the County Board for the Equalization of Taxes, has written Collector William R. Townsend informing him that the county board has taken the same course as the State Board of Taxes and Assessment ini the matter of exemptions under a court ruling.

The board, however, will allow claims of soldiers, as will the State body, under Chapter 7 of the Laws of 1918. Proof of service in the army must be submitted to the assessor or collector, and must take the form of an honorable discharge or certificate from the Adjutant General or from the commanding officer of the soldier making the claim.

The firemen of this city, with their State colleagues, intend to oppose the ruling affecting them. They were previously allowed exemption on $500 of valuation.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Phillips and family, of Madison avenue, left this week to make their home in New York for the winter. They will be at the Hotel Albert, Tenth street and University place.

Joy Written on Faces of First Troops Returning From "Over There"

Disappointment at their failure to get to France, a twinge or two of regret at leaving their amiable English girls, unhappy memories produced by the Atlantic in an angry mood, impatience at having to swing anchor when New York's lights were gleaming so close by—all these emotions were as snow dissipated by a warm rain when the Mauretania warped into her pier Monday, with the first contingent of the demobilized overseas troops.

There was just one general state of mind visible as the men waited to march ashore—joy. Joy, the like of wich not one of whom ever experienced before, the kind of joy that cannot be described in words and which finds its expression in such inadequate commonplaces as "Well, we're home," or "Golly, it's the good old U. S. A. underfoot."

There wasn't anything artificial, like a formal reception or a yelling, exultant crowd, to inspire these men with the happiness they exhibited. There was a band on the pier playing its repertoire through—first the New York Police Band and then a civilian band—but these fellows didn't need music. They were home, or at the end of the first lap of their journey toward home, and that was enough for them.

Except for the Red Cross canteen workers and the Knights of Columbus secretaries there was nobody on the pier to meet the ship. Out in the street in front of the Cunard piers was a waiting crowd, made up mostly of the curious, but the United States Guards let nobody pass the wire barrier unless he had a permit to show. This left the pier open and uncrowded and permitted a quick transfer from the ship to the ferry boats that took the men around to the East River and the trains that were to take them to Camp Mills.

Waiting aboard the ship or on the inclosed pier, standing with packs made up and with not even a glimpse of New York possible, had no effect on the men's cheerfulness. It took only somebody to start it to send a cheer ringing the length of the ship or resounding in the rafters of the pier shed. When each squadron's turn came to go ashore M. P.'s, smiling despite the might and majesty of their blue brassard, stood at the double gangway directing the lines to right and left. Reaching the pier in double time, the men formed in ranks and cheered again.

Practically every man of the 5,000 odd aboard the Mauretania belonged to the air service and most of the States were represented. If there was a single four-flusher among them, one who claimed to be a hero, he kept himself hidden pretty well. Most of the men went to some pains to let it be known they'd been in England all along, running the aviation fields the British Royal Flying Corps had turned over to them. Some insisted they couldn't accurately be called soldiers, but were mechanics and their outfits service troops. They wanted no credit that belonged to the line.

All agreed, though, that it was a wrench to leave England with France and the battle fields so near. The Mauretania left Liverpool in the dead of night, and there were no cheers from the men as she slipped out. The men were downhearted. Most of them hadn't been in England more than a few months—not much more than a prelude to their part in the war. The fact that they were going home didn't make itself felt. It was going back without having had a chance to get into it across the channel that filled their minds. And the four gales that turned them inside out on the way across didn't contribute any to their happiness.

A sight of the Statue of Liberty, all flood-lighted and holding aloft the welcoming torch, made all regrets and disappointments vanish. While the Mauretania lay at anchor Sunday night most of the men wrote letters to the home folk, telling of their arrival. In the morning fully a wagon load of these letters were mailed at the pier.

They hadn't much to say about "hands-across-the-sea" or what "our British cousins" thought of them. All they said was that English folk living in the communities where they were stationed couldn't have done anything more for them than the home folk themselves. Some even admitted that the English civilians were inclined to coddle them. They came away from England with a deep fondness for the people, and they have reason to believe the English have the same feeling toward them.

They had a few stories to tell of how they got along with the British troops they met. The English soldiers they liked, but the Canadians they figured were their own kind and they readily became pals with them. The Australians—well, they were "some guys."

The few Frenchmen they met they found to be "good scouts," though they were unable to hold much converse with them.

Some of them admitted they went across with the idea they were going to pull the rest of the world out of a whole. They didn't hesitate to tell the English soldiers they came across to give them a hand. Now, they said, they hadn't gotten the Englishman's viewpoint and couldn't understand then why he hadn't warmed up.

One British sergeant major they told of evidently disliked what he doubtless thought was bumptiousness. When they told him they'd come over to clean up Heinie, he became sarcastic and said something about it "taking four years to make the trip." A few wallops were exchanged up the Americans realized the Englishman had some warrant for his attitude.

One squadron made its acquaintance with the Canadians by means of a free-for-all. Nobody remembers what started it, but it was a good fight while it lasted. After it was over the Canadians and Americans, as if they had measured each other's mettle and found it good, were the fastest friends.

The Australians, they said, they had found, bore the reputation of brave and heroic fighters in action, but men whom discipline easily irked. When the news of the signing of the armistice reached one of the Australians' camps near Salisbury, they told, a celebration took place. It consisted of tearing down the barracks and ripping things up generally, and when there was no more to celebrate with the Australians started for town. The commanding general sped in his automobile to head them off, but they blithely dumped the general, his driver and the car into a ditch and kept on. A little rough, said the Americans, but they seemed to think "a good time was had by all."

Dollar Line Head Wants Government To Sell Its Ships

Opposition to government ownership or control by charter of shipping, with advocacy of sale of ships to individuals or companies at moderate prices and on reasonable terms of payment are voiced in a statement given out this week by Robert Dollar, president of the Dollar Steamship Companies. He warns that the Stars and Stripes will again disappear from the seas if "some ordinary common sense" is not injected into the laws of the company and if "useless oppressive laws and regulations" are not changed. He declares that it would be a fatal mistake not to dispose of the government's merchant marine to private ownership.

Pointing out that before the passage of the seamen's law, there were 26.05 per cent. of Japanese vessels engaged in American trade on the Pacific coast and 26.10 per cent. of American ships. Captain Dollar recites that after May 1, 1917, fifty per cent. of the vessels were Japanese and 1.97 per cent. American.

Referring to the question of remuneration, he shofs by figures taken from his books on the operation of three steamers of about the same tonnage that the American wages amounted to $3,720 a month, the British $1,308 and the Japanese $777. It is his opinion that the Japanese competition on the Western coast will extend to the Atlantic.

On the subject of chartering the ships Mr. Dollar says that charterers having no money invested will operate the ships only as long as they can make a profit, while responsible owners will keep up the business even at a loss and stay with it until times get beter. As to continued government ownership, it is his opinion that it would result in destroying the initiative of merchants in foreign trade and of the few remaining ship owners. He thinks that the administration "has another guess coming before it is permitted to carry out such a destructive and disastrous policy."

It is Captain Dollar's suggestion that the government ships should be sold at the current prices of similar ships prevailing on London, one-quarter cash and one-quarter in one, two and three years, with interest at four per cent. When the various payments fall due, the amount to be paid shall be the prevailing price in London, thereby keeping the cost of the ship so bought equal to the foreign ships while the owners are paying for them. The difference he would have charged up to the cost of the war, the same as ammunition.

It is his further suggestion that ship owners hire their crews at the full American wages and that the difference between this wage and that paid by Japanese competitors be paid by the government on proper certification by the shipping commissioners. He declares that this is no subsidy but an equalization of American as against foreign labor.

Changes Captain Dollar suggests in the seamen's law relate to modifying the licensing of officers, measurement of ships, annual inspection, the clause which states that seventy-five per cent. of the crew in each department must understand any order an officer may give, and another clause providing that sixty-five per cent. of the crew shall be certified able seamen and the division of the sailors into two watches.

Referring to an American steamship which recently cleared from San Francisco with a crew of three Hollanders, four Greeks, one Swede, two Irishmen, one Australian and three Americans, he characterized the seamen's bill, seeking to promote the welfare of American seamen, as a joke.

BIRCH ASSUMES SEAT IN CONGRESS.

William F. Birch, Representative of the Fifth New Jersey District for the unexpired term of the late Congressman Capstick, has assumed his seat in the House, having been sworn in Tuesday afternoon. New Jersey now has a full delegation of twelve members in the lower house.

President Pardons Aircraft Officials

Concurring with Attorney General Gregory in his written opinion that the ends of justice do not require the prosecution of Lieutenant Colonel George W. Mixter and Lieutenant Colonel J. G. Vincent, President Wilson at the White House, Tuesday, authorized the announcement that these officers had been pardoned for their violation of the criminal code which prohibits any person interested in the profits of a corporation from acting as agent of the government in doing business with such corporation.

Lieutenant Colonels Mixter and Vincent were mentioned in the Hughes report on aircraft production as having violated section 41 of the criminal code. While Attorney General Gregory agrees with the conclusion reached by Judge Hughes, he believes that these officers were only technically ghilty, and contemplated no fraud against the government.

Lieutenant Colonel Mixter's offense consisted in supervising inspection and production at the Curtis Aeroplane and Motor Corporation while owning twenty-five shares of the preferred stock of that concern. It was shown that after he was commissioned he had disposed of his common stock in the Curtis company but had retained his holdings of preferred stock.

Lieutenant Colonel Vincent was vice president of the Packard Motor Car Company, and at the request of the government authorities accepted a commission in the Signal Corps, resigning as an officer of the Packard company, but retaining the ownership of his stock. He was one of the designers of the Liberty motor, and his alleged offense consisted in acting for the government in arranging for the compensation to be paid the Packard company for constructing this motor.

Mrs. Feickert Replies On Delegate Question

Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, issued a statement this week in reply to the published announcement of the president of the New Jersey antisuffragists, whose organization has appealed to President Wilson not to appoint a woman delegate to the Peace Conference. Mrs. Feickert said that the antis, as usual, "distrust" all women except those of their "own little group."

She said they felt that it would be impossible for the President to select from among the thousands of patriotic, intelligent women of the country one who could present the point of view of half the citizens of the country at the peace table. They had no doubt, however, Mrs. Feickert added of their qualifications to be advisors of the President upon such an important matter.

Mrs. Feickert gives the names of the signers of a memorial to President Wilson asking him to appoint a woman delegate. She also declared that the antis' president had said that, if women delegates were to go, preference should be given to the heroic women of Europe.

"We agree with her that the women of Europe should be represented, but we do not expect President Wilson," said Mrs. Feickert, "to appoint them."

TOWN TALK SAYS OUR OFFICIALS ARE "STINGY."

Under the caption, "Something Loose Here," Newark's breezy weekly, "Town Talk," has the following to say regarding the deplorable condition of Plainfield's fire department:

"What's the matter with this pesky town called Plainfield anyway? They are so stingy and so short-sighted down there (that is the governing officials are) that they will not pay their firemen enough money to act as an inducement for firemen to serve.

"It is said that men are quitting the department to obtain other employment at better pay, though ordinarily they would prefer to continue on the city job. This depletion of the manual force, of course, cripples the fire fighting resources in the event of need, and is assuming an altogether too great a risk.

"A short distance from Plainfield is the smaller community of Westfield. In the latter place, the firemen receive better pay than is given their Plainfield brethren.

"Plainfield's regulars are compelled to work longer hours, forego days off and remain at quarters to be ready for action should anything serious turn up. They even carry their lunches with them."

NO RESTRICTIONS ON CHRISTMAS CANDY SALES.

Sales of Christmas candy will not be restricted this year either by the food administration or by voluntary agreement among confectioners. The administration announces that as the sugar shortage has been materially relieved no necessity exists for continuation of the voluntary sugar conservation plan, under which many candy stores have been refusing to sell more than one pound at a time to a customer.

ARTHUR E. SMITH QUITS THE STANDARD.

Arthur E. Smith, of this city, who has been production engineer at the Standard Aero plant in Elizabeth, resigned his position this week and will again take charge of his contracting business which has been supervised by H. N. Holder. When Mr. Smith entered the employ of the Standard it was understood that his contract with the firm would terminate as soon as the war ended.

HONORING OUR FALLEN HEROES.

Intensely gripping is the news that has begun to filter home from France. While but fragmentary as yet, it tells of the undying glory which Plainfield's soldiers, in common with others, have earned for themselves, and for their city's proud acclaims, how they went into battle undaunted, fought with sublime heroism until every obstacle was surmounted, every objective attained and passed; how they contributed their full share to the final victory.

Those who will not return still will live amongst us and be of us. Theirs will be life in memoriam, and there is a very wide binding obligation upon us to see that the memory is not dimmed. In every city of the land, for the sake of that memory, men and women will hereafter breathe a freer air and live a larger life, touched with a new spirit of dedication. What their soldiers were, what they stood for, what they obtained, will have been graven in the stones of the city's building deeper than mallet and chisel can cut, and will outlast all structures of human hands. But the heart dwells lovingly upon symbols, and the mind, inspired by noble images, goes forward quickened to new enterprises. The record of Plainfield's dead on the field of honor belongs with the records elsewhere, from coast to coast, that will stand in the eyes of our children and our children's children for all that was freest and best, all that was truest and most devoted, in this our generation.

It is well, therefore, to heed the injunction of Mayor Calkins to avoid haste in perpetuating the memory of Plainfield's heroes. Nothing is to be gained by spasmodic or hysterical effort. The Executive is to name a committee whose duty it will be to carefully receive all suggestions and deliberate long and thoroughly before recommending what form of memorial is to be the peoples' symbol of gratefulness. North Plainfield has decided upon a community building, Bound Brook has a leaning in the same direction, and at Whitehouse and other places they are planting trees, thus embodying usefulness with mute remembrance.

Our city's honor roll already contains the names of Daniel Arthur Compton, John J. Larkin, William Ross, Carl A. Lundstrom, Frank I. Donnelly, Willard Groff, Harold Storr, Louis Rothberg, Clarence Weber and Joseph Kusnutz. Their names and those of noble lads yet to come must be perpetuated as long as Plainfield upholds liberty and civilization, and hasty action will not bring its accomplishment.

THE OBSERVANCE OF BRITAIN'S DAY.

Tomorrow has been designed by our President as "Britain's Day," the occasion for all America to express its gratitude toward the empire for its valiant defense of world democracy before the United States entered the war. Mayor Leighton Calkins wants each and every Plainfielder to help in the tribute and calls upon the citizens in the following words:

Saturday, December 7th, has been designated as a special day in honor of the part played by Great Britain in the war, and for the protection afforded by her splendid navy and the valor of her fighting forces and the great sacrifices so long endured by all her people with patience, courage and unconquerable purpose.

In the larger cities, and where populations include a substantial element of British descent, special celebrations are being arranged. But everywhere the day should be observed by the display of the British flag and by our thoughtful remembrance of what we owe to our cousins beyond the seas for their early recognition of the peril which menaced not alone their liberties but ours also, striking at the very foundations of civilization. They waited patiently for us to see the light while they fought on; they showed their gratitude for our help when it came; and they have generously accepted us as equal partners with them and their allies in the great victory which has come.

Shall we, then, not bear these outstanding facts in mind on Saturday of this week, a day set apart for just this purpose, and be thankful indeed for Britain's unhesitating decision in the beginning, and for her valiant part all through the great struggle now happily at an end?

POSSIBLE RESULTS FROM THE COMING OF PEACE.

Plainfield, being the home of several big manufacturing plants, is keenly alive to the importance of industrial reorganization after the return from war to peace. To many of our thinkers it appears that the change might produce a period of unemployment or general depression but there are several reasons why they are undoubtedly wrong.

It is apparent, however, that no risk should be taken through forcing a too hasty readjustment. No risk should be taken by bringing about a too hasty demobilization of war forces.

The change from war to peace conditions, in other words, should be gradual. The industries should be given a chance to make readjustments as deliberately as it is necessary for them to do to enable them to absorb such a part of labor as is now engaged directly in war production.

Attention is called to the fact that there are more than 4,000,000 men, who represent the best brawn of the Nation, under arms. Under no circumstances will it be possible to release them all at once and return them to civilian life. It is planned to make selections among them and to send back home those who are most needed in industries. This body of men alone, in the absence of the millions that have poured into this country yearly from Europe and who have been held back from immigrating here by the war, cannot fail to constitute a force large enough to create a labor shortage, even when all war production ceases.

Attention is also called to the fact that American industries must produce heavily to supply the materials that it will be necessary to use to reconstruct the devastated sections of Europe. Men in numbers, also, must be spared to help engage in reconstruction work across the water.

There cannot fail to be a shortage of labor in Europe. It is estimated that 10,000,000 men have been sacrificed in the war struggle that Germany forced upon the world. The reconstruction work this country will be obliged, for humanitarian reasons to undertake, cannot be confined to France and Belgium. It must be carried as well in Rumania and Serbia and Turkey and Russia and Poland.

There will be demanded for the work of reconstruction on the other side of the water great quantities of steel, iron, copper, cement, lumber and other materials. Livestock must be furnished those who undertake to set up their homes again in devastated regions. Clothing and food must be furnished millions until that happy time shall come when they can provide for themselves.

It is also pointed out that the United States has before it a wonderful opportunity to open trade with South American countries and to supply our neighbors with materials formerly furnished by Germany and other nations of Europe that are now more or less commercially and industrially paralyzed.

By the exercise of patience and foresight and wisdom the United States may not alone be saved from anything of business and industrial enervation, but may be kept exceptionally well occupied and prosperous.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When the corner stone of the City Hall was laid?

When a girl didn't have to have a new dress every time she went to a dance or a party?

When New Market was a big carriage manufacturing center and 1,000 carriage makers turned out in the demonstration for President Lincoln at the close of the Civil War?

When "Bill" Schorb took Chief Townley and "Tommie" Timbo to a church festival down back of Oak Tree and introduced "Tommie" to the pastor as the son of a Plainfield minister?

When West Second street, between Park and Central avenues, was considered the only desirable residential location for a new physician and those who began their practise on this thoroughfare included Dr. Tomlinson, Dr. Endicott and the late Drs. Gillette, Glenn, Fritts, Sutphen, Long and Probasco?

"AHOY, BREST; HERE COMES THE DOVE."

We were ready and willing to become a member of the peace party but somehow or other the President overlooked us. We await the S. O. S. cablegram.

Hope to goodness, though, the present little band discovers more peace than did a certain automobile manufacturer who went abroad two years ago.

Maybe when the peace fans get around the table, somebody will explain why Germany couldn't produce a pinch hitter at the critical moment in the ninth inning.

Peace may reign in Europe but the merry war in the Senate still goes on and recent news dispatches announce the resumption of hostilities between Mrs. Feickert and the Anti-Suffragette battalions.

With respect to feeding the enemy when he surrenders, there is no escape from it. All Democratic authority counsels that course: Solomon and St. Paul, two of the greatest Democratic leaders of all time, expressly demand it.

Lieutenant George Apgar a prisoner in a German hospital, hey? Well, just take this tip from us. Before they laid that boy "Cubie" low you can bet your bottom dollar a dozen Prussians went to the happy hunting grounds and fifty others had to shake him off their shoulders.

It's getting to be a habit with Mayor Ashley, of New Bedford, Mass. On Tuesday of this week he was elected the city's chief executive for the twentieth time.

Eggs, for the very ordinary sort, eighty-four a dozen. Seven per single hen-fruit. We opine that if every household would cut its use of eggs sharply in twain, the noble egg would drop in about a week's time to some half-way decent selling price.

Another reason why we think somebody is making a serious blunder is, there are scores of theorists offering their views upon what should be done, the views vary widely and every nut of them is perfectly sure he is right.

We have a copy of the New York Herald in the sanctum dated July 3, 1863, which contains a complete casualty list of the Union officers killed in the battle of Gettysburg the day before. They were wired in from Baltimore over the one telegraph line from Maryland to New York. Think of that and then try to figure out why it is that our present casualty officials are informing relatives that soldier boys have been wounded weeks after the boys themselves have written home that they were injured but had fully recovered and were back in service again. Washington might do well to study the methods used in 1863.

A cable from Paris says the Hun peace delegates "are not to be quartered in Paris." They deserve to be drawn and quartered, but civilized nations, like the French, have stopped that sort of thing.

A Washington correspondent says the McAdoo and Burleson plan to take over the railroads, telegraph and telephones is not calculated to cost the people much money. It is calculated to cost the Democratic party all the offices.

Legislative correspondents seemed to think they are putting out a great piece of news in telling that the Public Service Corporation is taking a hand in the fight for the senatorial presidency. Nothing new in that. The Public Service has had a hand in the senatorial and assembly fights for years and nobody ever thought it was a secret. Maybe the reason why the newspaper men think they have struck something good is because the P. S. C. is coing out real bold on account of the tight squeeze the sixty per cent. fare increase is having.

"It is unfortunate that the story of our negotiating for the purchase of this coal yard property should have reached the Courier-News in advance of an opportunity for the street committee to present the matter to the Council but that cannot be helped now."—Courier-News.

Gosh ole Hemlock, don't that Courier-News just hate itself?

Died In Battle As He Predicted

1, when Company G, 311th Infantry, of which he was a member, was making the dash on Sedan. His home was originally in New York but he had lived in Plainfield for several years previous to entering the service.

Three other Plainfield young men have been reported during the past week as being killed in action although in one case it is believed a mistake has been made. This is in relation to Corporal Henry Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Miller, of 314 Watchung avenue, the borough. The official telegram stated he had been killed in action on August 26, but the parents have received several letters from him dated later than that, the last one having been written on November 6. Washington has been wired for further details, if any, are to be had. Corporal Miller was graduated from the North Plainfield High School and was taking an engineering course at Valparaiso, Ind., at the time he enlisted. He was attached to the Engineers' Corps of the overseas force.

The other Plainfielders who paid the extreme price, according to official information, were Private Clarence Weber, son of George Weber, of 1145 West Fifth street, and Corporal Louis Rothberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kalman Rothberg, of Madison avenue. A fourth fatality of local note is that of Private Carlos Costales, of New Market, who was a student at the Plainfield High School a short time. The latter was killed on October 16, according to a telegram received by his father, Antonio Costales, of New Market.

Private Weber was twenty-three years old and was a member of the Marine Corps. The message received by his father, who has been employed as motorman on the local trolley system for many years, said that the young man had been killed on September 15. He was employed at the Saurer Motor plant at the time of his enlistment last spring. He was a very likeable young man and an active worker at the Monroe Avenue church.

Corporal Rothberg was a member of Company A, 311th Infantry, and was killed on November 1. He was associated for many years with his brother, Sam Rothberg, at the clothing store conducted by the latter on West Front street until last spring. Since then Sam Rothberg has been in business at Atlanta, Ga., but came to Plainfield this week when news of Louis' death was received. Beside his parents and brother Sam, the hero soldier leaves two other brothers and two sisters. They are Harvey Rothberg, a member of the Naval Reserve stationed at Pelham Bay; Harry Rothberg, of Muskegon, Oklahoma; Mrs. Alex Cramer, of New York, and Miss Sadie Rothberg, living at the parental home.

POSTER DESIGNED BY MISS HADDON FIRST IN C. O. S. CONTEST.

Miss Edith Van Boskerck and Mrs. Henry Wells, appointed as a committee to award prizes for the Plainfield or North Plainfield school pupils submitting the best poster designs advertising the Charity Organization Society's entertainment at the Plainfield High School on Saturday afternoon, December 14, made known their decisions yesterday. Miss Constance Hadden was awarded the first prize, Miss Alleyne Macnab, second prize, and Miss Dorothy Durrant, third prize, all three being pupils at the Plainfield High School. Honorable mention was accorded Miss Emily Van Winkle, of the North Plainfield High School.

The C. O. S. entertainment is arranged especially for children and this year promises to be the best ever. It will consist of appropriate moving pictures, the most wonderful magician who ever pulled rabbits, chickens and almost everything out of a hat, a grab-bag and other things calculated to tickle juveniles. Adults who cannot attend or who have no children to send, might make at least one youngster happy by giving him a ticket for the entertainment. The proceeds will be used by the C. O. S. for the furtherance of its charitable work.

Tickets for the entertainment may be procured at Miller's drug store at Fourth street and Park avenue.

New Year Will See Change in City Council

Ackerman will succeed himself and Arthur Lovell will be the new representative for this district. The latte rsucceeds Philip S. Suffern, who was appointed to temporarily fill the unexpired term of John S. Dahl. Mr. Dahl resigned from the Council to become superintendent of construction at the City Hall.

There will be no change in the representation of the Third ward. G. Herbert Condict has been re-elected from this district and Thomas F. Hylan also continues in office.

In the Fourth ward there has been considerable moving around the past year. Charles C. Graves, who represented the district for nearly two years, resigned as Fourth ward representative because of his removing to the Third ward. At the last election, he was returned to the Council-at-large. Mr. Graves' place in the Fourth ward is to be taken by James A. Maynard, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term and afterward elected. Arthur E. Force, the well-known department store proprietor, will be the Fourth ward councilman, succeeding Mr. Blatz.

Beside Mr. Graves, who was appointed councilman-at-large to succeed Leslie R. Fort, resigned, the other councilmen-at-large are Peter J. McDonough and Chauncey L. Hight. The councilmen themselves feel that they will sufer a distinct loss in the retirement of Mr. Blatz but inasmuch as Mr. Hylan has been a most progressive and wide-awake solon the duties of president will be carried on in the same thorough manner as in the past few years. As a body, the Council is one of the strongest in its make-up that has been noted in a long time, and fully capable of meeting all the exigencies that will naturally follow the close of the war.

Fourteenth Local Lad to Die on Field

grocery on West Third street. He was quiet and unassuming in manner but having lived here all his life was known and liked by hundreds of people. His father is in the employ of Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed.

Beside his parents and brother, George, the young hero is survived by two sisters, the Misses Viola and Maude Mundy, of this city.

Among the Plainfielders recently announced as being wounded in action are: Edward F. Stevenson, of Watchung avenue, gassed and shell-shocked; John B. Coughlan and Edward Coughlan, of Leland avenue, shrapnel wounds; John R. Smith, of Everett place, hit by machine gun bullets; James Gordon, Steiner place, hit by shrapnel; Harry V. Bordon, Jr., of Hillside avenue, wounded slightly; Corporal Stanley J. Hanzel, East Second street, wounded slightly; Louis B. Strong, of Belvidere avenue, and Rev. J. W. Flynn, pastor of Monroe Avenue church, who was serving as chaplain, gassed.

Well Known Couple To Be Wedded Sunday.

A wedding of much interest to the Italian population of Plainfield and Scotch Plains will take place in St. Mary's church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Miss Mary Vuoldi, of Hunter avenue, Scotch Plains, will become the wife of Victor DeMarco, of 766 St. Mary's avenue, this city.

A large gathering of relatives and friends will be present as 150 invitations have been issued. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan is to perform the ceremony. Miss Vuoldi will be attended by Miss Josephine Esolde, of St. Mary's avenue, while Orseste Didario, of Leland avenue, will be best man. The nuptial ceremony will be followed by a reception at Sobieski Hall on East Second street. Mr. DeMarco is the son of Tony DeMarco, the well-known organizer and leader of Italian societies, who has a very wide acquaintance. The former is employed as tailor by Harry Hook, the West Front street clothier. Miss Vuoldi has a wide acquaintance in both Plainfield and Scotch Plains.

COMMUNITY CHEST PLAN MEETING WITH APPROVAL

Following the decisions at the citizen's gathering Tuesday night to install the Community Chest idea in securing and distributing funds for Plainfield charities, the matter has been discussed widely and invariably has given general satisfaction. Details for the commencement and gradual working plan for the chest idea is now being worked out by representatives of the various organizations affected.

The Mayor's public hearing on the Community Chest plan was held Tuesday night in the Council chamber and was well attended. Mayor Calkins explained how it had first been suggested to have a War Chest, combining war activities with local philanthropies, but that the National campaign consolidating the war activities and the termination of the war itself, now opened the way for a permanent incorporated society, to decide on the extent to which the local charities should appeal for public aid, and to manage a single yearly campaign to raise the sum by popular subscription.

The Mayor stated that a preliminary meeting had been held last summer, to consider the chest idea, to which all the local philanthropies, business and civic organizations and representative citizens generally had been specially invited by letter to attend, and the public generally through the newspapers. That meeting went on record in approval of the proposal, and the Mayor was authorized to request the local societies and institutions to take formal action for or against it.

He then called upon the delegates from these organizations to state their attitude, and they all voted in favor of a Community Chest, agreeing to accept the budget allotments as fixed by a disinterested and impartial budget committee of the organization, it being understood that the budget shall contain an item for emergencies and contingencies, and also that all of the principal charities which have heretofore had general public support, enter the chest. The following agencies and societies by their authorized representatives so voted: Muhlenberg Hospital, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Red Cross (for local support), Charity Organization Society, Hebrew Charity Organization, Y. M. H. A., Y. W. H. A., Anti-Tuberculosis League, Salvation Army, Day Nursery, Visiting Nurse Association.

The public hearing was then formally opened, and many citizens spoke but no opposition whatever was voiced. S. H. Voorhees said that he entertained some doubts as to whether charities would not lose some of their separate and individual interest, if people gave to a common fund, but he realized that after all the essential thing is that all worthy objects shall be adequately supported, and he was prepared to support the chest plan, if the meeting should so decide.

Those who spoke in favor of the plan were C. W. McCutchen, J. Herbert Case, William Newcorn, F. J. Hubbard, A. M. Harris, W. M. Wherry, Dr. Yood, Henry Rosenbaum, S. D. Lounsbery, and others, including of course the delegates from societies.

The Mayor closed the public hearing after all had spoken who wished, it appearing that no one was present to record his objection. "In view of the wide publicity given to this matter since last summer, the detailed explanations in the papers as to the form of organization to be undertaken, the invitations by personal letter and public notice to attend this hearing, I feel that this matter has been decided in such a way that criticism of a Community Chest from now on will be out-of-order and should be 'adjourned,' at least until after a year's trial," declared the Mayor at the end of the hearing.

Mr. McCutchen then moved that the Mayor be requested to name a committee, authorized to organize a Community Chest as outlined by the Mayor, including incorporation and all necessary details. The vote on the motion was unanimous. Mayor Calkins said he would name the committee within a day or two.

15,000 FIXED AS GOAL IN RED CROSS - MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

With 12,000 renewals and 3,000 additional new names as the goal, the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter of the Red Cross is mobilizing its forces for the big Christmas membership drive to begin December 16 and continue one week. Every household in the city, borough and suburbs is to be visited by the force of workers now being organized. A dollar and the expressed willingness to do all possible in aid of the great Red Cross Society are all that are required for initiation into the greatest mercy society of all times.

The roll call in this section will he conducted for the chapter by a committee consisting of George L. Babcock, chairman; C. W. McCutchen, Edward H. Ladd, G. M. Holstein, Francis K. Anderson, Sherman B. Joost, Wilbur H. Rogers, James R. Joy, Mrs. C. A. Reed and Mrs. F. D. Warren.

Headquarters will be opened within a few days in the Marsh building on Park avenue, which has been the center of so much effective war work and whose window still shows the scars of the great explosion. Miss Edna Brown will be the secretary, and Laurens H. Van Buren, assistant secretary.

At a meeting of the roll call committee held at the chapter headquarters Saturday night the following sub-committees were announced: Press, J. R. Joy; public meeting, J. Hartley Mellick; theatres, William Newcorn; posters, Katharine Bowmann; booths, Mrs. George L. Babcock.

The leaders are: A—C. S. Smineck; B—Walter H. Freeman; C—Francis Blatz; D—H. A. Robinson; E—Dr. O. B. Whitford; F—John M. Lewis; G—E. C. R. Laidlaw; H—C. W. McGee; I———; J—E. F. Shepard; Scotch Plains—G. F. Johnson; Fanwood—Mrs. A. I. Nicholls; New Market—A. C. Nelson; Watchung—W. H. Campbell.

There will be a mass meeting in the High School Auditorium on Saturday night, December 14, in the interest of the roll call, on which occasion an American Red Cross worker who won the croix de guerre in the recent fighting in France will speak and a three-reel war film will be shown.

On the Sabbath preceding the 16th, when the canvass begins, all ministers of religion are asked to call the attention of their congregations to the merciful work of the Red Cross and to prepare them for the visit of the enrolling officers.

MRS. A. MARION SEMPLE GETS ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

Mrs. R. Marion Semple, of Elm street, Westfield, yesterday received a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, Dr. James E. Semple, for statutory causes committed with Mrs. Mae McCarthy, of Elizabeth, during July, 1918. The decree was signed by Chancellor Edwin Robert Walker, of the Court of Chancery, upon the report and recommendation of Special Master Charles M. Dolliver, of this city, before whom testimony was taken. Counselor Vincent W. Nash, Jr., of this city, represented Mrs. Semple.

The Semples were married on January 1st, 1912, and have lived in Westfield for the past three years. Mrs. Semple was awarded alimony and counsel fees on the application of Mr. Nash.

Mrs. Semple has been very active in Red Cross work both in Westfield and Plainfield and has done much to make life worth while for the boys "Over There."

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. ETHEL COLLYER JOHNSON.

Ms. Ethel Collyer Johnson, a former resident of Plainfield, died Sunday at Loomis, N. Y., where she had been living for some time. She was related by marriage to John Kirkner, of West Eighth street, the late Mrs. Kirkner having been her sister. The funeral was held at Runyon's undertaking parlors at 402 Park avenue, yesterday afternoon in charge of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson. Burial was made privately in Hillside cemetery.

MISS VIOLA APGAR FOX.

Miss Viola Apgar Fox, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Schenck and the late Edward Fox, died Tuesday at Bonnie Burn, after a long illness. After the death of her father, she had lived most of the time with relatives at Newark. She was in her twentieth year.

The funeral will be held at the chapel of Cole & High, 200 West Second street, this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of Rev. C. S. Mooney, of Elizabeth. Burial will be in the family plot in the Presbyterian cemetery, Flemington.

CORP. ROBERT H. POLLOCK, JR.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Pollock, of 3812 Powelton avenue, Philadelphia, recently received word that their son, Corporal Robert H. Pollock, Jr., had died in France, on November 1, of pneumonia. The news is of much interest to Plainfielders as the family resided on Hillside avenue, this city, until two years ago. The death of the son is the second bereavement Mr. and Mrs. Pollock have suffered recently, as on October 12 their daughter, Gladys, aged twenty years, died of the same disease in Philadelphia that proved fatal to her brother.

Corporal Pollock was twenty-one years old and was graduated from the Plainfield High School in 1916. The family removed to Philadelphia shortly after his graduation and he entered the University of Pennsylvania for the study of medicine, it having been his intention to become a physician. Shortly after war was declared, he enlisted in the Medical Corps and was a member of an overseas unit when attacked by pneumonia. The young man had a host of friends in Plainfield and vicinity to whom news of his death has come with many regrets. Numerous expressions of sympathy have been conveyed to the doubly-stricken parents as both son and daughter gave promise of brilliant careers.

GARRET SHEPHERD.

The funeral of Garret Shepherd, who died at his home on Harmony street, the borough, Wednesday morning, will be held this afternoon at J. J. & C. A. Higgins' chapel on West Fourth street, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, will officiate and burial will be in the new cemetery at Somerville.

Mr. Shepherd was born in the borough thirty-six years ago and had always lived there. After finishing his education in the Somerset Street School, he learned the trade of carpenter. This he followed with various local contractors until his last illness began early in the year. He was a member of the Carpenters' Union and a former member of the North Plainfield Fire Department.

The deceased is survived by his mother, Mrs. Phoebe Shepherd; one brother, Harry Shepherd, of the borough, and two sisters, Mrs. Samuel C. Terry, of West Front street, and Mrs. Percy L. Gaddis, of Bayonne.

PRIVATE DONALD GASTON.

Private Donald Gaston, son of Dr. and Mrs. William Gaston, of Lordsburg, California, and for many years a resident of this city, died last week at Camp Hancock, Ga., where he was attached to an army unit. He was first stricken with scarlet fever but this disease had practically run its course when he contracted pneumonia. It was then realized that his condition was hopeless and word was sent to his parents. The latter hurried east from California and reached the young man's bedside just before he died.

The body was taken at once to Downington, Pa., where the funeral was held and where interment was made in the family plot.

Private Gaston was about twenty-five years old. He was born in this city and was graduated from the Plainfield High School. The family lived for a long time at Fifth and New streets and later on West Front street, near Plainfield avenue. The father was a practicing physician but about eight years ago gave up the medical profession to superintend an orange grove which he purchased at Lordsburg, fifteen miles from Pasadena. Donald was assisting him in this work when he answered the call to his country's colors. He had a wide acquaintance in Plainfield and news of his death was received with extreme regret.

Beside his parents, the young man is survived by a sister living at the parental home in Lordsburg, and one brother, William Gaston, now living at Fruitland Park, Florida. The latter is a son-in-law of Clarence Woodcock, of West Seventh street, his wife previous to her marriage having been Miss Eleanor Woodcock.

WRIGHT BABCOCK.

The funeral of former Mayor Wright Babcock, of Fanwood, who died at his home in that borough, Saturday, was held at the family residence, Tuesday morning. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of this city, was in charge of the service which was private and burial was in Trinity cemetery, New York.

Mr. Babcock was the son of the late Paul and Emily Starr Babcock and was seventy years old. He was engaged in the oil business in New York for a long time as senior member of the firm of Babcock & Cox, but retired from active work about ten years ago. He was interested in the development of Fanwood and beside serving as mayor in 1911 was a member of the Common Council for several years.

Beside his wife, Mr. Babcock is survived by one daughter, Miss Bessie Babcock, of Fanwood, and two sons, Dudley, of New York, and Henry, at present in service in France.

Fliers Training in Elizabeth to Carry Mails to Chicago

Aerial mail service between New York and Chicago will begin about December 15, Captain B. B. Lipsner, superintendent of the aerial mail division of the Postoffice Department, announced this week.

Captain Lipsner also said that twelve army fliers, who have been selected to pilot the big Handley-Page planes over the route, will begin training today at Elizabeth. These planes carry one and a half tons.

The New York-Chicago air route will shorten the period required for the transmission of mail between the two cities by seven to twelve hours.

White Star Lost Ten Large Vessels in War

Ten large steamships, aggregating 180,379 gross tons, were lost by the White Star Line during the war, it has been made known in an official report. Among these was the Britannic, 43,158 gross tons, torpedoed in the Aegean Sea in 1916, shortly after her completion, while in British government service as a hospital ship.

Other large White Star liners lost were the Justicia, 32,234 tons; Oceanic, 17,274; Arabic, 15,801; Laurentic, 14,892; Cymric, 13,370; Afric, 11,999; Georgic, 10,077; Cevic, 8,301, and Delphic, 8,273.

War losses of the Atlantic Transport Line were five ships totaling 61,665 tons, and of the Red Star Line one ship, the Southland, 11,899 tons.

Miss Gertrude Sharp, of 521 East Second street, who recently went abroad as an accountant for the Red Cross, is now located in Paris.

No Restrictions Now On Christmas Gifts

Mayor Leighton Calkins, in a statement given out Wednesday, announced the removal of the National and State Councils of Defense ban on indiscriminate Christmas presents as follows:

"Regarding the restrictions on the sale of Christmas goods limiting the same to what was defined to be useful and necessary gifts rather than luxuries, which restrictions were imposed by the National Council of Defense last summer, I am now able to advise that on account of the determination of the war and as an essential step in the re-establishing of normal conditions, the National and State Councils of Defense have not only lifted the ban on holiday buying but recommend that everything possible be done to give natural impetus to the re-employment of those who were engaged in the production of holiday material and in the holiday trade generally. The transition stage is such that everything possible should be done to facilitate getting back into the ordinary pursuits of life the working forces transferred to other pursuits during the war."

Cheaper Train Meals For Returning Soldiers

Dollar meals on railroad diners will be served for seventy-five cents to soldiers returning home after being mustered out. Director General McAdoo announced this week, as a further means of enabling the discharged soldiers' allowance of three and one-half cents a mile to cover traveling expenses. Previously Mr. McAdoo had reduced the coach fare from three to two cents a mile for these soldiers.

Complete Placement of New Jersey's Old National Guard

Adjutant General Gilkyson has completed the preparation of a table showing the reorganization or assignment of former State units of the National Guard, all but two of which are now included in the Twenty-ninth Division. The information is interesting as a means of identifying the probable location of National Guard units in the present army.

The former division headquarters of the National Guard has been reorganized as the headquarters of the Fifty-seventh Infantry Brigade, Twenty-ninth Division.

The First Infantry, except Company K, is now comprised in the 113th Infantry, while Company K is included in the 104th Engineers, Twenty-ninth Division.

The Fourth Infantry, except part of the supply company, headquarters company, machine gun company and Company L, is also part of the 113th Infantry. The headquarters company of the Fourth, except the band and part of the supply company, is distributed throughout the Twenty-ninth Division. The band is at Camp Dix. The machine gun company forms a part of the 110th Machine Gun Battalion and Company L a part of the 104th Engineers, both in the Twenty-ninth Division.

The Fifth Infantry, except Company F, forms part of the 114th Infantry, Twenty-ninth Division. Company F is included in the 104th Engineers.

The Second Infantry (Trenton), except the band, machine gun company and Companies G and L is included in the 113th Infantry. The band is distributed throughout the Twenty-ninth Division. The machine gun company and Company L are part of the 110th Machine Gun Battalion, Twenty-ninth Division. Company G is part of the 104th Engineers.

The Third Infantry (Camden) is distributed among the 111th Machine Gun Battalion, 104th Engineers and 114th Infantry, except the band, which is at Camp Upton. The machine gun company forms part of the 111th Machine Gun Battalion. Companies I and L are part of the 104th Engineers. The headquarters company, except the band, supply company, First Battalion, Second Battalion, and Companies K and M, form part of the 114th Infantry.

The headquarters of the First Separate Squadron of cavalry is assigned to division headquarters troops of the Twenty-ninth Division. Troops A and C are assigned to 104th headquarters and military police of the Twenty-ninth Division, and Companies B and E to the 112th Field Artillery of the Twenty-ninth Division.

The regiment of field artillery, except Battery E, is comprised in the 112th Field Artillery. Battery F comprises part of the 104th Trench Mortar Battery, Twenty-ninth Division.

The First Battalion of Engineers forms part of the 104th Engineers, Twenty-ninth Division.

The First Battalion Signal Corps (Companies A and C) is comprised in the 104th Field Sanitary Battalion, Twenty-ninth Division.

Ambulance Company No. 1 is included in the 117th Sanitary Train, Forty-second Division.

Field Hospital Company No. 1 forms part of the 104th Sanitary Train, Twenty-ninth Division.

The First Company, Coast Artillery, is now part of the Seventh Company (Delaware) Coast Defense Corps.

The Second Company, Coast Artillery, has been reorganized as Battery D, Second Trench Mortar Battery.

Building Material Prices Are Becoming More Reassuring

It is becoming daily more apparent in building material and construction markets that the building investor is seeking more assurance of stability of price and basic cost of construction before releasing any enterprises, according to The Dow Service Daily Building Reports this week.

In consequence of the general recognition of this tendency trade meetings are to be held in New York, at Atlantic City, Pittsburgh, Chicago and, in fact all parts of the country this week and next, and the keynote of all will be how to insure price stability and uniform construction costs. The Building Trades Employers' Association of New York took a forward step last week to insure the stability of the labor situation when the Board of Governors adopted a resolution to the effect that "all trade agreements expiring at the end of 1918 may be renewed for a time not exceeding one year, and that trade associations shall not agree to pay a wage in excess of that now being paid, as set forth in a schedule, in any new agreement made for the year 1919." This schedule fixed the per diem rate of wages for carpenters, $5.50; same for shops, $5.00, (in all boroughs); composition roofers and waterproofers, $4.25 (January 1st, 1919, $4.75); concrete workers, laborers, $3.60 (January 1st, 1919, $4.00); elevator constructors, $5.52; elevator contractor's helpers, $3.25; house shorers, $4.50; painters, $5.-50; plasterers, $5.50; plasterers' laborers, $4.50; stone cutters, $6.00; woodworkers, $35.00 per week, minimum. This schedule included the resolution that "the rates of wages now being paid shall be strictly adhered to by all members of the association until the expiration of the existing trade agreement, except in the case of those existing agreements which provide for additional increases." The schedule includes:

Asbestos workers, $5.50; helpers for same, $4.00; bricklayers, $7.00; laborers for same, $4.00; cement masons, $5.60; dock builders, $5.00; electricians, $6.00; helpers for same, $3.00; engineers, $6.50; housesmiths (structural), $7.00; housesmiths, finishers, $6.40; marble cutters and setters, $6.00; marble carvers, $6.-50; marble polishers, bed-rubbers, sawyers, $5.30; Mosaic workers, (helpers), $4.00; plumbers, $6.00; slate and tile roofers, $6.40 (January 1, 1919, $6.50); steamfitters, $6.00; helpers for same, $3.40; $4.00 when working eight hours or less); roofers and sheet metal workers, $5.60 (July 1, 1919, $5.80); stone setters, $7.00; tile layers, $6.00; helpers for same, $3.65.

The window glass situation is typical of practically every other basic building commodity at present. Stocks were never so low. Jobbers stocks are sufficient for any moderate demand, but since manufacturing interests had laid their plans for a very much restricted output during the season just starting, it will be impossible for them to produce glass in the quantities that probably will be called for. Therefore the strain upon current jobbers' stocks is beginning to be felt. The present season was to have started on December 5th, but because of the desire of manufacturers to conform to the wishes of the War Service Committee, no repairs to plants had been made during the idle period and with two years' depreciation it is impossible to throw in anything like plant capacity at present. Some will be able to start, but architects and contractors will not be able to figure on anything like adequate stocks until well into the close of the present season. There will be little or no glass at hand to replenish stocks until the middle of January. This alone would affect prices, but the skilled artisans of the glass industries have had up for some time a wage increase proposition which probably will be partially granted. This fact positively assures a still further advance in price, but it is upon that point that conferences at Pittsburgh and elsewhere are being called so that every possible influence can be exerted to keep prices from skyrocketing and thus chill the enthusiasm of the prospective builder to immediately start his building program. In the mean time the New York glass distributors report a notable increase in the number of plans they have been asked to figure and taking this as a basis it may be accepted as a fact that a good building movement can be made a reality if present construction costs are not further inflated by reason of arbitrary price advances in building materials or labor.

ON PRESIDENTIAL SHIP.

Patrick J. Powers, of 133 Jackson avenue, this city, is chief petty officer in the enlisted crew of the steamer "George Washington," which is bearing President Wilson and his party to Europe. Mr. Powers enlisted in the navy a year ago and during the progress of the war made a dozen round trips across the Atlantic with the "George Washington," which served as a troop transport.

Women Leaders Plan Conclave in Holland

A big peace conference of women is planned for February in Holland, with international delegates present from all countries, including Germany and Austria.

The session, if finally arranged, will be under the auspices of the International Central Committee of Women for Permanent Peace, of which Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago, is president.

Mrs. Louis F. Post, wife of Assistant Secretary of Labor Post, interviewed Secretary of State Lansing this week asking his views of the project.

He informed her that he saw no objections now to the congress, according to Miss Addams.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held Monday in Boston to determine upon time and place of the session. As tentatively outlined, the conference will be meeting during the fifth week of the general peace session. Its purpose, according to Miss Addams, is mainly to move world opinion as to woman's position on the questions affecting a durable peace.

When first considered, the session was regarded as likely to have influence with the general peace session. Miss Addams now foresees the possibility that the main peace conference will be adjourned by the time the women's gathering meets.

It was hoped to have the meeting at Paris, but it is now felt that this would be inadvisable, as German and Austrian delegates might be barred from the French capital.

This committee, it was recalled, held a session in Holland in 1915, about a month after the arrival of the Ford peace ship abroad. Miss Addams pointed on that the committee has no connection, however, with the Ford party and its platform includes many propositions similar to President Wilson's peace ideas—among them the league of nations.

Miss Addams said Secretary Lansing told her the matter of American delegates attending would be up to the passport section largely to decide, but she gained the impression that there is no real obstacle in the way of meeting. She had previously seen Secretary Baker, who, she said, listened to her proposal in "friendly fashion."

Incidentally, Miss Addams revealed that the State Department had counseled against any reply at this time to the German women's appeal for American aid addressed to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Miss Addams.

Ten Months, at Least, To Bring Troops Home

Boston, New York, Newport News, Va., and Charleston, S. C., are the ports the War Department now plans to use for the return of the army from overseas. Even with this wide distribution of the strain on port facilities and transportation, however, and with German ships now idle in German harbors employed on the task, careful estimates show that the last of the army could not possibly reach the United States in less than eight months. Conservative calculations, upon which preparations by the department probably will be based, fix ten months as the minimum.

These estimates have been made wholly on the basis of the physical difficulties to be overcome, and do not take into consideration the question of the retention in Europe for some time of an American force which may be agreed upon at the peace conference. If the return movement, already in progress, is continued at full speed, the last division, in all probability, could not reach the United States before October, 1919.

Treasury Officials See Mix-Up Ahead In Tax Collections

Chaotic conditions in the collection of taxes next year now seem unavoidable, according to a Treasury statement, which has been prepared commenting on the delay of Congress in enacting the pending revenue bills. This statement, to be made public shortly, will explain why the internal revenue bureau now is proceeding with plans to collect taxes under the oldl aw, with its levies far below those proposed in the new measure.

The only way to avoid resorting to collections under the old law, the Treasury now believes, as for Congress to rush the bill to completion within two weeks. Most House and Senate leaders do not believe this possible. In fact, leaders of both parties are said to share the opinion at the Treasury that the measure even may not be enacted at this session. Consequently, the situation appears to be that all the work of Congress in revenue legislation during the past six months may go for naught and that the present revenue law will be enforced for another year with possibly a few additional levies.

Revision of the war revenue bill was substantially completed last week by the Senate finance committee. Amendments perfecting the program of raising $6,000,000,000 in 1919 were adopted and by a strict party vote the committee formally approved Chairman Simmons' plans to limit the revenue to $4,000,000,000 in 1920 through reduction of individual and corporation income rates, elimination of the war profits tax and reduction of the excess profits rates.

With the seven Republicans of the committee voting solidly in opposition, the ten Democrats adopted Chairman Simmons' plan for 1920 to reduce the normal income tax rate for individuals and corporations from twelve to eight per cent., to abolish the eighty per cent. war profits rate after 1919, and to reduce the excess profits rates in 1920 to a minimum of twenty per cent. and a maximum of forty per cent., or two-thirds of the 1919 rate.

Chairman Simmons plans to report the bill to the Senate some time next week. The Republicans announced their intention to oppose inclusion of 1920 rates in the bill and may file a minority report.

Anthracite Supervision Continues Until April 1

Announcement was made this week by Fuel Administrator Garfield that price restrictions on bituminous coal might be removed within two weeks, but that supervision would be exercised all winter over the production and distribution of Anthracite coal.

Although nothing definite was given out, this statement of Dr. Garfield was taken to mean that the fuel administration would not go out of business as a going concern before April 1, 1919, the beginning of the new coal year. No information has been given to State Fuel Administrator Jenkinson as to the probable duration of the fuel administration.

Arguments that the fuel administration would cease to exist after peace had been declared have no foundation in fact, it has been declared, as, under the terms of the Lever act, by the provisions of which the fuel administration functions, it is stated that "all rights and liabilities under this act arising before its termination shall continue and may be enforced in the samer manner as if the act had not terminated. Any offenses committed and all penalties, forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to such termination may be prosecuted or punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been terminated."

Tom Mix Here In New Fox Production

Tom Mix, the William Fox star who ranks foremost as a portrayer of dramatic Western roles and is the screen's greatest dared-evil, will be in an entirely new character in "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," which will be shown for the first time at the Plainfield Theatre today and repeated again tomorrow.

The role that the intrepid Mix plays in this newest Fox production is different from those that he has most recently appeared in but the action still takes place in the great West.

"Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," shows the inner workings of the Secret Service against the activities of the great German spy plot to cripple the great war industries of the United States. It tells of the work of two Germans, ostensibly affiliated with a renegade labor organization who try to cause a strike in one of the great tungsten mines which the War Department is depending as a source for material for its mighty guns.

Mix's portrayal of William Logan, the secret service man, will keep one in suspense throughout the picture. The photoplay abounds in patriotic thrills and a real love story that engages one's sympathies for the man who is unable to justify himself in the eyes of his sweetheart until the unexpected finale.

The program at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow will include a vaudeville offering headed by Ward and Shack, Broadway's favorite comedians, in their newest comedy conception, "Fun In a Box Car." Others on the bill will be Minnie Stanley and Company in the dramatic playlet, "Saved;" "Scissors," the world's cleverest paper cutter, and shadowgraphist; and Folletts' monkies, the funniest group of trained Simeons ever seen on the stage.

"Kiss Burglar's" Author Says Women Crave Romance

"The American woman makes the American theatre and what the American woman demands of the theatre is romance and sentiment—the romance and sentiment that the American man does not give her in her daily life."

Glen McDonough, author of the book and lyrics, of "The Kiss Burglar," the musical comedy beautiful scheduled to appear at the Plainfield Theatre next Friday afternoon and evening, December 13, so sizes up one phase of the present-day dramatic situation. "Women in America are starved for love," Mr. MacDonough declares. "There is a lot of talk about our men making ideal husbands. Well, so they do, so far as giving their wives all they want of things material and making few exactions in return. They do not dominate a woman as does your Englishman or your foreigner—they are not jealous or watchful nor exacting, perhaps, but if they do not require much, so, by the same token they do not give much. Materially yes, they are lavish and beautiful, but of themselves they give little or nothing. And so the poor, starved, sentiment craving, heart-hungry American wife must needs get her love scenes and her love thrills from the books she reads and the plays she sees."

"The Kiss Burglar" is a light here—very light. The point of the story is what I have tried to make an exquisite love story. Love has been handled so flippantly, so almost farcically in this modern musical comedy that I have tried to get away from all viewpoint and instill more idealism into my little romance. And in order to do that we have selected people eminently fitted to present the idea. Raymond Hubbell has written the music and it's a known fact that he has more successes to his credit than any American composer. "The Kiss Burglar" will appear here as seen at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York city, for six solid months. With an enormous company and the famous Peacock Alley chorus, together with the original Cohan Theatre production.

Plenty of Features xt Tuesdays Burlesque Offering

Next Tuesday at the Plainfield Theatre, James E. Cooper, the noted producer, will present his first edition of "The Best Show in Town," headed by those well known comedians, Frank Hunter, Manny Koler, and Frank Wesson in a new and novel musical comedy in two acts and twelve scenes. This company forms one-fifth of the list of burlesque attractions which Mr. Cooper has on tour this year and it is said to be one of the biggest singing and laughing shows that will visit this city during the current season.

The play is a musical comedy in two acts and twelve scenes from the pen of that witty writer, William K. Wells, who also composed the lyrics. The music was written by Hal Dyson. The entire production has been staged under the personal direction of Mr. Cooper and Raymond B. Perez has arranged the musical numbers for the large and attractive singing and dancing chorus.

During the course of the action of the piece, The Davenports, otherwise known as the Posing Act Le Luxe, will interpolate their specialty of special poses in marble. There is also a number of other star vaudeville acts that will be given at various times during the play.

The cast, in addition to the comedians, also includes Lynn Cantor, Helen McArdle, Morris Lloyd, Margie Winters, Virginia Ware and many others.

There is also a particularly pretty singing and dancing chorus numbering more than a score of girls who are noted for their ability and for the handsome gowns which they wear.

Americans Full of Fight Up to Minute Armistice Put Seal on German Defeat

How the American forces battling on the Woevre Plain not only saw to it that there was no slowing up of effort before the signing of the armistice, but also reached a veritable climax of strength, is graphically told by newspaper correspondent who, from a height overlooking the Woevre battlefield, was an eye-witness of the operations. This point, opposite Metz, afforded a comprehensive view of a telling phase of the struggle on the western front. The letter, dated two days before the signing of the armistice, November 9, gives in effect, the final word on American military accomplishment as recorded on the actual firing line just previous to the putting of the seal on Germany's defeat. An interesting passage in the letter tells of the ride that the correspondent had in a tank.

With the American Armies, Woevre Front, Nov. 5.—They are not afraid of letting our men know it is nearly over. Newspapers are going right up the front with the news of crashing dynasties and close-following armistices. No one seems afraid that these men of ours, if they knew peace were imminent, would dodge danger spots where the duty of the last days of the war may call them.

Listen to the men talk up here in the bad lands: "Wonder who will be the last man," they say, "to be killed by the last gun fired in the war?"

Up here they know that the armistice signal may be flashed any hour but they are going ahead with their grisly job stoically. It is one of the cruelest and most wonderful moments of the whole war.

Standing on a height east of the Meuse, opposite Metz, and looking out over the Woevre battlefield yesterday afternoon, knowing that only a few more dawns and this terrible business would probably be finished, it seemed strange that all the proceedings should be going along as though ten years more of it were still ahead. Yet it is that very fact that is bringing the war so quickly to an end.

Many of us used to imagine, I think, in the earlier days that the struggle was going to peter out, that there would be less and less fighting as the defeat of one or the other side began to grow more certain and that an armistice would come almost of its own accord, thanks to a general slowing up of operations.

Not at all.

Here is a village that I went through earlier in the day. Several dozen tons of high explosive were moved out of it at dawn, taken up to the forward batteries in preparation for an attack. The lorries were rumbling back at noon for more of the stuff.

"Has the attack begun?"

"They are at it now," was the answer.

I listened for the guns, but heard only some giant voices in the Verdun direction.

"No, the barrage is finished; the boys are going forward."

It was strange. In the cities they are talking only of peace. Here there was nothing but the hustle of new preparations, the struggle onward, the talk of local fighting.

The dull November sky was showing rifts of faint blue over the sharp ridge of hills running out from St. Mihiel directly eastward to the Woevre Plain, where the present line is. The weather promised clearing, and certainly a bit of sun would raise one's ipirits in this somber battlefield. Perhaps it was an omen. The armistice this afternoon?

It was a wistful thought, but it was answered by the heavy throb of distance guns. How much longer would that familiar but always sinister sound be coming from the east?

Later on, after plowing through a typical battle country, typical, that is, of this ravaging war of wrecked villages, messed-up, unproductive fields that hold no seeds but shell splinters, along roads that have been ridden by the furies and only roughly mended afterward, I got to a point well forward in the field of operations and deep into a countryside that a few weeks ago was all German. Their soldily built war structures were all about, but everything of theirs faced the wrong way for our use and was left there only because there was no time and no necessity for pulling down.

The point I had reached was the promontory of the ridge overlooking the Woevre Plain toward Metz. It was an active region because the American shadow had from our first entry into the line been thrown over that great fortress. The Germans knew that one way or another Americans were going to scoop that prize if the war went on long enough, perhaps by straight hit broadside, perhaps Foch-wise by the flank.

A battery of powerful glasses in the hands of American observers was leveled at a certain point in the plain, and watches were out.

Yes, an attack was pending.

Now the sun had come out, the trailing clouds were shrinking up and withdrawing to the horizon. That was magic, for in this country November usually has the most hopeless sky you ever saw.

The Woevre plain looked solemnly grand in the red light. Its forests were handsome with autumn color, its small lakes caught the glow. The distance was soft with haze. In peace time it would have been ravishing. But in war time it was depressing. Its tinted forests were traps, its lakes were bogs that meant danger to guns and death to transport. Its mists might be full of gas. Who knew whether they were nature or poison? An aviator standing by me watching the lad and the sky complained of the sun. Above our heads in the mists he heard the pulsing thrum of several Fokkers.

"If it gets clearer," he said, "we will have trouble with them. We have a fierce group of them to deal with on this front."

Suddenly a heavy gun spoke from our side, back of where we were. Another, another. The arrivals were quick to follow. A road in the valley by a lake disappeared in rolling clouds of heavy smoke. Machine guns were rattling and echoing, rattling and echoing from several directions. Our attack was going on, but as usual there was no human figure to be seen on all the plain.

Peace? Armistice?

The words grew faint and meaningless. Yet I knew that there were no other words in Paris at that moment.

Our men were living in the mud of dark dugouts around me. I went down into the biggest of them, the general assembly hole and kitchen. A reluctant lamp was lighted and in its faint gleam they showed me some fatigued-looking vegetables that they had culled from the German garden on the hill.

"We scopped the Boche cabbage patch first trick," they said. "It was the only good thing they did not take with them."

This was the dugout where the men who were stationed at this particular point got together at night to stir up a noise sounding like good cheer and to weather the shelling that the position gets every so often each day.

In leaving there we all wished each other luck in the usual casual way, not adding "for a few days more." I had forgotten about peace, and they did not refer to it. There was no peace up there, and would not be till the final gong sounded.

Nor was the slightest slackening up of effort to be met with anywhere further back. At a great aviation center near Toul an army of men were building steel and cement hangars and laying out grounds as though for a fifty-year war. One of the chief tasks was to make solid paths, proof against the mud which has begun to ooze for the winter.

At the tank camp near ——— the greatest activity prevailed. Not only was this big establishment on the eve of receiving a large consignment of American-made tanks, the first to arrive here, but it was sending out a squadron of men and Renault tanks to the front.

While the men and their weird engines were slowly installing themselves on a train that would take them to the war an expert tang engineer took me for a ride in his steel caterpillar.

It is not easy, until you have bumbled across a ragged countryside in one of these steel traps, to imagine what the tank service is like. Locked inside, with only a tiny slit to see through, you plunge down precipices and mount palisades, lurch sideways and reel back, sometimes amid a flash of stars and a choas of noise you turn turtle and remain standing on your hear unable to move, and praying, if you have any consciousness left, that the gas box won't take fire and turn your trap into an oven. As a means of transport for peace time it would hardly be a success. But for walking across ravines and crunching through forests regardless of shell-cavities or trenches to attack a machine gun ambush, it has its points. Perhaps some day we shall be hearing that this fearless steel dragon it was that was the great war.

By the time I had attacked and overcome an enemy position, unoccupied by enemy, and had one side of my face mashed in where, in spite of serious hanging on, I had been hurled against the butt of the machine gun I was manning, I descended and in the dusk watched out train-load of tank boys depart for the front.

It was cold. It was wet. It was dark. Not a spark of light was allowed. Yes, by the way, there were sparks. There were glowing cigarette tips at the open windows of the cars. There was a low murmur of voices in the train Some one in there had a mandolin and its cheery tinkle made one think of summer nights on Long Island Sound four eons of years ago. No one sang to cheer on the mandolin, but there was laughter in the darkness along the train.

Our march to the front is incessant. Our work at the rear is at white heat. No slowing upanywhere. Easing off in this war. It is a climax of strength on our side which is precipitating a climax of collapse on theirs.

RESERVE OFFICERS MAY CONTINUE IN UNIFORM.

Reserve officers were this week authorized to wear their uniforms for three months after their transfer to the inactive list. This privilege already is accorded by law to "any person honorably discharged from the army, navy or marine corps, regulars or volunteers."

The War Department rescinded its recent order requiring soldiers upon discharge to account for all articles of wearing apparel issued by the American Red Cross and other charitable organizations.

BRUCE CONLIN WOUNDED.

Lieutenant Bruce Conlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Conlin, formerly of this city, but now of New York, who was wounded in the leg by machine gun fire on patrol duty October 24, has just arrived in this country and is now at Fox Hills Hospital, Staten Island. He was with the 357th Infantry.

Dix Likely to Be Kept As a Permanent Post

Further indication that Dix will likely be selected as a permanent post, is evident from the latest orders received by camp officers from the War Department which states that the Fiftieth United States Infantry has been ordered to the cantonment and it is thought possible that perhaps it will remain as a permanent guard and thus relieve the depot brigade men from further duty.

If this is so it will be fine news for the men selected to remain there as members of the three battalions, which the to be retained according to recent orders and all the men have again taken heart for they think that they will soon follow their comrades to civilian life.

A record in discharging was made at Dix Sunday, when 1,000 men from the tank corps and 200 members of the depot brigade were discharged, while 1,200 negroes were transferred to camps in the States of Florida, North and South Carolina, their homes States, and there they will remain until they are discharged.

Private Everett Colby, of the tank corps, was one of the first men in that organization discharged and the former Jersey senator expects to devote his energies to the work of taking care of the tank corps men returning from overseas

A pleasing custom had been adopted by the tank corps men and it is thought likely that it will be followed by many other units. It is a decision to carry on the customs of the service while they are wearing a uniform and even though discharged to salute a commissioned officer and perform other customs the same as if they were still a member of the army. A discharged soldier is not compelled to salute an officer, but the tank corps men believe it will keep up the morale if they still follow customs while they are wearing uniforms.

The discharged men, who come from nearly every State in the Union, were escorted to the station by the tank corps band and given a rousing sendoff. The work of discharging the men is being continued at a fast rate and it is expected that a large number of the men in camp, who are slated for discharge, will be out by the end of the week.

Commissioner of Public Safety Charles F. X. O'Brien, of Jersey City, with the famous police quartet of that city and a number of vaudeville acts from that city, appeared at the main K. of C. auditorium Monday evening. A visit was paid Monday afternoon to the Jersey City men who have come home carrying wounds received in the struggle against the Huns.

Wednesday evening in the Y. M. auditorium the McConnel unit of the Stage Women's Relief of New York city, presented a program and Wednesday, December 11, the Glee Club from the car service department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Philadelphia, will entertain the men.

Major James S. Hough, M. C., Forest Glen, Md., has been assigned to duty as camp Epidemiologist.

For refusing to obey an order from Supply Sergeant Thomas J. Reid to turn ain all blank ammunition and then with threatening to strike him and also behaving in a disrespectful manner, Private George Butler, a member of Company 59, has been sentenced by a general court-martial board to ten years at hard labor at Fort Jay, N. Y., and then to be dishonorably discharged from the army.

Loss of $8 a month for six months is the penalty that Private Elias Clark, New Ben. N. C., a member of Company 49, must pay for absenting himself without leave from his company on September 11, and remaining away until he was apprehended at New York on September 21.

Plans have been completed for the holding of a horse show and field day at the Remount Depot, this afternoon. Cups or ribbons will be awarded the winners. The various companies have entered their prize horses, while many officers will take part in the various jumping events. Captain J. W. Burden, of the depot, has been receiving the entries and from the interest taken the affair promises to be a big success.

Sixteen classes have been arranged, including events open to single horses and mules with carts; best pair of horses or mules to wagon, escort; best four-horse team of horses or mules to wagons, all open to animals now being used at Dix.

For officers there will be two events for chargers carrying up to 175 and 200 pounds and two jumping events. The first will depend on performance and the second on conformation and general excellence of type. The last class will be open to guard and military police mounts.

The balance of the program will consist of novelty events, including corral riders' obstacle race, roping contests, mounted wrestling on mules, mule-packing contests and mule point to point race open to corral riders at the Remount Depot.

For trying to defraud the Government by claiming a family allowance of $15 a month in favor of a woman, whom he declared to be his wife, and also deserting the service on August 18 and remaining away until he was apprehended at Warwick, N. Y., about September 12, Private Jacob E. Seager has been sentenced by a court martial board to serve twenty years at hard labor at Fort Jay, N. Y., and then to be dishonorably discharged from the service. The board recommended a forty-year term, but Major-General Hugh L. Scott, the camp commander, reduced the confinement.

What a Soldier from France Found at the Red Cross Shop

A soldier from France paused for a moment in front of the Babcock Building to readjust the crutches that bore his weight. Little gold stripes gleamed on both sleeves of his khaki coat, and upon his breast were three narrow, little colored strips of silken ribbon. His crutches shifted to a more comfortable position beneath his arms, he started on his way. As he did so, his eyes were attracted by a sign in one of the windows, and the "Soldier from France" smiled,—smiled as one does when he sees a good, loyal and kindly friend nearby.

Memories of the kindly faces of Mercy's angels, wearing the white robes of purity and the red badge of courage came flitting across the seas, and they carried him back to that dreadful day, when battered and bruised, by one of war's fierce hurricanes, he lay a helpless piece of human wreckage in the wake of a battle's tide.

From the East, borne to him on the sulphur laden air, came the dull, ever-receding sounds of human waves crashing against living walls of steel, and then,—merciful oblivion.

The sudden touch of something cold against his cheek startled him into wakefulness and his eyes looked into the sadly mournful eyes of a great shaggy Collie dog,—one of those wonderful Red Cross dogs, dumb heroes of the war, faithful unto death. The dog gave his cheek a reassuring little caress, and then fastening its strong white teeth on the rim of his trench helmet, gave it a tentative little tug. The soldier from France released the strap, and the dumb courier of mercy bore it away over the fields and over the ditches, swiftly speeding onward up the hillside with the long queer loping gallop so peculiar to the Collie.

On the crest of the hill, the gallant dog paused for a moment and looked back toward the place where the wounded soldier lay. A pause that was almost fatal for a shell screamed down to earth, and bursting, tore a great wide gash in the hillside. When the dark brown cloud had drifted away, and the dust had settled down, the Collie rose slowly to its feet. Now it had only three, the other one, with part of its leg lay somewhere in the heaped up earth beyond the rim of the shell crater. Picking up the soldier helmet, it continued on its way, not so swiftly now. A little later it entered the door of the Field Hospital and laid at the feet of a Red Cross nurse the blood spattered helmet of the soldier. Then, its duty done, the great dog lay down beside it, and closed its patient eyes,—but only for a moment. Then it sprang up again and limped out through the door, and two brave women, bearing between them a stretcher, followed it back to where a still form lay in a war-wrecked field of France.

Then followed many weary days of pain,—the sharp pain of knitting wounds, when nature with needles of fire wove over red raw flesh its enveloping shield of delicate skin. Swiftly, through the mind of the soldier from France flashed the memory pictures of the days that had passed, days whose tortured hours were soothed and blessed, and made endurable by the tender ministering care of the Red Cross angels of solace and sweet pity.

The soldier from France, a stranger on our city streets, knew that under the Red Cross, and behind the closed door, on which hung a sign, "Come In," there were friends whose hands and hearts were warm and true, and that he would be welcome, there, not for the cash that was in his pocket but because of the uniform he wore, and the cause it stood for. The soldier from France entered and I followed him in, curious to learn what his reception would be. It was all as it should be, all that the Red Cross means. Once inside the great wide room, with its dainty tea tables, and show cases, the wooden crutches of the soldier from France disappeared as if by magic. In their stead the friend arm, on either side of two Red Cross girls bore his weight as they led him to a seat at one of the many tables, and as if by magic, too, there appeared on that table a dainty tea pot, a cup and saucer, a plate piled high with cake and sandwiches, flanked by ice cream and a pack of cigarettes. I turned and I saw a woman there, a woman sweet of face and grey of hair,—a woman whose son I knew lay where the green lush meadow grass grows, within the sound of the rippling waters of the Marne. She stood looking at the soldier from France, and something like a bright jewel, trembled for a moment on her eyelashes and then rolled down her cheek. Just then a piece of cake got crosswise in my own throat and I had to do some hard swallowing to get it clear. I noticed that there were many other men troubled with the same thing just then.

To Mrs. James M. Charles, to her lady aids, to the merchants of the city of Plainfield, who have given samples,—generous ones of their wares —to the people who as generously support the Red Cross shop, all honor and praise is due. No enterprise that ever was launched is more worthy of support than our local Red Cross Society, and every dollar that you give to it means a dollar's worth of real material value to our soldier boys,—plus human kindness, human sympathy and human love.

In the heart of every returning soldier from France there is a fountain of gratitude, and one has only to mention the Red Cross to cause it to flow forth through their lips in bubbling streams of praise.

J. WATSON.

A TRIBUTE TO THE GREAT ARMY THAT DIED FOR FREEDOM

THE COMMON SOLDIER

No roll of honor bears his name,
No history shall tell,
The glorious and inspiring tale
Of how a hero fell.

No pitying prayers are said;
For he was one among a host
Of unknown soldier dead.

The victory he died to earn,
May help a falling state;
The laurels of that battlefield
Go only to the great.

But when celestial trumpets sound
The knell of earthly creeds;
The records of the Judgment Day
Shall tell the others' deeds.

Referee Gives Decision In Pond Wage Dispute

Orders a Sliding Scale of Increase from Five to Ten Per Cent. for Machinists Dating Back to August 19--Men Not Pleased With the Verdict

Word came to Plainfield late yesterday that Referee Lent, appointed by the War Board to consider the application of the machinists at the Pond Machine Tool Company for an increase in wages, following the strike of August 19 last, had made a decision.

Mr. Lent ordered a sliding scale of percentage increases as follows: Men receiving fifty-eight cents an hour, or under, an increase of ten per cent.; men receiving sixty cents an hour, an increase of seven and a half per cent.; men receiving sixty-five cents an hour and over, an increase of five per cent. The order stipulates that the increase must date from August 19 and in consequence the Pond Company will pay out many thousands of dollars for time accumulating since then as the order effects 500 men.

The decision of Referee Lent has not been received with satisfaction by the machinists as it puts the "specialty" men, whose work is limited to one machine, practically on a par with the expert tool makers who receive the highest pay of any class in the trade. When the men went on strike in August, they asked a minimum rate of seventy-two and a half cents an hour and the increase does not give this. The strike itself lasted two days, after which both sides agreed to let the War Board decide the dispute. The Board was unable to reach a decision and passed the matter to Referee Lent, who has since been considering it.

During the discussion, Works Manager Cleaver and the other officials of the Pond shop have been conferring with a committee for the men composed of William Hartpence, James Caulfield and George Gardner.

Red Cross In Readiness For Campaign

Last year at Christmas time eleven thousand people in Plainfield and vicinity joined the Red Cross and paid their dollar. Between December 16 and 23 there will be another canvass for membership, the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call, and Plainfield as usual is on hand, fully organized and prepared to do its part in the Plainfield way.

The Roll Call will be conducted by a special committee of the Plainfield-North Plainfield Chapter, George L. Babcock being Campaign Manager. Headquarters have been opened at 201 Park avenue. The territory has been divided into sections, and teams are ready to start Monday morning at the word "Go."

Every adult person in the district, excepting soldiers and sailors, will be asked to enroll or to renew his membership. The annual dues are $1.00, payable in advance.

Persons joining the Red Cross do not become liable to any further duty or responsibility, but by giving their names and their dollar they help to put the united heart-power of the nation back of the greatest relief agency in existence. It is expected that Plainfielders doing business elsewhere will enroll in their home town. The button, which will be their receipt, will entitle them to be counted towrad the percentage quotas of the business house where they are employed. There is no need for them to join in two places. Plainfield is the only place where Plainfielders should enroll.

On the front of the Schwed building at Front street and Park avenue will be displayed the outline of an immense Christmas garland. Each day's membership returns will help to fill it in with green and red. It will take 15,000 names to complete Plainfield's wreath for the "Greatest Mother in the World."

The Red Cross Rally in the High School Auditorium tomorrow night is a part of the campaign. Captain Sterling S. Beardsley, a Croix re Guerre man, is to speak, and a new three-reel film, showing Red Cross work at home and in the war zone will be shown. Everybody is welcome and everything free.

Tomorrow's Annual Christmas Show Sure To Tickle "Kiddies"

In the Plainfield High School at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon, will take place the annual Christmas entertainment of the Charity Organization Society, an affair that always brings delight to hundreds of children while serving to increase the finances for use by the C. O. S. in lightening the burdens of the poor.

From indications, tomorrow's show is going to be the best ever, or as some people might express it, "a whale." A committee of seventeen generous Plainfield women have been working hard to make it a success, and no one donbts but what their efforts will be rewarded. Everything on the program will be sure to tickle juvenile fancies. In the first place, there is to be a real jolly, old Santa Claus, direct from the North Pole and bubbling over with good humor to be imparted to the youngsters. There will be animated cartoons, those screen pictures that make old as well as young, scream with laughter; movie films, selected especially for this occasion and one of those marvelous magicians who pick money out of the air, produce a rabbit from goodness knows where, and cause a rose bush to grow right in front of your very eyes. In addition this magician will exhibit his manikins, the red-headed boy, the colored boy and the others that no one but their owner can make talk. They call it ventriloquism but that is such a big word for the little folks it is not exploited to any extent.

The kindly women who have gotten all these features together will be repaid for their trouble if there is a capacity audience at the auditorium tomorrow afternoon, so you, Mr. and Mrs. Big People, can help if you don't care to go yourself and you have no children at your own home, purchase a ticket or two and send some one else's children. Money donated to the committee will be applied to tickets for the little folks at the Children's Home and others who have parents unable to bear the expense of entertainments. These tickets may be had at Miller's drug store or at the High School door tomorrow afternoon for the nominal sum of twenty-five cents. The purchase of one will make some little heart beat with rapturous delight all through the show and later on the twenty-five cents will help in bringing joy to a poverty stricken home. Surely the cause is a worthy one and entitled to the fullest support.

Mrs. James M. Charles has been managing the arrangements and she has had the direct assistance of Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch. Their assistants have been divided into the following sub-committees: Publicity, Mrs. Maxwell Perkins, moving pictures and trick man, Mrs. William S. Tyler; grab bag, Mrs. William M. Wherry; posters, Miss Anne Miller; popcorn and candy, Mrs. Roger D. Mellick; sellers of popcorn and candy, the Misses Elizabeth Burke, Augusta Burke, Katherine Bomann, Dorcas Bomann, Margaret, Fraker, Margaret Maltby, Elizabeth Browne, Helen Lounszery, Louise Patterson and Mrs. Ray Voorhees.

Zeglio Suit for $25,000 Promises Big Legal Fight

At the winter session of the Somerset County Supreme Court, which opens next Monday, December 17, one of the most important trials to be heard and one which promises a big legal battle is that of Dr. Peter J. Zeglio, of Somerset street, against the Public Service Corporation.

The plaintiff asks $25,000 damages for injuries received in June, 1917, when his automobile was struck by an Arlington avenue car on Park avenue, just below the Muhlenberg Hospital Nurses' Home. It is alleged by Dr. Zeglio in his petition that he was so badly hurt that he was unable to carry on his extensive practice for several months. His automobile, he declares, was completely demolished.

The plaintiff is being represented in the proceedings by Codington & Klatz and Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, and Judge Clarence E. Case, of Somerville. Just who will oppose this array of legal talent for the Public Service Corporation has not been announced as yet, but it is understood within the inner circle that the defense will have several of its star counsellors. The case as it stands is one of the most important that has been listed in the Somerset courts for many terms, both in the amount of damages asked and in the legal forces brought into play.

Under the legal rule governing a contention of this kind, either side has the right to examine witnesses for the opposition previous to trial. Exercising this privilege the Public Service had Dr. Zeglio examined Monday before Robert Newton Crane, sitting as Special Master in the North Plainfield Council Chamber. In the proceedings all four lawyers for the plaintiff looked after his interest, while former Judge Coult, of Newark, acted for the Public Service. From the questions put to the physician and the line of defense suggested by them it is conceited that the case will be bitterly fought by the Corporation which, in preliminary statements, has asserted that the accident was brought about by Dr. Zeglio in not using precautionary methods as he attempted to turn his automobile in an opposite direction.

MISS THOMPSON RESIGNS.

Because of impaired health, Miss Louise Thompson has resigned her position as supervisor of nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital. She will leave about January 1 for her former home at Rockland, Mass.

Committee Named For Memorial

Mayor Leighton Calkins today named the following citizens to serve as a War Memorial Advisory Committee in recommending a suitable memorial in honor of Plainfield boys giving up their lives in the war:

George P. Mellick, chairman; Hon. Ernest R. Ackerman, James H. Ackerman, Frank P. Ard, Albert H. Atterbury, Elliot T. Barrows, Rev. B. M. Bogan, George S. Clay, Archibald Cox, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, John F. Harman, Arthur M. Harris, A. V. D. Honeyman, Thomas F. Hylan, William T. Kaufman, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, William Newcorn, Rev. Edward S. Ralston, William N. Runyon, Charles A. Reed, Rev. Philip B. Strong, Mrs. John P. Stevens, C. Boardman Tyler, Thomas C. Vail, John J. Varley, Miss Mary B. Wells, John M. Whiton and O. T. Waring.

In naming the committee, Mayor Calkins states that it is created for the following purposes:

(1) To make a survey and collect precise information as to what is being planned in this matter in other cities.

(2) To invite and consider suggestions from our own citizens, and encourage a thorough expression of public sentiment.

(3) Treating the contemplated project as one of unusual public interest and concern to which all members of the community undoubtedly will wish to contribute, to give it mature and expert study and report the committee's conclusions.

The Mayor adds that he believes the committee should act slowly and carefully as the memorial to be erected is to stand forever. The committee will meet for organization at the call of the chairman.

MRS MILNE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Isabel Rafferty Milne, whose death occurred Wednesday night, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allan S. Laing, of Washington avenue, is to be strictly private. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn. Mrs. Milne was sixty-seven years old and beside Mrs. Laing leaves one other daughter, Mrs. Edward F. Wilson, of Denver, Col., and two sons, former Councilman Alexander Milne, of the borough, and Lawrence Milne, of Denver.

First of Three Simon Brothers Out of Service

George L. Simon, the well-known bicycle repair man, whose shop is located at 179 North avenue, is the first of three brothers to be discharged from the service. He was released at Camp Devens a few days ago and immediately returned to Plainfield to take over his business which was carried on by others while he was numbered among Uncle Sam's forces. He joined the colors last May as an infantry man and was sent to the Rhode Island State College at Kingston for a special course in technical work. From there he was transferred to the non-commissioned officers' school at Camp Devens, in which he was pursuing his studies when the armistice was signed.

Edward Simons, a brother of the discharged man, went overseas as a member of Company D, 309th Infantry. He took part in the hard fighting met by this unit in the drive of last October and is now in a French hospital suffering from shell shock and general break-down produced in charging the enemy. It is considered miraculous that he was not listed among the killed, as according to the stories of fellow soldiers in the same company he was in the thick of the battle for many days. At last reports from the hospital he was doing good.

The third by in the family, all three being sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Simon, of 1418 South avenue, is William Simon, who enlisted in the Merchant Marine. He has been crossing the ocean for many months as a member of a transport crew. His vessel sailed for France on Thanksgiving Day with a cargo of supplies for the Expeditionary Forces and is to return the latter part of the month with American soldiers sent back from the field.

MRS. FOOTE A VISITOR.

Mrs. M. G. Foote, mother of John Taintor Foote, the well-known author, is visiting Mrs. M. O'M. Knott, of East Seventh street. Mr. Foote, the son, is the author of "The Lucky Seven," "Blister Jones," "Dumb-bell of Brookfield," and "The Last Shall Be First." The last named story appears in this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

WILLIAM WINKELHOLZ, JR.

William Winkelholz, Jr., son of William and Catherine S. Winkelholz, of New Brunswick avenue, Samptown, died this morning. He was twenty-three years old. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

City's Purchase of Useless Nine-Inch Strip of Ground Means Big Profit Later on

In connection with the deal whereby he sold the city the property on South avenue to be used for storage ground and railroad receiving point, Charles H. Hand has also deeded over to the municipality a nine-inch strip of ground on the east side of DeKalb avenue extending from West Front street to Green brook, a distance of 1,500 feet. The purchase of this will enable the city to dispose at good advantage all the land it secured in buying up the defunct Plainfield Sanitary Disposal Company's plant at the upper end of DeKalb avenue. The ground has lain useless for many years but can now be cut up into building lots as the acquisition of the nine-inch strip gives an opening on DeKalb avenue, something a portion of the property did not have.

Many years ago Mr. Hand cut DeKalb avenue through at his own expense, after he had spught in vain to get an adjoining property owner to the east to go halves with him on the improvement. The latter, a New York man, did not see the wisdom of developing the ground that lay between Front street and Green brook. Accordingly, Mr. Hand put DeKalb avenue through his own property, leaving the nine-inch strip to make sure the neighboring owner did not have an outlet on the new thoroughfare. The only frontage was on West Front street. The stretch back of fifteen hundred feet to Green brook was thus enclosed.

The New York man's property was eventually purchased by the Sanitary Disposal Company, which effected a rear entrance from DeKalb avenue. When this concern disposed of the incinerating plant to the city, which, by the way was never operated by the municipality, the big plot of ground was not worth very much on account of the nine-inch strip preventing any opening for building lots facing on DeKalb avenue. The deal just made between Mr. Hand and the city clears away the obstruction and the tract can be turned into several thousands of dollars of profit.

Takes Testimony In Divorce Case

Sitting as special master at his office in this city, Tuesday, former Judge Isaac P. Runyon took testimony in the divorce proceedings brought by Mrs. Gertrude Van C. DuBois against her husband, Dr. F. E. DuBois, formerly of Washington avenue, North Plainfield, but for the past two years resided in New York.

Congressman Richard Wayne Parker acted as counsel for Mrs. DuBois and examined the witnesses. The defendant was not represented. The testimony taking required all day and as a number of witnesses were unable to be present adjournment of the proceedings were made until December 18 with Newark as the place for the sitting.

Dr. DuBois was one of the city's best known physicians for ten years. Since his removal to New York, he has entered the service and is at present a member of the Army Medical Corps.

Baker Mangles Arm In Mixing Machine

Juan Hylkena, a baker, employed by John Wirth, was badly injured at the latter's bake shop last night, when his left arm became caught in the bread mixing machinery. He was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital, where the physicians found it necessary to amputate the two middle fingers. The remainder of the hand and the arm as far as the elbow were badly lacerated but it is believed that further amputation will not be necessary.

Hylkena's home address is at 367 Somerset street. At noon today, the hospital reported that he was "resting easily" after the operation.

MR. MORTON'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Joseph William Morton, Jr., who died in St. Mark's Hospital, New York, Wednesday, will be held tonight, at his late home at 1039 West Seventh street, and will be in charge of Rev. C. H. Mallery. Interment will be at Vineland. Mr. Morton was sixty-five years old.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

In the city court, yesterday morning, fines of fifty dollars each were imposed on William Coleman, colored, and Ruben Resnick, white, for maintaining gambling devices in their places of business. Coleman has a pool room at 603 West Fourth street and Resnick a store at 541 West Third street. Both men paid the money promptly. Coleman was fined fifty dollars in the city court some months ago on a charge of crap shooting and carrying a concealed weapon but has made an appeal of the sentence to the Supreme Court. His lawyer contends that the offenses took place over the city line in Piscataway township and that Judge De Meza had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Damage amounting to $1,000 was occasioned to the former Findlay saloon property on East Second street, Wednesday noon, by a mysterious fire. Workmen have been engaged in making repairs to the building and were eating their lunch next door when the flames were first discovered. The blaze evidently started on the first floor and worked its way upward to the second floor. The firemen located the flames quickly, but it was an hour later before they were able to extinguished. The property belonged to the later Alexander D. Findlay, but was bequeathed by him to Mrs. Eleanor Furman, of Madison avenue, formerly Mrs. Eleanor Steurwald, of this city.

Mrs. Hester Fisher, of Manson place, has received word that her son, George H. Fisher, has been commissioned lieutenant. The young man went to Camp Dix with the first contingent of selectives from Plainfield in September, 1917, and went overseas as a member of the Quartermasters' Corps early in December of last year. He has since been located in France. Augustus C. Nash, of Prospect avenue, went overseas on the same boat with Lieutenant Fisher and was assigned to duty as quartermaster's clerk at Marseilles, at which point he was recently promoted to sergeant.

Mayor Calkins has appointed the following citizens of the city and borough as theexecutive committee of the Community Chest idea decided upon at a public meeting recently: J. Herbert Case, C. W. McCutchen, William Newcorn, Francis J. Blatz, Arthur M. Harris, F. J. Hubbard and William M. Wherry.

The North Plainfield Common Council has signified its intention of appropriating $250 toward the maintenance of the North Plainfield Home Defense League during the coming year. The organization made a splendid record during the war period and is to continuel n existence for various civic purposes.

Fire headquarters' telephone number, which has been 43 since the East Second street building was opened twenty-six years ago, has been changed to 1500. The 'phone numbers at the other city fire houses have also been changed but because of a ruling of the fire commissioners these are not listed publicly.

Acting on Government orders, the Plainfield District Draft Board is completing the classification of all registrants, including those up to forty-six years. As soon as possible all records are to be compiled and sealed up pending directions for sending them to Washington. James M. Cullen, clerk for the board, who has been released, has been recalled to help in the new work. Secretary Freeman has been notified to be in readiness to close up the affairs of the board at thirty days' notice. Miss Elizabeth Humel, who had been acting as stenographer at the office during the busy period, was released two weeks ago.

Police Lieutenant Higgins and Roundsman John Kelly on Monday, rounded up a gang of youngsters who have been stealing bicycles and robbing down-town stores on the wholesale plan. They admitted purloining twenty-six wheels, selling most of them in New Brunswick and burglarizing John Costos' barn on West Front street, where candy was stored. Their plan to raid Harry Dreier's sporting goods establishment was nipped in the bud by the timely arrival of the police officers, as the gang was on the way for the theft. When arraigned before Judge De-Meza, three of the culprits, Michael Smith and Tony Golson, white, and Arthur Schenck, colored, were held for the Juvenile Court. Walter Turner, colored, was turned over to the Probation Officer. The three held for trial have been mixed up in previous escapades that brought them to the city court.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of the Metropolitan district, recently returned from France, on Sunday night in an address at the First Methodist church declared that America must have a constructive policy in negotiating peace and that the safest memorial to be established would be a league of nations. He extolled the American and French forces and expressed the hope that there would be no effort made at the peace conference on the parto f any nation to dominate over another nation, but that all would adhere to the "give-and-take" policy.

The City Council will hold the last semi-monthly meeting of the year next Monday night. Numerous important matters of business are to be transacted in order to wind up certain activities before the new Council comes into existence.

The Community Christmas Committee, which for several years, has brought joy to the poor children of the city by distribution of gifts during the Yuletide season, has reorganized as follows: President, R. Story Rowland; vice president, Leslie R. Fort; secretary, Walter C. Dobbins; treasurer, DeWitt C. Hubbell. The committee again appeals for funds and donations and during the distribution of gifts would appreciate the loan of autos. Checks may be sent to the treasurer.

Plainfield Lodge of Elks has announced a New Year's dance, to be given at the clubhouse on Tuesday night, December 31. Frank R. Emmons, chairman of the committee, states that numerous features will be introduced.

In the Chancery Court at Newark, recently, Vice Chancellor Lane granted writs to Mrs. Bessie Stegman and Mrs. Florence Lederer, former Plainfiled residents that will serve to tie up money for their benefit. Mrs. Stegman seeks to recover $1,000, which she loaned to her husband, Joseph Stegman, a jeweler, of Perth Amboy, whose, she alleges, drove her from their home in Perth Amboy recently, although they had been married only since May 18 last. In the Lederer case, the court ordered Francis J. Blatz, as received, to take over a reversionary one-third interest of Albert M. Lederer, sojourning in the Somerset County Jail going on thirteen weeks, in the estate of his father ,the late Isaac Lederer, for the benefit of Mrs. Lederer and her two daughtrs, twelve and fourteen years old. According to William Newcorn, who represented both women, the Isaac Lederer estate totals about $100,000.

At the quarterly meeting of the executive committee in the clubhouse of the Trenton Lodge, Sunday afternoon, the New Jersey State Association of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks changed the meeting place of the 1919 State convention from Perth Amboy to Asbury Park. It also changed the date of the convention from September to sometime in June, the exact day to be decided upon later. Past Exalted Ruler John H. Cose, who is a member of the State Association, represented Plainfield Lodge at the meeting.

This Doughboy Almost Secured a Fine Souvenir

The Yankees had scarcely finished sorting and swapping their German helmets and other stuff captured between the Marne and the Vesle, and packing it off to the folks, when they gathered in a whole depot of trophies from the rich regions behind St. Mihiel, says The Stars and Stripes.

Every doughboy hustling through a village in that salient that week had one eye open for lurking boches and mines and the other eye, the twinkling eye, open for a souvenior for the girl he was fighting for.

Two privates were jogging through one town on the seat of a ration cart one morning when one of them spied a gray-green, handsomely braided overcoat hanging out to air in front of what had been a German P. C. a few hours before.

"I saw it first," said the large one, sternly. "Now, Buddy, while I keep my hand on these mares you hike over there and cut off them sleeves for me. I'll bet Eliza Jane can make something pretty doggone nifty out of them."

The other, nothing loth, got out his penknife and had just hacked off the second sleeve when out of the house swarmed a staff of junior officers. He felt his legs give way beneath him. He knew by their faces what he had done. He had ruined the overcoat which had been tailored and adorned in America to shelter the general commanding the brigade then in possession of the town.

The general was asleep below. His lieutenants, with ill-concealed relish, woke him up so that the show might start at once. The general said several things about the vandalism evidently taught in the rival brigade. He spoke of firing squads, years and years in Fort Leavenworth, pay detained for the duration of the war, and so on. Then, after a struggle, he burst out laughing, and that's all there is to that story.

American Material For One Million New Houses Abroad

Belgium, England and France are about to call upon the United States to supply building material and equipment for at least one million houses, according to a statement by Secretary William C. Redfield, of the Department of Commerce, quoted in The Dow Service Daily Building Reports this week.

This fact, coupled with disclosures made to various trade and commerce conventions that have been held last week, and will be followed this week by an important conference of the Portland Cement Association at the Biltmore, with reference to the domestic building situation has brought the American building investor face to face with a condition the solution of which appears to be possible chiefly by immediate action. The problem centers chiefly in the question of building material demand and the capacity of American manufacturers to meet an unprecedented domestic call for construction material and to take care of the imperative requirements of other parts of the world besides. The situation is made the more complex because it will be the patriotic and magnanimous thing for America to give first call to Belgium, France and possibly England in meeting any call they may make. Indeed, it is the implied purpose of the Government to see that the peace time needs of Europe are supplied with as full freedom and co-operation as were the war-time requirements.

Big Time Anticipated At "Tab's" Annual Dance

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society is looking forward to a "big night" on New Year's eve, as on that occasion it will conduct its forty-seventh annual New Year's dance. An invitation has been extended to the members of the Elizabeth T. A. B. Society and their friends and the former have sent an acceptance with the statement that a large delegation would journey to Plainfield, bringing along a band. "Eddie" Marks' orchestra will furnish music for the dance and numerous entertainment features will be introduced as the old year dies ont and the new comes in.

The committee making arrangements for the affair is composed of Daniel J. Guinee, chairman; Louis Hendrickson, vice chairman, assisted by Michael D. O'Keefe, Joseph T. McSue, John J. Connors, A. E. La Porte and John Walsh.

PERSONAL

Dr. Raphael Yood, of Grant avenue, returned Sunday, after a stay at New Haven, Conn., to which place he was called by the death of his brother.

George B. Cose, a former local resident, who reisued at Albany, N. Y., for a number of years, but who is now in charge of the General Electric Company's office at Philadelphia, was a visitor in town over the past week-end. The time was spent at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Cose, of 403 Watchung avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Goble, of East Second street, are the parents of a son who arrived at their home Sunday night.

Samuel Taverner, of Madison avenue, was able to be out today for the first time since his recent severe illness with pneumonia and during which he was ina critical condition for nearly a week.

The Record is in receipt of souvenior post cards from John E. Nicol, of Richmond street, who recently went to Christiana, Norway, as an executive clerk in the American Legation there. Mr. Nicol was secretary to the late Congressman Capstick and went abroad last September.

Mrs. E. F. Dorman, of East Seventh street, is recovering after a severe illness with influenza and complications.

Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, whose husband died of pneumonia on Thursday of last week, is seriously ill at her home on Washington avenue, the borough, with the same disease.

The Misses, Florence Margaret and Esther Russ, of West Fifth street, have recovered after illnesses with influenza, which detained them at home for a week.

Miss Mary Donnelly, of West Fourth street, returned Tuesday to her position as cashier at the American Express Company's office after a ten days' confinement to her home through an abscessed tooth.

Dudley M. Wilcox, of 1423 Watchung avenue, is one of the many Plainfielders returning to private life this week. He was discharged from the Officers' Training School at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., where he had completed his studies and examinations and was to have beer commissioned lieutenant. He entered the service at Camp Dix, in September, 1917, and was a member of Company A, 311th Infantry, previous to his acquission to the Officers' Training Schol.

Jesse Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, who was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, last week, after an illness of nearly two months with typhoid fever, is now able to be out of doors a short time each day. It will be after the first of the year, however, before he is able to return to business.

Mr. and Mrs. James Young, of Somerville, have removed to this city and are making their home with their daughter, Mrs. Peter D. Runyon, of West Front street.

Edward J. Harding, Jr., of Laramie road, who has been doing war work in Washington for the past year, expects to return to Plainfield within the next two weeks. He was formerly in the employ of Secretary McAdoo.

Robert Schreiner, of Central avenue, who was severely injured several weeks ago, after being knocked from his bicycle and run over by an automobile, continues to improve steadily. He expects to be able to get to business in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Serrell, of 91 Myrtle avenue, the borough, will leave the latter part of the month for Florida to spend the winter, as has been their custom in previous years. They will establish their home at Sarasota, but will spend most of the time cruising on Mr. Serrell's yacht.

Dr. P. B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, who was dischrged from the service last week, after three months of hard work in the army, during which he aided in the fight against the influenza epidemic, has returned to his private practice in town. Dr. Cregar spent most of his time at Camp Meade.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Vail, of Lee place, have returned from a trip to Aiken, South Carolina, and other Southern points. Mr. Vail has practically recovered his full strength after his recent severe illness and has returned to his position as superintendent of the Spicer plant in South Plainfield.

Lieutenant Lewis G. M. Timpson, who recently returned from England, where he was stationed as a member of the Aviation Corps, is stopping temporarily at the home of his grandfather, O. T. Waring, of Park avenue. For a time after his arrival in this country, Lieutenant Timpson was quite ill with grip.

A little daughter has been born to Mrs. Edward Murphy, of Arlington avenue, whose husband died in Virginia during the recent influenza epidemic.

Mrs. Frank P. Burke, of 815 West Fifth street, has been seriously ill during the past week with pneumonia and is now somewhat improved.

Mrs. Katharine Robinson, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., returned home Sunday night, after a visit with her brother, John Donnelly, of 660 West Fourth street.

Mrs. Fred Zweifel, of Grant avenue, who has been a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital for several weeks, undergoing treatment for a complication of troubles, was discharged from the institution this week, but is convalescing at a private sanitarium at Belle Meade.

Arthur Robinson, of West Third street, who has been stationed at Camp Dix since last spring, was discharged this week. He was acting as mess sergeant during his last month in service. After a brief stay at home, Mr. Robinson will return to his former position with the Pullman Car Company.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Helen Newell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Newell, to Irving P. Schenck, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schenck, of Flemington. Mr. Schenck is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and is at present in the navy as an ensign.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Waldman, of West Third street, will leave next week for Schenectady, N. Y., where they will make their home in the future. Mr. Waldan has secured an excellent position with the General Electric Company in that city.

Rev. J. W. Flynn, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, who was gassed while serving as chaplain in the 16th Infantry, has been located in a hospital at Nice, France. According to a letter written by him to Rev. F. J. Hubach, of West Seventh street, his condition is not serious.

Rev. and Mrs. John Y. Broek, of Central avenue, are the parents of a baby girl born to them Monday afternoon.

Soldiers Remaining At Dix May Select Branch of Service

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

Dix soldiers who desire to remain in the service will be given an opportunity to express their preference for the branch they like and as soon as possible they are to be transferred to a permanent camp unit or to the nearest regular army regiment, there to remain until Congress passes the necessary legislation permitting their reenlistment. With the men at Dix it will be a case most likely of transfer to the 50th Infantry, which has arrived there under command of Col. Lawrence Simonds and which is composed of regulars and selective service men. The regiment, however, is a regular army unit and will in all probability be kept at Dix for some time. They are occupying the quarters formerly occupied by the artillery regiments. It is expected that a number of men will take advantage of the opportunity of staying in the army.

Instead of returning their uniforms to the camp from which they were discharged, soldiers, after four months, will forward them to the nearest zone supply officer, which in the case of Jerseymen is the New York office. On discharge, in the future, each man will be given a frankel label on which will be typed the address to which he is to forward his uniform and all men will be requested to return their clothes under this label.

Steps already taken at Dix for the re-education of disabled men has won the commendation of Harry P. Wallman, supervisor of development battalions, and Major Marcus Rothschild, of the surgeon-general's office, who are at Dix to outline plans whereby the man who has been wounded or otherwise incapacitated will have just as much a chance of waging a successful fight in civilian life as he did before he entered the army.

When word was received at Dix that the convalescent wounded were to be sent to the base hospital, Colonel G. H. White, camp executive officer, at once outlined plans for their care. An overseas convalescent battalion was organized and the men quartered in barracks near the main K. of C. building and Y. M. Hut No. 2 and also near the large athletic fields. The men will do no drilling, but will be given plent of exercise and opportunity for outdoor sport, while the welfare buildings will be uesd for classes and instruction work.

Under the present plans every wounded man will be given an opportunity to learn some trade in order that he will be able to earn his livelihood after he is declared fit to be discharged. The various mechanical equipments in use at the camp will be utilized in the instruction work and before the men leave Dix arrangements will be made to obtain a position for them.

The Federal Board of Vocational Education is also obtaining excellent results along these lines and discharged wounded soldiers, who wish to better their education and fit themselves for a better place in life, can do so at the expense of the Government.

Nearly as fast as men are being discharged, others are being received, so that the population of the camp always remains in the thousands. A large contingent of United States Guards arrived Sunday from upper New York State where they were on duty, many of them being former Dix men.

Feeling that the people at home can play a great part in keeping up the morale of the soldier during the demobilization days and on his return to civilian life, Major General Hugh L. Scott, commander, has instructed every unit commander to send to the home of every soldier a letter, intended to strengthen the pride of the men and their families for the part they all played in winning the war.

The army has done everything in its power to make the soldier strong, self-reliant and self-controlled, and as the ones at home encouraged him while he was in camp they are asked to extend a warm welcome to him and to assist in making him as good a citizen as he had been a soldier.

About 15,000 men have been either discharged at this camp or transferred for discharge since the demobilization orders were received. Several thousand have been sent out during the past few days.

Department of Justice agents are seeking to prevent the sale of liquor to men in uniform, though they have discharge papers. Every man caught giving drink to men in uniform will be prosecuted.

Far-Famed Surgeon Who Operates At Muhlenberg, Big Factor In Reconstruction Work at Colonia

MAJOR FRED ALBEE, M. C.
Chief of Surgical Service at Colonia Hospital

Plainfield people, who have come to know Dr. Fred H. Albee, of New York, through his many wonderful bone grafting operations at Muhlenberg Hospital, and of which he is the consulting physician in orthopedics, may not be aware thta his almost priceless services have been given to the Government for the benefit of maimed soldiers.

When America first entered the world war, Dr. Albee was made a member of the Surgeon General's staff and assisted in the formation of the army and navy medical and surgery preparations. Later, he became enthused with the idea of a big reconstruction hospital near New York. As a result, through his recommendations, the splendid institution on the Freeman estate at Colonia, only a few miles from this city, and known as U. S. Army General Hospital, No. 3, was built. Dr. Albee was commissioned major and since the first patients arrived, he has been devoting his entire time to "making over" battered forms that might otherwise be hopelessly crippled but for his skill.

A comprehensive idea of what Dr. Albee did to bring about the location of the Colonia institution and the work he is doing is thusly given, in "Over Here," the hospital's official paper:

In considering the achievements of U. S. Army General Hospital No. 3, the name of Major Fred Albee, M. C., Chief of the Surgical Service, must be one of the most important factors. He, himself, acquires his greatest satisfaction from realizing that he is devoting his entire time to the important affairs of the largest orthopedic hospital in the country, while the hospital and its population feel that one of its greatest distinctions lies in having the Major at the head of its surgical department.

A brief resume of the great work Major Albee is performing and of the responsibilities which are his will give some idea of the satisfaction experienced by No. 3. It has been said in Washington that this hospital has the largest orthopedic-surgical service in the United States. Certainly the magnitude of the work is stupendous for of the average patient population of 1,500, at least 1,300 are surgical patients. Upon the Chief of the Surgical Service depends the entire structure. Under him and directly reporting to him are the Orthopedic service, the general surgery department, the Orthopedic workshop, the artificial limb service, the neurologist, the anaesthetist, the X-ray department, the eye, ear, nose and throat departments, the dental service and the various surgical wards. The smoothness with which these varied departments operate and the large successes accomplished by them, testifies to the ability—both surgical and executive—of the head of the system.

It is quite natural that bone graft surgery—the field in which Major Albee gained world-wide attention while in civil practice—should be the distinguishing feature of the work carried on at General Hospital No. 3. There are dozens of wounded soldiers today who, but for the bone graft operation, would have suffered the amputation of a limb, the loss of a jawbone or permanent injury to the spine. Through this special branch of surgery, which Major Albee has perfected, it is possible to remove a part of the shin bone, graft it into a bone in another part of the body and thus restore the injured member to normal condition without impairing the ultimate strength of the shin bone.

Over in the military hospitals in France, where the wounded are received after being returned from the firing line, scores of cases are labelled "Albee operation." This means that the patient will be sent to the States as soon as possible and many will be assigned to General Hospital No. 3, where Major Albee and his staff will make every effort (and usually with entire success) to restore the injured limb to full usefulness.

The great European War will be entered in medical history as the first conflict in which it was possible to avoid amputation in case of extensive loss of bone. It was the custom, previously, to amputate immediately when it was seen that the bone in an arm or leg had been seriously affected. In these days, such a course no longer is necessary. The diseased bone is removed and the patient is transferred to some hospital where the benefits of the bone graft operation may be had and the limb may be restored to its former usefulness.

The book, "Bone Graft Surgery," which Major Albee wrote, is the only one of its kind and has found earnest students in all parts of the civilized world. Likewise the instruments which the Major has devised for use in these oerations, are universally recognized and used.

Major Albee's interest in General Hospital No. 3 is more than that of a Chief Surgeon, for he may well be termed the moving spirit in the foundation of this hospital. A year ago (June 2nd, 1917), when he was an active member of the Advisory Council of the Surgeon General's office, he was the first to suggest plans for the foundation of a hospital on this site and he recommended the location as ideal for a hospital. At that time there was little realization of the large amount of hospital space that would be required. The first plans, in fact, called for a 100-bed hospital. Through the generosity and patriotism of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Freeman, their residence was to be converted into a hospital. Later it was decided that a large place would be needed and it was decided to erect a special building capable of accommodating 500 patients. Then the number was raised to 1,000, and finally to its present capacity of 1,600. The early plans were formulated and the selection of the personnel was begun by Major Albee under the combined auspices of the Surgeon General's office and the Red Cross. It was designated Reconstruction Hospital No. 3, and later changed to its present title.

In the present structure, the operating pavilion, X-ray rooms and laboratory stand as the direct result of plans personally drawn by Major Albee. He provided for the placing of the X-ray rooms in the operating pavilion and the wisdom of the move has been confirmed repeatedly by the effective co-operation of the X-ray department with the surgeon, during the numerous operations being performed daily.

THE RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

The American Red Cross, in many fields of the war area, has carried on a work of mercy and relief since the great struggle began that has never been surpassed in all the history of the world. The forces of destruction have been followed very closely—as closely as it was possible to follow them—by the Red Cross forces of mercy. The agents of the Red Cross organization have penetrated the most impossible places and have constantly faced the greatest of perils and dangers and have often met death.

The fighting is ended. The work of providing for our men who are yet in the field cannot be relinquished until they are all at home again. The greater work of binding up the wounds of the great war tragedy is at its height. The work of reconstructing the waste places invaded and devastated by the Germans and making them inhabitable again has scarcely begun. The work of saving the millions of innocent victims of the war tragedy from starvation and death demands immediate and constant attention.

The Red Cross will find stupendous tasks of relief awaiting it in places that its agents could not reach while the war was raging. It has been estimated that 10,000,000 will die of starvation in Russia before they can be reached and succored. There are vast populations in Syria, in Armenia, in Russia, in Serbia, in Poland and in Belgium, that must be saved from the hopeless condition in which the war has left them.

The Christmas campaign of the Red Cross is for the purpose of adding recruits to the great organization in this country. There were 22,000,000 enrolled one year ago. During the week beginning December 16 and ending December 23, a call for recruits and renewals of memberships will be sounded in every section of the country.

It costs only one dollar to become a member of the organization. It is confidently expected that millions will be anxious to join the great work that has been thrust upon it.

There is no other means so direct and effective as that of joining the Red Cross whereby the individual citizen can aid in the work of relieving suffering and want that has been caused by the war. It is a work in which the individual whose heart is touched with feelings of pity for suffering, helpless humanity will desire a part.

For the local end of the campaign, the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter has fixed upon fifteen thousand members as its goal, twelve thousand of these renewals from last year and three thousand new comers. It means that nearly half the population of the city and borough is to be enrolled in the work of the greatest of all relief organizations and it is no easy task unless everyone enters into the spirit. Therefore, when the workers solicit your membership next week don't hesitate a moment but have your own name placed on the list and as many other names as you have dollars to spare. Your response means the continuance of that wonderful work the returning soldiers laud to the skies and which cannot be stopped until the sick and starving of Europe has been given the helping hand they so greatly need.

THE SALARY INCREASE FOR TEACHERS.

In the agitation leading up to last night's meeting in behalf of the underpaid school teachers it develops that many young women of the city's teaching corps have had to work nights in one of the local industrial plants, the extra money thus gained helping out in the struggle to meet the advanced cost of living.

It is a condition of affairs that appeals strongly for an ending and it is to be hoped that the Board of Education sees its way clear to take the necessary steps. Plainfield, in the past, has always paid the average for its instructors but in common with other municipal departments the educational system has had to suffer from the abnormal condition of affairs. A minimum salary of $650 a-year is not sufficient to meet the needs of the young women leaving their homes to reside among strangers in another city. Where they room and board, outside the pale of kinfolks their expenses amount to double what they would be within the family circle and in addition, the teaching profession calls for certain standards that must be maintained. At the rate of salary accorded in Plainfield since the war began, this cannot be done. The shortage of money occurring each week with discouraging regularity, has been the direct cause of the teachers taking up new tasks at night, despite the fact that they were entitled to rest after a day's arduous instruction in the study classes. It has been a noble determination on the part of the young women but one of which none of us are proud.

Because of the cry for retrenchment set up by many of the taxpayers it is probable that the Board of Education did not want to take it upon itself to grant the substantial increase to teachers that seems absolutely necessary an for that reason it called the meeting of last night to learn the public sentiment. Those who were present at the gathering know that it was favorable to the teaching corps and the school trustees certainly must know that the great majority of the populace wants to see their instructors properly paid. It is the only way the splendid system, began years ago by Dr. Stillman, can be maintained and render it unnecessary for the teachers to work in factories at night. Surely, no one can begrudge the individual tax that will be levied to keep our educational system on a par with that of other cities.

THE RENT HOG IS WITH US.

Maybe you don't know it, Mr. Plainfielder, but the rent dog is in our midst. That same unwelcome individual who brought about Government investigation in Elizabeth, Trenton and other places is here with all his swinish greediness, preying upon the poor whose burdens keep on increasing despite the ending of the war.

Numerous complaints have come from the districts adjacent to the big factory plants in the East and West Ends. The rent hog has been going about there advancing the cost of living in his houses from forty to sixty per cent. When the tenants object, as they certainly should, he talks about increased taxes, the great cost of repairs and other things that won't stand close investigation. Most of it is pure bunk. It is true that mechanics' labor and the cost of building materials have advanced far beyond what they were a few years ago but it seems as though the very landlords who have used neither in the past year are the ones who are bleeding householders for more money. In addition the tax rate in Plainfield this year is only two points more than it was last year and the amount to be paid to the city is very little over that of 1917.

However, the rent hog is using these things as excuses and so far he has been getting away with it. It seems about time that the city officials looked up some of the species and punished them in the manner suggested by Governor Edge before last election. Maybe Governor Edge might show that his pre-election talk was not all vote-getting hot air and get on the job himself. At any rate, the rent hog is with us and it is high time that somebody took steps to round him up.

A FITTING RECEPTION FOR THE SOLDIER BOYS.

Chairman John J. Varley has called a meeting of the Citizens' Committee for next Monday night at which time preliminary arrangements will be made for a fitting reception to the Plainfield boys when they return from overseas.

No time is to be lost in this matter as it must and will be a never-to-be-forgteen affair. The city's noble sons did themselves proud in the great conflict over there and those of us who had to stay home can show our appreciation for the sacrifices they made by a truly royal welcome.

Chairman Varley and his committee did good work in sending the boys away with a smile but in the coming celebration they must outdo all previous efforts. The city is back of them to a man; all they have to do is to ask and it shall be given.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Ben Crane spent good money to advertise loin pork chops at twelve cents the pound?

When army officers went about at all times with a jangling sword at their sides?

When jealous acquaintances called you a dude if you owned more than one Sunday suit?

When father used you and the hotel built in the shape of an elephant as an excuse for a trip to Coney Island?

When Plainfielders were so scournful of winter weather, that one of them attempted to walk all the way from New York on the night of the memorable blizzard of 1888 and felt terribly chagrined when, after a perilous trip across the Newark Bay bridge, he was compelled to give up at Elizabethport?

When telephone subscribers knew the "Hello Girls" by their first names and sent them presents at Christmas time?

When Rev. Daniel Hill worked on a farm near New Market through the week but preached so effectively for $100 a year in the Second Baptist church that he had an average of five baptisms every month?

GLUCOSE SMEARED WITH VINEGAR.

Coal eleven dollars a ton and still climbing. Wonder who will "relief the situation" this winter?

'At a boy, Mr. Varley, you and your Citizens' Committee, get busy, and fix up a wopping celebration for the overseas boys' home-coming that will make the peace celebrations look like a selling plater.

The way they are letting them go at the Standard plant we need have no fear of the hired help telling us where they can go and get good money if we don't like what they do. It's our time now.

After the Civil War it was a lucky boy baby who escaped having "Ulysses Grant" or "Winfield Scott" hitched in front of his surname. Now it is the little girls who have to suffer and years hence "Lorraine" will be as common as flivvers on a Detroit boulevard.

There are exceptions, of course, but the rule is the parent who leaves the child millions of dollars loves it devotedly, but not intelligently.

Consistency, of course, is a jewel. The Community Christmas Committee has frowned heavily on German-made toys but President Wilson never batted an eye-winker when thousands of dollars' worth of German painted pictures were placed in the "George Washington" previous to its recent departure.

Little over one week left and you've got to hustle if you're going to do it early. And keep in mind, too, that all restrictions on presents have been removed and we still have a hankering for that light blue Fierce Sparrow we saw in the garage show window.

The point is, if it be true that 300,000 of our soldiers have married French girls, will not our reports have to include marriage in the casualty lists? The chances are they won't come back.

It only took a few minutes for the correspondent to put that story about Lieutenant Apgar on the cable but "Cubie" will spend the rest of his natural life explaining to the home folks how he, himself, all alone and unaided "surrounded" seven Germans.

The National Civil Service Reform League is criticising Postmaster General Burleson for turning out Civil Service employes and putting in Democratic workers. What in the mischief do these old pussy cats of reform think the postal service is for if not to reward the faithful and deserving Democratic workers?

Four boys nabbed by the police admitted to Chief Kiely that they had stolen twenty-six wheels from the time they began operations. Mention is made of the fact to close up those old timers who keep insisting that the "good old bicycle days" are over.

If the Public Service wants to be real nice it can give us back the nickel fare that once was ours. Not much chance, however, as that seven-cent dig in the ribs, like Tennyson's brook, is undoubtedly going on forever.

Yes, a fitting memorial that the city will be proud of as its token of honor to the boys who fought for us. And let's not be hasty in deciding as to its form, but be sure we're right and then go ahead with something permanently beautiful and utilitarian.

It is easily possible for a man with a few stray dollars to choke some selfishness out of himself by going down to the corner and slipping the Red Cross a ten spot. Then tell 'em to apportion nine of the memberships to Plainfield soldiers in France.

Capt. Beardsley The Feature Of Red Cross Rally

The opening gun of the Christmas Red Cross Roll Call will be fired tomorrow night, December 14, in the High School Auditorium. Captain Sterling S. Beardsley, a New York cotton broker, who has put in a year of the stiffest kind of work with the French and American front line troops, will tell a thrilling tale of Red Cross work under fire. He is one of the few non-combatant Americans who have received the Croix de Guerre from the French Government for conspicuous service. The Red Cross management has brought him to America for a few weeks in order that the recital of his experience and observation may stir the people to enroll in the organization for another year.

Besides this head-liner, the Plainfield Committee has secured the new official three-reel film, "The Flaming Cross," which shows the Red Cross at work at home and on the hospital ships and in the fighting zone, and in the villages and homes of the people of France, Italy and Servia. The picture is being shown this month for the first time. Many of the scenes were taken in the midst of shot and shell and show how the Red Cross carries first aid to the wounded. In the scenes at home the characters are moving picture stars of the first magnitude, who gave their services voluntarily.

In addition to the star speaker and the stirring pictures, the meeting will have another attraction in the presence of the Liberty Band and a song leader.

This is a Community Rally in the name of the Red Cross and is intended to prepare the way for the big membership canvass which begins next Monday. There are no tickets, no charge for admission, no appeals for subscriptions. Everybody is welcome and everything free.

1,000 Demand Pay Increase For Teachers

Enthusiastic endorsement of a resolution requesting the Board of Education to increase the pay of the city's school teachers was made by one thousand persons at a mass meeting in the High School Auditorium, last night. Afterward, a committee composed of C. B. Tyler, Senator William N. Runyon and William M. Wherry, was appointed to take the matter up directly with the school officials.

Thomas C. Vail, president of the P. H. S. Parent-Teachers' Association and the West End Civic Association, acted as chairman of the meeting. Members of the teaching corps showed how hard it had been for them to maintain standards of living with the old rate of pay since the war increase of prices, the statement being made that many young women teachers had to work in industrial plants in the evening to eke out a livelihood. The scale of pay is at present from $650 a year to $1,000, and the increase asked is from $900 to $1,500. During the evening numerous instances were shown, where pupils had left classes in school to work in local plants and had received more money than the teachers who had spent years of preparation in college to fit them as instructors.

Among those who spoke in behalf of the resolution were Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, former Mayor George W. V. Mor, former Judge William Newcorn, J. D. Loizeaux and Mr. Vail, while many other well-known citizens sent letters of endorsement.

EDWARD MOBUS WRITES.

Edward Mobus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mobus, of Watchung avenue, writes from France that he passed through the recent big drive safely and is now well and happy. He went overseas as a member of the Engineers' Corp.

SO LONG, NURSE!

I have often wondered what there is that I can say,
Or how I'm going to thank you when it's time to go away;
And there comes that same old feeling, a-stealing, from my heart
As when I stood before my Mother when the hour came to part.

You've been to me a Mother, though we never met before,
You've taken tender care of me (what mother could do more?)
But when I try to thank you for the good that you have done
My lips will only tremble and my tongue seems stricken dumb.

But the memory of your kindness will never fade away,
And I pray to Him above that I'll live to see the day
When I'm able to reapy you—and you and I'll be square—
But to leave you with just "Thank You" doesn't seem exactly fair.

And so I write these verses as a token of esteem;
I hope you understand me and know just what I mean,
For really I am grateful though no fitting words I find
That are good enough to tell you just what I have in mind.

So I must say the same as others, on the parting day,
Just "So long, Nurse," and then they go on their way,
But these few simple words mean more than I can tell,
Well, "So long, Nurse"—'tis a soldier's fond farewell.

Only Two Local Lads Unharmed In Co. G, 311th

Only two Plainfield members of Company G, 311th Infantry, escaped death or wounds in the big drive just before the armistice was signed, according to a letter written on November 1st by Corporal Philip F. Phillips, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Phillips, of Madison avenue, now stopping at the Hotel Albert, New York. The lucky two were Corporal Phillips himself and Thomas Heron, of West Fifth street.

The writer states that the 311th Regiment has been cited for bravery and gallant work and the entire 78th Division, of which it was a part, is to be honored for its action under fire. Corporal Phillips is to return home with three decorations, although he only went overseas in May. In his letter he states that besides seeing Thomas Heron, after the armistice, he also met David Sutton, Constantinee Delekas and Roy Vail, all of Plainfield, and all of whom escaped harm in the terrific drive previous to November 11.

Military Funeral For Sergeant Day

With full military honors befitting the service he had given his country the funeral of Sergeant Edson L. Day, of Race street, the borough, who was killed in an accident near Baltimore last week was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Day, of 241 Somerset street.

Rev. J. O. McGelvey, of the Watchung avenue Presbyterian church, officiated, and Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, assisted. The casket was draped with an American flag and a detail of army men from Camp Raritan was in attendance. Members of this detail afterwards served as pall-bearers. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, where a firing squad paid its tribute to the memory of a brave soldier and taps were sounded for him for the last time. A non-commissioned officer accompanied Sergeant Day's body from Baltimore to this city, bringing with him a beautiful floral piece contributed by the men of Company A, Ninth Battalion of U. S. Guards, to which the North Plainfielder was attached. There were numerous other floral pieces extended by friends of the soldier and of his relatives.

Sergeant Day's death came about in a peculiar manner. With another guard, he was proceeding to Baltimore on a motorcycle, Sergeant Day occupying the side car. They approached an auto truck hauling heavy timbers and on the wrong side of the road. One of the timbers projected out far in back but bore no protecting light. The driver of the truck suddenly swerved to one side as the army machine was at the back, causing the heavy timber to swing about and strike Sergeant Day a terrific blow directly over the heart. It caused almost instant death as life was extinct when his companion reached his side after leaping from the motorcycle. The truck driver was later placed under arrest and is being held for trial.

Much attention was attracted by Sergeant Day's enlistment during the recent war as he was in his fiftieth year. He served through the Spanish War as a member of the 16th Infantry and he believed the military experience he had gained would make him a good addition to the overseas forces sent to defeat the Germans. Because of his age, however, he was barred from active service but was accepted for the U. S. Guards. He was every inch a soldier and had made an excellent record for himself when the fatal accident of last week ended his career.

Sergeant Day had lived in Plainfield or North Plainfield practically all his life and was known to many hundreds of local people. Previous to entering the army he was employed as a mason, having learned his trade when a young man. Beside his parents, he is survived by his wife and three sons, William L., Harry S. and Edson B. Day, all of the borough. He also leaves one brother, Roy Day, and two sisters, Mrs. Albert Colton and Mrs. Luella Demarest, of the borough.

MUST SUBMIT BRIEFS.

Vice Chancellor Backes, at Elizabeth, Wednesday, heard argument in the land dispute case between Mrs. Theodore Mason and the Home Real Estate Company and afterward ordered counsel on both sides the submit briefs.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

ANNA MARY CLARK.

The funeral of Mrs. Anna Mary Clark, whose death occurred early Tuesday morning, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John McCullough, of Darrow avenue, took place in St. Mary's church, yesterday morning, when a high mass of requiem was offered for the repose of her soul. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan was celebrant, Rev. Father Holsters, deacon, and Rev. Father Campbell, the last named of St. Joseph's church, sub-deacon. Many relatives and friends were in attendance.

A wealth of floral tributes indicated the esteem in which Mrs. Clark was held. The number included many beautiful set pieces. Burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery, porters serving as pall-bearers.

Mrs. Clark's death came after a long illness which began with a slight paralytic stroke several years ago. She had been in a more or less invalidic state since then but the end came suddenly and unexpected.

The deceased was born in Philadelphia in 1846 and came to Plainfield twenty years ago. Her husband, the late Bernard Clark, died about ten years ago. Mrs. Clark's home for a long time was on West Seventh street, but recently she had been residing with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John McCullough, of Darrow avenue. She was a communicant of St. Mary's church and interested in all of the parish activities but otherwise had no other affiliations outside her own home. She frequently befriended the needy but her charities were always done quietly even to the point of keeping the left hand from knowing what the right hand did.

Beside Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. Clark is survived by one son, Joseph Clark, of East Second street; several grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Three other sons, John, Frank and Ben Clark, died in recent years. Mrs. Clark was also predeceased by two daughters, Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. Devine.

HOWARD H. WILLIAMS.

At his late home on Kensington avenue, yesterday, a private funeral service was held over the body of Howard H. Williams, whose death occurred Tuesday noon, after a brief illness. The service was in charge of Rev. Edward Rawson, of Washington, D. C., a cousin of the deceased. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Although a resident of Plainfield only since 1900, Mr. Williams had identified himself with its civic, religious and political welfare. Outside of his business interests as practicing lawyer in New York city, he was interested in many activities beneficial to the community. During the war period he was an enthusiastic supporter and worker in Red Cross campaigns and at all times had been a big help to the Charity Organization Society. As a Republican, he was open in his support of the party's candidates, doing much to bring about the election of able men to the leading offices. As a member of the Crescent Avenue church, he was active in all its departments. He served as elder and also for a time acted as superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Mr. Williams was born at North Adams, Mass., forty-eight years ago. He was graduated from Yale, and soon afterward began the practice of law in New York. He was eminently successful in his profession, having at various times been the legal factor in numerous cases of moment.

Mr. Williams is survived by his wife and two sons; also his mother, Mrs. Charles H. Williams, of North Adams, and one brother, Captain Williams at present in the army service.

DE WITT C. CONOVER.

The funeral of DeWitt Clinton Conover, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital at noon Saturday, after one week's illness with pneumonia, was held at the home of his parents at 149 Sycamore avenue, the borough, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring officiatel and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Conover was the son of Mr. and Mrs. David R. Conover, of Sycamore avenue, and was born in North Plainfield thirty-three years ago. On leaving school, he learned the trade of carpenter, which he followed up to the time of his last illness with the exception of a brief period in the city fire department during 1917. He had previously served as call man in the borough department. His local acquaintanceship was very wide and his death after so short an illness came as a shock to all. He was a member of Plainfield Lodge of Moose and the Carpenters' Union.

Mr. Conover only a little more than a year ago married Miss Anna Retzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Retzer, of Somerset street. She, with an infant daughter, Idabel, survives. He also leaves in addition to his parents, five sisters and one brothers. They are the Misses Gertrude, Mabel, Lillian and Idabel Conover, Mrs. Mildred Hopewell and Winfield Conover, all residing here.

MISS AMELIA KERSTING.

The funeral of Miss Amelia Kersting, daughter of Rudolph Kersting of Lee place, was held in Hope chapel, of which she was a member, Monday afternoon. Rev. D. W. Skellenger, the pastor, officiated. Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Miss Kersting was twenty-one years old and had always resided in Plainfield. Previous to her fatal illness, she had been employed by the Plainfield Trust Company. Beside her father, she is survived by two sisters.

MISS AMANDA J. CHAMAIDEN.

The funeral of Miss Amanda J. Chamaiden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Chamaiden, of Plainfield avenue, whose death occurred after a brief illness, was held at St. Mary's church, Monday morning. Rev. Father Holsters offered the requiem mass and temporary burial was made in St. Mary's cemetery. Some time later the body will be taken to Guayaquil, Ecuador, South America, for interment, this being the deceased's former home.

Miss Chamaiden was born at Guayaquil forty-two years ago and had lived here only a short time.

MRS. MARTHA EMMA WETMORE.

The funeral of Mrs. Martha Emma Wetmore, widow of Abram B. Wetmore, who died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Henry E. Titus, of Madison avenue, was held at the residence Monday morning. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace P. E. church, conducted the service and burial was in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Wetmore was eighty years old, and was a native of New York. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Altheus Forbes. She came to Plainfield eighteen years ago, since which time she had made her home with Mrs. Titus. She was a member of Grace Episcopal church and faithful in her religious duties as long as her health permitted.

PETER M. LUND.

Peter M. Lund, a widely-known resident whose home for many years was in the East End of the city, died early Sunday morning, at his home at 935 West Front street. He had been ill less than a week with pneumonia. The funeral was held privately, Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Howard E. Clarke, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Lund was a native of Denmark, where has was born in 1866. He came to this country when a young man, locating first at Somerville but removing to Plainfield twenty-five years ago. He made his abode on East Sixth street for many years, but a short while ago traded his residence for a farm near Flemington. He operated the latter only one season, after which he returned to Plainfield and located on West Front street.

For ten years, Mr. Lund was employed as shipping clerk by the Folsom Arms Vompany in New York, resigning his position when he took up farming. After coming back to this city, he secured a position in the painting department at the American Motors plant.

Mr. Lund was a member of Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., and one of the most enthusiastic Pythians in this district. He rarely missed a meeting of his lodge and at all times exercised "Friendship, Charity and Benevolence," the cardinal principles of the order. By nature, he was of a retiring disposition but those whom he took into his friendship were always held steadfast. His acquaintanceship in the city and borough was very wide and his death after so brief an illness occasioned much surprise. He attended the meeting of Perseverance Lodge on November 29, at which time he appeared to be in his usual good health, consequently none of his fellow members were prepared for the sad news conveyed to them on Sunday. This fact also applied to his associates in Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men and the Congregational church, to both of which he belonged.

Beside his wife, Mrs. Louisa P. Lund, the deceased is survived by one son, George B. Lund, employed as bookkeeper at the Plainfield Savings Institution.

MRS. EMMA J. McGANN.

Mrs. Emma J. McGann, widow of Thomas M. McGann, died Sunday, at the home of her son, Marcus W. Clark, of 215 Stebbins place. She had been ill for several weeks with a complication of troubles. The funeral was held at Mr. Clark's residence, Tuesday afternoon, and was in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, of Hope chapel. The service was private. Interment was made Wednesday in the Chester Lawn cemetery at New Baltimore, N. Y., near Albany.

Mrs. McGann was sixty-five years old and was a native of New York State. She had made her home in this vicinity for the past twenty-five years. Since the death of her husband, who was a well-known contractor, she had been employed as nurse. Beside Mr. Vlark, she leaves one other son, whose home is in Connecticut.

MRS. MINNIE A. SAFFRON.

Mrs. Minne Altman Saffron, a resident of Plainfield practically all her life, died Saturday night, at her home at 327 East Fifth street, after a short illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held privately Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial was in Hillside cemetery. Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, was the officiating clergyman.

Mrs. Saffron's home prior to her marriage was on lower West Seventh street, in Piscataway township, where her father, Charles Altman, conducted a truck farm. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Helen Saffron, who resided with her.

OTTO LARSEN.

A number of friends from this city, including a delegation from Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., was in attendance Wednesday afternoon, at the funeral of Otto Larsen at the home of his father on Bound Brook road, New Market. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. P. B. Strong, of the First Baptist church, and burial was in Middlesex Hillside cemetery at Samptown.

Mr. Larsen's death came Sunday night, after a brief illness. He was twenty-nine years old and was the son of Niels and the late Caroline Larsen. He was a machinist by trade. His last place of employment was at the Pond Tool Works, where he was extremely popular with his shop mates. Beside belonging to the Juniors, he was also a member of Local No. 167, International Associational of Machinists and the Pond Mutual Benefit Society.

The deceased, in addition to his father, is survived by two sisters and two brothers. They are Mrs. Hannah Murk, of Franklin Park; Miss Lena Larsen, Hans C. and Charles Larsen, living at he home on Bound Brook road.

No Auto Licenses For Enemy Aliens

According to a new ruling received by Automobile License Agent James J. McCann from the State Motor Vehicle Department, no renewals of licenses will be granted to enemy aliens. As very few of those applying for renewals at the agent's office know of this law, Mr. McCann has had some difficulty in making the applicants understand that unless they have their final citizenship papers they cannot have their automobile licenses renewed.

Those applicants who are between the ages of 21 and 36 must show their military classification cards. If they are in Class 5-F, which is the enemy alien class, their applications for renewals must be received. All enemy aliens over 36 years must show their final citizenship papers before they can receive their new licenses. The department will continue to issue drivers' licenses to friendly aliens within the draft age who have been exempted from service and to all others who qualify.

The agent's office in East Fourth street has been the scene of numerous controversies since this law went into effect. Enemy aliens who have had drivers' licenses for five or six years must be refused, and show their resentment. Some applicants of those who are over the draft age and failed to obtain their citizenship papers protest in vain that they should have a renewal for commercial purposes.

Since the new law affecting motorcycle drivers went into effect last March, every operator of a motorcycle must have a driver's license. During 1918 many operators have driven motorcycles without licenses, but the law will be strictly enforced during 1919, and every driver of a motorcycle is urged to secure his driver's license as early as possible.

The applications for renewals have been few compared with other years, and as Mr. McCann is trying to prevent a last minute rush at the license office, he is urging all owners of trucks and cars to secure their licenses now. Many individuals and firms owning a large number of trucks have not yet applied for their 1919 licenses, and unless a large percentage of the business is cared for during the coming week, the agent's office will be unable to care for all the applications by January 1.

COURT PLAINFIELD ELECTS OFFICERS.

At the meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, Wednesday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Court deputy, Edward J. McCann; chief ranger, P. S. Flatley; vice chief ranger, Theodore Mansell; recording secretary, Henry Hansen; financial secretary, Martin Hansen; treasurer, John R. Cline; orator, Peder C. Thomsen; senior woodward, P. Disken; junior woodward, Charles Paglucca; senior beadle, John C. Cooper; junior beadle, Thomas Fitzgerald; finance committee, John F. Casey, Edward J. McCue; trustees, John F. Casey, Edward J. McCue.

These officers will be installed on January 8, at which time an entertainment will also be held.

MISS MURRAY ENJOYING DELIGHTS OF FLORIDA.

Miss D. C. Murray, of 426 Spooner avenue, who went to Florida last week, has written home that she is now located at Miamia and thoroughly enjoying the "summer" breezes of the Southland. In the forepart of the week, when New Jersey was undergoing freezing weather, the Miami thermometers stood at eighty, and Miss Murray and other friends enjoyed surf bathing. She declares that she, in common with other northerners, are delighted with the experience of picking grape fruit direct from the trees in preparation for a breakfast treat.

Miss Murray will remain in Florida all winter. She is a graduate nurse and when in Plainfield makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnston, of Spooner avenue.

One member in a family is not enough

EVERY man and woman in the country, not in khaki or navy blue, should answer "present" to the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call the week of December 16—23.

A message of good cheer will be sent overseas this coming Christmas Eve, to hearten our fighting boys and our Allies.

That message must be complete—there must be no room for doubt that we stand behind them—it must bear the word that there is Universal Membership in the Red Cross—their Red Cross.

Let us make our second Christmas at war a Red Cross Christmas—with full membership in every American home.

Billy Arlington at Head of Big Cast in "Golden Crook" Show

Looking over the cast of "The Golden Crook Company," which appears at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, one is forcibly impressed with it being one of the best in burlesque. Heading this exceptional array of talent is the greatest of all tramp comedians, Billy Arlington, who is too well known to need any introductions except to say that his ability as a funmaker is of the most legitimate kind, his appearance is always received with rounds of laughter and his unctious humor is contagious. There is Eleanor Cochran, the winsome soubrette whose radiant smile and pleasing smile makes her a valuable member of the company. Harlie Mayne, the stately prima donna, has an exceptional voice of rich rare sweetness and of great volume. George Douglas is a good foil for Mr. Arlington's witticisms and an artist of no mean ability, being a clever singer and dancer. The Pall Mall Trio, classy singers of classy songs, their repertoire is an extensive one and up-to-date, they are always presenting the latest of the most popular songs. There is a large chorus of thirty, one of the best in burlesque. The scenic equipment is of wonderful magnificence, running a riot of colors that equals any of the so-called high priced productions. The Ballet of the Allied Nations is the special feature this year and is one of the most pretentious offerings ever attempted on any stage, introducing America's premier dancers, Hite and Reflow.

Ancestry and Aid to Miss O'Hearn in "The Kiss Burglar"

If ancestry counts for anything and most people concede that it does, then Patricio O'Hearn is qualified to interpret the role of the Duchess in the musical comedy romance, "The Kiss Burglar," for let it be known here that the fair Patricia is a descendant of King O'Hearn, who in the eleventh century vanquished the Brien Borus and in the twelfth century married into the Norman Race, which prospered unto the twentieth century when one of its living representatives, Will J. O'Hearn, made the name of O'Hearn known to playgoers and patrons of vaudeville. Billy O'Hearn's one great desire in life was to see his daughter, Patsie, a Broadway star, and to that end spared neither time, labor nor money upon her education. Patricia O'Hearn since early childhood has taken an active part in many and varied theatrical presentations, and as days rolled on attracted the attention of a number of Broadway producers, among who were the Shuberts, who immediately placed her in the Winter Garden, where she remained for over two solid years appearing in the various Winter Garden productions. When Coutts and Tennis started rehearsals for their Geo. M. Cohan Theatre success, "The Kiss Burglar," they tried several well known actresses in the part of the Duchess, all of whom failed. Their attention was then drawn to Patricia O'Hearn, who was still appearing in support of Al Jolson in the Winter Garden productions. Patricia was persuaded to accept the part and leave Broadway for a tour of the larger cities, and will appear at the Plainfield Theatre, this afternoon and tonight, at the head of an enormous company, which is the only organization presenting this Broadway hit. "The Kiss Burglar" comes here with all its wonderful fun and alluring tunes as seen on Broadway for six solid months.

Enemy's Methods Revealed In Strong Photoplay Drama

"Unconditional Surrender," a thrilling expose of the methods adopted by enemy aliens to obstruct the successful progress of the late war was the big feature of a new show which came to the Plainfield Theatre, yesterday, and which is to berepeated tomorrow afternoon and night.

The gripping photoplay divided honors, however, with a strong vaudeville program. At its head was Bob Mills, vaudeville's greatest wonder, who gives a remarkable demonstration on the piano and puts songs "over the footlights" as no other single comedian can do. He is one of the best attractions the theatre has offered this season. Another splendid number is given by the Dayton trio, clown comedy acrobats who keep the spectators in a roar of laughter. The De Wolff Sisters and Sydney Franklin sing and dance in a most entertaining manner, and the Shing Sun Loo company o:ers a wierd Oriental novelty.

Derwent Hall Caine, son of Hall Caine, who created "The Manxman," "The Christian," and other famous novels, interprets the principal roll in "Unconditional Surrender." He is supported by an exceptionally strong company selected for the production by the F. N. Stewart Company, the producers. There is action in every fott of film and local "movie" fans should not lose the opportunity of seeing this masterpiece of screen effort.

Vaudeville and pictures will be at the Plainfield all next week, with the exception of Tuesday night, when burlesque is to be the attraction. On the last three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Manager Shannon will offer the ever popular William Farnum in his latest successful dramatic effort, "The Rainbrow Trail."

Jerseymen's Part in Battles Is Shown by March's Report

In the chronological history of the work of the army of the United States in France, appended to General March's report, mention is made twice of the Twenty-ninth Division, in which are New Jersey National Guard troops, and three times of the Seventy-eighth Division, half of which is made up of Jersey selectives.

In the report of October 17 this appears:

"The Twenty-ninth Division advanced to the summit of Bois de la Grand Montague, east of the Meuse."

An exploit of the Twenty-ninth on October 23 is given in the following entry:

"Troops of the Third Corps reached the ridge north of the village of Bantheville, taking 171 prisoners. The Twenty-ninth Division captured the rigbe of the Bois d'Etrayes and Hill 361."

The Jersey selectives' work is thus described in the report for October 19:

"The Seventy-eighth Division pushed their lines forward to Bellejopeuse farm and began to mop up the Bois des Loges."

In the record of October 27 this appears:

"The Seventy-eighth Division entered Bellejoyeuse farm, northeast of Grandpre, and found it unoccupied. The occupation of the right of way north and northwest of Grandpre was completed."

The third mention of the Jersey selectives follows:

"On the evening of November 2 the troops of the Seventy-eighth Division drove the enemy from the Bois des Loges and closely followed his retreat. The Ninety-second Division, in spite of machine gun resistance, pushed forward and advanced the line three kilometers."

The Ninety-second is composed of negroes and this paragraph of the record would indicate it was serving with the Jerseymen in the same sector.

State Tax Head Fully Explains New Regulations

So that no confusion will exist in the minds of the taxpayers of New Jersey because of the transition from the requirements of the tax laws, as they previously existed, to the provisions of the revision of the tax act as passed by the last session of the Legislature, Frank B. Jess, president of the State Board of Taxes and Assessments, in an explanatory statement pictured the working of the new scheme. Mr. Jess took the position that those who actually pay the taxes should understand perfectly the provisions of the law, and he particularly held that there should be as little misunderstanding as possible between the taxpayers and the taxing officials. He felt that taxes at the best are very irksome, and that they should be made just as palatable as possible. Mr. Jess said in part:

"While the tax bill will be made out for the full amount, taxes will be received in two instalments. The first half will be due April 1 and will be delinquent if not paid on June 1. The interest rate on the delinquent taxes will be not less than seven nor more than nine per cent. The second half of the taxes will be due December 1, after which it is delinquent, and the entire tax will be a lien on the property.

"Appeals to the county tax boards must be filed by June 15 and determined by September 1. Appeals to the State board must be filed by October 1. The county board thus passes on all appeals at least three months before the taxes become a lien, instead of six weeks after that time, as heretofore, and most of the appeals of the State board will also be disposed of by that time. A petitioner may pay the first half of his taxes by June 1, appeal from the entire valuation, if he considers it excessive, and have the matter disposed of by the county board long before the second half of the tax is due, thus avoiding interest charges or the error of paying taxes 'under protest.' In addition to this the petitioner is protected by a provision that he may pay such portion of his taxes as are not in dispute, and receive credit for the same and such rate of discount on the amount paid as he would have on the whole amount.

"After the first day of December, personal, poll and dog taxes unpaid will be enforced by the sale of the goods and chattels, or by arrest. On the first of the following March the collector will file with the governing body his list of delinquents and during March the list of personal tax delinquents will be published. After July 1 the collector is to proceed to sell real estate for unpaid taxes, assessments for benefits and other municipal liens."

Mr. Jess explained that a new provision is that the assessor after completing his assessment and before turning his books over to the county board for examination, shall give the taxpayers an opportunity to inspect his assessment list and confer with him. The assessor is to give public notice by advertisement of the time and place when his books will be open for this inspection.

Christmas Cheer For State Hospital Patients

"December 12th, 1918.

"Dear Friend:.

"The hospital authorities fully recognize that the great European War, in which this country has taken a positive part, has been a drain upon a large proportion of the American people. At the same time we feel that the sick or afflicted at home still justly command our sympathies, and that you will likely desire to contribute in some degree to their happiness in the Christmas holidays.

"This is an appeal in behalf of the sick people who cannot return to their homes and to the associations of their loved ones. Some little token showing that they are not forgotten by their relatives and by public spirited friends will do much to promote their happiness and to make them more contented while, because of their sad affliction, they are not permitted their liberty and such privileges and pleasures as the Christmas occasion usually brings.

"This appeal is presented to you to let you know tht we at the hospital shall endeavor, as is our custom, to make the Christmas season as pleasurable to the inmates as we possibly can. We hope that you will contribute according to your judgment in rendering our efforts a success.

"Yours very cordially and respectfully,

"B. D. EVANS, M. D.,
"Superintendent."

Mr. Ackerman Gives His Opinions on The Reconstruction

Following his return to Plainfield after attending the reconstruction conference at Atlantic City, in which many of the country's best known captains of industry took part, Congressman-elect Ernest R. Ackerman gave the following views on the subject:

"I have been going to conventions for the last twenty-five years, but this one was the largest and, I believe, the most important one I ever attended. The effects of its deliberations will be far reaching. There were four thousand delegates from War Service Committees and Chambers of Commerce, and it seemed to me to be an excellent opportunity to give to the voters of the Fifth Congressional district the fullest possible benefit of the new world thought which seems to be drawing close to a policy of live and let live for both capital and labor. With such an inspiration as this I feel that it will be possible for me to go to Washington imbued with the modern thought of fraternity, which inspired our whole country to forget creed and color and selfishness of individual preferment so that through harmony and united purpose the war might speedily be won; has finally reached the point where practical, successful American business men publicly recognize and proclaim it to be their intention to do all in their power to continue this unified national spirit.

"If the sentiments expressed upon the rostrum of that important body are in any degree representative of its membership, and the volume of applause that greeted the telling points in the addresses seemed to guarantee that the spirit and viewpoint of the convention had been touched, then the ideals that have led us to champion the cause of suffering and misunderstood peoples without hope of reward are being reflected back upon our own national destiny in the form of a permanent desire for a square deal for capital and an equally square deal for labor, not only that which is organized, but for the unorganized clerks and commercial employes as well.

"When on sits in the comptny of four thousand successful business men and feels the impetus that comes to him by the expression and the revelation of the changed order of things it is symbolical of the existence of a newer and broader national thought and I come back to the Fifth Congressional district with a firm desire to represent it devotedly from the angle of the present day progressive American business man, as expressed at the Atlantic City conference that though it is perhaps easier to acquiesce in a policy of national selfishness the day is here when Lincoln's dream of 'malice toward none and justice for all' is set down and subscribed to one of the most fundamental of present day national business rules."

Putting Out 191,500 New Telephone Books

Local distribution of a new issue of the New Jersey Division Telephone Directory was started this week by the New York Telephone Company.

The book is bound in covers of light fawn and contains 520 pages. Its circulation throughout the division will total 191,500 copies.

On the front covers appears a notice reminding telephone users of the fact that "Information" does not give out numbers which can be found in the directory and urging that the new book be kept where reference to it will be easy.

Food Administration Bends Efforts to Stop Profiteering

Efforts of the State Food Administration low will be concentrated on prevention of profiteering and speculation among dealers in foodstuffs, it was announced this week. Now that the conservative campaign is out of the way, the State organization is preparing to embark upon an intensified campaign of price regulation.

In an announcement sent to all county food administrators, Frederic E. Mygatt, of this city, head of the enforcement division of the State administration, has called attention to the fact that a large force of inspectors is available to run down any attempts at profiteering. Every part of the Etate will be covered if necessary, it was said, and any attempt on the part of food dealers to increase prices so as to make unreasonable profits will be immediately checked.

School Children Honor Father Bogan

Sunday, December 8, marked the sixtieth anniversary of the birth of Reverend Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church. The event was celebrated by the school children on Monday afternoon, when, in the presence of many of the parishioners, the pupils of the school told in song and story their deep love for their Reverend Pastor.

At the close of the afternoon's festivity, Father Bogan was presented with a Peace Bell, whose silent tongue delivered the offering of his little ones—their accumulated donations.

The following was the program for the afternoon: Chorus, "To Welcome You," school; address, "Our Pastor's Natal Day," Loretta M. Kenney; chorus, "Send Me a Rose From Homeland," Immaculate Conception Society; musical selection, violinists, Margaret Winzenreid and Marie Matthews; pianist, Margaret Guinee; patriotic drill, Immaculate Conception Society; Allies— U. S., Frances Flynn; France, Mary Schaefer; Italy, Patricia Cahill; Belgium, Marie Corcoran; England, Mary McCann; chorus, "These Grand United States," Immaculate Conception Society; chorus and drill, "My Service Flag for You," eighth grades; presentation of gifts, Margaret Guinee, Mary Keily, Helen O'Reilly, Madeline O'Keefe, Adria Galbraith, Mary Griffin, Mary Owens, Pauline Winzenreid and Henry Norbert; addresses to children by Rev. Fathers Bogan, Holsters, Hennessey and Baldwin.

CAPT. FREDERICKSON RESIGNS.

Former Police Captain Christian Frederickson, of Leland Avenue, this week resigned his position as chief of guards at the Saurer Motor plant on West Front street. He was retired from the city police force several years ago but when war activities demanded men of experience as guards for munition plants, he accepted the post at the local factory.

Terrible Privations Brought About Death of Sergeant Mundy

Exposure and privations undergone while he lay for many days on the battlefield, wounded and unaided, it has been learned, were responsible for the death of Sergeant George W. Mundy, of this city, on November 3. He died in a base hospital directly from pneumonia, but the terrible ordeal through which he passed caused his illness.

News of Seageant Mundy's death came to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Mundy, of 1118 Woodland avenue, this week. They were already in grief as last week one of Washington's dreaded telegrams informed them that another son, Arthur F. Mundy, had died on the field as he was fighting for his country. The double bereavement is the first that has occurred to Plainfield parents, and the sympathy of the community has been extended to Mr. and Mrs. Mundy and other relatives of the hero lads.

Sergeatn Munday was twenty-nine years old and had always lived in Plainfield. He went to Camp Dix with his brother in September, 1917. Both were first attached to Company A, 311th Infantry, but on going overseas, Arthur was transferred to Company G. The latter was killed in a charge at Argonne in October, and in the same dash George was badly wounded. As the American forces rushed on, he was left behind in an isolated spot and was not discovered until fourteen days later. He had been without food and water all that time with the exception of what water was in his canteen and a few biscuits in his pockets. He was practically dead when picked up and when the pneumonia developed his weakened body offered no resistance to its ravages.

Before entering the service, Sergeant Munday was employed as motorman on the local trolley lines, but also had worked in the Plainfield shops as machinist. Beside his parents, he is survived by two sisters, the Misse Viola and Maude Mundy.

Entertainment at The Red Cross Shop

Those who patronize the Red Cross shop tomorrow afternoon are promised a musical treat by a trio of local and out of town talent. Miss Mabel Maxson, of Plainfield, will be the pianist, with Miss Louise Brown, violinist, and Miss Mildred Brown, 'cellist, both of New York.

These musicians have been associated for some time in trio work and are generously giving their services to make the tea-hour at the shop a bright and happy one.

Anyone who has Christmas-tree ornaments which they no longer need or can spare are asked to send them to the shop. Toys of all kinds and everything in the way of warm clothing for men, women and children are in great demand at this time of year. Give pu something that others less fortunate may buy for a small sum. What you sacrifice benefits someone else and the money they give for it helps alleviate a sickness or a sorrow.

Do not give to the shop what you would ordinarily give to the local charities, their work is of juft as much importance this year as in the past.

Come to the shop to buy. Eat at the shap these busy days when the pressure is great at home. Luncheons 30c and 60c. Afternoon teas 25c.

STANDARD PLANT NOT TO OPEN NEXT WEEK.

It was stated from the office of the local Standard Aero plant on North avenue, which closed down last Saturday, that the shops would not reopen next week. It was expected that the Government would give orders to continue certain work but this has not been forthcoming.

At present only enough employes are at the plant to take an inventory.

Hugh Treacy to Wed Miss Liftschild

Announcement has been made of the approaching wedding of Miss Jean Liftschild, daughter of Eugene Liftschild, of 662 West Seventh street, to Hugh T. Treacy, of Darrow avenue. The ceremony will take place in St. Mary's church on Wednesday morning, January 8, at which time a nuptial mass will be celebrated.

Mr. Treacy is one of Plainfield's best known residents although he has lived here for a comparatively few years. He has been greatly interested in civic affairs and has taken a leading part in political matters in behalf of the Democratic party. He was once a candidate for the City Council and last September made an excellent run for the Democratic Congressional nomination from the Fifth district. He is engaged in business in New York.

Miss Liftschild has also come to Plainfield in recent years but has become widely acquainted and is a social favorite.

St. Mary's Choir to Sing Christmas Mass at Colonia

Accepting an invitation from Lieutenant Reilly, chaplain at the Reconstruction Hospital at Colonia, the Choir of St. Mary's church, this city, will visit the institution Christmas eve for the purpose of singing at a midnight mass.

Miss Mary Smith, organist at St. Mary's, will be in charge and the full choir of twenty-four persons has volunteered to participate. The solo parts will be taken by Miss Mary Donnelly, Miss Eleanora McCarthy and Albert F. LaRock. It is probable that 500 or more of the patients and detachment men at the post and also a large number of the nurses will be able to attend.

Last Christmas eve, the soloists of St. Mary's church journeyed to Camp Dix, where they sang at a midnight mass offered by Lieutenant Joseph McDonald, chaplain of the 308th Field Artillery. Lieutenant McDonald was curate at St. Mary's church and at the time of his acceptance for service was stationed in Jersey City. He went overseas with the Seventy-eighth Division, which took part in the hard fighting from July until the signing of the armistice on November 11. At the Camp Dix service last year, Miss Smith acted as organist and 1,000 soldier boys took part in the religious ceremony.

Augustus Nash Is Made Lieutenant

Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Nash, of Prospect place, received word yesterday that their son, Augustus C. Nash, had been commissioned a lieutenant. The commission was signed on November 11.

Lieutenant Nash went to Camp Dix in September, 1917, and was transferred overseas the following December. He was stationed at Bordeaux as a member of the quartermasters' corps and was placed in charge of gasoline and oils supplies. He is stationed there yet but expects to be moved to Northern France in the near future.

George Fisher, of Manson place, who entered the service with Lieutenant Nash and went overseas with him, was commissioned lieutenant several months ago. Previous to beginning army life, Lieutenant Nash practiced law at Westfield.

John Carney Not Severely Wounded

John C. Carney, of 19 Grove street, is in receipt of a splendid letter from his son, Private John Carney, of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, stating that he is in a French hospital but getting along nicely and expects to be back in Plainfield late in January.

Private Carney enlisted in July, 1917, and went overseas in January last as a member of the First Division. He went into the trenches in February, came out in March, went back in April and after that took part in numerous big battles. He received his wound, a bad shrapnel gash, in one leg, at Chateau-Thierry, in July. In his letter he states that his leg is stiff but eventually will be all right.

DAUGHTER BORN TO ATTORNEY AND MRS. NASH.

Attorney and Mrs. Vincent W. Nash, Jr., of 1218 Martine avenue, are the parents of a seven-pound daughter, born to them at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday morning. The "little lady" has been named Florence Elizabeth, the first name being in honor of Mrs. William N. Runyon.

Mrs. Nash previous to her marriage was Miss Ida May Furman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Furman, of Craig place, the borough, and sister to the late Mrs. W. W. Warnock.

"Wes" McCormack Recounts Thrilling War Experiences

One of the most complete accounts of a Plainfieler's trip as a soldier from New York to England, thence across the channel to France and afterward a detailed reference to his movements as he worked his way to the battle line is contained in a letter written by Charles Wesley McCormick to his father, John R. McCormick, of 1042 Sherman avenue. He is a member of Company F, 103rd Supply Train, and as a motor truck driver underwent numerous harrowing experiences that substantiate a certain general's comparison of war with the lower regions but with all came out of the big fight without a scratch. At the time of writing he was located at Hendicourt, France, but was in expectation of moving the next day. He predicted that he might be back to the old town about the middle of February next.

Mr. McCormick received a letter from his son on Tuesday, shortly after another one had been placed in his hands. The latter was from his son's commanding officer, Captain J. J. Firestone, who took it upon himself to congratulate the father on the possession of such a valorous son and extol his chivalrous conduct under circumstances that would cause any but a brave man to falter.

The letter written by the young soldier to his father is given in full as follows, the signature being "Wes," the name by which he is known best:

November 22, 1918.

Dear Pa:

We have been asked by our commanding officer to write a letter to our fathers, and we are allowed to write anything we want to, so will try to explain as far as possible what we have been doing over here. We leftNew York the 27th of May, and it took us fourteen days to get across the pond. I sure did enjoy the trip but some of the fellows were sea-sick and didn't care whether the ship sank or not, but it did not bother me at all, except to turn my stomach one day. I think it was the 7th day out; they gave us half cooked fish. Can you imagine it.

We landed at Liverpool, England, and belfeve me, that is some place to look at from a boat. We were only there one-half of a day and then we went to a rest camp in Winchester. We were only there a few days before we started across the channel for France. The trip from England to France was made during the night.

We landed at the Harve in France on June 16, 1918, and we have been on the move ever since. From the Harve we went to a small place, La Zaunt, and received our trucks. We laid in La Zaunt two days and then started on our journey. We went through Paris just as they were having an air raid, so of course we had to stop and see the fun, as we called it.

We traveled for two days before we made a camp. It was at Boisy (in a woods). That was when our work began hauling rations for the divisions. We stayed there only a short time before we moved to Hondvalliers. We were then only a short distance from Chateau-Thierry. Jerry used to come over every night and drop a few bombs but he did not get any of us. While there I was detailed at train headquarters as a despitch rider. That was a good job and I had is about one month when I was detached to division headquarters as a despitch rider. That was some job, working day and night. Our division was in the first drive at Chateau-Thierry and had been in up until the Germans quit. After I came off the headquarters job I had several narrow escapes on the truck. At one place I was standing near it with some other fellows and a shell just missed us, making a hole large enough to bury a truck in, and the concussion of it knocked us off our feet. I wouldn't have missed this experience for any amount of money.

Our division stayed on the Chateau-Thierry front until they drove the Germans out of Rhcims. The battle of Chateau-Thierry was the changing point of the war. From that front they sent us to the Argonne Forest and that was the worst place we were ever at, as there was only one road leading up to our ration dumps and the Germans could see every truck that came along, so of course we were fired at every time we went up, which was every day. On one particular day I saw a German shell make a direct hit on a dugout and it killed four men that were in it. Believe me it is something awful. When Sherman said "War was hell," he was correct, but he never saw a real war where they shoot shells (9 inches by 3 ft.). The longest I have ever been in gas is two hours at a clip. When we came out of the Argonne Forest we came to the front we are now on. It is the Lorraine front just to the right of Metz. I was within one kilo of the lines the night before the armistice was signed. Eight of our trucks were hidden up there loaded with lumber for a bridge. If the Huns hadn't given in there would have been a big drive as the lumber for the bridge that we had on was to go over a river two miles behind the German lines.

Well, I don't know what else to say except that I consider myself lucky and that I expect to be home by the middle of February at the latest, as we plan to move back from here tomorrow. You will receive this letter about Christmas, so will wish you all a Mery Christmas.

Your Son,
"WES."

Charles W. McCormick,
Co. F, 103rd Supply Train,
Amer. E. Force, via N. Y.
A. P. O. 744.

We are now located in the mountains just outside of Hendfcourt, France.

This is the commendatory letter penned by Captain Firestone for the parents of the young Plainfielder:

OFFICE OF COMPANY "F"
103rd SUPPLY TRAIN
France, Nov. 11, 1918.

My dear Madam:

It gives me great pleasure to express to you the bravery and undaunted spirit displayed by your son, during the period of his service with Company "F," 103rd Supply Train, in this great World's War.

At no time has he failed to demonstrate his willingness to do his duty amidst many hardships and personal dangers, as befitting a true American soldier.

As his Company Commander, I had the opportunity to study his moral character and you have my assurance that you have reason to be proud of his behaviour under these trying conditions.

With the blessing of God he has been spared to you and his training should be an everlasting reward to his mother.

JAMES J. FIRESTONE,
Captain, Q. M. C.,
Commanding.

MRS. MARY E. ALMIND.

Mrs. Mary E. Almind, of 1027 Arlington avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, last night. She was thirty-three years old and leaves a husband and two children.

MISS MAAG DIES AT MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

Miss Christine Maag, a former resident of North Plainfield, who has recently been living with her nephew, Walter S. Craig, of 339 New Market road, Dunellen, died last night at Muhlenberg Hospital. She had been under treatment at the institution since December 1.

Miss Maag was sixty years old and was a sister to Philip Maag, of Jackson avenue, the borough. The funeral arrangements have not been made.

WILLIAM WRIGHT'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of William L. Wright, a former assistant chief of the Plainfield Fire Department, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday night, will be held in the Rescue Mission rooms on Madison avenue tomorrow afternoon at 2:15. Rev. B. H. McCoy will be in charge.

HIS CHRISTMAS STAR

Stars of Silver and Gold

1917--Christmas Eve--1918

Like a great diamond glowing on a raven's breast, The Star of Bethlehem gleams high in the Eastern skies tonight,—gleams as the pure, clear light of Heaven might, as it shines through a lens of molten silver.

For nearly two thousand years, the "Star of the East" has been to the Christian peoples of the earth, the Star of Faith and Hope. Faith in God's promise and Hope that in their day and age might come the realization of the world's desire, "Peace on Earth—Good Will to Men."

Throughout the ages, The Star of Bethlehem has shone down on a world, groping blindly upward from the valley of discord, through the yellow mists of hate, and the red vapors of murderous war, towards the fair, clean fields of Concord and Amity.

But never, since the first ray of Bethlehem's Wondrous Jewel flashed downwards, has its light shone on such scenes of woe unutterable, and desolation undescribable, as that which lay beneath it, where the trodden, blood-flecked snows of Flanders' fields marked the passage of the unleashed furies of hell, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and seventeen.

By the swollen, sullen waters of the Somme, stood a watcher of the night. Not watching as did the Wise Men of old for the Sign of Peace, but watching the creeping advance of the pilots of death, and as his peering eyes followed the stealthy course of dark shadows on the farther shore, they followed, too, across the stars' reflected pathway on the waters, the slow passage of silent forms, ghastly of face, and fixed of eye, floating downwards to the harbor of missing men. The sentinel of the night shivered, and crouched lower down in the poor shelter of his little trench.

Death, grim and silent, was abroad that eve of Christmas in the desolate valley of the Somme, and it seemed suddenly to him, as though its very breath had touched his heart. Again he shivered, as a streak of frozen steel, downward flashing, transfixed him to the earth. And above, over all, the Silver Star of Bethlehem, serene and placid shone.

* * * * * * * * * * *

In the window of a neat and pretty home, within the sound of our city's bells of joy, a little red and white flag, with a blue star in its center, hung. And within the room, whose lights shone through the window across the white carpet of snow that covered the peaceful Northland, a gentle-faced woman sat twining a wreath of Christmas holly to frame that dear little service flag—the flag with the little Blue Star.

Tonight, on this fair eve of Christmas Day, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and eighteen, the silvery light of The Star of Bethlehem shines once again above the waters of the Somme, but across its pathway there no floating horrors flit, nor by its banks no silent forms creep forth on a mission of death. And tonight, as she did one year ago, a woman, with sorrow in her eyes, placed around a little service flag,—a flag with a little "Star of Gold,"—a wreath of Christmas holly, as green and fresh and sweet as the memory of her soldier boy must always be, who won beneath the glow of the Silver Star the stainless Star of Gold.

Bonus Plan Suggested To Meet Pay Increases

Corporation Counsel Reed Drawing Up Bill for Presentation to Legislcture Permitting Municipalities to Give Employes Extra Money During Abnormal Times

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed is at work on a plan to meet the demands on the city's finances brought about by popular request for increases in salary for school teachers, municipal officers, police and firemen, which, if allowed in the measure suggested, would add $100,000 to the tax budget within a year.

Mr. Reed's plan is instead of having an out and out increase granted each department to remain permanently, to request the State Legislature to permit the giving of bonuses. hTis would enable City Councils, Boards of Education and Boards of Freeholders to meet abnormal conditions such as were brought about by the war without establishing a permanent high rate of wage to remain after conditions and prices dropped back to normal. The giving of a bonus based on yearly salaries would cover the extra expense saddled upon municipal employes while high prices prevail. The bill to permit bonuses will undoubtedly go before the next Legislature and if passed will immediately be taken advantage of by Plainfield.

At a meeting of the fire committee of the Common Council, last night, the firemen presented a petition for money money, following the example of the city police, who applied to the Common Council, Monday night. The firemen specify no amount, simply showing by figures that their living expense in the past two years has increased from one hundred to three hundred per cent., while their salaries have only been increased eight per cent. The committee took no action on the petition.

As near as can be ascertained, the granting of a forty-five per cent. increase to the school teachers and a fair increase for the police and firemen would bring the city tax rate up from thirty to thirty-five points higher than the present year. The finance committee of the Common Council is at work on the 1919 budget now and is trying to figure out some method of meeting the petitions for more money without later giving the citizens fax bills later on that would in the parlance of the street "knock them for a goal."

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO MISS GERTRUDE BRICK.

Miss Gertrude L. Brick, daughter of Mr. and Mrh. John Brick, of Terrill road and East Seventh street, died yesterday, after a brief illness with pneumonia. Her death was a great shock to her many friends, as it was not generally known that she was ill.

Miss Brick was twenty-two years old and leaves beside her parents, two sisters and three brothers. They are: Mrs. Beatty, of this city; Dorothy Brick, at home; Dr. George Brick, of Jersey City; Walter and Raymond, at home.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

PROBASCO BIBLE CLASS WILL HOLD BANQUET.

The Probasco Bible Class of the First Baptist church, at the monthly business meeting, last night, decided to hold its annual banquet. It will take place some time within the next two months and the young man will prepare the menu entirely, discarding the services of the young women who always volunteered in other years. Because of so many of the members being away in service or war work, it was at first thought the banquet could not be held this year.

At last night's meeting, addresses were made by A. M. Harris, Dr. Strong and Judge J. Henry Crane. The class also decided to have a bowling tournament in the near future with the Joy Bible Class of hte First Methodist church.

HIS SALARY INCREASED.

The Republican members of the Board of Freeholders, at a caucus, Wednesday, agreed to recommend an increase of $500 in salary for County Attorney Francis J. Blatz.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

A class of twenty-five candidates was initiated by Court Watchung, Daughters of Isabella, at Columbus Hall, Sunday afternoon. Grand Regent Margaret O'Brien, of Newark, conducted the ceremonies. Delegations from Courts at Westfield, Somerville and Elizabeth were in attendance and a social time was enjoyed in conclusion.

Sitting in the Somerset County Court, Tuesday, Judge James J. Bergen granted renewals of liquor licenses for North Plainfield's two hotels, The Chatham, conducted by Fred Moore, at Somerset and Chatham streets, and the Somerset, conducted by William Feaster, at Somerset street and Lincoln place. This is the first time a borough license application came before the court since the saloon vote was taken at the November election.

George Hill, of Central avenue, who enlisted in the naval reserve last spring and has recently been serving as first class cook on the transport, "Great Northern," was in town the past week on a furlough. He was on board the "Great Northern" last month when she collided with another vessel and was badly damaged. Hill was numbered among a score or more of the ship's crew who suffered slight injury, but he has since fully recovered.

Owen Fagan, formerly of 311 Clinton avenue, whose relatives have since removed to Madison avenue, has enlisted in the Navy following his discharge from the regular army, after seven months' treatment in the Government hospital at Fort Porter, Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Fagan went overseas with the first American contingent as a member of Company K, 38th Infantry. He was badly gassed at St. Dizar and was returned to America as "permanently disabled." Fagan is twenty-two years old.

The big Government Debarkation Hospital, in the former Greenhut building on Sixth avenue, New York, numbers three Plainfield young men among its 3,000 soldier patients. They are Oswald Love, of East Ninth street; James Kelly, of 438 West Fourth street, and Joseph Schaffer, of 427 West Fourth street. Love was gassed and had two ribs brokenffi Kelly has the muscles of one arm badly torn, and Schaffer has shrapnel wounds. Recent casualty announcements from Washington announce the following Plainfielders wounded: Frank W. Burke, of 519 East Sixth street, and Corporal Max Hanseon, 615 East Seventh street.

J. Whitney Baker has been named as chairman of a ways and means committee to work out the details for a proper demonstration in behalf of the Plainfield boys returning from the battlefields of France. This committee was appointed by Chairman J. J. Varley, of the Standing Citizens' Committee, and will report back to the latter at a meeting Sunday afternoon. With Mr. Baker on the special committee are William S. Tyler, Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, Charles H. Frost and Herman Schwed. The general committee has petitioned the Common Council for an appropriation of $1,000 to successfully carry out the celebration and sentiment among the city officials is in favor of granting the amount.

At the next meeting of the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., the following recently elected officers will be installed: President, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Leach; senior vice president, Mrs. Harriet Gibbons; junior vice president, Mrs. Theodosia Steiner; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah Strutchers; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah Mattox; conducto, Mrs. Corinthia Reed; guard, Mrs. Emma Frazee. The corps has named the following representatives for the next national encampment: First, Mrs. Corinthia Reed; first alternate, Mrs. Evelyn Mott; second, Mrs. Theodosia Steinerffi second alternate, Mrs. Anna Brewin.

According to announcement from the head office of the United Cigars Company, which recently secured a long lease on the former Cory building, at Park avenue and Front street, now owned by Rosenbaum Brothers, that the work of altering the interior of the structure will not commence until next spring. The Gayle Hardware Company, Lukac's shoe store and other tenants have leases which run for some time yet but they will vacate in the near future. The interior of the building is to be changed completely, one of the principal features to be the lowering of the main floor. The improvements will represent the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, has announced that its clubhouse on West Front street will be opened as a recreation centre for returning soldiers and sailors. All amusements will be free to service men.

In the dense fog of last Saturday night, a Chalmers touring car owned an ddriven by Wilbert T. Bintliff, of the Auto Electric Shop, collided with a Ford delivery belonging to Neuman Brothers and in charge of a colored driver. The occupants of the machines escaped unhurt but both vehicles were badly damaged.

Dr. H. V. Hubbard, of Central avenue, who has been at the evacuation hospital, Camp Greenleaf, Ga., was this week transferred to the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, and assigned to the eye department.

Because he persisted in forcing his unwelcome attentions on Mrs. Abraham Thomas, of East Third street, Charles Mecchia, also of East Third street, was haled to the city court by the woman's husband. Judge DeMeza told the defendant some plain facts about what would happen to him if he didn't leave another man's home alone and then fined him $20. Mecchia paid in preference to going to jail for sixty days. At the same session of court, John Fishback, of Richmond street, arrested by Chief Kiely for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, was fined $10, and Harry Berstein, of Lincoln, arrested by County Detective John Galatian for driving an automobile along East Front street in a reckless manner, was also fined ten dollars. The fines were paid in each instance.

The Christmas celebration for the patients at Bonnie Burn Sanatorium will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the board of managers. A number of Plainfielders will take part in the program and others will be in attendance.

Stormy weather failed to mar the success of the Charity Organization Society's annual Christmas show at the High School Auditorium Saturday afternoon. There was practically a capaity attendance of children and the little ones were placed in an ecstasy of delight by the funny animated cartoons, the moving pictures, a real sure enough Santa Claus and a magician who also gave a demonstration of ventriloquism. A neat sum was realized from the sale of tickets and this amount will be used by the C. O. S. in its charitable work. Mrs. J. M. Charles arranged the entertainment and credit for its successful presentation is mainly due to her.

Miss Jean McKenzie, who has been a missionary in West Africa, will speak in the Crescent Avenue Presybterian church, tonight.

Stephen Francisco, of Montclair, was arraigned in the city court Saturday, charged with driving his auto on the sidewalk and breaking a section of the fence on JoJseph Tate's property in East Front street. The complaint was dismissed when it was learned that the autoist had agreed to settle the damages.

Fred Frazer, of Cranford, has presented to Plainfield Lodge of Elks, of which he is a member, the beautiful American flog owned by him which is said to be the largest in Union county. The flag is thirty by fifty feet in dimensions nad has frequently been seen hanging down the front of the Elks' building on Watchung avenue. Heretofore it was loaned the lodge by Mr. Frazer but as it attracted so much attention every time it was displayed here, he decided to make it the lodge's property.

At the annual election of officers for Salaam Temple, Court of the Orient, at Elizabeth, recently, Frank J. Shattle, of West Fifth street, this city, was made grand orient, the station being the highest in the organization. W. H. I. Cubberly, of Washington street, was elected treasurer, and William Hoffman, of West Front street, outside guard. The other officers were selected from Elizabeth, Rahway and Roselle.

Louis Thompson, an eighteen-year-old colored youth, has been lodged in the county jail in default of $200 bail, fixed after a hearing in the city court on a charge of larceny. He is accused of stealing $100 in cash and a Liberty Bond from a desk at the home of Dr. G. W. Endicott, where he was employed. Thompson admitted under pressure that he had taken a trip to Baltimore and otherwise enjoyed the stolen money.

County Commissioner of Compensation Jaeger, of Elizabeth, has appealed to the Supreme Court for a decision in the contention of Robert Frazee, of Scotch Plains, that he is entitled to compensation under the employers' liability act for the death of his daughter, Miss Minnie Frazee, who was killed last August in an automobile accident at Scotch Plains. The young woman was run down by a machine as she was placing lights on the traffic post at Park and Mountain avenues, opposite her father's garage. Mr. Frazee asserts that the daughter was in his employ as bookkeeper at $18 per week and that part of her duties were to place the lights in position each night. The liability insurance company disputes the assertion that Miss Frazee was employed by her father.

Red Cross Plans Certificates For Its Loyal Workers

A plan has been worked out by the ational Red Cross for recognizing the loyal service given by the women and men workers of the Red Cross. This will be done through the issuance of certificates which carry with them the right to purchase and wear the Red Cross official general service insignia. The insignia for women workers will be a badge with a ribbon, bar and safety catch, and for men a button to be worn in the coat lapel.

Certificates will be awarded to all persons who have given service in any department of headquarters or of the auxiliaries during a period not less than 6 months, actual work done amounting to 4 days a week or 800 hours; 8 months, actual work done amounting to 3 days a week or 800 hours; 12 months, actual work done amounting to 2 days a week or 800 hours. No award made to a worker who has worked less than six consecutive months with a minimum of 800 hours' service.

In addition certificates will be awarded for work done outside of work room, i. e., knitting, or in any other chapter activity.

In computing periods of service all service subsequent to April 6, 1917, shall be considered. Minimum service, i. e., 800 hours; Standard Service Badge with plain ribbon. For each additional period equal to the minimum period of 800 hours, one stripe shall be added.

Certificates for minimum period of 800 hours shall be issued. Holder may purchase button No modification in this button is to be made for varying period of service in excess of minimum period. Application should be made in writing at the local headquarters or auxiliary to which member is attached, stating the nature of the service rendered, and the period of service, and number of hours, as accusately as possible.

For futher information apply at the office of local headquarters. Members working exclusively at auxiliaries should make application for certificates of the executive committee of the auxiliary.

Asks Chance to Buy Government Supplies

State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections Burdette G. Lewis, this week, wrote to Major General George W. Goethals suggesting that the Federal Government extend to all State, county and municipal governments an opportunity to purchase at a reasonable price the vast quantities of surius supplies, materials and equipment now owned by the War Department. It was also suggested by the commissioner that the federal quartermaster's department prepare a complete catalogue of all used and unused stock available for purchase, and issue the same to the local governmental agencies for their immediate consideraion.

It is the belief of Commissioner Lewis that by storing the surplus materials in the large federal ware houses instead of demoralizing the markett through their forced sales, these supplies may be made available to the government purchasing divisions for several years to come with the resultant financial gain to the federal, state and local governments.

After stating in his letter that the State Department of Charities and Corrections is co-operating with the Division of Conservation and Reclamation of the Quartermaster's Department in repairing shoes obtained from army cantonments, the commissioner says that "another matter which I would call to your attention in connection with the demobilization of war plants, war industries and cantonments is the possible use of parts or all of these plants and cantonments for housing the wards of the State. We have also considered the possibility of purchasing the barracks erected in New Jersey camps with the thought that they might be moved away to the prison farm at Leesburg to serce as dormitories for the large number of feeble-minded persons on waiting lists and who are not now provided for by the State. These barracks could also be used for housing more prisoners at the State Farm at Leesburg and other inmates or patients of other State and county institutions."

JOHN McINTYRE HOME.

John A. McIntyre, of 140 North avenue, who underwent a severe operation at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, last October, was discharged from the institution Sunday, and returned to his home here. It will be a long time yet before he is able to get about, but the progress he has made so far is considered remarkable inasmuch as few persons survive the ordeal through which he passed.

Sergeant Edmund Mundy, a member of the Marine Corps, left Monday for Paris Island, S. C., after a two weeks' furlough at his home on Stone street, the borough.

PERSONAL

Ensign James Kyle, of West Sixth street, who has been in transport service for the past year or more, and who sailed for France the day before the armistice was signed, is not to come back to America with his old ship. Word has been received from him that he has landed in France and is to remain there for an indefinite period.

Mrs. Edward Opdycke, of Oldwick, formerly New Germantown, was a visitor this week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Dresselt, of Vine street.

Mrs. James C. Conkling, of the New Madison building, wife of Captain James B. Conkling, who is attached to the Twenty-ninth Division, received word from the latter Wednesday, that he had passed through all the hard fighting safely and at the time of writing was on his way to Germany with the "army of occupation." Captain Conkling added that he did not expect to be in Plainfield until possibly next April, at which time the majority of the local boys who were in the big push with the Seventy-eighth and Twenty-ninth Division would get back to home soil.

J. A. Staats, proprietor of the Queen City Hotel, and Dr. P. J. Zeglio, of Somerset street, have returned from a hunting trip to Virginia. The trip was taken particularly as a recuperation period for Dr. Zeglio, who was greatly run down by his long hours of service during the recent grip and pneumonia epidemic.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Guinee, of Liberty street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby daughter, born to them Tuesday morning. Mr. Guinee was for many years employed by the Public Service Corporation, but is now with the Spicer plant at South Plainfield.

Former Senator and Mrs. James E. Martine, who have been in town for some time, left Wednesday for Washington, where they will remain for the winter. "The Farmer Orator" is enjoying splendid health and declares it will stand him in good stead for the busy months ahead of him at the Capitol.

Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, of Washington avenue, who became critically ill with pneumonia shortly after her husband died with the disease, continues to show signs of improvement, although only a little each day.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Haslack, who have been living at 728 West Fourth street, removed this week to the Smith residence at 511 Division street.

Mrs. Warren B. Clymer, of Vine street, is confined to her home by a severe attack of influenza, which for a time threatened pneumonia. Mrs. Clymer was formerly Miss Eva Doeringer.

Edward Harding, Jr., formerly of Laramie road, will return from Washington for the Christmas holidays, but will not remain in Plainfield permanently. He is still very busy at the Capitol in semi-war work and will be stationed there for several months at least. His wife and two children will arrive in Plainfield, Sunday, to remain until after the first of the year.

Dean Roder, of West Fourth street, who was formerly employed at the local Standard Aero plant, left Monday for Slatington, Pa., where he will visit relatives until after the holidays. Mr. Roder is a nephew of the late Sergeant Edson Day, who was killed at Baltimore two weeks ago and whose funeral took place on Thursday of last week.

Thomas Connolly, of West Fifth street, formerly employed at the Standard Aero plant, will leave tomorrow for Buffalo, N. Y., where he has secured an excellent position at a Government plant.

Harry Kline, of 136 North avenue, was mustered out of service last Sunday. He was a member of the Aviation Mechanical Corps, and was last stationed at Camp Mills, L. I.

"Jack" Hall, of Jackson avenue, the borough, returned home Tuesday night, after a trip to Scranton, Pa., in the interests of the Standard Motor Corporation of Jersey City, by which he is employed.

Robert Schreiner, of Central avenue, who is recovering from injuries received when he was run down by an automobile, was able to leave his room yesterday, and pay his first "visit" downstairs. He expects to have his Christmas dinner with the family, but it will be some time after the holidays before he is able to return to business.

Ludwig Hefti, who is stationed at Pelham Bay, as a member of the Naval Hospital Reserve, was home over the post week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthias Hefti, of 1330 West Third street. He expects to be discharged from service some time in February.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kieley, of Sumner avenue, are the parents of a little daughter, who came to their home a few days ago. Mr. Kieley is employed in the maintenance department of the Plainfield-Union Water Company.

Rev. Father Walter Hennessey, assistant rector at St. Mary's church, who left last week for Atlantic City, is expected home today. Father Hennessey went to the seashore resort for final recuperation before returning to his pastoral duties after a three months' illness from pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. Axel K. Jensen, who were married Saturday night, at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Groot, of Belvidere avenue, have returned from their wedding trip and are temporarily making their home in Plainfield. In the near future they will deport for Moscow, Russia, where Mr. Jensen formerly represented the Chesebrough Manufacturing Company. Mrs. Jensen was Miss Ellen Stockfleth Groot.

Harry Hansen, of Lincoln place, the borough, writes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hansen, that he is still located in France with the Engineers' Corps, but "safe and sound" after all the fighting, in which his division took part. He states that William Hogan, of the borough, is with him, and that both, after the armistice was signed, enjoyed a visit from Edward Krausse, of Vine street, who was located some miles away.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ireland, of 973 West Fourth street, are the parents of a daughter, born to them Monday. Mrs. Ireland was formerly Miss Dalley, sister of R. B. H. Dalley, of Grant avenue. Mr. Ireland is employed at the Pond Tool Works as an electrician.

William Barry, of Howard street, the borough, will return to his post at Carlisle, Pa., next Sunday, after a five days' furlough at home. He is a member of the Medical Corps. His brother, George F. Barry, who is stationed at Fort Ontario, Oswego, N. Y., in the Medical Corps, was home over the past week-end.

Mrs. Ella Wilson, whose husband, Miles Wilson, died on November 6, from pneumonia, is seriously ill at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Lappin, of West Fourth street. At the time her husband was fatally stricken, Mrs. Wilson passed through a critical illness with the same trouble and her present trouble is a recurrence of the original disease.

James J. McNamee, formerly of Plainfield, was mustered out of service at Washington on Sunday, and has taken up his residence at 15 Madison avenue, Cranford. He will return to his position in the publicity department of the National City Bank, New York, where he was located at the time hostilities began. Previous to entering the army as an infantry man last July, Mr. McNamee was located at Camp McClellan, Ala., as official correspondent for the Blue and Gray Division.

Co. G's Captain Extols Corporal Frank Donnelly

Captain W. I. Emerson, in command of Company G, 311th Infantry, one of the gallant units of the Seventy-eighth Division, which delivered several of the last slamming blows at the Germany Army before it fell back in utter defeat, has written a letter of condolence and sympathy to Mrs. John I. Donnelly, of 660 West Fourth street, whose son, Corporal Frank I. Donnelly, died on the battlefield as Company G lunged into the thickest of the fray at Sedan.

In the missive, Captain Emerson asserts that Corporal Donnelly was a great favorite with himself and the men of the company and that all felt a great personal loss in his death. The kindly sympathies as expressed by the officer have brought comfort, not only to the mother, but the father and bereaved sister, Miss Mary Donnelly, as well. They treasure the letter as an expression of recommendation of one who knew the lad in his hero days and recognized his merit as an example of young American manhood and soldierly bearing.

These are Captain Emerson's words in full:

Company G, 311th Infantry,
Amer. E. F., Nov. 22, 1918.

Mrs. John Donnelly,
660 West Fourth street,
Plainfield, N. J.

My dear Mrs. Donnelly:

This is the first opportunity I have had to express to you may heart-felt sympathy with you at the death of your son, Corporal Frank I. Donnelly.

It is indeed hard that many had to be sacrificed to win victory against the German Army.

Your son died bravely in the last big American drive. You may well be proud, as we are, of his record as a soldier and as a man.

His memory will live forever among the men of the company. I feel his loss not only from a military standpoint, but from a personal standpoint as well. He was one of my best boys and we mourn his loss.

I trust that you will accept my sympathy, and through me, that of all the men of the company.

Very sincerely yours,
W. I. EMERSON,
Captain 311th Infantry.

Work of the Red Cross Must Go On

The work of the Red Cross has not ended with the signing of the armistice; in point of fact, along certain lines the opportunity for service is greater. This is particularly true with regard to the work for the refugees—the millions of people who have been for part or all of these past four years enduring desperate privation and suffering under German rule. The need for garments for the civil population of these stricken countries is very urgent at the present time. Upon the immediate shipment of clothing thousands of lives will depend. In the work rooms of the local chapter of the Red Cross there are more than a thousand garments which must be completed before February 1. There must be no slackening of effort on the part of Red Cross workers, as this work is as important at the present time as any other chapter activity during the past four years. The Red Cross has been first in war, it rests with you, Red Cross worker, to make it first in peace.

The officers who have been elected for the ensuing year are: Chairman, Charles W. McCutchen; vice chairman, Mrs. Charles A. Reed; secretary, Miss Ethel Titsworth; treasurer, George L. Babcock; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Chester B. Lawrence, Jr. The members of the administrative committee have also been appointed as follows: Mrs. Charles R. Banks, Mrs. H. E. Butler, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Max Tepper, John J. Varley, William M. Wherry and the officers as named above.

"JOIN."

Just come and show your spirit,
Loosen up your great big heart;
Just show a great big dollar—
Now you're with us from the start.

It goes for little comforts,
For the ones we love so dear;
"Peace on earth, good will to men,"
This will be our Christmas cheer.

Our boys have done their duty,
Then why not do our share?
They saw all sorts of hardships
While fighting over there.

They laid all night in trenches,
Not a murmur or a moan;
So let this be our answer
As a message right from home.

And when they are bound homeward
To this great land of the free,
We know they'll have no regrets,
Having fought for Liberty.

Now all this for a dollar—
What more could a dollar earn?
So give one to "The Red Cross,"
Have a "Heart," COME ACROSS—
JOIN.

THE MEMORIAL COMMITTEE A DISAPPOINTMENT.

Mayor Calkins' Memorial Advisory Committee as appointed recently as far as the personnel is concerned is deeply disappointing to the rank and file of the city. It was generally expected that the organization to suggest a suitable remembrance for the heroes who have died on the French battlefields would be representative, but this has not proven true.

The committee is made up of twenty-eight men and women. With possibly three exceptions all are members of what might be termed the community's "upper class," the father or mother of the humble private leaving a shop to do the real work at the front being forgotten entirely. None of them have a place on the list of citizens who are to decide what will best keep the boys' memories green, although twelve of them are wearing the good star on their sleeves that indicates their loved ones paid the extreme price, while two-score others are waiting to receive back sons who escaped the veritable hell of the trenches to bear ugly scars for the rest of their lives.

Going further into an analysis of the committee it develops that only eight of the twenty-eight have sons of their own on the city's honor roll. Of these eight, not one has seen the wound stripe come to the arm for their soldier lad, mainly for the reason that most of them never reached the actual front. Of the other twenty on the committee, the majority have no sons at all and those who have fly no service flag in their windows. The twentieth is the one shining exception in the entire make-up. This is Lieutenant James H. Ackerman, who fought a hero's fight in the face of almost certain death high above the ground in an aeroplane, but emerged from the battle with only a damaged arm after he had sent two of his adversaries to their death.

Lieutenant Ackerman is well deserving of a place on the honored committee but so also are the other Plainfield boys who have come back with gas-torn tissues and shrapnel-wrecked frames. Some of them are not yet out of the hospitals nor will they be for many days to come but a place on the memorial committee, even though they could not be of actual assistance, would help to alleviate the bitterness of mind that comes with fancied neglect while on a bed of pain. In one sense of the word it would not have done any harm to place the name of every wounded lad from Plainfield on the marker that will tell future generations who planned the tribute to the city's heroes.

Then, too, there would have been no adverse comment if Mayor Calkins had named either Mr. or Mrs. Ephraim Compton, whose noble son was the first representative from this community to give his life for God and his country; for Mrs. Mary Ross, the widowed mother, whose brave lad, William Ross, died as he helped turn back the Germans at Chateau-Thierry; Mr. or Mrs. John Donnelly, who gave their youngest son, Corporal Frank I. Donnelly, to the great cause without a murmur, and Mr. or Mrs. Daniel Mundy, who will never again hear the welcoming cry of one son, Arthur, who made the supreme sacrifice, and possibly may be deprived of their second boy, George, now battling for life in a French hospital after the most harrowing experience that has yet drifted back to Plainfield. The Mayor might have placed these honored names on the Memorial Committee even though the influence of the bearers might not be so great a factor in securing financial necessities later on. There are fully three thousand other Plainfield mothers and fathers whose boys went over to France with patriotic disregard of the ordeal they were to undergo, and from these it seems as though our executive could have selected a few to make the committee a real Memorial Committee. The one that has been named is all right as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Democratic representation means more than money or ability to recognize art. Therefore, Mayor Calkins, why not select a few additional names, at least, to demonstrate fully that Plainfield hero-sons were battling for democracy at home as well as abroad.

PROBLEM CONFRONTING THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

In the face of all the urgings from all parts of the city for more money for municipal employes, including the school teachers, it must be kept in mind that the City Council has not been asleep. In fact, it has been awake while the tax-payers were slumbering and is still burning the candle at both ends trying to devise a scheme whereby the just recommendations can be met.

It is a difficult task, however, so difficult that no satisfactory conclusion has been reached. During the past week, the Finance Committee has been at work on the new budget every night and it will be on the job all through next week. The members find that increases are unavoidable in practically every department of the city and that if increased salaries are to be granted the school teachers, municipal offices, police and firemen, the tax rate for 1919 will take a tremendous leap. Every additional $3,300 in the budget means another point in the taxing rate which now stands at $2.10. It is not out of reason to predict that if pay increases sufficient to meet the demands of the municipal employes are granted the figure will go up to $2.50, thus making the greatest leap at any one time that has been known in the city's revenue plan.

Should the rate be $2.50 when the new bills go out next year the cry of the taxpayers can be well imagined. It does not seem so hard now with the different amounts creeping in bit by bit but when the aggregate is sprung on the small householder all at once, it will be an entirely different proposition. The latter is what the City Council has in mind in withholding the pay increases for the present. The Finance Committee especially knows the hornet's nest that will be stirred up, sometime in 1919 and is taking time by the forelock. The committee believes as much as anyone else that better money is necessary if the departments are to be kept up to a full state of efficiency, but giving money and getting it are two different things.

It is understood that Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed has a plan in view for providing adequate pay during such stringent periods as the city is now passing through. His idea is to have the Legislature give permission to present bonuses to employes, the amount being based on each yearly salary. This would give extra money at a time when the cost of living goes beyond ordinary earning capacity and permits the resumption of standard salary when the prices of commodities recede to a normal level. The plan of Senator Reed seems to be a good one and may help out the deserving city employes without fasting a perpetual abnormal increase on the tax bills.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When we civilians got a smile from the girls once in a while?

When the biggest Christmas attraction in the Front street store windows was an automatic cardboard figure of an old lady chasing a mouse or something like that as operated by clock work?

When the old folks didn't have to shell out money for a Christmas tree because they were so plentiful in the suburbs that one could be had for the plucking?

When the City Park first went by the name of "Doll's Woods" and later was made a popular picnic resort under the alluring title of "The Park House Grove?"

When a dollar bill would see you through a Christmas dinner at Tommie Timbo's and leave you enough change for a hair cut and shave at "Johnnie" Powers' place the next morning?

* * * * *

NECKTIES, SLIPPERS AND BUM CIGARS.

Only five days more to Christmas. Do your exchanging as early afterward as the watchfulness of the giver will permit.

The calendar says tomorrow is the shortest day in the year. No news in that for us. All the others are just like it as far as we are concerned.

The City Hall is somewhat like the backward pupil who died of old age before he get out of school. The lower part of the municipal building is not yet completed and rumor tells us that the roof has to be repaired.

Christmas greenery banked high along the streets gives the true Christmas atmosphere—and makes the oldsters as well as the youngsters anxious to get at the trimming thereof.

The reports are that the former Kaiser is broken in mind and body, but that he is far from broke in purse and that funds are missing from the imperial treasury.

Down in the West End, they tell about a landlord whose taxes this year were raised eight per cent. and just to get square with the city he boosted his rents forty-five per cent. He must have gotten hold of a copy of Judge DeMeza's "Text Book" on percentages.

Don't kick on the pre-Christmas weather this year—think back on the snow a foot deep, the disorganized trolley service and the impassable streets which stuck with us all during December and most of January last year—and be thankful.

A Topeka man has a theory that if all prohibition elections were held at night the country might never go dry. He says it is voting in the morning that puts territory into the prohibition column.

People wonder why it is that Mr. Wilson gave fourteen commandments while Moses only gave ten. No need to puzzle your brains. Moses wasn't dealing with Germans.

Speaking of a Bound Brook man who died of tetanus the Courier-News wisely stated the other night that "he accidentally cut a finger on his hand'.' Will the technical scribe please give us a bill of particulars as to where the unfortunate man's other fingers were located?

These be the days when the mail man lags not on his route, when the newsboy places your paper carefully under the mat to fool the stealing wind and the grocer's clerk makes certain to get your order delivered in plenty of time before dinner. Like Grape-nuts, "There's a reason."

Nobody heard anything about the school teachers' poor pay until about two weeks ago and all of a sudden the whole town rose up and urged the powers that be to increase their salary. The police and firemen, who have been pleading for a decent wage for the last year, are unable to understand how it is they never got a tumble in the same request, and are now trying to draft the school teachers' press agent.

A letter read in a New York court stated that $816 worth of "Licker" had been stored in the family cellar against the day of Saharan wrath. This thing has been pretty common. Ahem! Let's have a law making it a felony for owners of private stocks to conceal the fact. Else, if a fellow gets "Floo," how in the mischief will he know where to get it?

Heard Pretty Verses She Wrote Years Ago Rendered in Song by Gifted Anna Case

Though but few in her large audience knew it, one of the prettiest numbers rendered by Miss Anna Case, the operatic soprano, at her song recital in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, Monday night, was the joint composition of two persons present, one of them a Plainfielder.

The particular song was a lilting little affair known as "The Will o' the Wisp." This was the title given it years ago by the author of the lyric, Mrs. Frederick W. Goddard, of Park avenue. Mrs. Goddard at the time was Miss Gladys Benjamin, and previous to her marriage frequently made use of her gift of verse making. "Will o' the Wisp" was one of her most charming poems and was readily accepted by Ainslee's Magazine, the editors of which featured it in one of the numbers of that publication.

The verses were seen by Miss Case's accompanist, Charles Gilbert Spross, who secured the rights from Ainslee's and set them to music. The combination resulted in as pretty a song as has ever gained prominence in the reportoire of an artist of such sterling reputation as Miss Case. Neither Miss Case or Mr. Spross were aware that the originator of the piece were within sound of the singer's votice and she herself modestly refrained from mentioning the fact at the close of the program. However, Mrs. Goddard and those of her friends present who knew that her talent brought the song into being, were delighted beyond mere expression of words to have Miss Case selected for the Plainfield concert. It followed the rendition of the ever-popular ballad from Scotia, "Charley Is My Darling" and preceded "Annie Laurie," which was demanded as a second encore.

The recital gave Plainfielders another opportunity of drnking in the vocal possibilities of the young artist who began her career in this city and who now, through her own persistent efforts, holds a leading position in the firmament of operatic stars.

She seemed to be perfectly at home in the big auditorium as indced she solud have been because the thousand or more persons present were numbered as her friends though possibly not personal acquaintances. She was never in better voice and was exceedingly generous with her programmed numbers and impromptu encores.

The recital was arranged by the Silver Cross Circle of Kings' Daughters and the proceeds will be used in the furtherance of its deserving work.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

The first service of the Christmas season at the Church of the Holy Cross will be held on Tuesday night, Christmas eve, at 12 o'clock, the order of service being as follows:

Processional hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful;" Woodward's Communion Service in D.; offeratory anthem, "There Were Shepherds," by Vincent; "Agnus Dei," by Woodward; recessional, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear;" the carols, "Silent Night," "The Virgin Stills the Crying," "Sleep Holy Babe," will also be sung during this service.

On Christmas morning prayer will be said at 10:00 a. m., followed by Holy Communion and sermon, with the choir. The music will consist of Woddward's Communion Service; hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing;" carols, and the anthem, "O Zion that Bringest Good Tidings," by Stainer.

All parishioners, friends and persons without a church home are cordially invited.

GEORGE HAURAND'S FUNERAL TOMORROW.

The body of George Haurand, a former Plainfielder who died in California last Saturday, is expected to arrive in Plainfield, today. In this event, the funeral will be held tomorrow in St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Haurand was forty-five years old and went West some months ago for the benefit of his health. He was a brother to Henry Haurand and Mrs. G. O. Keller, of teh borough, and Frank Haurand, of Newarw. The body will be taken to Mrs. Keller's home on Watchung avenue after reaching Plainfield.

CHOIR BOYS TO SING FOR RED CROSS VISITORS.

The choir boys from Grace church will sing Christmas carols at the Red Cross shop tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. This is a sacrifice of time on the part of the boys who have volunteered and is one mor evidence of the interest our boys and girls take in helping the Red Cross.

He Wants a Bicycle for Christmas

You know how it is—

Waiting for the trolley—paying a nickel or dime each trip—standing up in a stuffy car—and being delayed!?

Think of what a bicycle would do for him: take him to work quickly—make him feel better—come home for a hot lunch!

A bicycle will make him happier, healthier and a better worker. It will save carfares, too.

Let us show you a bicycle he would like for Christmas.

Children of Today Ask For More As Did Oliver Twist

When young Oliver Twist went up to the head-master and held out his bowl for "More, if you please, Sir!" he was speaking with the inalienable voice of youth. More—more—more, the children of the world ask of us, —not only portridge and bread and sugar plums, but those subtler and finer condiments of life; sunshine and books and daisy chains, and the right to grow up wise and white and happy.

Up on a farm, not far away from Plainfield, young Oliver Twist's younger cousin, Master Twist the second is eeking out his days, helping the farmer with the farm work, and trying to forget that his father is dead, and his mother, the friend who cheered and comforted him, and taught him to say "Now I lay me" at her knee, and to be a sport and not tell on the bully who gave him the black eye, is sick with an incurable disease, and can't make a home for him any longer.

Oliver is twelve years old. If he stays with the farmer for a few years, and gets strong and robust, he can learn a trade and be a boy of whom the world and his friends will be proud. At present young Oliver needs clothes; it's lots easier to be good and feel respectable without holes and soles, even if you are only twelve! Besides this, the farmer must be paid for his "keep,"—$4 a week isn't much to keep a boy decent and well-fed and warm.

If someone, with a big heart and a flexible pocketbook would start an Oliver Twist Fund, the world would be in one efficient, clean-limbed fine young man, in three or four years.

WHO WANTS TO BE THE FIRST HEAD-MASTER TO GIVE OLIVER

"SOME MORE?"

Contributions, in cash, or by check, received at the Charity Organization, and entered in the Oliver Twist Fund, Babcock building.

Collis Case, of East Front street, who is engaged in army sanitation work at Biltmore, N. C., is reported to be quite ill. He was home on a visit to Plainfield last week.

"JACK" SLEVIN RETURNS.

John J. Slevin, formerly of Franklin place, who has been located at Florence, Col., for the past few years, arrived in Plainfield this week for a holiday visit with relatives. This is the first time he has been back to Plainfield in a year, and he expects to renew many old acquaintances before he goes back West shortly after the New Year.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MISS ADELAIDE PHILPOTT.

Miss Adelaide Philpott, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Philpott, died Monday night, at her her on Westervelt avenue, following a brief illness with pneumonia. The funeral was held privately, yesterday afternoon, in charge of Rev. H. St. George Burrill, of Holy Cross church, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Philpott was a native of Brooklyn but had lived in Plainfield practically all her life. She was a cousin to DeWitt C. Conover, of the borough, who died of pneumonia on December 7. She was well-known in both the city and borough.

Miss Philpott's only near surviving relative is one sister, Miss Julia I. Philpott, with whom she lived.

PAUL JONES.

The body of Paul Jones, aged thirty-seven years, who died at his home on Leland avenue, Tuesday morning, after a brief illness, was sent yesterday to Wilmington, Del., where the funeral and interment took place.

Mr. Jones was born at Wilmington, and came here three years ago. He was employed in New York by the United States Air-Nitrate Company. He is survived by his wife, four children and his mother, all residing on Leland avenue. The children are Ethel, Paul, Jr., Dorothy and David Jones.

MRS. FRANK R. SMITH.

The funeral of Mrs. Laura P. Smith, wife of Frank R. Smith, whose death occurred at her home at 764 Woodland avenue, after a brief illness with pneumonia, was held Monday morning at the undertaking parlors of Runyon & Son. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mrs. Smith was thirty years old and lived in this city nearly all her life. She was formerly Miss Laura P. Van Campen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Van Campen, whose home for a long time was on Plainfield avenue, opposite South Second street. She was a member of the First Presbyterian church and in which she was an active worker.

HARRY S. FOWLER.

The funeral of Harry S. Fowler, a well-known borough resident, who died at his home after on eweek's illness with pneumonia, was held at the late home, Monday afternoon. Many relatives and friends from the city and borough, and also from New York and Brooklyn, were in attendance. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Potterton, of the Universalist church, Brooklyn, conducted the service. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Fowler was born in Brooklyn in 1860 and moved to North Plainfield in 1903. He was engaged in business in New York as an importer and commission broker. He never held ublic office in the borough but was keenly interested in all civic affairs and gave his assistance to their promotion whenever possible.

Mr. Fowler leaves beside his wife, four daughters. They are the Misses Ethel and Charlotte Fowler, residing at the parental home; Mrs. William L. Powelson, of Watchung avenue, the borough, and Mrs. H. F. Miller, of Seneca Falls, N. Y. There is also one brother, E. P. Fowler, of South Orange.

MRS. CHESTER W. COX.

Mrs. Agnes Cox, wife of Chester W. Cox, died Saturday morning, at her home at 311 Bergen street, after an illness of more than a year with tubercular trouble. The funeral was held at the family residence Monday night at 8 o'clock, Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, officiating. Burial was made Tuesday morning at Philadelphia.

Mrs. Cox was forty-one years old and came to this city some years ago from Philadelphia. Her husband has been employed at the Pond Tool Works. Surviving her, beside her husband, are two children, Florence and Ethel Cox.

MRS. GEORGE C. CHURCH.

The funeral of Mrs. Elsie May Church, wife of George C. Church, whose death occurred Saturday afternoon, after an illness with bronchial pneumonia, was held in Trinity Reformed church, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. John Y. Broek conducted the service and Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong officiated. Many relatives and friends were in attendance, as the young woman was a life-long Plainfielder and had hosts of friends. Numerous floral pieces were in evidence. Burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. Church was thirty years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Dunavan, of Brook avenue, the borough. She was a devoted member of Trinity Reformed church from childhood and had been active in all its branches, especially the Young People's Society, the Junior Christian Endeavor and the Sunday-school department. Her loss to this congregation will be hard to fill as she was ready at all times to give the best that was in her for the benefit of others. She will be missed elsewhere also, as beside devotion to her church and home, she was kindly and sympathetic whenever the occasion required.

Beside her husband and parents, Mrs. Church is survived by two sisters, Mrs. F. N. Farnham, of this coity, and Miss Myra Dunavan, of Brook avenue, and one brotner, Alfred W. Dunavan, of Brook avenue.

MRS. VICTOR PETROWICH.

Mrs. Juliana Petrowich, wife of Victor Petrowich, whose home was in the "Washington Headquarters" at Front street and Feraud avenue, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night, after a brief illness. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning, at which time Rev. Father Bogan offered a requiem mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Petrowich was twenty-seven years old and had lived in Plainfield since 1914. Beside her husband, she leaves three small children.

MRS. CHESTER E. SWARTHOUT.

Mrs. Adaline Swarthout, wife of Chester Swarthout and a former resident of Plainfiedl, died Monday night, at her home in Cywood, N. Y. She had been ill but a short time with complications following influenza. The funeral and interment took place at Caywood, Wednesday.

Mrs. Swarthout was formerly Miss Adaline Sutphen. She came to Plainfield six years ago to make her home with relatives and later entered Muhlenberg Hospital training school. She was graduated from this institution in 1915 and for a time was one of the nurses in the employ of the Visiting Nurses' Association. She was especially fitted for the profession she adopted and was beloved by all the patients with whom she came in contact. She resigned her position about two years ago just previous to her marriage to Mr. Swathout. For a time she lived at Hector, N. Y., removing later to Caywood.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Swarthout is survived by her parents, living at Valois, N. Y. She was a niece of Mrs. A. K. Snyder, of this city, and a cousin to Mrs. David B. Thickstun, of Central avenue.

WILLIAM H. MILES.

William H. Miles, a former well-known borough resident, whose home for many yeyars was on upper Somerset street, died Monday night, at his home in Brooklyn, to which place he removed in 1908. The funeral and interest were held in that city, yesterday.

Mr. Miles was seventy-five years old and previous to his last illness had been engaged in the banking business in New York. While living in North Plainfield, he was interested with his son in conducting the extensive florist business at Somerset street and Johnston's drive.

Mr. Miles is survived by his wife, one son, William H. Miles, Jr.; a sister, Miss Anna Miles, and two nieces and a nephew, Mrs. George L. Chandler, of the borough; Mrs. Bertha Kline, of Brooklyn, and C. A. Miles, of this city.

WILLIAM L. PERKINS.

William L. Perkins, a practicing lawyer in New York, who had made his home in Plainfield for the past two years, died yesterday morning at his home at 415 West Seventh street. The funeral will be held at the late residence this afternoon at 3:30, in charge of Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Perkins was fifty-four years old and was a member of the law firm of Perkins & Butler, one of the down town New York's widely known legal partnerships. The deceased is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Elizabeth Perkins.

WILLIAM A. TEEPLE.

William A. Teeple, aged twenty-one years, died Tuesday night at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Teeple, of Maple avenue and Front street, South Plainfield. The funeral will be held in the South Plainfield Baptist church, this afternoon, and burial will be in Middlesex Hillside cemetery, Samptown.

CHARLES WUELFING.

Charles Wuelfing, whose home for many years was on the Bound Brook road, opposite Mannion's Hotel, near Harris Lane, died Monday night, in Muhlenberg Hospital, after a brief illness. He was received at the institution Monday morning to undergo medical treatment. The funeral took place at his late home and burial was at Bound Brook.

Mr. Wuelfing was forty-four years old and for a long time conducted a business of buying and selling barrels. He was well known to Plainfield merchants as much as his purchases were made here. Some years ago his barrel plant was destroyed by fire, since which time he had been engaged in other pursuits. Just previous to his last illness, he was employed in a factory near Bound Brook.

Mr. Wuelfing is survived by his wife and several children.

EVERY man and woman in the country, not in khaki or navy blue, should answer "present" to the Red Cross Christmas Roll Call the week of December 16—23.

A message of good cheer will be sent overseas this coming Christmas Eve, to hearten our fighting boys and our Allies.

That message must be complete—there must be no room for doubt that we stand behind them—it must bear the word that there is Universal Membership in the Red Cross—their Red Cross.

Let us make our second Christmas at war a Red Cross Christmas—with full membership in every American home.

Plenty of Dash and Go in Rose Sydell's "London Belles" Show

Little in the way of fast moving, popular entertainment has been overlooked in the production local lovers of burlesque will be offered the coming Tuesday, when "Rose Sdyell's London Belles in Whoop-Dee-Doo" appear at the Plainfield Theatre. Everything in the production is new from jokes through to the scenery, and no effort has been spared to see to it that the racy atmosphere of the show is not permitted to lag anywhere along the line. At the top of the unusually clever cast are George F. Hayes and Kate Pullman, with the obvious result that the piece has dash and frolic bristling all over it. Capable support is lent these leaders by such well known players as Al. Ferris, Louise Hartman, James Francis, J. Hunter Wilson, Ed Smith, Gertrude O'Connor and Martha Richards. Sith and Wilson doing a whirlwind dance that for swiftness and charm is declared by experts to be unsurpassed. A charming chorus also has been provided for the show and care has been exercised to see to it that its members can both sing and dance well. Several novelties in the way of scenery add the desirable finishing touches to a production that will be hard to duplicate.

William Farnum in "The Rainbow Trail" At the Plainfield

William Farnum, the famous William Fox star, is the headline attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, in the show for today and tomorrow. Mr. Farnum's latest photoplay is called "The Rainbow Trail," and is based on a novel by Zane Grey. The production was adapted and directed by Frank Lloyd.

"The Rainbow Trail" was photographed in the wilds of the Arizona desert and is a typical William Farnum production. It abounds in thrilling events and episodes. Mr

WILLIAM FARNUM AS SHEFFORD IN "THE RAINBOW TRAIL"

Special Feature of the Plainfield Theatre Program Today and Tomorrow.

Farnum is supported by his famous cowboys, who do some marvelous riding and shooting.

The scenic effects are beautiful, among those shown being the painted desert, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, and the homes of the ancient Aztec cliff dwellers. There also are numerous glimpses of the Navajo reservation and its inhabitants.

Beside "The Rainbow Trail," the bill for today and tomorrow includes a vaudeville bill which made good when shown yesterday for the first. At the top is a juvenile revue entitled "Oh Papa," in which ten boy and girl artists take part. A second big number is the Ruttledge and Pickering company's presentation of a rural comedy dramatic sketch, "The Right Road," and Grace Leonard and company in a piano, singing and impersonation act, also come in for a large share of applause.

under eighteen years of age. A score of 19 out of a possible 25 on each of ten targets wins the marksman medal, and a score of 24 out of possible 25 on each of fifteen targets wins the sharpshooter medal. The targets must be shot on a fifty-foot range.

John Doughty, of Park avenue, this city, has been appointed local representative of the Winchester Junior Rifle Corps, and any boy and girl may register at his store and secure membership certificates, official button and targets.

Teachers' Fund Has Dark Future Ahead

Supplementing a statement made last June that unless fundamental changes were made in the Teachers' Retirement Fund, that organization would be unable to keep its promises inasmuch as annual deficiencies would exhaust its capital within thirteen years, Paul Studensky, acting for the Bureau of State Research of the State Chamber of Commerce, has prepared a new analysis of the condition of the fund.

This analysis, made public this week, is submitted as proof that the liabilities of the fund exceed its assets. A valuation of the fund is soon to be completed by the bureau, which will show the exact assets and liabilities of the fund.

On JuJne 30 of last year, the report just submitted says, "there were 558 annuitants on the retired roll. Most of these 558 annuitants will draw their annities for many years. They will draw an amount valued last year by Mr. Fackler, an actuary engaged by the State Teachers' Association, at $2,300,000. Against this liability the fund has assets of only about $484,000. It, therefore, has a deficiency on that account alone of more than $1,800,000.

Going further into details, Mr. Studensky says: "The fund has about 16,000 active contributors. Several thousand of their number would sooner or later apply for an annuity. Every annuity which would become payable in the future represents a liability of several thousand dollars; and the several thousand of these annuities represent a liability of many millions of dollars. The 16,000 members is, as shown by experimental calculations considerably below the liabilities. The deficiency on this account is measured in millions of dollars.

"If we assume for a moment that the present contributors, including those about to retire, would lose all their equities in the $484,000 capital of the fund, and that the latter would be used only for the payments to the 558 present annuitants to the end of their lives, even then we would find that the capital would permit the payment of only about twenty cents on a dollar of their annuity claims, i. e., that the fund would have to reduce their annuities to one-fifth of their present amount. The present contributors would lose all their past contributions and would have to start anew their contributions toward future benefits, which in turn would have to be reduced considerably.

"In order to be solvent and to be able to fulfill its promises, a sound pension fund must plan far ahead for some sixty years into the future, because many of its present members may apply for an annuity only forty years hence, and may live thereafter drawing the annuity for twenty years or even more. According to Mr. Fackler's estimate, which was based on conservative assumptions, in less than two years from now the annual disbursements would exceed the receipts, the first annual deficiencies would appear, and the fund would have to draw on its capital. The annual deficiencies would exhaust the capital of about $484,000 in thirteen years.

Legislature Likely to Make Big Change in Liability Law

Legislation affecting all employers carrying liability insurance, and other bills to amend the workmen's compensation law in New Jersey are expected to be introduced early in the next session of the Legislature. It is not unlikely that the bills will have the approval of both employer and employe if the joint industrial commission to be appointed as a result of the recent convention in Newark under the auspices of the New Jersey Manufacturers' Council sponsors them. The convention sentiment was favorable to both propositions.

At present the annual insurance bill of New Jersey manufacturers and other employers, paid to various privately-owned insurance companies, exceeds $10,000,000 a year, according to statistics presented at the convention, and it is contended that the benefits paid to employes of the assured manufacturers represents only twenty-five per cent. of the amount paid in premiums to the insurance companies. Labor representatives contend that if legislation is enacted eliminating the old line insurance companies from doing business under the provisions of the workmen's compensation law it will be possible to provide increased compensation to disabled employes at less expense than is now nvolved. A State insurance fund is the medium proposed for substitution in place of the private insurance companies.

The workmen's compensation or employers' liability laws were enacted in 1906. One provision restricts the compensation to a maximum payment of $10 per week, irrespective of the wage which an employe might earn. Because of the increased cost of all commodies since 1906, this figure is now held to be altogether inadequate. It has been proposed that the law be amended to provide that disabled employes shall receive a fixed percentage of the wage they received at the time of injury, and the same principle would apply in determining the amount of insurance to be paid the beneficiaries of a workman killed in the course of employment.

Organized labor in New York caused a bill to be introduced in the 1918 Legislature and will have it reintroduced next year, providing for a monopoly of compensation insurance by the State Insurance Fund and employers providing their own insurance. The Ohio law is cited as a model example, and Ohio's experience with the plan in operation since 1914 is the basis of the campaign being made in New York and to be extended to New Jersey. A saving of $6,782,278 to Ohio employers in a single year in insurance premiums is one of the claims made for the law in that State. It is reported that for the year ending May 31, 1918, the entire expense of operating the Ohio State Insurance Fund was $327,806, which was only 3½ per cent. of the earned premium.

"The vital economic significance of this remarkable expense ratio of 3½ per cent. is made clear when attention is called to the fact that the liability insurance companies have found it impossible to provide workmen's compensation insurance to employers at an expense ratio to their earned premium of less than 37½ per sent," the reports state.

Where the First Jitney Bus Started

Other States have much to learn from California in the matter of making money out of automobile stage lines. It was in California that the jitney bus was first heard of, and that State has reached a degree of efficiency in handling passenger travel by auto probably greater than any other State in the Union.

The jitney bus business had its birth in Los Angeles. A street car company which ran a line to a certain suburb insisted on charging an extra fare when the line was extended a short distance to a new suburb. There was an immediate protest from the public, and automobile owners living in the vicinity showed their sympathy with the objectors by picking up passengers on the way to town, charging them only a nickel for the ride.

Traffic became so heavy that hundreds of persons owning automobiles saw an opportunity for making a living and went into the business of carrying passengers, and all the street car lines in the city were paralleled by the jitney lines Business conditions throughout the country were bad at the time, and the success of the jitney bus in Los Angeles was such that within a few weeks jitney bus lines had sprung up all over the West.

Much of the jitney bus activity proved to be of a mushroom nature and disappeared quickly, but in many localities it was put on a sound business basis and continued to flourish. Its success greatly stimulated interest in the establishment of cross-country and interurban bus lines, and many routes of this nature are in operation in California.

Tremendous Loss of Tonnage During War

The worls' total losses of merchant tonnage from the beginning of the war to the end of October, 1918, by enemy action and marine risk was 15,053,786 gross tons, according to official announcement issued this week.

During the same period vessels totaling 10,849,527 tons were constructed and enemy tonnage totaling 2,392,675 was captured, making a net loss of tonnage during the war of 1,811,584.

British merchant tonnage losses were 9,031,828 gross tons from the beginning of the war to October 31, 1918, according to the statement.

New construction in the United Kingdom in the same period was 3,342,296; purchases abroad were 530,000 tons and enemy tonnage captured was 716,520. The net loss was 3,443,012 tons.

The statement says that in the last seven months the output exceeded the world's losses by more than 1,000,000 tons. In the case of Great Britain, although the output had not overtaken the losses, yet if purchases abroad were taken into account the losses of the last five months were balanced by the gains.

No Executions for Military Offenses

Not a single member of the American army has been put to death since the beginning of the war because of the commission of a purely military offence, Major General Crowder, judge advocate general, declared in his annual report this week to Secretary Baker. General Crowder said this fact is the outstanding feature of his report.

"Very few death sentences have been imposed," he said, "and none of those imposed for purely military offenses have been carried into execution."

Records of the judge advocate general's office show that 12,357 officers and men were brought before general courts-martial, of whom 10,873, of 88 per cent., were convicted. More than half the charges against officers were listed under three heads: Absent without leave, drunkenness, and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Convictions of enlisted men for desertion, the general said, were actually less than in the previous year, although the stregnth of the army had increased many fold.

The report shows that one enlisted man was tried and convicted of "being a spy" and that 773 men were convicted of sleeping on post.

Lipton's Eye Once More on Yacht Cup

America's cup is due to go back to England, Sir Thomas Lipton declared in an interview with the United Press recently. Lipton has challenged for the trophy, now held by the New York Yacht Club.

"My greatest ambition in life is to win the cup from the Americans who are as good sports as any in the world," said Sir Thomas. "After its sixty years' absence from England, I think I have an excellent chance of winning. The Shamrock IV. is in perfect condition.

"If the challenge is accepted the race will probably be held about the middle of next September. If so, I will probably go to America in July for the purpose of preparing and practicing with the Shamrock."

Mascot Loving Yanks "Stole" French Boys

The American soldier's well-known penchant for mascots, as exemplified during the last year by the importation into France of an innumerable variety of pets ranging from canary birds to donkeys, reached its zenith on the other side of the water—and almost got him into trouble.

For several monthe French boys were reported missing from their homes and from public orphanages Investigation disclosed that most of these boys, ranging in ages usually from ten to fifteen, were the mascots of units of American soldiers. They were found comfortably established in American barracks, livink with the soldiers and receivfng the consideration and regalement which befits the official mascot of a company of "les Americaines." The practice started when a few units annexed homeless French boys who happened around their camp. But the life was too attractive to be confined to the homeless, and other French youths, living with their parents or provided for in orphanages, deserted these homes to become American soldiers' proteges.

At one aviation instruction center ten boys were found, each supported by an aviation squadron, which, by way of tailor-made uniforms and other means, was trying to outdo the other in caring for their mascot. Most of these boys were going to school but—they were smoking cigarettes, and the kind of English they were learning wasn't of the parlor variety.

General Pershing issued an order prohibiting the "adoption" of more boys and requiring that all those being maintained as mascots be returned to their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Leach and children, of Manning avenue, the borough, have been quite ill with the grip. At last reports all were recovering.

Elks' Xmas Party For Poor Children Monday Morning

The annual Christmas entertainment for the poor children of the city and borough under the auspices of Plainfield Lodge of Elks will take place in the Plainfield Theatre next Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Manager M. L. Shannon has generously donated the playhouse for the purpose and is helping the committee arrange a suitable program. It will be composed mostly of moving pictures and vaudeville acts sure to meet with juvenile approval.

After the performance, each boy or girl attending will be presented with an orange and box of cracker-jack or other confection. Later in the week the big hearted Elks will visit various homes in the guise of Santa Claus to leave coal, flour and other necessities that poor fathers and mothers cannot buy.

The Christmas committee in charge of this work is composed of Walter S. Marder, Captain William C. Smith, Arthur E. Smith, Clarence W. Mundy, Walter Apgar and George A. Hallock.

City or Borough's Youngest Soldier "Broke" Into Army Before He Was Sixteen

To Edward R. Smith, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. T. Smith, of Allen place, the borough, is undoubtedly due the distinction of being the youngest soldier to enlist from Plainfield or North Plainfield. After several rejections, because of his age, he finally succeeded in "breaking into" the regular army shortly after he had passed his fifteenth birthday. When last heard from, he was with the American forces putting down rebellions in Russia's exile country.

Edward, or Roy, as he is better known, first tried to enlist with old Company K, of the Second National Guard regiment, when that unit was camped at Sea Girt shortly after war on Germany was declared. The officers admired his courage and were pleased with his physique but declined to accept him because of his youthfulness. Not daunted by his first failure, Roy made a second attempt at the recruiting office in Plainfield but once more was turned down. The martial blood that flowed through the veins of his grandfather, Captain William C. Smith, of Fairview avenue, who ran away from home to enter the Union Army, in the War of the Rebellion when he was only fourteen years old, has undoubtedly been passed on to Roy and asserted itself when he went to New Mexico in November 1917, for a visit with his grandmother. Once again he made the attempt to become a soldier and success crowned his efforts. At Angle Island, Cal., to which place he journeyed, they decided he was entitled to a place in the ranks and accepted him for the Thirty-first Regular Infantry.

With this regiment, Roy was sent to the Philippines on January 5, 1918. Arriving there, he was transferred to Ambulance Company, No. 4, which membership he held when the Thirty-first was ordered to Siberia the first of September last. At the latter point he was again transferred, this time to Evacuation Hospital No. 17, at a former German prison camp. He was holding down this "job" when his last letter to Plainfield was written. So far as can be learned from records, no other local lad enlisted at so tender an age.

The martial spirit is also included in the make-up of Roy's brother, Kenneth, also a very young soldier. The latter secured his mother's consent to join Company K and left with the old organization for Camp McClellan, when he was only just past sixteen. He went overseas as a member of the 113th Machine Gun Company and took part in the Argonne drive which helped in the war. Whether or not he escaped unharmed is not certain as yet, as no word of any kind has come from hi msince

Letters Bring Joy To Anxious Mother

Two letters arriving at her home, Tuesday, brought joy and comfort to Mrs. Nora Regan, of 323 Lee place, who had had no word from her son, Private Cornelius F. Regan, of Company D, 309th Infantry, since October 25. That was before the last days of the heavy fighting undergone by the Seventy-eighth Division, and as the days passed by after the armistice without a comforting message from the boy "Over There," the mother's anxiety increased almost by leaps and bounds.

The two letters brought by the postman, Tuesday, contained the welcome words that brought happiness out of gloom. Private Regan wrote that he was absolutely unharmed, although Company D had been in "some tall slamming." He had made an attempt to get word home but somehow the messages had miscarried. The anxiety of the mother, and relatives were shared by hundreds of Plainfielders, as the young man is widely known and held in high esteem in all parts of the city.

Before entering the service last February, Private Regan held an excellent position in the New York office of George M. Holstein, of Watchung avenue, who is engaged in the shipbuilding business.

BUICK 1919

Buick Automatically Lubricated Valve-in-Head Motor Cars for the nineteen-nineteen season mark another stage in the development of Buick cars for all-around service.

"Built for business" is the phrase that most aptly describes the working parts of all six models. The thoroughly-proven Buick Valve-in-Head Motor has been improved by the development of an entirely automatic lubricating system, and certain other chassis units have been rendered more efficient along equally constructive lines.

The option of six body types, comprising open and closed models, enables the busy man to make a selection best suited to his daily needs, including a wide latitude in passenger capacity and ability to meet varying weather conditions.

Four Wound Stripes on Sleeve of Scotch Plains Lad Back from Front

Seven gold stripes were worn by eighteen-year-old Henry F. Schwalbach, of Scotch Plains, a private of Company B, Twenty-sixth Infantry, when the transport "George Washington" nosed into a Hoboken pier, Tuesday, with 6,000 returned American soldiers direct from the front. Four of them he wore on the right sleeve—evidence of his four wounds. The other taree, on the left sleeve, denoted eighteen months of foreign service. Schwalback enlisted November 10, 1916, went to France the following June and got into action for the first time at Toul in March, 1918. A bullet went through his left wrist. On the Somme front, June 7, he was shot in the mouth. He was back again with his outfit to take part in the fighting at Soissons at the start of the Allied drives and on July 23 was shot in the left side of the chest. This bullet passed within two inches of his heart and a like distance from his spine.

Modern surgery and a rugged constitution brough him safely through, although physicians thought death was sure. Schwalback rejoined his regiment in time to help the First Division start the ball rolling at the Argonne; and there, for the fourth time, he was shot. This time he was wounded in the right leg.

"I could get along without these crutches now if it was necessary," said the soldier. "Somehow I manage to pull through quickly every time I'm hurt. My captain said he would have me back if the war kept on. I enlisted because the army life appealed to me and I was glad to get to France to see what war was like. I've seen. But I'm not sorry, now that it's all over. Any one who could stick with the First Division need not be afraid of anything ever after, because those fellows led the push on many fronts. They fought as though they couldn't be beaten, and they proved it."

Schwalback's captain was Archie B. Roosevelt, son of the former President; and the commander of his battalion was Major Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. The regiment was one of the first combat units to arrive in France. Both the regiment and division won numerous citations for valor.

Funeral Today of Isaiah L. McVoy

At the late home on East Front street at 11 o'clock this morning, a private funeral service was held over the body of Isaiah L. McVoy, Plainfield's widely known resident who died early Christmas morning, after a few days' illness with pneumonia. Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First M. E. church, who acted in a similar capacity, Tuesday afternoon, at the funeral of Mr. McVoy's step-son, Collis H. Case, was the officiating pastor. The service was of a military nature as the deceased was considered the youngest veteran of the Civil War in Plainfield and for many years had taken an active part in G. A. R. affairs.

Members of Winfield Scott Post, under the leadership of Captain William C. Smith, an intimate associate of Mr. McVoy, served as an escort and carried the casket to its final resting place in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery.

Mr. McVoy was born at Scotch Plains on February 22, 1847, his parents being Michael McVoy and Hilda Lyons. He came to Plainfield at an early age, and had resided here ever since. For many years he conducted a plumbing business, but gave this up in the fall of 1916 to become inspector for the Plainfield Board of Health. This position he was filling in a most satisfactory manner at the time his fatal illness began.

When the Civil War broke out, Mr. McVoy was too young to enlist, but early in 1865 he enlisted though not yet eighteen years old. He was hurried to the front with an infantry division and took part in the last big battles in Virginia just previous to Lee's surrender. A few days before the Southern general handed over his sword to Grant at Appomattox, the young Plainfielder was taken prisoner after struggling with several rebels in a hand-to-hand encounter. He was in a prison camp when the order to release all men was given. Mr. McVoy was one of Winfield Scott Post's organizers and at its last election was elected officer of the day and trustee.

Mr. McVoy was twice married, his first wife passing away nine years ago. He afterward married Mrs. Anna E. Casen who survives him, and also five sons. They are Herbert L. McVoy, of Westefild; Raymond McVoy, of Rahway; George McVoy, of Scotch Plains, and Percy A. McVoy, and Arthur McVoy, of this city. Percy A. McVoy resides on Prospect avenue and is himself ill with influenza. He was unable to attend the funeral service this morning.

Ralph Runyan Returns As Second Lieutenant

Ralph Runyan, of East Fifth street, is among the Plainfielders who received a discharge from the army as a Christmas present from Uncle Sam. He returned home Monday night from Camp Zachery Taylor, Louisville, Ky., where he entered the Central Officers' Training School last September and where he was commissioned a second lieutenant a few days before leaving the service.

Lieutenant Runyan, who has a wide reputation as an athlete, enlisted in the Ordinance Corps at Washington last December. He was first assigned to detached service at the Walter Scott & Company plant in this city, remaining there until he was accepted for the training school at Camp Zachery Taylor. This was conducted for the field artillery only and the Plainfielder was destined for that branch of military activity had the war continued.

Miss Laura Opdycke, of Oldwick, is spending a few days with relatives in the borough.

Muhlenberg's New Power Plant Now in Operation

Muhlenberg Hospital's new $10,000 power plant, made possible by the generosity of the James DeGraff family and enabling the institution to supply itself with all necessary heat, light and power, was brought into full use during the past week. It not only marks a new epoch in the career of Muhlenberg, but also portends the saving of about $3,000 annually through the dropping of old style equipment and outside electric connection.

Chief Engineer William Ashton, who has been in charge of the hospital's engine-room for the past sixteen years, has supervision of the new plant. It is located in the basement of the laundry building, altered to suit the needs of the up-to-date equipment. One of the additions noted is the erection of a 110-foot stack put up by the Kellog Company, of New York, which presents a very busy appearance to the mechanical portion of the ground and provides ample draft for the new furnaces. When the full strength of the new plant was connected up this week it showed that the institution is well provided or in this capacity, not only for the present but for a long time to come.

The new equipment comprises two new Erie-Ball engines, each capable of dveloping thirty-five horse-power. They are connected with the very latest General Electric dynamos which produce either direct or alternating currents of electricity. This power in turn operates all mechanical equipment in the hospital buildings, including the ventilating system and the electrical massage machines. The dynamos also supply current to operate the laundry and furnish lights for the entire group of buildings as well as the grounds. The switchboard controlling all out-going current is a marvel of perfection and represents the most advanced electrical equipment turned out by the General Electric Company.

The new boilers are capable of developing extra heavy steam pressure but are not required to furnish heat thereat unless especially desired. At the present time the heating is taken care of entirely by the exhaust from th engines, which is so regulated as to keep an even temperature in all kinds of weather. Experts who have looked the plant over declare Muhlenberg as now amply supplied with heat, light and power at a minimum of expense, the present equipment being something that has been needed ever since the numerous new buildings and wards were added a few years ago.

DISCHARGED SOLDIER SAYS TEXAS "HASN'T GOT 'EM."

John C. Traynor, Jr., of East Second street, who entered army service at Fort Thomas, Ky., on October 3, was mustered out this week and returned home Christmas eve. He was first listed as a limited service man but early in November was declared eligible for general military duty and was assigned to a cavalry outfit at Camp Stanley, Texas. He was at the latter point when discharged.

Speaking of his brief military experience yesterday, Trooper Traynor remarked: "The army is all right, but Texas hasn't got 'em. Nothing down there but Greasers, Sage-bush, castus, mud and longings for home."

ORGANIZE A GUN CLUB.

Employes of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company, of Plainfield, organized a gun club Tuesday, with John Kriney as president. A range just outside the city limits has been obtained. The club has a membership of twenty.

Vale!

Nineteen Eighteen

(RING OUT THE OLD)

Good-bye old year, born in the midst of the wildest hurricane of devastation and death that ever swept over the earth; born, not to the sweet-ringing chimes of a million joy-bells, but to the rending, crashing, tearing roar of a million guns in action.

Though your eyes have seen "The glory, and the triumph of the Lord," they have also seen in the midnight skies the red glow of the transient glory of the fires of hate, fanned by the hot winds of hell.

The sun of your days and the stars of your nights have shone down upon acts of undying heroism and upon acts of deathless cowardice.

Your hours have seen men whose hands were red with the spurting blood of their hearts gasp out their lives upon the altar of humanity's temple of honor and faith; and they have seen men whose hands were red with the stain of blood money, that they gloated over as they crouched and counted it in the dark recesses of the temple of unholy greed.

Your ears have heard the voices of hypocrites and liars raised in the holy name of Christ, asking for money,—money that they never intended to use,—for the benefit of those for whom it was freely given. In the "Name of Christ" but used for self-advertising, self-aggrandizing and self-enriching.

Your ears have heard the last agonizing sob of a million expiring human lives crushed out, as flowers might be, in the full bloom of their radiant youth, and they have heard the oily tongue of agents of fraud, selling the stock of a company whose prospectus bore upon it the name of the Son of God as its president.

Your eyes have seen humble workers in the fields of human endeavor cheerfully giving their time, their labor and their lives for God, for country, and for sweet humanity's sake, asking nothing for themselves, no credit, no glory, and no profit—their only reward being the knowledge of having done their duty and kept the faith that was placed in them by their fellow creatures.

Your eyes have seen wonderful women, gloriously brave, women with blanched cheeks and tear-moistened eyes, but with firm, steady hands scraping from the victims of the hazzards of war the blood and filth of war's malodorous trenches.

Your eyes have seen those splendid daughters of America, of France, of Italy and England and Canada, refined and gentle, performing acts of mercy that would turn the stomach of a vulture.

Your eyes have seen the triumph of Right over Might, and they have seen the torch of Liberty kindled by the last flickering spark of despotism and national slavery.

But before you go, Old Year, I know you will pause for a moment before you pass behind the curtain of Time, and say, "Ladies of the Sisterhood of Mercy, I thank you for all that you have been, all that you are, and all you will be to my successors in the realm of time, if ever they need you, as I have done.

"And to you, loyal Sons of America, Soldiers of the Land, and Sailors of the Sea and Sky, who have fought and died and won, and those who waited but the word to march, I salute you. Not since time began has the eyes of a year looked upon a more gallant company of men than to those I now say farewell, and God be with you."

Plainfield Trust's New Christmas Club Still in Formation

The Christmas Club is again in full swing and The Plainfield Trust Company, which has been its headquarters for the past seven years, is prepared for a club in 1919 that will be better, bigger and more popular than it has ever been. The new club is now open for membership and those desiring to join, may be enrolled up to January 4th, the first payment being due this week. Already several thousand people have enlisted in what the company has called "The Great Peace Army of Systematic Savers" and are setting aside for future use 50 cents, $1.00, $2.00 or $5.00 a week.

Long before the war came, with its lessons in thrift, people who had never been able to save money found that the Christmas Club method produced remarkable results with a minimum amount of effort. Coal bills, tax bills, Christmas gifts and other expenses incident to the winter season, no longer had any terror for members of the club, and through its agency many permanent savings accounts with substantial deposits have come into being.

Its long experience with the club has enabled The Plainfield Trust Company to perfect its service and to care for its customers in a most satisfactory manner. The coupon payment plan, which the company is now using, has greatly simplified the records, and the little coupon book has been found extremely handy to carry in the pocket. Last year over $265,000 was saved in the Christmas Club in addition to the large amounts deposited weekly by Plainfield's subscribers to the various Liberty Loans. If this could be accomplished in the face of war conditions, our first year of peace should produce even greater results, and in addition to the great benefits to the individual from systematic saving, our home city will be better for the thrift of its citizens.

Common Council Will Reorganize New Year's Day

Members of the 1918 Common Council will meet in regular session tonight and again next Monday night to close up all affairs for the year previous to the reorganization meeting on New Year's Day.

Mayor Calkins will be in attendance at the New Year's gathering and swear in the new members, Messrs. Nelson Y. Hull, of the First ward; Arthur Lovell, of the Second ward, and Arthur E. Force, of the Fourth ward. The retiring members are Theodore A. Martin, the only Democrat in the councilmanic body; Francis J. Blatz and James A. Maynard. Mr. Maynard filled the unexpired term of Councilman Graves, who removed from the Fourth ward and was elected councilman-at-large.

Councilman Flatz will be succeeded as president of the municipal body by Thomas F. Hylan, of the Third ward, who was named at a caucus several weeks ago. The latter will announce his committees at the New Year's Day meeting. It is believed that Mr. Graves will continue as chairman of the fire and buildings committee, G. Herbert Condict as chairman of the police committee, and Charles S. Sminck as chairman of the finance committee, and Mr. Hylan himself will probably remain at the head of the street and sewer committee. The president-elect, however, has given no intimation of his plans at this time.

In naming his appointments of city officials, it is quite probable that Mayor Calkins on New Year's Day will announce the present incumbents in every instance.

HOME FROM TEXAS.

Dr. Richard Moldenke, of North Plainfield, returned Tuesday from a month's stay in Texas, where he put in operation a new steel plant for the production of plow points.

Edmund V. Waldorf Dies at Hospital

Edmund V. Waldorf, clerk to the Board of Assessors and assistant to Tax Collection William R. Townsend, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 4:25 this morning. He had been suffering for a long time from heart trouble which developed serious complications a few weeks ago. He was removed to the hospital on December 13 but continued to fail gradually despite the best of medical help.

Mr. Waldorf was sixty-eight years old and had been a resident of Plainfield since 1908. He was an accountant by occupation and at various times had been employed by New York concerns. He was a man of quiet, unassuming disposition, but made friends during his local residence who deeply regret his demise.

Beside his wife, Mrs. Alice MacFarland Waldorf, he leaves one son, Edmund Waldorf, of 134 Crescent avenue. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Referring to Mr. Waldorf's death, Tax Collector William R. Townsend said today:

"Mr. Waldorf was a most faithful, conscientious and efficient man. His loss to the Board of Assessors and to the tax office is one that will be hard to fill. Both he and myself were looking forward to much better facilities for conducting tax affairs in the new City Hall, and he was full of plans for further increasing the efficiency of his particular department. I feel a personal bereavement in ihs passing and realize fully that the city has lost a most valued employe."

BODY GOES TO TEXAS.

The body of Charles Smyer, twenty-five years old, who died at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday, of pneumonia, will be sent today to his former home at Dallas, Texas, for the funeral and interment. Smyer worked at Bound Brook and was taken ill on a Jersey Central train while on the way to Brooklyn. He was taken from the train at the North Avenue station and sent to Muhlenberg.

City Officials Moving To Municipal Building

Main Departments of the Administrative Force Will Be Ready for Business at New Structure on Watchung Avenue Next Monday Morning---Public Inspection Deferred but Mayor Will Greet Visitors in His New Quarters New Year's Day

The office effects of City Clerk John J. Carroll, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, City Engineer A. J. Gavett and Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham are today being removed to the new municipal building on Watchung avenue and from next Monday on all official business will be conducted at that structure. For the present, the Board of Health will continue to remain in its quarters in the City National Bank building and Building Inspector Doane will remain at 149 North avenue pending the completion of upstairs portions of the new hall.

It was intended by Mayor Leighton Calkins that everything should be in readiness for a public inspection of the municipal building on New Year's Day, but early this week it was seen that this would be an impossibility. On the second and third floors there is a considerable amount of scaffolding and contractors' equipment that could not be gotten out of the way in time. As a result the Mayor was forced to postpone the inspection. He will, however, be at his office on the first floor of the new building on New Year's Day and invites citizens to call and greet him at that time.

The city clerk, the tax collector and the city engineer will all be located on the first floor. The District Court room and Council Chambers will be on the second floor and the Board of Health will occupy the third floor in order to take advantage of the sky-lights for laboratory work. Fuel Administrator George T. Rogers will have a room in the building as will also Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., and the Charity Organization Society, the last named being considered a semi-public organization engaged in city work. Building Inspector Doane's removal has been postponed temporarily because of his quarters not being quite ready.

The contractors doing the City Hall work are working early and late to put the finishing touches on the various floors and it is believed the final clean-up will come in three or four weeks. After that a date for the public inspection will be announced.

The new hall has been in course of erection for the past two years, and would have been completed early in 1918, but for the labor troubles resulting from the failure of the general contractors, the P. F. Kenny Company, of New York, Peck & Bottomley, of New York, were the architects and the cost of the building and grounds may possibly reach $175,000. The original estimate was $100,000, but this was afterward increased to $175,000 by permission of the State Legislature.

Automobile Firm May Take Over Standard Shop

Rumors havin every semblance of truth assert that the Standard Aero factory building at North avenue and Berckman street may shortly be turned over to the Wolverine Automobile Company, of Detroit, for production of its machines. A representative of the latter concern looked the property over several days ago and declared it met the necessary requirements of his employers.

The Wolverine Company has been anxious to come East for some time but the priority given war orders prevented it from obtaining a suitable factory. With the signing of the armistice conditions have changed and the concern is inspecting former munition shops. As the Standard building mentioned is not likely to be used for airplane production again it was offered for rental or purchase. It was originally the Chase Machine Shop but has been greatly repaired and improved since the Standard took it over.

The other Standard shop on upper North avenue, it is asserted, is likely to be occupied again by the Hair Mattress Company, which had it previous to the war rush. The building was originally put up for the manufacture of Kenney vacuum cleaning machines.

George Noonan Home; Ill With Trench Fever

Suffering from trench fever but otherwise unharmed after many months of fighting and six weeks in a German prison camp, George Noonan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Noonan, of 653 West Third Seventh street, arrived in New York last night on an American transport. He was immediately removed to the Government hospital at Fox Hills, S. I., for medical treatment.

Private Noonan went overseas as a member of Co. K, 107th Infantry. He was in the thick of all the fighting all last summer with the 27th Division but escaped without a scratch. When Pershing's forces broke the Hindenberg line on September 29 he was numbered among a group of infantrymen taken by surprise and captured. A prison camp was his next stop and he was located there after the armistice was signed. On being released he went to Holland and thence to Hull, England, from which point he embarked for home.

While in the prison stockade Private Noonan contracted the fever from which he is still suffering. He reported over the telephone to his parents, late last night, that his illness was not serious and he would probably be in Plainfield in the near future.

"Maximus" Joins Ranks of Benedicts

The culmination of a romance commenced last summer ended Christmas eve in the wedding of Miss Daisy B. Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gilbert Allen, of Brooklyn, to Sergeant Max A. Maximoff, known professionally as "Maximus," and now stationed at Colonia Hospital as an assistant in the physical-therapy department for the restoration of wounded soldiers.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. Emily Ware, of Terrill road and East Seventh street, where the couple met at a musical last summer, given by Mrs. Ware's daughter, Mrs. Helen Ware Krumbhaar. Mrs. Kraumbhaar is a musical composer of note and Miss Allen was one of a class of pupils which she had at the Plainfield house last summer, although her home is in Brooklyn. She gave a musical one night which was attended by Mr. Maximoff and hearing Miss Allen sing, it became a case of love at first sight. Their engagement was announced several weeks ago and they expressed the desire at the time to be married at the home where they were first introduced.

Rev. Dr. Siegal, an Episcopal minister from New York, tied the nuptial knot in the presence of twenty-four relatives and friends. They included the parents of the bride and five officers from Colonia Hospital. Following the ceremony Mrs. Maximoff sang the same solo she rendered at the musical last summer when her husband-to-be was captivated by her voice and charm.

Following the serving of a wedding supper, Mr. and Mrs. Maximoff left for Atlantic City, where they are now enjoying their honeymoon. On returning, Sergeant Maximoff will resume his reconstruction work at Colonia and Mrs. Maximoff will reside nearby until her husband's release from service comes after all the wounded are cared for as far as he can do them any good. Mrs. Maximoff's father is connected with a large publishing house in New York.

Mr. Maximoff, or "Maximus" as he is known to everyone in Plainfield, came to this city about eight years ago. He established a sanitarium on Albert street for the treatment of ersons suffering from muscular and nervous troubles and attained great success. Later he removed to lower Park avenue, opposite Belieview avenue, where he was located at the time of enlisting in army service. He will reopen the sanitarium on completing his work at Colonia.

A writ of attachment was served seizing the Bosch Magneto plant, owned by the defendant company, in South avenue. The plant was sold some time ago by Alien Property Custodian A. Mitchell Palmer.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society is looking forward a a capacity gathering in T. A. B. Hall next Tuesday night, when the organization gives its forty-seventh annual New Year's Tve dance. The Elizabeth T. A. B. has promised to send a big delegation of members and girls friends, accompanied by a band. Eddie Marks' orchestra will furnish music and numerous entertainment features are in prospect, one of them being an original welcome to the New Year. Daniel J. Guinee is general chairman of the committee of arrangements.

It is possible that in the near future Plainfield and North Plainfield barber shops will undergo a change of hours for business. The local Journeymen's Union is discussing the advisability of having the shops open only from 8:00 in the morning until 8:00 at night on week-days and 10:00 o'clock at night on Saturdays. At the present time the shops as a rule open at 7:00 o'clock in the morning and continue until 9:00 at night on Wednesdays and 12:00 o'clock Saturdays. The local union at its last meeting installed these officers: President, George Hafner; vice president, Dominick Votti; financial secretary, Charles Pagliucca; recording secretary, Robert Tunstall; treasurer, Albert Brown; trustees, Robert Tunstall, Louis Votti and Donato DiLonardo; sergeant at arms, Domick Spillatro.

Mrs. Susan B. Morton, of West Seventh street, has made application to Surrogate Codding for the probate of the will of her husband, the late Joseph W. Morton, Jr., whose death occurred in this city on December 11. The estate's value is not mentioned but it is understood to be quite considerable. Beside his widow, Mr. Morton left several brothers and sisters.

Sergeant Donald Sminck, son of Councilman Charles S. Sminck, of East Front street, is located in the Government hospital at Richmond College, Richmond, Va., having arrived in the South from France a few days ago. He is wounded in the left arm, but not seriously, as far as can be learned. It is probable he will be brought North soon and become a patient at Colonia Hospital if he is not in a condition to go to his home. Sergeant Sminck was a member of the 311th Infantry. Michael Waldron, another 311th man, who was gassed, was home from Camp Mills, over Christmas. He expects to be discharged soon. Two other Plainfield soldiers who were wounded in action, Luty Belski, of West Front street, and John B. Coughlan, of Leland avenue, were home for Christmas, but have not yet been mustered out.

The Red Cross Christmas membership campaign, conducted all last week, netted a total of 11,340 names for the roster of the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter. The goal set was 15,000 and it was confidently expected that this number would be reached. The committee, however, is well satisfied with the response by the citizens of the community and describes the shortage to a pressure of other matters, confronting prospects rather than an unwillingness to become a member of the greatest relief organization.

Rev. John J. Moment, the new pastor at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, occupied the pulpit last Sunday for the first, preaching at both the morning and evening services. Large congregations greeted him although the weather conditions were in opposition to good attendance. Mr. Moment comes to this city from Newark, where he was located at the High School church for many years. He and his family have taken possession of the manse on Park avenue.

Sneak-thieves paid a visit to the East End of town a few nights ago and invaded the homes of Thomas A. Moore, of 1214 East Second tsreet, and Henry L. Heacock, of 105 Johnston avenue. In neither case did the intruders get anything of any great value. Two homes in North Plainfield were also entered a few nights ago, but little loot was secured.

The following officers have been elected by the Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.: Commander, William C. Smith; senior vice commander, Dr. J. F. Berg; junior vice commander, J. F. Millet; quartermaster, William Pangborn; chaplain, N. C. Peanton; officer of the guard, Edward Vanderweg; surgeon, Josiah Unangst; trustees, William C. Smith and J. Worth Coddington. At the next meeting an officer of the day and a trustee will be named to fill the places made vacant by the death of Isaiah L. McCoy.

Plainfield Lodge of Elks will give its annual New Year's Eve dance in the club-house next Tuesday night. A New York orchestra of instrumentalists and singers will provide a musical program and unique favors will be distributed during the evening. The committee, of which Frank R. Emmons is chairman, anticipates a record attendance.

Miss Helen Joy and Miss Margaret McCutchen, of the borough, are two local young women who are doing splendid work in France as secretarties for the Y. W. C. A. Both have recently been assigned to Chateaurox to aid in caring for the influx of refugees.

John J. Brown, of East Fifth street, bought in for $1,000 the property at East Fourth and Richmond streets against which foreclosure proceedings were brought by John H. Van Winkle and which were sold by sheriff sale. Mr. Brown was one of the defendants in the action. He has been occupying the place to carry on a monument business, having succeeded the late J. E. Townsend.

Mrs. Ellen Ruth, of 222 East Front street, has preferred a charge of larceny against Milton Kahn, of the same address, and he will be given a hearing before Judge DeMeza in the city court, tomorrow morning. Mrs. Ruth says she left $111 on a table in her apartment and that it disappeared. Kahn lives in the same building and she alleges that he had something to do with the disappearance of the money. Kahn is employed as collector by an insurance company.

Damage amounting to $100 was caused by a fire in the basement of the Public Service sales department at 210 Park avenue, Sunday night. The origin of the blaze is unknown. The fire department was on the scene within a moment or two after the alarm was given at 6 o'clock and confined the flames to a quantity of stored material.

On complaint of Robert Murray, the West Front street auctioneer, John Custus and Joseph Varcelles, two colored expressmen, have been held in $300 bail for appearance before the Grand Jury. Murray alleges that the men stole a set of dishes from his warerooms.

President Supports Disabled Fighters

Says Restoring of Wounded Men Is Solemn Obligation ---Help Every Man

President Wilson, in a letter to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, calls attention to the fact that the Government stands squarely back of its disabled fighting men. The President says that the Government's great program of rehabilitation which is being carried out fully and generously, "is merely the payment of a draft of honor which the United States of America accepted when it selected these men."

The intense efforts of the Government properly to care for the disabled soldier and sailor are emphasized by the President's letter. In these days when peace negotiations and grave problems of readjustment of all business are upper most in the minds of most men, the President says, "this Nation has no more solemn obligation than healing the hurts of our wounded and restoring our disabled men to civil life and opportunity."

According to estimates made since the announcement of the total American overseas casualties, there are more than 200,000 disabled men under treatment in the hospitals in this country and overseas. Of this number, it is probable that more than one-fourth have been disabled by disease. Contrary to the general idea of the casualty list, only a very small percentage of the total have suffered disabilities which resulted in the amputation of limbs.

It is not merely the men who have lost arms or legs that the Government is offering to retrain and restore to self-supporting activity, but the Federal Board offers its aid to every man, regardless of his disability, who is entitled to Government compensation. The Board realizes that the many thousands of men who are suffering from the effects of shell shock, gassing, shrapnel and gun shot wounds which weaken their systems, tuberculosis, bronchitis, heart and nervous diseases, all may be unable to re-enter their former occupations. To all these men, the same as those with more evident handicaps, the Federal Board is extending the opportunity to be re-established in civilian life.

The cases of several thousand of the men who have been discharged by the Surgeon General have already been considered by the Federal Board. As many others are being sent from the incoming ships to the hospitals throughout the country, the fourteen District offices of the Board are getting in direct contact with them. Cases are being surveyed in a most thorough manner, not only by experts of the Federal Board, but each individual case is carefully considered by an employer, a representative of labor and a physician in the home district of the man. Every effort is being made to train and place each man in an occupation which is most suitable and in which he is most likely to be satisfied and successful.

Within the next few months it is expected that several thousands of disabled men will be taking training under jurisdiction of the Federal Board and at the expense of the government. Those who had been actually placed in training on December 10th were taking courses in a wide range of trades and professions, including twenty-seven different occupations. Industrial schools, colleges, offices and shops located throughout the country are being utilized so that most of the men are being trained close to their own homes. Thirty-one per cent. of the total now in training are taking commercial courses; seventeen per cent. are learning the various phases of agriculture, farm management, poultry raising, dairying, etc. Others are studying law, medicine, banking, and some are being trained in engineering, telegraphy, tailoring, window trimming and designing, accounting, store management, machine shop practice, meat inspection and traffic management.

"THE ARMLESS WONDER."

Frank McKeown, of Passaic, has arrived at Colonia Hospital and has begun his work as an instructor in physical training. Mr. McKeown, with both arms off at the elbows, is a striking example of the possibilities of overcoming serious handicaps. Among his accomplishments are playing baseball, basketball, billiards, and bowling, without the use of artificial appliances. He is to give an exhibition soon at the Red Cross House.

SALVATION MARY.

I danced with lovely Geraldine,
Philandered with Estella,
And dallied on the primrose path
With charming Isabella,
But lo! of Master Cupid's snare
Was still extremely wary,
Until I crossed the sea to France
And met Salvation Mary.

Her face was like an English rose
Beneath the dark blue bonnet
That bore the lettered army band,
The only trimming on it.
Of doughnuts she was prodigal,
But of her favors chary,
And every soldier fell in love
With sweet Salvation Mary.

She served us smiling all day long,
Was never cross or weary,
And when she went the world became
A desert dark and dreary.
I'm mustered out of khaki now
And trappings military,
But still my heart is over there
With dear Salvation Mary.

News of the Theatre

Cracker Jack Bill At the Plainfield Today and Tomorrow

The term "dandy" hardly does justice to the new combination bill of pictures and vaudeville which came to the Plainfield Theatre yesterday and will remain today and tomorrow. Every number is exceptionally good and the audiences present yesterday afternoon and last night were unable to name any special headliner as all were good.

The photoplay specialty is Harold Belle Wright's masterpiece of fiction, "The Eyes of the World," which unravels a story of love and romance in California. The scenic possibilities of the Pacific coast are only too well known to Plainfielders to appreciate what natural beauties are produced on the screen and with the introduction of an exceptionally clever company to interpret the action it may easily be understood why yesterday's audiences were carried away with enthusiasm over this latest Goldwyn production. "The Eyes of the World" is undoubtedly the best film presentation the Second street playhouse has made this season.

The vaudeville numbers are in keeping with the excellence of the picture. Perhaps the biggest hit was made by "The Six Military Maids," a sextette of clever young women, who present a novel musical offering. One of their best features was selections by a complete band. Murray and Neff, black-faced comedians, introduce a comedy skit intended for laughing purposes only and it finds success at each offering. A third big number of the bill is the Four Solarous, who "put across" a fifteen-minute novelty variety skit combining acrobatic features, dancing and original comedy.

In addition to the numbers enumerated, the program for today and tomorrow will include a new screen telegram and other picture specialties.

New Selwyn Farce "The Naughty Wife" Coming Next Week

At the Plainfield Theatre next Monday, matinee and night, Selwyn and Company will present their newest farce, "The Naughty Wife," which was written by Fred Jackson, the short story writer. It is said that "The Naughty Wife" has been the most successful of any of Mr. Jackson's plays, and was produced last season by the Selwyn Company at the then their own theatre, the Harris, on West 42nd Street. The play has also had extended engagements in both Boston and Chicago, and seemed to be as well liked in these cities as in New York. Previous to the writing of this play Mr. Jackson's most successful was "A Full House." Like the Selwyns other farces, "Twin Beds" and "Fair and Warmer," to which "The Naughty Wife" was designed to be a successor, the story deals with the troubles that befall young married couples. In Jackson's farce, the leading character, Hilary Farrington, is a young novelist who has recently taken unto himself a wife, who is not only pretty but fond of attention and a good time. Engrossed in his work, the young writer has become a little bit neglectful of the youthful partner of his joys and sorrows and she, resenting this, has decided that she no longer cares for her husband, and proceeds to arrange an elopement with another man. When Farrington awakens to this condition of affairs, he at first cannot realize that it can be true, but is assured of the fact when his wife calmly and naively discloses the truth to him herself. Hubby realizes that he is in a bad fix and knows that desperate remedies are necessary and concludes that his best mode of attack will be to pretend not to care, and in one of the scenes he is found helping wifey to pack her trunks preparatory to departure. There are numerous other complications in "The Naughty Wife" that are sufficient to keep the audience convulsed with laughter for two and a half hours. The play will be presented here by a capable compayn, chief among its members being Reeva Greenwood, Frederick Sumner, Gaston Bell, and Belle D'Arcy.

"Twentieth Century Maids" Full of Comedy and Variety

The chances are that the critic who goes to the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday to see "The Twentieth Century Maids" will place the following premium on the show: Comedy, first; scenic and costume beauty, second; variety, third; comedy, beauty and variety are, in fact, the three predominating qualities in the production. Recognizing that comedy, in all properly constructed burlesque, comes first, the producers have named their two-act vehicle "All In Fun" and have engaged for the exploiting of the unusual fun opportunities a number of able comedians who are headed by that ever popular fun-maker, Jim Barton. Barton is seen this year in the role of Box Car Bennie, an escaped lunatic, and the role is one of the best comedy ones ever essayed by him. It is of a persistent quality and keeps an audience almost continually warding off the laugh spasms which come as a natural aftermath of the efforts and his co-workers.

This admirable vehicle was written by John G. Jermon, Joe Opp and Abe Leavitt, who have conspired together for the purpose of giving burlesque one of the brightest vehicles it has ever had.

From a beauty standpoint the show must assume first rank among burlesque attractions. A large amount of money has been expended on the scenic appointments and as a result there are five beautiful scenes to furnish environments for the first act and seven even more elaborate ones to make the second act beautiful. The same elaborateness in detail and the same extravagance has been maintained in the costume creations, for there are gowns which stand in a class of their own on account of their richness, quality and uniqueness, then there is another wonderful beauty element in the acquisition of a chorus which is unparalleled as an organization of beauty, speed and ability. Tuneful music and jiggling lyrics have been specially written for the production by Correy and Strauss and many of the numbers will stick in your memory and force themselves to your lips in after days. "All in Fun" is "Fun For All."

Colonia's Christmas Made Happy For All

Celebration of the Christmas season, at Colonia Hospital, has been a great success to date and promises to continue along that strain until the New Year has been ushered in. While a large number of men had been granted passes in order that they might spend the day at home, enough remained to make the season there a jovial one.

Christmas parties in the various houses established for the entertainment of the men, occupied many nights in advance of the 25th. The Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Jewish Welfare Board and the K. of C. took advantage of every opportunity to get the men together and give the various organizations from nearby towns the chance of giving gift boxes to the men in uniform. In between the food courses and the receiving of gifts, there were various entertainment programs of singing, reading and dancing; but the Christmas tree features occupied an important place in the regard of the men, just as they did in the plans of those who prepared the programs.

All during the week, the women from nearby towns have been driving there bearing gifts for distribution under the auspices of the Mercy Committee of New Jersey. Each local chapter decided upon its quota of gifts according to its membership.

The Christmas Day menu was such an excellent one that it should be known to all. Here is Lieutenant Fraser's offering for the day:

Cream of tomato soup, olives, celery, roast turkey, dressing, mashed potatoes, buttered peas, asparagus salad, mayonnaise, plum pudding, sterling sauce, vanilla ice cream, mixed nuts, assorted fruit, coffee, cigars, cigarettes.

Entertaining Men In Camp Is Not Easy As It Seems; Enthusiasm Runs So High That Men "Steal the Act"

Among all the societies, committees and other organizations which have sprung into existence for the purpose of offering relief or assistance or sympathy to those engaged in war work, there might well be one with the sole and honorable purpose of comforting the Performers Who Appear Before Soldier Audiences. Not that there is any room for complaint—any actor or actress or musician or reader will vote unanimously that the khaki-clad audience is the greatest and the most enthusiastic to be found—still it must be a trying situation for the entertainer to appear in camp.

Perhaps it is in the Y. M. C. A. house or the K. of C. house that the performance is to be given for the entertainment of the detachment men. Or it may be booked for the Red Cross house with an assured attendance of a thousand patients, officers and nurses. The soldiers always gather early for the show and spend the time before the performance, in getting the greatest possible volume of sound out of the player-piano They are great for enthusiasm; they would rather hear Sousa in crescendo once than a dozen symphonic renditions of the meditation of Thais.

The appearance of the secretary of the organization with his opening announcement of the evening's program is always the signal for applause. The boys have grown well acquainted with him during the months in which he has been providing them with entertainment and they interrupt him with shouts of approval and bid him farewell by calling him "Daddy" or "Colonel."

Then comes the opening number, "Oh, That We Two Were Maying," by Mlle. Smith, of New York, late of Tulsa. The wearers of the olive drab greet the effort with orderly applause and send a delegate to ask "Daddy" if "this bunch brought any cake with them tonight."

Selection by the orchestra who wrinkles his brow in surprise when his audience whistles the tune with him.

Then out upon the stage comes the hit of the evening—the big number, even thought it was not so intended. It consists of two demure, yet confident, maidens, draped in pink gowns and wearing home made Pickfordian curls over the left shoulder. The show is on and the preliminary applause indicates that all records are about to be broken.

Encouraged by the enthusiastic reception, one of the Pink Sisters steps forward and announces, in a High C voice, that "even though we are engaged in the conflict and it is perfectly terrible about the war, we still are able to smile so we will now sing for you a song called 'Smiles.'"

"Oh, la, la!" shouts a voice from the center of the hall—and the orchestra is obliged to repeat the vamp.

The verse is received quietly; the chorus produces the climax. The opening words of "There are Sma-l-l-les that make you Happy" are seized by several hundred strong, masculine voices and before the line is finished, the entertainers on the stage are serving as directors rather than in the capacity in which they were engaged. Numerous encores are demanded and the girls are permitted to retire only after promising to sing again later in the evening.

Then comes that part of the evening dedicated to "Gunga Din." Kipling's tribute to the water carrier may be a bit out of date, when the methods of the present war are considered, but his verse remains popular. Frequently the reader is a young man in civilian clothes who possesses a good speaking voice and apparently has been well trained in the art of public reading.

Several lines are rendered, generally, before it is evident that the audience is supplying a certain subdued cadence, indicating that the hearers are in complete harmony with the measured beat of the piece. The sound seems to come from the ground—the floor, perhaps—and gives evidence of being caused by the intermittent contact of the heel with pine boards. Dozens of voices assist the speaker. By the time the second verse is started, the accompaniment is in full swing:

O the unformy he wore
Wasn't nothin' muchbe fore
And Bingo, Bingo, Bingo, Bingo,
Bang!
For a twisty piece o' rag
An' a goatskin water bag
Was all the Bingo, Bingo, Bingo,
Bang. Hitchy koo!

'E carried me away
To where a dooli lay
An' a bullet come an' drilled the beggar clean. Lotta Pep!
'E put me safe inside
And just before 'e died:
"Oh, La, La, your drink," sez Gunga Din. Shake it up!

They never complain, these willing workers who journey here to entertain us. They are always jovial and good natured, even though they must experience queer emotions when they find their act being taken away from them. Nor would we have it any different even though it were in our power to change it. No city theater can collect such an audience, nor offer such reception to a performance.

PERCY VAIL LEAVES FOR THE SUNNY SOUTH.

Percy Vail, of 437 East Fifth street, a product of the old Daily Press composing room, who has been located in various cities of the country in the past few years, has decided to spend the winter in the Suny South. He sailed from New York, yesterday afternoon, on a Clyde line steamer to assume a position as linotype operator with the Palm Beach, Fla., News. He plans to return North in the spring, as the Florida season lasts only about three months.

Since learning his trade under the supervision of Edward C. Searing in the Daily Press office, Mr. Vail has held responsible positions with newspapers in New York, Washington, Perth Amboy, Reading, Pa., and Newark. He is considered one of the best machine men in the business and left a fine mob with Little & Ives, the New York printers, to enjoy the balmy breezes at Palm Beach, while his Plainfield friends shiver and shake in the wintry blasts.

Destroyer "Porter" Sets New Mileage Record

Secretary Daniels' annual report, just made public, shows that the Porter covered 64,473 miles during her first year of service in European waters.

Several other destroyers were close behind the Porter in miles covered. The Connyham steamed 63,952 miles during the year, and the Davis had 63,015 miles to her credit.

KISMET!

I've knitted him helmets and sweaters and gloves
I've knitted him wristlets and socks,
I've packed them all neatly and sent them away
In a nicely named, well addressed box.
I've prayed and implored him to try and keep well,
I've begged of him not to be shot—
Now with all these reminders, I'm sure of one thing—
He is thinking of me, is he not?

I've sent him tobacco and good magazines,
I've kept him supplied with the best
Of late printed fiction and candy and stuff,
As my bills at the store all attest.
I've waited and watched for a letter from him
Which would mention the things I forgot—
Now with all of this thought, I am sure of one thing—
He is thinking of me, is he not?

I've kidded myself by believing these things—
Though I've known all the while they're not true—
I'm sure that he falls for the first bunch of fluff,
Be her eyes black or gray, brown or blue;
He's probably handing the same line of talk
To the girl who is there on the spot—
So I'll answer the question that I ask myself,
Is he thinking of me? He is not.

—MABEL PATRICIA.

SHERIFF'S SALE—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between Arthur E. Freeman, complainant, and Clem C. Gambrell, et als., defendant. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above-stated writ of fieri facias to me directed I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Sheriff's office in the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day.

All those tracts or parcels of lands and premises, situate, lying and being in the Township of Fanwood, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey.

BEGINNING at a large black walnut tree standing in the easterly line of the main road, commonly called Jerusalem Road and from said beginning and binding on lands of formerly George Hanaman; north seventy-three degrees east two hundred (200) feet to a stake planted for a corner in an angle of other lands of formerly George Hanaman; thence still binding on lands of formerly George Hanaman southeasterly one hundred fifty (150) feet to a stake planted for a corner; thence parallel with the first mentioned line south seventy-three degrees west two hundred (200) feet to a stake by the side of the aforesaid road; thence along said road northwesterly one hundred fifty (150) feet to the place of beginning.

Also all that other parcel of land in said Township, County and State:

BEGINNING at a stake planted for a corner on the easterly side of the Jerusalem Road, said stake being the most southerly corner of a lot of land of said Hanaman lately sold to Lucy A. Gould; thence from said beginning and binding on lands of formerly said Gould north sixty-seven degrees east two hundred (200) feet to a stake and corner of other lands of formerly said Gould; thence binding on other lands of formerly said Hanaman sotheasterly twenty-four feet to a stake; thence still binding on other lands of formerly said Hanaman southwesterly two hundred (200) feet to a stake by the side of the aforesaid road; thence binding on said road northwesterly thirty-two (32) feet to the place of beginning.

Also that other parcel of land in the said Township, County and State:

BEGINNING at a corner formerly the within named Lucy A. Gould land, it being at the southerly side of the road leading from Westfield to Scotch Plains, known as Jerusalem Road and running along said road in a southeasterly direction one hundred ninety-five (195) feet to a cedar tree standing by the side of the road; thence in a northeasterly direction and almost at right angles distant one hundred seventy-eight (178) feet, standing by the brook; thence in a westerly direction and almost at right angles distant one hundred twenty-six (126) feet and in a straight line with the northeasterly line of said Gould's line of land; thence in a southerly line along the aforesaid Gould line about two hundred (200) feet, more or less, to the place of beginning.

Excepting out of the above described premises, however, all that certain lot of land which is described as follows:

BEGINNING at a point on the southerly line of a new street known as Broadway, said point being distant 183.77 feet from the intersection of the said side line of Broadway with the easterly side line of Jerusalem Road; thence (1) in a southerly direction and at right angles to the said line of Broadway one hundred (100) feet to a point; thence (2) at right angles to the last mentioned line 38.80 feet to a point; thence (3) in a northerly direction and along an old division line 101.75 feet to the side of Broadway aforesaid; thence (4) along the southerly side line of Broadway aforesaid twenty (20) feet to the point and place of Beginning. Being designated as lot No. 14 on a map entitled, "Map of property owned by C. Gambrell, Fanwood Township, New Jersey. 1911."

The said above described tracts of land to be sold together as one parcel.

Also all that tract of land and premises, in the Town of Westfield, County of Union and State of New Jersey:

BEGINNING at a stake in the north corner of Pierce McCormack lot and in the southwesterly line of Spring Street distant one hundred and twenty-one feet easterly from Rahway Avenue; thence binding on McCormack's line southeasterly sixty-seven (67) feet to a stake; thence binding on lands of Winters forty-two feet and six inches and in a course parallel with Spring Street to a stake in Annie McCue's lot; thence running parallel with first course distant sixty-seven feet to the southerly east line of Spring Street; thence binding on the line of Spring Street southwesterly forty-two feet six inches to the point and place of beginning.

INDEPENDENCE OR CIVILITY; WHICH SHALL IT BE?

In mentioning the merry little row going on anent the presidency of the State Senate, the newspapers are overlooking the main point at issue. It is not a matter of electing somebody favored by a certain clique of solons of Republicans or a question to the relative merits of Senator Wells and Mackay, the two men opposing each other for the coveted seat. There is something vastly more important at stake and the kow-towing editors have refrained from giving it the light of publicity.

The argument centering at Trenton is to determine whether or not fair and square senators who want to give the people honest representation in the Upper House have the right to think for themselves or to permit Governor Edge, David Baird and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen tell them what to do regardless of their individual beliefs or pledges. Those who know the inside of State politics are fully aware that William Mackay, of Bergen, is an out and out administration man and that the will of Governor Edge and the two United States Senators dominates his action. This has been seen in the past and the fact that he has been trotted out by the triumvirate is proof positive that he is to continue representing them at Trenton. Six other State senators who have been known to move uneasily whenever Governor Edge puts in an appearance are supporting Mr. Mackay's claims for the presidency of the Upper House, but in opposition to them are seven others who have no yoke on their necks or clamps on their brain. They are independent, fearless officials who went before the voters on promises of honest legislation and they are determined to carry out those pledges in the fact of gubernatorial or any other brand of executive wrath.

The seven independent senators exemplifying the first principles of American Government, the right to think, are Pilgrim, of Essex; Whitney, of Morris; Hammond, of Mercer; Conrad, of Ocean; Wells, of Burlington; Bright, of Cape May, and our own William N. Runyon, of Union. They insist that the Upper House must maintain its right to pick its own president without outside influences naming the man who is to have the honor. The dead-lock has come about because there are fourteen Republicans in the Senate and the vote stands seven to seven. The fifteenth Rpublican seat has been declared vacant through Richards, of Atlantic, accepting an army commission, and the six Democrats in the minority have, of course, no say in the selection of the executive officer.

Governor Edge and Messrs. Baird and Frelinghuysen have suggested compromise candidates in the event of no decision being reached on Wells or Mackay next Monday, the date of the next conference. They recommend Fithian, of Cumberland, or Case, of Somerset. The independent seven, however, recognized the fact that it would be only out of the frying pan and into the fire to accept either one as their tendencies are not the least bit different than those of Mackay. The seven are not to be fooled by any such pretense of relenting.

On the other hand there has been another compromise candidate suggested and one that will meet with the unanimous approval of all Plainfield. The Senator is no less a personage than William N. Runyon, the city's favorite son, who has long been held out as fitting timber for the governorship of New Jersey. Mr. Wells himself has declared repeatedly that he would withdraw from the presidency race on one condition and that was that William N. Runyon be accepted by both sides. This, of course, would never do from the Edge-Baird-Frelinghuysen point of view as Senator Runyon's independence has more than once been demonstrated. The man who assumes the presidency of the Senate in 1919 is undoubtedly the man who will be named as Governor for the three-year term beginning in January, 1920, and the holder of so important a position must listen to the voice of corporate interests before bending ear to the common people. William N. Runyon has always insisted on listening to the people, first, last and always, and therefore the trio boosting for Senator Mackay cannot see where the Union man fits in. In fact, Runyon is an independent man who puts principle above everything else and a man of principle is not to be handled by selfish interests.

So goes the fight down at Trenton, a fight to determine whether or not the people or corporations are to rule. The outcome, whether or not William N. Runyon is accepted by the contesting delegations, is awaited with keen anticipation by the independent, free thinking people of Plainfield and the rest of New Jersey who have a right to expect honest legislation.

HIS STAY WAS SHORT, BUT WELL WORTH WHILE.

Collis H. Case has "gone west." Thus, in the vernacular of the army of which he was a part, is described the passing of a typical American youth whose one ambition in life was to serve others.

Plainfield has made many sacrifices in the ranks of its promising young manhood during the struggle against autocracy but the beckoning finger of death has pointed to no one with a wider acquaintance and a larger host of admirers than those cherished by Collis Case. When the welfare of his individual friend, his home town or his country was at stake he knew no limit for self-sacrifice; faithfully executed and apparently insignificant small deeds counted just as much in his life as mountainous projects the accomplishment of which would gain him wider recognition; and his genial manner, open heart and seriousness of purpose appealed to all who had the good fortune to happen across him.

The writer was privileged to be one of his best intimate associates and it may well be said that to know and understand Collis Case was an education in itself. He was rich in all that goes to make up the ideal specimen of twentieth-century American manhood; his goal in life was to mount the ladder of success by honest effort; and he had already overcome some barriers in his path, the formidability of which would make others wince. In short, he was possessed of the material from which great men are molded and there was a big place waiting for him in the business world of tomorrow had he lived beyond the twenty-five years alloted him.

He cast his lot with the army as a volunteer and the characteristics which manifested themselves in his civil life brought him rapid promotion as a soldier. He died a martyr to his work for his death may be directly attributed to the sacrifices he made in combating the disease to which he later fell a victim. His strength was sapped to a dangerous degree serving others.

Collis H. Case has "gone west" but his name will long linger on our tongues; we will never cease to recall him as a friend well met and worth while; and we will lose nothing by emulating the qualities which made for him a place in our hearts.

A DESERVED REBUKE FROM SECRETARY BAKER.

Some two million men, who through the workings of fate, have had no opportunity of seeing foreign service, will give thanks for Secretary Baker's splendid letter of December 3, in which he expresses indignation that certain comedians and paragraphers should make unjust discrimination between the oversea men and those kept at home by the Government. The letter says:

"These boys who have fitted themselves for overseas service, and then demonstrated such high qualities that they could not be spared from home, deserve something better than to be made the butt of jokes by comedians. * * * They have given as loyal and patriotic service as those who went abroad, but have been denied what their hearts were set upon—an opportunity to serve on the field of battle. There ought to be no discrimination against them by reason of the accidents of fortune which retained them here."

In more than one training camp, the signing of the armistice was viewed with sorrow by many individuals who saw in it an insurmountable obstacle to the accomplishment of their ambitions. They viewed it as an act, which, while promising early release from military life, yet offered none of the coveted tokens in exchange for the big sacrifices they had made. It seems particularly unjust, therefore, that these men who have been doing such fine work, and were preparing for the greater field, should be the victims of such jibery, especially when offered by certain members of a profession which was treated with such fulsome leniency in the essential industries decision.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Sergeant John Neagle made the kind of weather you see on Christmas picture cards?

When a fellow could wear a newly cleaned and pressed suit of clothes without apologizing to his friends for the smell of gasoline?

When nobody could shake your faith in Santa Claus and you tried to keep awake all Christmas eve to hear the patter of reindeer hoofs on the roof?

When you first made the resolution on January 1 that you were going to lay off the "likker" and "smokes" for the rest of your natural life?

When the West End kids fasted the last three days in December in preparation for the annual free New Year's turkey dinner at Hope chapel, the like of which was never seen in Plainfield before and has not been duplicated since it was given up fifteen years ago because of the "increased attendance?"

ONCE AGAIN THE PIE-CRUST RESOLUTIONS.

Of course you will resolve to be good during 1919, but it doesn't necessarily mean that you have to live up to the resolution after midnight, January 1.

If you insist on that old-time custom of pledging yourself on the initial day of the new born year, why not tell yourself to be of more help to the wounded soldier boys returning home or join in the movement to give underpaid school teachers, police and firemen a boost in salary? The effort might at least bring some one else to the same way of thinking, who perchance will see it through.

The toy-burning committee or some other superwrought up organization will take "Joe's" case up later. In the exuberance of youth on Tuesday he failed to exclude Germany when he wished the whole wordl a Merry Christmas.

The New Year's reception is going to be held at the City Hall all right, only the records will say 1919 instead of 1918. But then, what's a year among friends? Let's all go down to the Watchung avenue building Wednesday afternoon and forget the past when we extend wishes for a happy New Year.

Should the Memorial Advisory Committee decide upon some kind of structure as an honorarium to the soldier boys it might be conducive to harmony if Peck & Bottomley were ruled out in the architectural competition.

It looks very much to us as if all the titular bunk, gewgaws and fol-de-rol that have characterized royalty and nobility for fifty centuries will soon exist only in our fraternal orders.

If it shall require a revolution to win back the right to sugar in our pie filling, the revolution will come. All the ancient and amalgamated order of pie-biters are awaiting for the signal from the food administration. The Plainfield foundries will take notice.

Just test it out for yourself and see whether the Lord was right when he said it was more blessed to give than to receive. Just as soon as you get over the thrill of the presents your received, unload a pile of groceries and a ten-spot even in the shack of a sick widow who has five or six kids to care for.

Can you imagine North avenue without "Bill" Townsend romping up and down it or John Carroll not extending his generous helping hand from the Watchung avenue corner each morning at 9 o'clock? Well, it's going to happen next Monday and it's the only grudge we hold against the new City Hall. We might forgive the structure for a lot of things but for these two irreparable losses—never.

Not only that, but we are going up against the experience of swearing off New Year when we have nothing to swear off about that would make a sparrow whistle at a chicken hawk.

Some of Plainfield's school teachers are still working nights in an East Fourth street factory plant to supplement their meager salaries. Be patient. The time may come when the parents of this country will regard the intelligent, highly trained young women who teach their children at least as deserving as their washer-women in the matter of pay.

Over in Philadelphia the people are offering vigorous objections to the continuance of the skip-stops. Would to heaven the same form of sanity might be exhibited in Plainfield. Why the public continues to submit to this imposition in the face of a big coal supply is more than average intelligence can grasp. If the proper agitation doesn't do anything else it might at least put the Public Service to the task of inventing a new excuse.

Runyon Named as Possibility for Head of Senate

Failing to come to any agreement as to the party choice for president of the next State Senate, the members of the Republican majority in that body adjourned their conference at Trenton until next Monday.

Ballot after ballot was taken in the afternoon without breaking the dead-lock between Senator Mackay, of Bergen, and Senator Wells, of Burlington.

When the fourteen Senators gathered at the State House for a further conference on the presidency, it was found that the situation was more muddled than ever, and it was generally believed that neither Senators Mackay, of Bergen, nor Wells, of Burlington, could gather new support, and that a decision would have to be reached through the compromise route.

The conference developed only one new phase of the struggle, Pilgrim threw his support to Wells. Ten ballots were taken and each ballot gave Wells seven and Mackay seven.

Following the conference the Wells supporters made threats that they would defeat Treasurer Reed, of Camden, for re-election by the Legislature as State treasurer if Senator Baird and his followers did not induce Senator Haines, of Camden, to support Wells.

It was evident that the contest has developed into a bitter fight, with the Governorship at stake.

The name of Senator Case, of Somerville, has been put forward by the Mackay men as a compromise candidate, but Senator Pilgrim, of Essex, has declared that he will not support Case.

The latest suggested compromise candidates is Senator William N. Runyon, of Union, but there was no prospect prior to the opening of the conference Monday that Runyon could muster enough votes to give him a majority in the caucus.

In reference to the suggestion of Senator Runyon as a compromise lection for the presidency, the following pertinent letter has been sent to the Record by Charles Edwin Benson, a well-known resident of Elizabeth:

Editor, The Record:

Dear Sir: Will you kindly allow me a few lines of your valuable paper and publish this letter. I would like to discuss the State Senatorial situation with regard to the Presidency, which is attracting such widespread attention throughout the State.

I am a Republican and of the opinion that the Senate president deadlock among the Republican Senators is more than a friendly affair. Things of this kind will only help to disrupt the party and the sooner it is fixed up the better.

Senator Case and Senator Fithian have both been mentioned as compromise candidates, they both hail from the Mackay backers. "What does it mean?" Senator Mackay favors a compromise candidate. "Why would he?" The only ones mentioned comes from his group.

The Wells crowd seems to be shy about suggesting a candidate but I would like to suggest teh name of "Senator William N. Runyon," whose sympathies are with Wells as it now stands.

Senator Runyon's experience in legislative work is unlimited. He served three terms in the House of Assembly and never has received any honors worth speaking of. He is one who is liked by every one he meets and would make a Jim Dandy president of the Senate.

I hope this seed will fall on good ground and yield forth fruit.

I thank you, Mr. Editor. I am,

Yours very truly,

CHARLES EDWIN BENSON.

COVER UP THOSE TINSEL POSTAL CARDS.

Tinsel post cards may only be mailed when in tightly sealed envelopes with 3-cent stamp attached, Postmaster A. E. Hoagland announces. The tinsel damages the cancelling machines and rubs off on other mail. When tinsel post cards are placed in transparent thin envelopes the stamp must be on the envelope, not on the card inside the envelope, and the envelope must be tightly sealed, and 3-cent postal stamp attached.

An Opportunity to Alleviate the Sting of Pinching Poverty

"The sting of death is not sin, but often poverty; and poverty," saith the philosopher, "is not at all a disgrace, but surely an inconvenience!"

A few weeks ago, when the influenza epidemic was at its height, we learned what the people of Plainfield could do working shoulder to shoulder in the fight against the ravaging disease, nursing, sweeping, scouring, turning to with a will to help the other fellow out, and then, when it was over, beating our masks into dusting rags, and thank God and the Board of Health that the worst was past.

Perhaps it was, for some of us. But not all.

There's a frail little woman, the Widow Hardhit, who needs us, more than she did, while we were so willing to give. And she needs us in the good old-fashioned way, to speak to her with dollars and cents, and "she needs it bad!" Her husband, a strapping, big young man, head of his house, and proud of it, died of influenza, and left his widow with four children, under eight, and the responsibility of bringing them up to be good citizens, well-fed, well-taught, clean inside and out, and warm—on, well, on nothing at all. We're not saying anything about the Widow Hardhit's own private grief at the personal loss of her man, because everybody knows in these days what the sorrow of death means. But few of us, thank God! know the ugly inconvenience of death, when it leaves a wake of poverty and desperation.

A weekly stipend of $5 for four months will enable this frail little woman to keep her home together, keep her children out of an institution and show her that somebody cares in the ebb time of the epidemic and wants to help a fellow sufferer who has felt the whip lash of death and destitution.

Contributions in cash or by check gladly received by the Charity Organization Society, Babcock building.

THY JUDGMENT WAITS

By George I. Sill

God of us all! before thy throne
The smoke of blood ascends —
Of innocents bereft, the cry goes up—
For vengeance pleads!

While dark upon my stricken sight,
Dark looms that form portentous—
Of Cain the avatar—ruthless and strong—
Of reason void.

It grows apace! and spreading far
O'er fields that smiled with harvest ripe—
On homes content, with plenty blest—
Its shadow falls.

Where mother love enfolded warm—
Where trusting sweethearts fondly kissed;
And age its peaceful ev'ning spent,
In calm repose.

O Ancient One! O earth's Fell Scourge!
Who called thee forth from cave horrific,
To slake thy bloody thirst—
To glut thy sword?

Who put thee on thy devastating course,
Of homes made waste and desolate;
To drench a thousand fields with blood—
Death's cup to serve?

To bow the heart with sorrow's blight—
To wake the widow's and the orphan's tear—
Of bitter want the seal to set,
On man unborn?

The slaughtered ones, the ruined lands—
O God enthroned! Thou wilt avenge!
For those who called this monster forth—
Thy judgment waits.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. FRANCIS M. WHITELY.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Whitely, wife of Francis M. Whitely, who died Tuesday morning, after one week's illness with pneumonia, was held at the late home on Norwood avenue, yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. O. McKelvey was in charge of the service and burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mr. Whitely was twenty-eight years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Crate, of Grove street, the borough. Beside her husband and parents, she leaves one daughter, Bertha Whitely, and two sisters, Mrs. Grover Schuck, of North Plainfield, and Mrs. Frank Shutter, of Atlantic City.

GEORGT L. TOURNEY.

George L. Tourney, aged eighty-one years, died Tuesday night, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. J. Kutz, of Watchung. The body was sent ot Greensburg, Pa., yesterday, and the funeral and interment will take place there today.

MRS. WENZEL F. RYSHAVY.

Mrs. Anna Ryshavy, wife of Wenzel F. Ryshavy, of Somerset street, the borough, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday, after a brief illness. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Ryshavy was thirty years old and beside her husband, leaves three children.

MRS. MARY A. MEIERS.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Meiers, aged seventy-one years, who died early Tuesday morning, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Cubberly, of 47 Pearl street, the borough, was held at the latter's residence at 7:30 yesterday morning. Burial was made in the family plot at Trenton.

Mrs. Meiers was the widow of John H. Meiers and came to Plainfield after the death of her husband thirteen years ago. She was a member of the First M. E. church and the Women's Relief Corps. She had been in poor health for more than a year. Her only near relatives beside Mrs. Cubberly are three grandsons.

COLLIS H. CASE.

With full military honors in recognition of the services he had rendered his country, as a member of the sanitary corps, the funeral of Sergeant Collis H. Case, of this city, whose death occurred in the Government hospital at Colonia early last Sunday morning, after one week's illness with influenza, was held at the home of his mother, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, of East Front street, Tuesday afternoon.

A large gathering of relatives and friends was present as the young man was extremely popular. Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, officiated, assisted by Rev. John F. Reilly, chaplain at Colonia. A detachment of men from Colonia, in charge of a sergeant, accorded the honors and served as pall bearers for the flag draped casket. Interment was in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Sergeant Case, who was twenty-five years old, was first of all a Plainfield boy. His early education and the first two years of his High School course were pursued in this city. He then entered the Mount Heman Preparatory School and studied in that institution until the summer of 1910, when he was invited by C. William Bingeman, former boys' secretary of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., to become a leader at the State Boys' Camp at Lake Wawayanda. Mr. Bingeman was at that time assistant director of the camp and when the season closed he was profound in his praise of the work accomplished along many lines by his Plainfield lleader.

Upon returning to Plainfield in the fall of 1910, Sergeant Case took a position with the Plainfield Board of Health as inspector and at the time of entering government service in 1917, he was a full-fledged municipal health officer, having passed the examinations of the State Board of Health, but continued as an assistant in the Plainfield office in order to keep up his night course in Columbia University, which he would have completed this year. It was his plan to enter Flower Hospital, New York, next spring with a view to earning a medical doctor's degree.

Aside from carrying on his duties with the local health board and studying medicine a night, Sergeant Case also served for over a year as health officer of Roselle and Roselle Park, giving this work up when he found himself crowded for time which should be devoted to study.

With John Casey, another employe of the local health board, Sergeant Case formed the C. and C. Exterminator Company, putting on the market a bug and vermin exterminator of their own invention. This product is still being used by many households and institutions and the partners in the company had made great plans for broadening out during their spare moments this winter.

When the United States declared war on Germany, Sergeant Case immediately announced his intention of getting into the "scrap" and enlisted in the latter part of 1917. His knowledge of sanitation, in which he had specialized, made him a valuable addition to the sanitary corps and his promotion from private to non-comsioned officer soon followed. At the time the armistice was signed a commission had been recommended for him by his military superiors but the ending of the war automatically cancelled pending applications and the ban against further promotions in the army had not been raised at the time of his death. While in the service he became recognized as an authority on influenza and was called in by the sanitary corps to help curb the spread of the epidemic in southern and southwestern training camps. This work frequently kept him busy for twenty-four hours at a stretch and he was highly commended for results attained. His devotion to duty and readiness to make any sacrifice for others were qualities which demonstrated his worth to the army and gained him recognition.

Sergeant Case's first permanent army assignment was at Camp Logan, Texas, where for several months he had charge of the sanitation program for the adjacent civilian population. His work was so satisfactory that he was delegated to inspect the sanitary facilities at other camps and cantonments and was eventually sent to the army hospital at Biltmore, N. C. Here again he was equally as successful as he had been at Camp Logan, and much of his splendid results at that army post are due to his untiring efforts. He secured his first furlough at Biltmore for the purpose of coming North three weeks ago to see his sister, Mrs. Edward M. Loizeaux, of this city, before she left for Japan, where she and her husband are to reside permanently. It was shortly after Mrs. Loizeaux started for San Francisco that the fatal illness began which afterward placed Sergeant Case in the Colonia hospital. The sister sailed for Japan from San Francisco a few days before he died.

While in school here and as a member of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., Sergeant Case took a keen interest in all branches of athletics and he played baseball, basketball and football when time permitted. A college education was always of paramount importance to him and he passed up many of the good times participated in by his friends in order to accomplish his greatest ambition.

Officials of the Plainfield Board of Health and eductors with whom he came in contact both here and in New York refer to Sergeant Case as a clean cut, red blooded young American with boundless ambition and a wealth of energy well directed.

Beside his mother and sister, Mrs. Loizeaux, Sergeant Case is survived by one other sister, Miss Dorothy Case, a teacher in the Washington School. The sympathy of the entire community is extended Mrs. McVoy, as she underwent a second bereavement Christmas morning, through the death of her husband, Isaiah L. McVoy, whose funeral took place this morning.

ARNOLDUS DE BREE.

Arnoldus DeBree, aged seventy-four years, died early Monday morning, in Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation performed on December 17, from a complication of troubles. The funeral was held at his late home on Front street, Scotch Plains, Tuesday afternoono, in charge of Rev. C. E. Strickland. Burial was in the Baptist cemetery at Scotch Plains.

Mr. DeBree was a native of Holland, and leaves twelve sons and daughters. One of the sons is William DeBree, who conducts the Plainfield nursery in Scotch Plains, and for whom the father worked. Two other sons are in the service.

MRS. PHOEBE REED.

Mrs. Phoebe Reed, widow of William Reed, died Sunday at the residence of W. H. Weber, at 408 West Third street. The funeral was held there Tuesday morning, in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, and burial was in the family plot at South Branch.

Mrs. Reed was born at Hollingen in 1848 and lived most of her life in the vicinity of South Branch. She came to Plainfield twenty years ago. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church and attended services faithfully as long as her health permitted. She leaves no near surviving relatives.

MRS. ROBERT A. BAILEY.

Mrs. Mary Emerick Bailey, wife of Robert A. Bailey, died Sunday night, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin A. Cooper, of 206 Netherwood avenue. She had been ill only a short time with complications following influenza. The death occurred under exceptionally sad circumstances as the young woman had been married only since last October.

A private funeral service was held at the parents' residence, Tuesday night at 8 o'clock and was conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey. Burial was in Mt. Hope cemetery, New York, on Wednesday.

Mrs. Bailey was twenty-one years old and had a wide acquaintance in the immediate neighborhood of her home. Beside her husband and parents, she is survived by one brother.

JAMES H. FINLEY.

The funeral of James H. Finley, whose death occurred at his home at 421 East Third street, Sunday, after a four weeks' illness from asthma and complications, was held in St. Mary's church, yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. Father Hennessey offered the requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends. The floral tributes were numerous as the young man had a very wide acquaintance. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Finley was thirty-seven years old and had resided in Plainfield all his life. He was a member of the class of 1899 of the Plainfield High School, but left in his sophomore year to take a position in New York. This was with a large business house and he retained it until his last illness began. He was of a very quiet disposition and took no part in civic or fraternal affairs, but was a devoted member of St. Mary's church.

Beside his father, John I. Finley, with whom he resided, he is survived by four sisters. They are Mrs. Anna Gerhardt, of Hamilton, Ohio, and the Misses Julia, Margaret and Mary Finley, of this city.

MRS. HENRY W. ANGLEMAN.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Anna Angleman, wife of Henry W. Angleman, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday morning, was held at her late home at 604 East Sixth street, yesterday morning at 11:30. It was conducted by Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, of which she was a faithful member, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends as the deceased had a very wide acquaintance. The floral tributes included numerous set pieces, one of them being a beautiful tribute from Iona Council, Daughters of Pocahontas, in which she had been an active worker for a long time. Interment was in the family plot in Tvergreen cemetery.

Mrs. Angleman suffered a paralytic stroke some time ago and her condition became such last week that she was removed to Muhlenberg for further treatment. Medical attention proved of no avail and the end came through a resultant cerebal hemorrhage. Although her host of friends were prepared for the end, it came as a shock because of the active life led by the deceased up to the time her health failed.

Mrs. Angleman was seventy-three years old. She had lived in Plainfield practically all her life, the family home for many years being on East Fourth street, between Watchung avenue and Washington street. Beside being a member of Iona Council and the Methodist church, she was affiliated during their existence with Mizpah Lodge, United Order of Odd Ladies; Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, and Howell Division, Sons of Temperance. Mrs. Angleman's husband was for many years janitor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

Beside her husband, the deceased leaves two sons and a daugther. One of the sons, George Whitfield Taylor, is by a previous marriage. The other is Clarence L. Angleman, of this city, and the daughter, Mrs. Emma Florence Apgar, wife of Gillard Apgar, of Brooklyn. Mr. Apgar is a brother to Lieutenant George L. Apgar, whose exploits in France have attracted widespread comment. Mrs. Angleman also leaves one sister, Mrs. Emma J. Case, of Reaville, N. J.

Miss Besler Wins Hearts of Soldiers With Pleading Song

Miss Helen Besler, of West Seventh street, daughter of the president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is probably the most proposed-to girl in France today, according to a Paris correspondent of the New York World. It all came about because one night in one of the American camps she ran out of "encores," and sang a little nursery song called, "If No Oone Ever Marries Me." It goes like this:

"If no one ever marries me,—
And I don't see why they should,
For Nurse says I am not pretty,
And I'm seldom very good,"

The direful fate of the little girl in the song was to be to buy a rabbit-hutch and live all alone in a little wood. But the American soldiers say no reason why Miss Besler, who is pretty and petite and a typical American girl, should have a similar lot. After they had given her the three cheers and a tiger with which they usually thank the Y. M. C. A. entertainers, they hesitated a moment and then added a purely personal message.

"Barkis is willin'," called the A. E. F. as one man.

Since then the incident has been repeated in every American camp Miss Besler has visited. No censor would allow an estimate of the number of proposals she received in that way to pass.

COUNTY TAX BOARD SITS HERE MONDAY MORNING.

The Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes announces that it will sit at the City Hall, Watchung avenue and Sixth street, Monday morning, for the purpose of hearing appeals from tax assessments in Plainfield. All persons objecting to the assessments levied against their properties for the coming year are requested to appear and state their grievances. The session will begin at about 9:30.

On Monday afternoon the Board will sit at Summit and on Tuesday will spend the whole day at Elizabeth to hear complaints from these districts.

HARRY WIERENGA ILL.

Harry Wierenga, a member of the Fire Department stationed at headquarters, has been confined to his home on Wallace place for the past week suffering from an attack of influenza.

Gallant "Jack" Otis Lives to Recount Nine Months of Fighting In Worst Battles of the War

Entering the trenches at St. Mihiel on St. Patrick's Day last March, and afterward fighting almost steadily up to the hour the armistice was signed, but escaping without so much as a scratch, is the remarkable experience undergone by Mechanic John J. Otis, of Jersey City, who has a wide acquaintance in Plainfield.

The young man is a nephew of Thomas Fay, of 173 North avenue, and as his own father is dead, he wrote the letter all about his doings in observance of Father's Day. The letter came to Plainfield, Monday, and is worthy of complete perusal by every American, as it tells in plain, simple language what the Yankee boys did in the last days of the war before the Germans realized their invasion was hopeless. Mechanic Otis was in the thick of the fighting tan St. Mihiel, at Chateau Thierry, now recognized as one of the world's decisive battles, at Balleau Wood, Soissons and the Argonne Forest. He went overseas as a member of Company A, 9th Infantry, attached to the Second Division, but when word came on November 11 to cease firing only a few of the gallant band was alive to tell the tale.

Luxembourg, Nob. 28, 1918.

My dear Uncle Tom:

As this is Father's letter day and we have the privilege of writing whatever we please without fear of the censor, I thought I would at least give you some idea of what I have been through. Well, to start off with my first time in the trenches way back in March, St. Patrick's Day, when we first had our task of trench warfare. At that time there was no fighting to speak about, only artillery duels and occasional raids at night time. The trenches around St. Mihiel sector were pretty good with 30 and 40 dugouts. There was plenty of sniping going on all the time. It was about six days after we had entered the trenches that the Germans tried us out in fighting qualities as you folks must know we were supposed to be kids afraid to fight, but even at that we were pretty nervous, especially during shell fire, as we weren't use to it. Well, to go on with the fight. It was about 3 o'clock in the morning (I was on observation post at the time) the Germans threw over a hellish barrage fire with plenty of gas mixed up in it, which lasted till 4:00 or 4:30, and the outpost gave back a warning signal that the Germans were coming over very strong. (They put in their Prussian Guards, their best soldiers.) When we got the signal the boys that weren't killed or hurt hustled out of their dougouts and posted themselves in conspicuous places and waited till we received the order to fire.

You can imagine our nervousness as it was our first time to show our mettle. Well, we didn't have very long to wait, in fact we were cursing our officers for holding the fire back, as we could see the Boche climbing our parapet when we received the order to fire. Well, we let go everything we had and before the officers would give any more orders we rushed them (Huns) and what was left wasn't worth speaking about. So you see, Uncle Tom, that the old Yankee boys showed the Kaiser what the Yanks could do. Well, they didn't bother us after that. We stayed in the trenches about fifteen days, when we were relieved and sent to a sort of a rest camp. Well, we weren't very long there. It was about the latter part of May when we got one of those hurry-up calls and put aboard French trucks and rushed about 300 kilometers to Chateau Thierry. You know the Germans were launching their big offensive at that time and the French couldn't hold them. We passed thousands of people, whole carloads of furniture and cattle were coming back from the invaded districts. It certainly was a pitiful sight. Well we were sent into the woods around Belleau Woods in the darkness of the night and orders were to strictly camouflage ourselves and it was a surprise to us the next morning to see so many Germans over the opposite hill. We held the best of the Germans back for thirty long days, when we launched an offensive, just a minor one, but it was our first experience of going over the top.

We followed up our inclosed barrage, threw by what the French said was the crack artillery of the world, the 12th Light Field, the 15th Light Field, and the 17th Heavy Field Artillery. The Germans were so surprised at seeing so many of us going through machine gun bullets so thick, in fact it was miraculous how so few were hit. We didn't meet much opposition and we took 500 prisoners and 200 machine guns. That was our first big fight and from that time on General Pershing used the 2nd Division for shock troops. Well, our next fight was Soissons, another strong point that the anxious Boches were vainly trying to take. We went over the top three times there, and it was our first time to go over in back of French tanks. The tanks were all right, but too slow for the Yanks and they passed them up in no time. We had plenty of hard fighting there though and many Germans aeroplanes flew low and threw bombs on the advancing Americans; also opened up their machine guns upon us but it didn't hold us a darn bit. Instead it only urged us on.

Well, we were five days attacking there and we were sent back and filled up with about three-quarters new men, as our losses were pretty heavy. We weren't out no time though when we were shipped to St. Mihiel and took the right flank of the drive there. Well, Uncle Tom, St. Mihiel was a picnic to us as the barrage that the Americans and French sent out for four hours before our hour, why there wasn't nothing left to fight when we got over there. There were about two machine gunners that had spunk to send a few thousand rounds into our direction, but we quickly silenced them. We didn't meet no opposition till we reached our third day objective (which we took in five hours). There the Germans reorganised and launched a heavy counter attack with the aid of a few batteries of Austrian 88s. We had advanced so rapidly that our artillery didn't have time to catch up with us, so you can see our sad plight. They killed about half of our numbers there but the rest of us gave them a fine welcome with our rifle and automatic fire. Well, they saw we didn't run away scared by their vicious fire, and they withdrew, leaving a large number of dead on the field Well, we were relieved by the Marines the next morning and after being replaced again, we were asked for by General Gerourd, the famous French general as he wanted or in fact he di dlaunch an attack, trying to take the dominating ground of Mount Blanc, but owing to the withering machine gun fire that the Germans met his troops with, he decided to get an American division to help him out. Well, the old 2nd Division was sent to the Champagne and it certainly was a wicked ten days that we put in that section. We lost an awful pile of good men there but we succeeded, after two attempts, in taking Mount Blanc. We were withdrawn and marched down past Verdun and we wound up on the Argonne Forest, which some American Divisions had been about fifteen days in trying to take at fearful cost. The Germans cry was anything to stop the Americans. They were withdrawing fine fighting units from the British front in Flanders in their vain endeavor to hold the Yanks back, as any kind of an advance by us would mean the severing of their principal railroad running to Metz, and supplying the troops in Alsace-Lorraine. Well, we had a million dollar barrage sent over ahead of us and the artillery sure did cut up things. The ground looked like it had been plowed up the way the shells landed so close to one another. Wel,, we started out on the morning of the first and kept going till the armistice was signed on the 11th. We had advanced 40 kilometers then and heavy fighting all the way through. We would have been in Berlin if the armistice didn't stop us, I guess. We certainly meant to end things right there and then, and we finished it up, thank God.

We certainly were a happy bunch when we got the news to cease firing. We were all prepared to go over the top at 12 o'clock that day of the 11th. So you can see we had no intentions to stop. Of course our casualties were pretty heavy but you ought to see what we did to those Boches. They certainly couldn't understand our methods of fighting. They said at one time when we captured a few English talking Germans that we had them scared and that our artillery must be drunk and the infantry was crazy. One German officer asked to see our three-inch machine gun when he was captured. They didn't care to make a stand against us as we got through no matter what they sent at us, somehow or another. I certainly had some narrow shaves in every battle but I guess the Good Lord didn't want me to die here. I was buried alive by a large shell two or three times. I've been laying down in an open field and have machine gun bullets hit the side of my tin helmet. I've been beside lads who were killed and I never seemed to get touched. It certainly did seem queer how I pulled through it all without a scratch. There is not many of our old boys left who came from the States with us. Its mostly all National Guard and ational Army men now. We are now in Luxembough, Uncle Tom, and soon expect to be statióned in Germany till peace is signed. These liberates countries certainly are pleased beyond mention over the end of the war and you can't blame them. The Germans almost starved them to death.

Well, Uncle Tom, I gave you a vague outline of what this outfit has been through and when we sail back to the dear old U. S. A. once more it will be the happiest moment of our lives. Give my best regards to Aunt Mary, Cousin Tom, Florence, Bill; also Annie, Harry, Sr., Jr., and little Joe, as also Mr. and Mrs. Walsh and Mr. Green and Miss Dent. I wish you all a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and hope to God that it won't be long before I can see you all once again. With best love to you all, I remain,

Your sincere nephew,
JACK OTIS.

REMARKABLE RECORD OF RETURNED SOLDIER.

One of the most unusual records offered by a returned American soldier is that of twenty-two-year-old William B. Lewis, now located at Colonia Hospital as a patient.

Lewis left his home in New York in 1913 on a sailing ship bound for Australia. He was there the following August and enlisted with the Australian forces the day Great Britain declared war on Germany. Within a few weeks his organization landed in Egypt and went through a strenuous campaign, after which they were transferred to the Dardanelles, making the landing April 25, 1915. After three and a half months' service he was wounded and removed to a hospital on Lemnos Island. Upon being discharged, he was transferred to the 27th Battalion and was sent to France in time to participate in the Somme Battle. He was wounded twice and gassed on December 5, 1917, was discharged in England. Although not fit for line duty he managed to enter the flying service of the American army as an observer and again seved on the Somme front. He found opportunity to use a machine gun while serving as an observer and has to his credit two enemy machines, a Gotha and an Albatross. The effects of the previous gassing began to tell and he was invalided home, arriving at this hospital November 7.

"UNCLE GEORGE" WILL PLAY SANTA CLAUS.

The children's department of the Holy Cross church will enjoy the annual Christmas entertainment in the parish house next Monday afternoon. Santa Claus will appear in the personage of "Uncle George," a title by which a member of the parish is well known.

Two hundred persons attended Christmas midnight celebration of Holy Communion at the church, in charge of the rector.

PERSONAL

Miss Elizabeth V. Day, formerly of this city, but for the last two years residing in New York, spent Christmas at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles Johnston, of Spooner avenue.

Mrs. James B. Taylor, of 4 Duer street, the borough, is recovering after a severe illness with a bronchial trouble bordering on pneumania. For a time she condition was considered critical.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Henry Depew, of Hillside avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Drayton Depew, to John Valiant, son of Mrs. Mary E. Valiant, of 38 Myrtle avenue, the borough. Both young people are prominent in the local social set. Mr. Valiant is the son of the late John Valiant, who took an active part in North Plainfield's civic matters for many years, serving both as councilman and member of the Board of Education.

Mrs. DeWitt Van Wyck, of 312 East Front street, who was recently removed to Muhlenberg Hospital to be treated for pneumonia, continues in a very serious condition.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Estelle M. Eick, daughter of John B. Eick, of Dunellen, to Edmund C. Haag, of Whitewater, Wis. Miss Eick has a very wide acquaintance in Plainfield.

Cyril Poling, of West Fifth street, who is a member of the Marine Corps, is home from Paris Island, S. C., for a Christmas furlough. He is due to report back next Sunday night.

First Lieutenant Middleton O'Malley Knott, of East Seventh street, who has been in the remount service of the U. S. A. since last May, was mustered out of service at Camp Gordon, this week, and returned to Plainfield on Christmas Day. For a part of the time while he was in army work he was stationed at Fort Keogh, Montana, but most of his military service was passed at Gordon, where the remount station was kept busy fitting out overseas forces with draught and saddle horses.

Easton Iremonger, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Iremonger, of Belvidere avenue, is able to be about again after ten days' confinement to the houes by a near attack of influenza and pneumonia.

Edmund Waldorf, of Crescent avenue, assistant in Tax Collector Townsend's office, is in Muhlenberg Hospital in a serious condition, suffering from pneumonia and complications. Mr. Waldorf's son, Edmund Waldorf, Jr., recovered recently after an eight weeks' illness with influenza.

James F. Buckle, Jr., son of former Mayor and Mrs. James F. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, who has been in the United States Navy since a month previous to the declaration of war, left New York on board the steamer "DeKalb," Monday, for his thirteenth trip to France. He entered the service as ordinary seaman and now holds the rank of coxswain. He was on board the "DeKalb" when she delivered the first unit of the American Expeditionary Force overseas. The "DeKalb" arrived in port last week and it was the hope of Coxswain Buckle and the other members of the crew that she would remain here until after Christmas, but the hurry to get back the American soldier boys brought them disappointment.

Chief Petty Officer David Berse, of East Fifth street, is home for the Christmas holidays. He will return next Monday to the Naval Ordnance plant at Charleston, West Virginia, where he is detailed as chemist. Previous to entering the service last spring, Mr. Berse was studying chemistry at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn.

Miss Marjorie Green, of 1008 West Seventh street, left yesterday for Hartsdale, N. Y., where she will spend a week with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Walsh.

Mrs. Emeline Denton, of Washington avenue, left recently for Needham, Mass., where she will spend the winter with her son, Arthur Denton, formerly of Plainfield, who has been living in the former city for a number of years.

Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, of Washington avenue, the borough, who has been critically ill with pneumonia, continues to improve slowly but surely. She will probably be able to sit up within the next few days.

Sergeant William Brown, who has been acting as instructor in the Air Service Mechanics School at St. Paul, Minn., since last spring, left for that city, yesterday, after a visit at the home of his mother, Mrs. Jessie H. Brown, of East Second street. Sergeant Brown was a member of the regular army as a cavalryman for six years and as he was employed at the local plant of the Standard Aero Corporation at the time of his last enlistment, he was especially fitted for instruction work among the Air service mechanics.

Walter Wilson, son of former Councilman and Mrs. William W. Wilson, of 816 West Third street, who recently returned frfom service overseas as a member of the Naval Aero Squadron, was home from Camp Mills on a holiday visit. While abroad, he was stationed most of the time at Killinghole, England, and had frequent battles with the enemy in flights over the North Sea. He expects to be mustered out of service in the very near future.

Miss Helen O'Keefe, of West Fifth street, has been seriously ill the past week with influenza and complications. Her sister, Miss Elizabeth O'Keefe, was also ill with the same disease for more than a week, but was able to return to her duties at the A. E. Force store on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pedefious, of Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, are the parents of a daughter, born to them a few days ago. Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Pedefious was Miss Sadie Leahy, of Watchung avenue, this city.

Miss M. F. Martin, who has been acting as night supervisor of nurses at Muhlenberg Hospitaal, has been promoted to day supervisor in the new building.

Private William Barry, of Howard street, the borough, returned Monday to the Medical Corps post at Carlisle, Pa., after a five days' furlough at home.

Martin Flatley, of West Fifth street, who has been in the Secret Service department of the navy since last spring, was discharged last week. He has returned to his old position as chief detective of the house staff at the Guaranty Trust Company's main office on Brodway, New York.

Mrs. George Luhr, of West Front street, who was recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, after undergoing an operation, continues to improve steadily.

Robert C. Shropshire, of East Second street, is convalescing after a severe illness with pneumonia. Mr. Shropshire is traveling auditor for the International Motor Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howland, of South Second street, returned yesterday, after a week's visit with relatives and friends in the Bronx, New York.

Women Made 220,000 Shirts For Soldiers

In the past year 1,500 patriotic women of Trenton produced approximately 220,000 shirts for soldiers of the army. For this work the Government paid $25,00. The work has just been concluded under the direction of Lieutenant R. McGuire Glinn. Trenton had the only exclusive shirtmaking depot established in the country by the Quartermaster Department of the army, and the Government authorities say that the women of Trenton helped greatly to supply the men in the camps last winter with regulation shirts.

Naval Men Ate "Flu" Germs For Experiment

Experiments undertaken by the Navy Department at the Navy Public Health Service Hospital on Gallups Island, near Boston, to ascertain the cause and spread of influenza have had merely negative results, according to a report given out this week. One hundred volunters who have been under observation for several weeks have had influenza germs placed in their nostrils and throats and have aten them with their food, and some have been inoculated with serums, but no cases of the disease have developed this far.

Increased appetite and more vigorous health have been the only noticeable results of the experiment, according to the physicians. The tests will be continued.

Miss Alice McCoy, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McCoy, of McDowell street, is convalescing after a severe illness with pneumonia.

Chester Wagner, of John street, who entered the aviation training school at Princeton last summer, was mustered out of service the past week.

Gas Section Was Ready To Smother German Army

America was producing rapidly at the close of the war a new gas mask, avoiding the discomforts of the old type. The chemical warfare section planned to smother the Germans under a stream of poison fluids and gas, such as the Boche never anticipated. These facts were made known at a dinner recently to General Sibert, of the gas section.

Incidentally it was pointed out that gas experimental stations have suffered heavy casualties from time to time, but that men bravely volunteered in spite of this.

Revenue Districts May Conform to State Lines

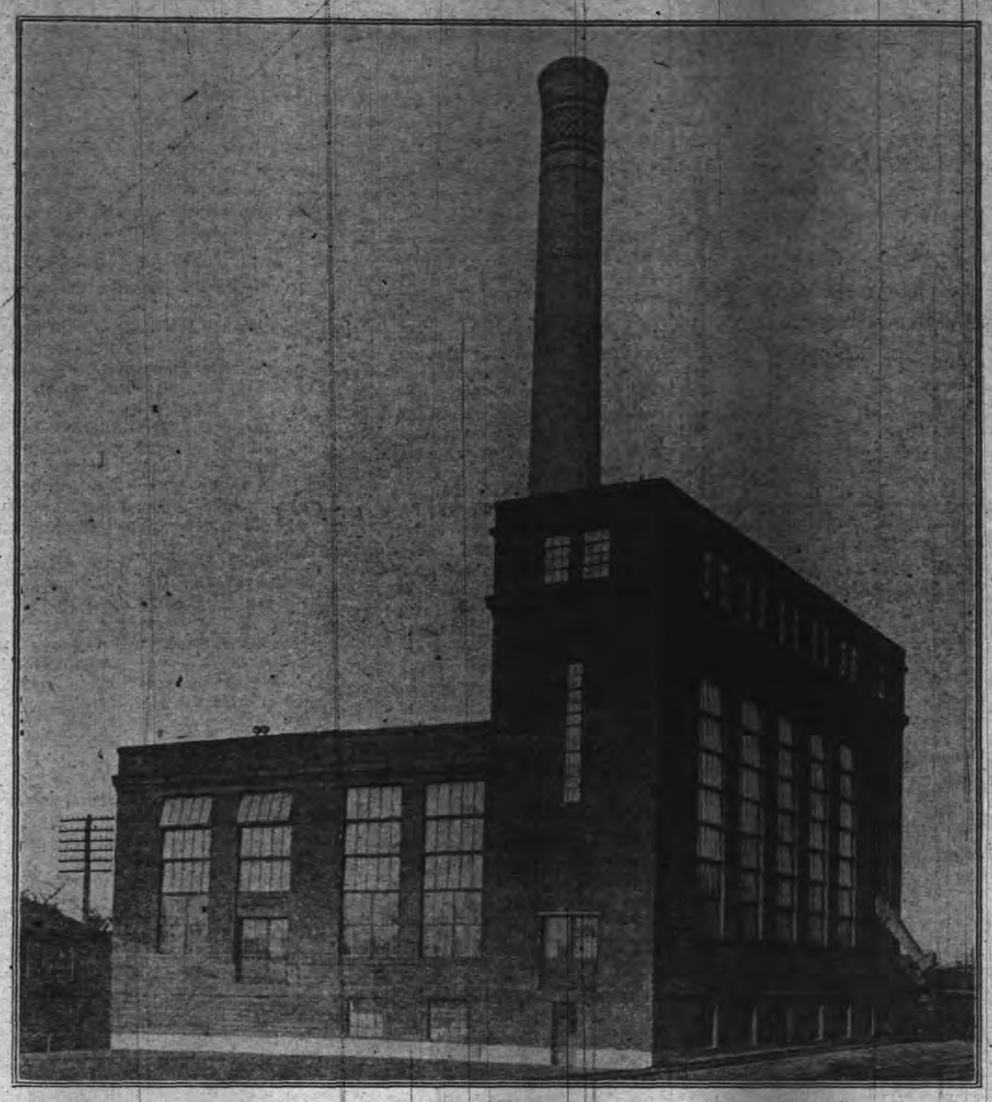
Internal revenue collection districts may be re-arranged during the next year to make boundaries coincide with States lines, Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper announced this week.

"Experience gained and careful analysis of existing conditions," said Mr. Roper, "warrants the belief that superior efficiency will result from an alinement of the collection districts to coincide geographically with State lines, assiging one district to every State and two districts to several of the more populous and larger revenue-producing States."

In addition, the plan now being developed contemplates sub-division of collection districts, arranged according to units of population, with a deputy collector in charge, stationed at the most central city.

The cost of collecting taxes last year was $12,003,000, or one-third of one per cent. of all collections, as compared with $7,699,000; or nearly one per cent., of collections the year previous, Commissioner Roper announced.

New Power Plant at Pond Shop a Marvel of Mechanism



Exterior View of Pond Shop's New Power Plant

With the opening of the mammoth new power house a few days ago, the zenith has practically been reached in the half million dollars' worth of improvements commenced at the Pond Machine Tool plant on South Second street, more than a year ago. These busy twelve months that have just passed by, busy beyond the comprehension of one not versed in manufacturing problems during a war rush, has seen the original plant almost doubled in size and equipped with modern appliances as is in no factory in this vicinity.

The power-house represents a large part of the financial expenditure and will serve the needs of the Pond men for many years to come. The Baton Company, of Philadelphia, held the contract for the work as it did practically all the new buildings recently put up at the plant. It is located at the western end of the big yards and is an ornate structure of brick and steel that commands attention from the visitors to the plant.

Within everything has been supplied for efficiency that human ingenuity can devise. The old-time engineer or stoker accustomed to the common-place engine room of other days would be lost completely in this structure which acts as the heart and lungs of the great buildings stretching for a distance of more than a half a mile along South Second street. So much is done by machinery for the generating of steam, the use and reuse of the white vapor, the condensing of water and cooling of atmosphere that human hands seem unnecessary. There is one presiding genius, however, whose duty it is to see that everything is kept going with clock-like precision. This is Chief Engineer George H. Batchelor, who has been sole monarch of the engine room at Pond's almost from the day the original firm moved to Plainfield from Worcester, Mass. Many of Mr. Batchelor's ideas have been embodied in the new power house and in the current issue of "Feeds and Speeds," the shop's breezy newspaper, he gives a complete description of how the "little trick" is done that makes all the wheels in the machine shop, the foundry and other departments turn around.

The power house has two immense Babcock & Wilcox boilers, capable of 200 pounds of steam pressure. Their water is turned into vapor by superheaters fed from automatic stokers. Continuing along in the concatenation of equipment needed before the final result is accomplished, there are immense engines of the most powerful type, and Westinghouse dynamos capable of supplying many thousands of horse-power in electrical units that are distributed to all parts of the grounds and shops for power and light. It is an education in itself to simply gaze at the equipment even if one does not comprehend fully how each part serves its separate purpose.

One of the most striking parts of the new power plant is the "spray pond," which stands by itself in the outer yard. This contrivance, by means of perforated pipes, brings water that has once been used in condencing steam to a paper temperature before using it over again for the same purpose. The condensation of steam as carried on at the pond plant requires a tremendous quantity of water and by means of this "spray pond" the one supply is brought into action so many times it almost becomes "worn out." The mechanism as it stands in the yard can be seen from railroad trains and has brought about no end of speculation as to what it is for.

War Department Orders Chevrons For Camp Dix Men

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

As a recognition of dueties performed in the service of the country, Camp Dix officials have been instructed by the War Department to furnish each honorably discharged soldier with two scarlet chevrons to be worn on the left sleeve, point up, midway between the elbow and the shoulder, one on the coat and the other on the overcoat. This will serve to indicate that the wearer responded to the demands of the country, performed creditable service in the army and finally received an honorable discharge.

With the arrival of twenty-six truck drivers from Lakewood and Amatol and 200 more still to come, three new Transport Companies have been organized and will be known as Companies 668, 669 and 739. In addition to his other duties, Lieutenant H. M. Hempy has been assigned as acting commander of the new companies. For some time past the camp motor truck company has been carrying all the burden of the work and it has been almost impossible to obtain transportation. A number of new trucks are also scheduled to arrive within a few days.

Midnight mass at the main Knights of Columbus building opened the celebration of Christmas Day at Dix. The Catholic men who remained in camp, were excused from reporting at their barracks Tuesday night, until after the mass. The celebrant was Chaplain Vinvent J. Dougherty, who also preached the sermon. A choir of young women from Trenton, headed by John O. Gretton and a choir from the Catholic College near Princeton presented the mass music.

There was an all-day ceelbration in the various welfare buildings. Special entertainments were given in the Y. M. huts, including the singing of Christ mas carols. In the K. of C. buildings a buffet luncheon was served and each man was given a Christmas package. The sick and wounded in the hospital were not forgotten, either, for besides the regular Red Cross boxes for each man and countless other gifts, entertainers from Trenton and nearby towns also spent the afternoon giving programs in the various wards.

In the evening there were special programs while the various companies arranged special celebrations of the day, including the serving of turkey dinners.

The discharge of large numbers of men has led to complaints from many cities that privates are impersonating officers or wearing gold service chevrons indicating that they have seen service overseas, but from Milwaukee comes a report to Camp Dix headquarters that two Dix soldiers were arrested there on a charge of impersonating sergeants and giving lectures in the alleged interest of a tobacco fund for the benefit of their comrades overseas.

The men are Privates Joseph F. Gloss and Fred Ferro, who went to Dix from Camp Merrit on August 24 last and of whom there are no records as to their service or place of induction. Gloss was assigned to the Ninth Battalion on November 28 and Feror to the Seventeenth Battalion on October 24, and both were absent without leave from their companies. How they reached Wisconsin and started their lecture scheme is not known to the officials at Dix.

The tank corps men will soon be leaving Dix. About 700 are yet to be discharged and the remainder, about 250, will be transferred in a few days to Camp Giddings, Georgia.

Chaplain Eric McCoy North, of Madison, has been relieved of duty at Dix and ordered to report at the port of embarkation, Hoboken, for assignment.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Anna W. Horne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horne, of 921 West Third street, to J. W. O'Connell, of Elizabeth. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Bernice Higgins, of Stone street, the borough, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hammon at North Branch.

Claim New Process for Drying Meats and Fish

Dr. Arthur H. McKee, professor of chemical engineering at Columbia University, announced recently that he and his staff had evolved a drying process for meats and fish that they thought was superior to any other and would cause a great saving in shipping space and refrigeration without deterioration in food value. So little change in the flavor and food contents of the dehydrated meat was caused, Dr. McKee said, that Columbia faculty members and soldiers were unable to detect any difference from the fresh meat.

Use of the method by the army would require only one-twelfth of the shipping space used at present, Dr. McKee said, making unnecessary the use of brine, refrigeration or any other means of preservation. Bone, waste fat and connective tissue are removed from the meat or fish and it it then cut into cubes or steaks, placed in a vacuum inclosure and subjected to a long period of drying at low temperature. He said no other treatment was necessary.

Eighteen Inch Guns May Be Built at Watervliet

The army arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., is now equipped to manufacture guns up to eighteen-inch calibre, Major General C. C. Williams, chief of ordnance, said this week, in his annual report to the Secretary of War. No details were given to indicate whether construction of this large type of ordnance is contemplated.

During the fiscal year covered by the report, 16,000 contracts were let for material valued at $5,000,000,000, with 4,000 manufacturers participating. Funds expended in the development of manufacturing facilities totaled $420,000,000.

Satisfactory progress has ben made, the report says, in the erection of nitrate plants which will render this country independent of the Chilean supply. Production from one of the four plants will soon reach 22,000 tons per year.

Officers and Men Deplore Death of Sergeant Edson Day

Mrs. Margaret Day, of Race street, the boroughfi widow of Sergeant Edson B. Day, who was accidentally killed at Baltimore on December 7, is in receipt of two letters which convey to her the sympathies of the officers and men of Company A, 9th Battalion of U. S. Guards, to which her husband was attached, and which reveal the high regard in which he was held. The letters have proven a source of great comfort to the sacrificing wife and mother, who, in addition to giving up her husband, has two sons serving their country. One is William L. Day, who has recently been placed on patrol duty after sixteen months on a "sub" chaser as assistant engineer, and the other is Sergeant Edson B. Day, Jr., attached to the statistical department of the army, and who has been at the front since April last.

Sergeant Day, the husband and father, was killed while hastening to the home of an old army friend who dropped dead on the fatal day in Baltimore. The Plainfielder and his friend had served together in the Philippines following their enlistment in the regular infantry after participating in the Spanish War as volunteers. When Sergeant Day heard of the "bunkie's" demise, he started from the 9th Battalion headquarters for Baltimore on a motorcycle, occupying the side car, while a friend drove. When almost in the city they collided with a heavy timber protruding from the rear of a motor truck and bearing no light. Sergeant Day died instantly from a blow over the heart but his companion escaped with trifling injuries.

One of the letters to Mrs. Day came from Captain Terence A. Brady, of Company A, 9th Battalion, and the other from Lieutenant Vernon B. Smith, of the same unit.

Captain Brady's letter is as follows:

To Mrs. Margaret Day,
North Plainfield:

It is with deep regret that the officers of this Company extend to you their heartfelt sympathy in your great loss, and sincerely hope you will bear up under the strain of this great shock and burden which so suddenly was placed upon you.

First Sergeant Day will be greatly missed by the officers of this Company, for as a soldier he always performed his duties in a very efficient manner while under my command.

Hoping that you will bear your great loss as the will of our Maker has intended that sometime we all must answer His call, and look into it in this light, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
TERENCE A. BRADY,
Capt. U. S. Guards.

The condolences of Lieutenant Smith were expressed for himself and the Company A men in this manner:

To Mrs. Margaret Day,
North Plainfield:

The enlisted men of this Company have requested me in their behalf to extend to you the most heartfelt sympathy in your great loss. First Sergeant Day will be remembered by one and all for his utmost interest and care that he took of us all, but after all has been said and done we sincerely hope that you will take into consideration that God's Will be done, as your husband will be remembered in the prayers of this Company.

Hoping that you will look into this great loss on the bright side of life, and remember that he met his death through the hands of his Maker, though his good qualities as a soldier will never be forgotten by the officers and men of this Company.

VERNON B. SMITH,
2nd Lt. Co. "A," 9th Bn.
U. S. G.,
Administrative Officer.

Wounded Hero Pays First Visit Home

James Kelly, one of Plainfield's hero soldiers who helped drive back the Germans, and who recently returned from France, came to Plainfield, Christmas Day, for his first visit since going overseas. He is at present a patient at Colonia Hospital, where he is under treatment for a badly shattered arm that may be permanently disabled.

Kelly went abroad in April as a member of Company B, 30th Infantry, and took part in several big engagements. At the second battle of the Marne on July 15 he was struck in the ueft arm just above the elbow by a machine gun bullet. He received a compound fracture of the bone and the muscles were torn to ribbons between the elbow and the elbow and the shoulder. The force of the shock knocked him into a small brook and he lay helpless in a pool of water for some time. He finally managed to apply a tourniquet to his injury for the prevention of bleeding but so much blood had already been las that he was picked up in very bad condition. He has since been in hospitals and will be a patient at Colonia for many weeks. His home was at 438 West Fourth street.

Before entering the service Kelly was employed as machinist at the Potter Press Works. He is a brother to Richard and Thomas Kelly, both of this city.

Lieutenant Frank Cullen, who is stationed at a camp in Ohio, returned this morning, after a Christmas visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cullen, of South Second street.

von Hindenburg A Woman Hater

"Ach! Women! I hate them! They have no place in my life. I have other things to think about."

These were the exact words spoken to a newspaper correspondent a few years ago by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the man whom the German people blindly trusted to save them from defeat, relates the Manitoba Free Press.

"We were seated on the veranda of Hindenburg's favorite little cafe in Hanover," said the correspondent, "where almost daily I used to play a game of chess with him in the intervals of his dreaming those dreams which eventually led to his victory over the Russians at Tannenburg.

"Along the street below had passed a shabbily dressed, care worn woman whom I recognized as the wife of Hindenburg. My observation that he never took her out gave rise to the cryptic utterance which appears above."

That statement typifies exactly the attitude of the idol of Germany toward women. Love has played no part in his checkered life. His career can be searched thoroughly, but no trace of those questionable scandals which seem to be part and parcel of the lives of other great Huns will be found.

Hindenburg's wooing was prosaic. There was no romance about it. Its counterpart can be found by the thousand in industrial towns and village the world over.

When he was twenty-four years old Hindenburg's mother died.

Morose, silent, self-reliant, intolerant of the favors of others men, he yet felt the need of having somebody to look after the little house his mother had so long occupied. He looked about in Hanover, where he then lived, and his choice fell upon Fraulein Solf. She was a child of the people, plain, unintelligent and uninteresting. But Hindenburg found out she was an excellent housewife.

He put his proposal before her in a business like manner. He so far unbent as to dilate upon his prospects, and he offered her a home and her keep in return for marriage. She accepted the offer. For the daughter of an agricultural laborer she was "doing very well for herself." The whole ceremony, apart from the wedding ring, cost less than $15. There were no bridesmaids, no honeymoon and no festivity. Hindenburg's wedding gift to his wife consisted of an illustrated Bible, with gilt edges, costing about $2. The bulk of the $15 was spent on the wedding meal.

The wedded life of this strangely assorted pair proceeded without a ripple. Hindenburg never consulted his wife about anything. So long as she prepared his meals and looked after his home he did not trouble in the least about her.

From the moment the Kaiser recalled Hindenburg from Hanover, his wife has dropped entirely out of his life as though she never existed. Through his lawyers he gave a generous allowance, but he did not care a rap how she spent it.

The German people generally have never seen this despised and neglected woman; they do not know her name and few are aware of her existence.

And thus we had the amazing spectacle of the mighty Hindenburg—after whom battleships, liners, towns and countless babies were named, rich, supreme, the most talked of man in Germany, posing as a veritable king of empire, while his wife, unhonored and unsung, led a drab, colorless existence beside which that of a village charwoman is exciting.

"MASKED WONDER" RECEIVED A FRACTURED SKULL.

P. N. Hurlan, wrestler, who was known to devotees of the game as the "Masked Wonder," is in the Elizabeth General Hospital suffering from a fractured skull received in this city, last Friday night, during a match at Columbus Hall with "Jimmy" Condos.

The "Masked Wonder" became enraged at a fall secured by his opponent and made a mad rush toward him. Condos stepped to one side and the furious wrestler plunged headlong through the panel of a door leading from the stage. He was rendered unconscious and medical attention had to be secured. "The Masked Wonder" was afterward taken to the Elizabeth hospital.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE TO HAVE FAMILY GATHERING.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, has completed arrangements for a holiday celebration in the form of a "family reunion" to be held in the Castle Hall in the Babcock building next Friday night.

An invitation has been extended to all members of the lodge, their wives and children to attend the gathering. A feature will be the presentation of "presents" to Perswerance members by Past Chancellor William N. Runyon, who has the ability to make appropriate speeches with every gift. A splendid program of entertainment has been arranged for and refreshments will be served in conclusion.

The committee in charge of the plans is composed of David Allen, chairman; George Keen, Clarence Rittenhouse and William Baker.

From Camp Dix to Battle Line Told of by Andrew Brady

Andrew Brady, of Front street and Lafayette place, who went overseas last May with the gallant 311th Infantry, and who participated in the fighting at St. Mihiel, Verdun, Grand Pre and Sedan, with that unit, has written a detailed account of his experiences to his mother and aunt, Mrs. Catharine Brady and Miss Mary Muldoon, of West Front street. His story is a most interesting one and is as follows:

November 26, 1918.

Dear Mother and Aunt Mary:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am feeling fine and enjoying good health; also hope and pray that the folks back home are enjoying good health. Well, Mother and Aunt Mary, I am sure lucky to be alive today, as I have sure been through this war to the end and not a scar in my person. I have been on two very bod frants (St. Mihiel and Verdun) and they sure were some death-traps, as the Hun had a great number of snipers and machine gun nests in trees and just as soon as you start to walk around the Huns start shooting right at your "bean." So the only thing to do is to keep your head down low.

Now Mother and Aunt Mary, I will try to tell you a little news from the time I left Camp Dix, May 20. At 3 a. m. we left camp by the way of Perth Amboy (I sent mail from there; did you get it?), to Jersey City (Pennsylvania station), and then across the ferry to Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, where we got on an English steamer. Left there at 5 p. m., May 20, and then to the great ocean. After sailing three days we arrived at Halifax, May, 23, at 5 p. m., and got a new supply of cargo aboard, and then the next day we saw where the great fire was and the city sure does look just like No Man's Land. Well, on May 24, we sailed for "over there." May 28 we saw a whale and also a great iceberg, and they were a great distance from the boat. June 1 we got our convoy at 6:30 p. m. June 2 we had some great fighting with a nest of "subs" (4 at 5 p. m. to 7:30 p. m., and after two and one-half hours we sunk two "subs" and not a ship in the whole convoy (16) hit. June 4 we arrived in Tngland; June 5 we got off the ship in a city by the name of Gravesend, England, where we got a train for Folkstone, a distance of thirty miles. After arriving in Folkstoen we stayed in an English camp from June 5th to the 9th. On the 9th we sailed for Calais, France, across the channel a distance of about 30 miles. After staying in Calais until June 12th, where we left for Bolingham, where we were in reserve with the English (Flanders front) from June 12 to July 16. On the 16th we left for Avondale, arriving there on the same day and still in reserve (Arras front) with the English. Well, on the great day of August 23 we left the English and joined the Americans in Southern France. We left Avondale, August 23, at 8 p. m., for Tanques (walking), arriving there at 11:30 p. m., getting on a train leaving Tanques at 1 p. m., riding on train for three days, and then we came to Paris, August 26, and only stayed there two hours and the train started. After four hours' riding we came through Chateau-Thierry, battle field and then to Charemont, leaving there for Seaques, arriving there August 25. Left Seaques, August 31, for the front. September 3 we were right into the fight and stayed in and around the front from September 3 to October 9 and then came the greatest day in the world's history, November 11, 1918, 11 a. m., 11th month, and the great war over. And it sure was great news for the boys on the front.

Mother and Aunt Mary, now that the great war is over, you can expect your two boys home any day, and both looking and feeling better than ever (John and myself are one of the lucky boys). Tell all the folks and neighbors that Andrew sends his best love and regards to all. Good-bye and Good Luck.

Your Son and Nephew,
ANDREW.

MICHAEL KANE DIES IN BUFFALO.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kane, of Monroe avenue, today received word by telegram that their son, Michael Kane, formerly of this city, had died in Buffalo, N. Y. He had been ill for some time with Bright's disease, the message stated, but otherwise there were no particulars.

Mr. Kane was about forty-two years old and lived here until he reached his majority. He was located at Brooklyn for a time and then went to Buffalo when the concern for which he was working removed to that city. He made frequent visits to Plainfield to visit his parents.

The body will be brought to Plainfield and the funeral will be held in St. Mary's church possibly next Monday morning. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

FIRST OF SERIES OF MID-WINTER DANCES.

The first of a series of mid-winter dances was given at the Park Club last night. The attendance was large and the affair was a distinct social success.

The patronesses for the series are Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. Henry C. Irons, Mrs. Walter M. McGee and Mrs. Josephus Howell.

BUICK 1919

Buick Automatically Lubricated Valve-in-Head Motor Cars for the nineteen-nineteen season mark another stage in the development of Buick cars for all-around service. "Built for business" is the phrase that most aptly describes the working parts of all six models. The thoroughly-proven Buick Valve-in-Head Motor has been improved by the development of an entirely automatic lubricating system, and certain other chassis units have been rendered more efficient along equally constructive lines.

The option of six body types, comprising open and closed models, enables the busy man to make a selection best suited to his daily needs, including a wide latitude in passenger capacity and ability to meet varying weather conditions.
